The Ill-Intention of this Speech was diverted by the Wiſer Members; and the Houſe ſoon fell upon the Reſolution of " Granting to Their Ma- " jeſties all the Revenues that King James enjoy'd " the 20th of December, 1688. as Rights of the " Crown, (excepting Chimney-Money.)" Then they Reſolv'd, " That Their Majeſties ſhou'd be put " into the Poſſeſſion of ſuch Additional Exciſes, as " had been Granted to King Charles II. and King " James II. and Order'd that Revenue to be a " Security for the Raiſing the preſent Money." And farther, " They Agreed to Grant, for Four " Years, to begin from Chriſtmaſs following, a " Continuance of all ſuch Cuſtoms as the Two " late Kings had enjoy'd; and upon which, " Their Majeſties might take up a Sum of Money, " as ſhou'd be Regulated in a Bill for that Pur- " poſe." And aſwell to Preſerve, as to Improve, they Order'd, " A Bill againſt Alienation of the " Crown-Revenues, upon any Pretence whatſoever."

Encourag'd by theſe Votes, ſeveral Private-Perſons advanc'd Money, to Supply the King's preſent Occaſions, which were much the greater, for His Intended Expedition.

Not long after, a Bill was brought in to the Lower-Houſe, " Requiring all their Majeſties " Subjects to Abjure the late King James, under " Pain of Impriſonment, without Bail or Main- " priſe:" But, upon a Second Reading, it was laid aſide, both becauſe it might create an unneceſſary Diſturbance, and becauſe it ſeem'd to bear too hard on the Liberties of the Subject. However, the Commons Prepar'd Two Acts, which tended to the ſame Purpoſe: By the Firſt, " They " Declared Guilty of High-Treaſon, all thoſe that " were actually in the Service of King James in " Ireland, and their Eſtates Forfeited to Their " Majeſties, unleſs their Children were Proteſtants. And by the Second, " They Confirm'd all the " Acts of the Convention-Parliament, by which, " King William and Queen Mary were Acknow- ledg'd to be Lawful King and Queen of England.

Bill of Abjuration.

In the Houſe of Lords, His Majeſty conferr'd ſome New Titles, and introduc'd ſome New Members: For on the 17th of April, His Majeſty was pleas'd to create the Right-Honourable Richard Viſcount Lumley, Earl of Scarborough in the County of York; and Henry Lord Delamere, Earl of Warington in the County of Lancaſter; and Henry Lord de Gray of Ruthen, a Viſcount of this Kingdom, by the Name and Stile of Viſcount de Longueville. And on the 21ſt of April, the Lord Willoughby of Earsby (Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter) was, by virtue of Their Majeſties Writ of Summons, Introduc'd into the Houſe of Peers, and took his Place on the Barons-Bench.

Honours and Preferments.

On Wedneſday the 23d of April, His Majeſty, to Encourage the Two Houſes to the more ſpeedy Diſpatch of Buſineſs, came to the Houſe of Lords, attended with the Uſual Solemnity, and gave His Royal-Aſſent to,

The King intent upon going over to reduce Ireland.

The King was very intent upon going over in Person to Ireland, and putting an Issue to that dangerous War; and therefore he employ'd his Ministers in the House of Commons, to draw up a Bill for putting the Administration of the Government into the Queen's Hands, not only during the King's Absence in Ireland, but when-ever his Affairs should call him out of the Kingdom: And that nothing might happen to the Prejudice of the Government, whilst he himself was abroad, he thought fit to require, That the Deputy-Lieutenants of the several Counties, should be Authoriz'd to raise the Militia in case of necessity, and all Papists should be order'd to repair to their Places of Abode, and not stir above Five Miles from thence without leave. 1690. And that His Majesty might have the greater Confidence in the City of London, a Bill was to be brought in for Reversing the Judgment in a Quo Warranto against their Charter, and for restoring all their ancient Rights and Liberties. When these Things were ready, His Majesty came on Tuesday, May 20. to the House of Lords, and gave the Royal Assent to, (1.) An Act for the Exercise of the Government by Her Majesty, during His Majesty's Absence. (2.) An Act for Reversing the Judgment in a Quo Warranto against the City of London, and for Restoring the City of London to its ancient Rights and Privileges. (3.) An Act to declare the Right and Freedom of Election of Members to serve in Parliament for the Cinque-Ports. (4.) An Act for the Discouraging the Importation of Thrown Silk. (5.) An Act for Confirming to the Governour and Company Trading to Hudson's-Bay, their Privileges and Trade. (6.) An Act for the Encouraging and better Establishing the Manufacture of White Paper in this Kingdom; and to Two Private Acts.

The Bill of Indemnity and Free Pardon, so earnestly Recommended by His Majesty, did at last pass Both Houses, after great Debates held, and many Difficulties remov'd, about the Subject of it. The Clemency of the King, and the Generosity of the Parliament, were very great; for among all the late Instruments of Popery and Arbitrary Power, there were but Thirty Five Persons expresly excepted; and of them, few or none made Examples of the Justice of the Nation. The Persons excepted were, Bill of Indemnity.

Robert Earl of Sunderland.	John Earl of Melford.
Roger Earl of Castlemain.	The Lord Thomas Howard.
Nathaniel Ld. Bishop of Durham.	Thomas Lord Bishop of St. Davids.
Henry Lord Dover.	William Molineux.
Sir Edward Hales.	Sir William Herbert.
Sir Francis Wythens.	Sir Richard Holloway.
Sir Edward Lutwich.	Sir Richard Heath.
Sir Thomas Jenner.	Sir Roger L'Estrange.
Sir Nicholas Butler.	Edward Petre.
Thomas Tindesley, alias Tildesley.	——Townley, lately call'd Colonel Townley.
Rowland Tempest.	Edward Morgan.
Obadiah Walker.	Robert Brent.
Richard Graham.	Philip Burton.
Robert Lundy.	Matthew Crone.

And also excepted George Lord Jeffreys deceas'd.

The King thought it proper to conclude the Session with this Act of Grace; and therefore on Friday, May 23. He came to the House of Lords, and gave the Royal Assent to this Act for the King and Queens most Gracious General and Free Pardon. After which His Majesty was pleased to make this Speech to Both Houses.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

King's Speech. "I Have had such Assurance of your good Affections to Me, that I come now to Thank "you, and particularly, for the Supplies you "have given Me.

The Season of the Year is so far advanc'd, that "I can no longer delay my going into Ireland, "and therefore I think it necessary to have an "Adjournment of the Parliament: And though it "shall be but to a short day, yet unless some "great Occasion require it (of which you shall "have due notice) I do not intend you shall sit "to do Business until the Winter; and I hope, by 1690. "the Bleſſing of GOD, We ſhall then have a happy Meeting.

"the

"In the mean time, I recommend to you the "Diſcharge of your Duties in your reſpective "Counties, that the Peace of the Nation may be "ſecur'd by your Vigilance and Care in your ſe- "veral Stations.

The two Houſes adjourn. Then the Lord Chief-Baron, Speaker of the Houſe of Peers, told Both Houſes, It was His Majeſty's Pleaſure; that they Adjourn themſelves to the 7th day of July next.

Honours and Offices On May 30. His Majeſty was pleas'd to Conſtitute Richard Pyne, Eſq; Sir Richard Reeves, Kt. and Robert Rochford, Eſq; Commiſſioners of the Great-Seal of Ireland, as alſo Commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer and General-Goal-Delivery within the ſaid Kingdom: And on June 3. Sir John Trevor, Knt. Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, Sir William Rawlinſon, Knt. and Sir George Hutchins, Knt. were Sworn Lords-Commiſſioners for the Great-Seal of England; and on the ſame day, Charles Marqueſs of Winchester, Lord-Chamberlain to the Queen, was Sworn one of the Lords of the Privy-Council. The next Morning, June 4. His Majeſty ſet out on his Royal Voyage for Ireland; and Dining with Mr. Guy of Tring, he lay that Night at Northampton, the next at Litchfield, the third at Whitchurch, and came by Saturday-noon to Colonel Whitley's Houſe, between Cheſter and Highlake. On Sunday Morning His Majeſty went to Cheſter with a Numerous Attendance of Nobility and Gentry. His Majeſty went directly to the Cathedral, the Mayor carrying the Sword, and the Senior-Alderman the Mace before him: At the Church-door, the Biſhop and his Clergy received His Majeſty, and Conducted him into the Choire. After Divine-Service and a Sermon preached by the Biſhop, His Majeſty took Coach again, and went to Gayton, the Houſe of Mr. Gleg, where he was met by Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, and the reſt of the Sea-Commanders. On Wedneſday, June 11. His Majeſty Embark'd at Highlake, and ſet ſail about Noon with a Fair Wind, with ſix Men of War, commanded by Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, ſix Yachts, and as many other Tranſport-Veſſels, as made up a Fleet of above Three Hundred Sail. On Saturday Morning, by half an hour after One, His Majeſty arriv'd in the Bay of Carrick-fergus, and about Three went aſhore, and travell'd by Land about Eight Miles to Belfaſt: Where he was met by the Duke of Schonberg, the Prince of Wirtemburgh, Major-General Kirke, and other General-Officers; being attended from England, by his Royal Highneſs Prince George of Denmark, the Duke of Ormond, the Earls of Oxford, Scarborough and Manchester, the Honourable Mr. Boyle, and many other Perſons of Diſtinction. Next day being Sunday, Dr. Royſe Preach'd before the King, on Heb. 6. 11. Through Faith they ſubdued Kingdoms. Two or three days after, His Majeſty din'd with the General, at his Head-Quarters at Lisburne, and from thence went on to Hillsborough; where, on the 20th, he publiſh'd an Order, Forbidding the Preſſing of Horſes, and committing any Violences upon the Country-People. Then hearing ſome cautious Advices given by the General-Officers, he ſaid, He did not come there to let Graſs grow under his Feet, but he would purſue the War with the utmoſt Vigor. And therefore order'd the whole Army to march into the Field, and encamp at Loughbritland, where the King arriv'd, June 22. and taking a particular View of the Army, he found them to conſiſt of Thirty Six Thouſand Men in good Heart and Condition: From hence they marched to Newry, and on the 27th to Dundalk. The King was ſo pleas'd with the Proſpect of the Country as he rid along, that he ſaid to thoſe about him, It was worth Fighting for. Upon Advice, that the Enemy had abandon'd Ardee, the King immediately directed his March thither. 1690.

K. James reſolves to meet him in the Field. The late King James was no ſooner inform'd of King William's Landing, but he agreed to the Neceſſity of meeting him in the Field; and therefore, on the 16th of June, he ſet out from Dublin with about Six Thouſand French Foot, being old Experienced Soldiers, lately arriv'd from France, and committed the Guard of that City to Six Thouſand of the County-Militia, under the Command of Colonel Lutterel. But, as if foreſeeing his own Misfortunes, he had order'd Sir Patrick Trant, Commiſſioner of the Revenue, to prepare him Ships at Waterford, that after a Flight, he might ſecure his Retreat to France. King James coming up to the reſt of his Forces, which now amounted to almoſt an equal number with thoſe of King William's, beſides Fifteen Thouſand which remain'd in Gariſons, he held a Council of War; wherein it was thought fit to repaſs the Boyne, and to weary out the Engliſh by Marches and Counter-marches along that River, which they thought impoſſible for them to paſs, while they could defend the oppoſite Banks at ſuch great Advantage.

The Battle of the Boyne. On the 30th of June, King William being inform'd that the Enemy had re-paſſed the Boyne, Order'd his whole Army to move by Break of Day in Three Lines towards that River, which was about Three Miles diſtant from 'em; whereupon the Advanc'd-Guards of Horſe commanded by Sir John Lanier, mov'd in very good Order, and by Nine of the Clock got within Two Miles of Drogheda. The King, who March'd in the Front of 'em, rode nearer to view the Enemy's Camp, which He found to be all along the River in Two Lines. Upon this Proſpect His Majeſty held a Conſult and long Diſcourſe with the Prince, Duke Schonberg, Duke of Ormond, Count Solms, Major-General Scravenmore, the Lord Sidney, and other Great Officers, who made their ſeveral Obſervations upon the Enemy; among the reſt, Scravenmore ſeem'd to deſpiſe 'em, and ſaid they were Un Petit Armee, for they could not reckon above Forty-ſix Regiments that lay Encamp'd; but the King wiſely anſwer'd, "That "they might have a great many Men in the "Town, and that alſo there was a Hill to the "South-Weſt, beyond which Part of their Army "might well lie: But however (ſays the King) "We ſhall ſoon be better acquainted with their "Numbers.

The King rid on to the Paſs of the Old-Bridge, and ſtood upon the Side of the Bank within Muſquet-ſhot of the Ford, there to take a nearer View of the Enemy's Poſture, and in ſome time after rid about Two Hundred Paces up the River in full View of the Iriſh-Army, with an intrepid Bravery, and a fixt Reſolution to Engage 'em. Whilſt his Army was Marching in, He alighted from his Horſe and ſat down, upon a riſing Ground, where He refreſh'd himſelf for about an Hour, during which Time a Party of about Forty Horſe advancing very ſlowly, made a Stand upon a Plow'd Field over againſt the King, and brought Two Field-Pieces with them, which they dropt by a Hedge on the ſaid Ground. The King was no ſooner Mounted again but the Iriſh Fired at him, and with the Firſt Shot kill'd a Man, and Two Horſes within an Hundred Paces of His Majeſty. This Bullet was preſently ſucceeded by another, that having firſt graz'd on the Bank of the River, did in its riſing ſlant upon the King's right Shoulder, 1690. der, took out a Piece of his Coat, and tore the Skin and Fleſh, and afterwards broke the Head of a Gentleman's Piſtol. My Lord Coningsby no ſooner ſaw His Majeſty Wounded, but he rid up and clapt his Handkerchief upon the ſore Place, while the King himſelf mounted again and kept on his Pace, and only ſaid, There was no Neceſſity, the Bullet ſhould have come nearer. The Enemy ſeeing ſome Diſorder among thoſe that attended King William, concluded preſently He was kill'd, and immediately ſet up a Shout all over their Camp, and drew down ſeveral Squadrons of their Horſe upon a Plain towards the River, as if they meant to paſs and purſue the Engliſh Army. Nay the Report of King William's Death flew preſently to Dublin, and from thence ſpread as far as Paris, where the People were encourag'd to expreſs their Impious Joys by Bonfires and Illuminations. King William continued on Horſe-back without the leaſt Concern, till Four in the Afternoon when He Dined in the Field, and in the Evening was on Horſe-back again; tho' He had been up from One in the Morning. About Nine at Night He call'd a Council of War, and declar'd his Reſolution to paſs the River next Day, which Duke Schomberg at firſt oppos'd, but finding the King poſitive, He adviſ'd, that Part of the Army, Horſe and Foot, ſhould be ſent that Night towards Slain-Bridge, in order to paſs the River thereabouts, and ſo get between the Enemy and the Paſs at Duleck. This Advice ſeem'd to be at firſt well-reliſh'd, but it being afterwards oppoſed by the Dutch Generals, Duke Schomberg retir'd to his Tent, where not long after the Order of Battel was brought him, which He receiv'd with Diſcontent and Indifference, ſaying, It was the firſt that ever was ſent him. Lieutenant-General Douglas was to Command the Right Wing of Foot, and Count Maynard de Schomberg the Horſe, who were to March on early towards Slain-Bridge, and other Fords up the River, to Flank the Enemy, or get between their Camp and Drogheda, whilſt in the meantime a Body of Foot were to force their Way, by the Paſs at Old-Bridge. The Cannonading continued on both Sides till it was dark Night, when King William gave Orders that every Soldier ſhould be provided with a good Stock of Ammunition, and be ready to March at Break of Day, with every Man a Green Bough or Sprig in his Hat, to diſtinguiſh him from the Enemy, who wore Pieces of white Paper in their Hats. The Word that Night being Weſtminſter, His Majeſty rode in Perſon about Twelve at Night, with Torches quite through the Army, and then retir'd to his Tent, impatient of the approaching Day.

K. William ſlightly wounded.

Diſpoſition of the Two Armies.

That expected Day, July the 1ſt, being come, about Six in the Morning Lieutenant-General Douglas March'd towards the Right with ſome Foot, as did Count Schomberg with the Horſe; which being obſerv'd by the Enemy, they drew out their Horſe and Foot towards the Left to oppoſe 'em. Our Right Wing was at firſt Order'd to paſs all at Slain, but on better Information from the Guides, ſeveral Regiments were commanded to go over, at other Fords between the Camp and that Place. When our Horſe approached the River, a Regiment of the Enemy's Dragoons Fired upon 'em, and made a Show of oppoſing their Paſſage; but being ſoon forc'd to retire with Loſs, the Engliſh got over and advanc'd towards the Enemy's Main-Body, which they found drawn up in Two Lines. Hereupon Douglas drew up his Detachment in the ſame Figure, but having Six Battalions only of Foot to Twenty-four Squadrons of Horſe and Dragoons, He ſent for more Foot to join Him; and in the mean-time He took my Lord Portland's Advice, of intermixing the Horſe and Foot for their Security. More Foot being come up, this Figure was immediately alter'd, and all the Horſe were drawn to the Right, whilſt the Foot moved towards a Bog on the left, which Motion ſo frighted the Iriſh that they retreated in great Haſte towards Duleck, but were vigorouſly purſu'd by Count Schomberg. 1690.

Tho' King William was ignorant of what had paſſed, yet ſuppoſing that by this time they had got over the River, He order'd Three Attacks to be made to open the ſeveral Paſſes; the Blew Dutch-Guards of Foot were the Firſt that took the River at Old-Bridge, beating a March all the while till they got upon the Side of the Bank, and then the Drums ceaſing, in they went Eight or Ten a-Breaſt wading to the Middle; and being got over amidſt the Enemy's Fire, they drew up into Two Files, and then Fired upon the Iriſh behind the Hedges, who were ſo diſcourag'd that they ran away and ſcatter'd themſelves in the next Field: But before the Dutch could put themſelves into good Order, they were charg'd by a Squadron of Iriſh-Horſe whom they beat off, and ſtood their own Ground with great Stoutneſs. The Regiments of Sir John Hanmore and Count Naſſau were paſſing at another Part of the River, where a Squadron of Lieutenant-General Hamilton's Horſe, rode briskly to the very Brink of the River to ſtop their Paſſage; but being not able to oppoſe their Landing, they wheel'd away, and in their Retreat fell upon the French Foot with ſo much Indignation, that Part of 'em broke thro' Monſ. Le Cailemotes, and Cambones Regiments, which wanted Pikes to ſtem their furious Career. Cailemote himſelf receiv'd his Mortal Wound, and as he was carrying back by Four Soldiers to the Engliſh Camp, He encourag'd thoſe that croſs'd the River by theſe Words; A la Gloire, mes Enfants, a la Gloire, To Glory, my Boys, to Glory; which Words had their Force, and a ſort of Prediction in 'em, for the Iriſh-Horſe being obliged to wheel to the Left, and paſs through a Village to recover their own Men, they were intercepted by the Dutch and Inniskillin-Foot, and moſt of 'em, after a valiant Reſiſtance, were cut in pieces. By this time the-Dutch Guards being advanc'd as far as the Hedges, into the open Field, the Iriſh-Horſe came down upon 'em again with greater Numbers and redoubled Fury, but were ſo warmly receiv'd that they were forced to retire; yet a freſh Squadron of Horſe advanc'd to ſupport 'em, but they too were vigorouſly repulſed, by the French-Proteſtants and Inniskillin-Men.

In the mean-time the Danes came up to the Left, but were ſo valiantly attack'd in the Front by Hamilton's Horſe, that they were forced to give Ground; and ſome of 'em run croſs the River again. The Duke of Schomberg perceiving this Diſorder, and ſeeing the French-Proteſtants were alſo left expos'd without a Commander, immediately paſs'd the River in order to Head 'em, with ſo much Hurry that He would not be perſwaded by Monſieur Foubert, one of his Aids de Camp to put on his Armour. He was no ſooner got on the other Side, but He call'd to the French-Proteſtants in theſe brave Words: Allons, Meſſieurs, voila voſtre Perſecuteurs; (Come on, Gentlemen, ſee there your Perſecutors,) pointing to the French-Papiſts in the Enemy's Army: Immediately Fifteen or Sixteen of King James's Guards, who were returning main Speed to their Main-Body, after the Slaughter of their Companions, fell furiouſly upon the Duke, and gave him Two Wounds over the Head. At the ſame time, 1690. time, the French-Refugees firing raſhly upon the Enemy, are ſuppos'd to have ſhot the Duke through the Neck; upon which he fell from his Horſe, and inſtantly Died. Monſieur Foubert, alighting to relieve him, was ſhot in the Arm: And Doctor Walker, ſo Famous for the Defence of London-Derry, about the ſame Time, in a different Action, receiv'd a Wound in the Belly, which he ſurviv'd but ſome few Moments.

King William Paſſes the Boyne.

His Majeſty, accompany'd by the Prince of Denmark, Paſs'd the River with the Left-Wing of Horſe, and that with much Difficulty; for his Horſe was Bogg'd on the other ſide, and Himſelf forc'd to alight, till one of his Attendance help'd him to get his Horſe out, and mount again. Aſſoon as his Troops were got over, and put in ſome Order, His Majeſty Drew his Sword, (though the Wound he receiv'd the Day before, had made his Arm ſtiff and uneaſie) and March'd at the Head of 'em towards the Enemy, who were Coming on again, in good Order, towards the Engliſh-Foot, that had now got over the Paſs, and were Advancing bravely towards the Iriſh, though they were Double their Number. When theſe Two Bodies had got almoſt within Muſquet-ſhot of one another, the Enemy diſcover'd the Left-Wing of the Engliſh-Horſe Moving towards 'em: At which they made a ſudden Halt, Fac'd-about, and Retreated up the Hill again, to a little Village call'd Dunmore, about Half-a-Mile from the Paſs. The Engliſh Marching in good Order, Came up with 'em at this Village, when the Iriſh Fac'd-about, and Charg'd with ſo much Briskneſs, that they made the Engliſh-Horſe Give-ground, tho' they had the King at the Head of 'em. The King was ſo aſham'd of their Shrinking, that He rid off to the Inniskilliners, and ask'd them what they wou'd do for Him? Their Chief-Officer told them, It was King William, who was doing them the Honour to Head 'em. Upon this they boldly came forward, and the King Leading 'em, receiv'd the Enemy's Fire; but then Wheeling to the Left, to fetch up his own Men again, the Inniskilliners, through a Miſtake, retir'd after him above an Hundred Yards. This made the King Move to the Left, to put Himſelf at the Head of ſome Dutch-Troops that were Advancing; while, in the mean-time, the Inniskilliners, growing ſenſible of their Error, went on, and renew'd their Charge, with good Succeſs. In this Place, the Duke of Schonberg's Regiment of Horſe, made up of French-Refugees, behav'd themſelves with undaunted Reſolution, like Men that fought for their Friends and Protectors of another Nation, againſt the Enemies and Perſecutors of their own Country. At the ſame time, another Party, Commanded by Lieutenant-General Ginkle, Charg'd in a Lane to the Left, but was ſoon Overpower'd by the Iriſh, and forced to Give-way. This being obſerv'd by a Party of Sir Albert Coningham's Dragoons, and another of Colonel Leveſon's, the Officers Order'd their Men to alight, and Line a Hedge, as alſo an old Houſe that ſtankt the Lane, from whence they pour'd in their Shot upon the Enemy, and did great Service, by Protecting General Ginkle, who continu'd in the Rear of his Men, and labour'd heartily to make them ſtand their Ground, and by giving the Dutch-Horſe an Opportunity of Rallying; by which means, after Half an Hour's ſharp Diſpute, they were beat back again with conſiderable Loſs.

On the other ſide, Lieutenant-General Hamilton, finding that his Foot did not anſwer his Expectation, put himſelf at the Head of the Horſe, which were likewiſe Routed, and himſelf taken Priſoner. When he was brought to the King, His Majeſty ask'd him, Whether the Iriſh wou'd Fight any more? Yes, Sir, (reply'd Hamilton) upon my Honour, I believe they will. When he pronounc'd the word Honour, the King look'd wiſhly upon him, and then turn'd about, repeating once or twice, Your Honour; intimating, that what he aſſur'd upon his Honour, was not to be depended on, ſince he had forfeited that before, by ſiding with Tyrconnel: And this was all the Rebuke the King gave him, for his Breach of Truſt. In the mean-time, Count Schonberg, being inform'd of his Father's Death, Purſu'd the Enemy with that Fury, which a Noble and Juſt Reſentment cou'd inſpire, and drove them ſeveral Miles beyond the Vilage of Dubeck, with great Slaughter: Nor did he deſiſt from ſacrificing Enemies to his Father's Ghoſt, till the Lord Portland, by the King's expreſs Command, oblig'd him to return to the Place where the Foot made a Halt, and where they lay upon their Arms all Night. 1690.

King William had Reaſon not to regard what Hamilton told him; for, in effect, that General was no ſooner taken, but the Fight ceas'd on that ſide: And Count Lanzoon, making up to King James, who (during the whole Action) ſtood with ſome Squadrons of Horſe on Dunmore-Hill, repreſented to His Majeſty, "That He "wou'd be ſoon Surrounded by the Enemy; and therefore told Him, "He ought to think "of nothing but a Retreat, which he doubted "not to Make good, with many Brave Officers "then about Him, and the Remains of his French "and Swiſs-Troops." This Advice the Unfortunate King was very inclinable to take; and therefore, attended by the Regiment of Sarsfield, March'd off to Duleek, and from thence, in great haſte, to Dublin: Whilſt Count Lanzoon, Sheldon, and ſome other Officers, diſpos'd all things for a Retreat, which they perform'd in very good Order.

King William obtains an entire Victory.

King James's whole Loſs in this Battle, was generally computed at 1500 Men, amongſt whom were the Lord Dongan, the Lord Carlingford, Sir Neal O-Neal, the Marqueſs D'Harquincourt; and ſeveral Priſoners, the Chief of whom was Lieutenant-General Hamilton, who, to do him Juſtice, behav'd himſelf with great Courage, and kept Victory doubtful, till he was made Priſoner. On the Engliſh-ſide fell above 500; an inconſiderable Number, conſidering the Gain of ſo important a Battle, if the Renowned Duke of Schonberg had not been amongſt them. He was a Perſon of firm and compos'd Courage, and one of the beſt Generals that France ever bred. To the Lawrels he gather'd in Catalonia and in Flanders, he added the Glory of having fix'd the preſent King of Portugal on his Throne, and of having been Inſtrumental to the Settlement of King William. He had a great Experience of the World, knew Men and Things better than any Man of his Profeſſion ever did, and was as great in Council, as at the Head of an Army. In his Declining Years, his Memory very much fail'd, but his Judgment remain'd true and clear to the laſt. He appear'd Courteous and Affable to every-Body, and yet he had an Air of Grandeur that commanded Reſpect from all: He was of a Middle-Stature, Fair-Complexion'd, a very Sound, Hardy Man of his Age, and ſate a Horſe incomparably well. As he lov'd always to be Neat in his Cloaths, ſo was he ever Pleaſant in his Converſation, of which this Repartee is a pregnant Inſtance: Some-time before he went for Ireland, he was walking in St. James's-Park, amidſt Crowds of the Young and Gay, and being ask'd, What a Man of his Age had to do with ſuch Company? His Anſwer was, That a good General makes his Retreat

Death of the Duke of Schonberg.

1690. Retreat as late as he can. He was Eighty-two Years of Age when he was Kill'd. And as Monsieur La Caillemote had follow'd that Great-Man in all his Fortunes, while Alive; so did he in his Death, for he did not long survive his Wounds.

As for the King Himself, He receiv'd no manner of Hurt in the Action, though He was in all the height of it; only a Cannon-Ball carry'd away a piece of his Boot. His Majesty did all that the Greatest of Generals cou'd do upon this Occasion: He Chose the Field, Dispos'd the Attacks, Drew up his Army, Charg'd the Enemy several times, Supported his Forces when they began to Shrink, and Demean'd Himself throughout with that Conduct, Gallantry, Resolution, and Presence of Mind; and was such a Poize for the inclining Victory to his Own Side, that the Irish themselves confess'd, That if the English chang'd Kings with them, they wou'd fight the Battle over-again. However, Both Kings have been equally blam'd; the one, for not Improving the Advantage of his Victory; and the other, that of his Retreat. Those that have writ in Favour of King James, say, King William might have March'd directly to Dublin, a Place Open and Unfortify'd on every side; and prevented the Irish Assembling any more, and Securing Limerick, Galway, and several other Important Places. And such as are Partisans of King William, blame both King James, for leaving Ireland with so much Precipitation; and those He left behind, for not having carefully Collected the Remains of a Defeat that had cost them but few Men.

K. James flies to Dublin.

King James being arriv'd at Dublin, and having immediately Assembled the Magistrates and Council of the City, he told them; "That "his Army in England having made a total "Defection against Him, when He had the greatest "Occasion for them, He retir'd to France, where "He was kindly receiv'd by that King, and had all "the Assurance imaginable to be Re-establish'd on "his Throne: That in some-time after, he came "to this Kingdom of Ireland, and found all his "Roman-Catholick-Subjects, as Well-equipt and "Prepar'd to Defend his Cause, as their Ability "wou'd bear; and though He had been often "told, That when it came to the Touch, they wou'd "never bear the Brunt of a Battle; He cou'd never "credit the same till that Day, when having a "good Army, and all Preparations fit to Engage "a Foreign Invader, he found the fatal Truth of "what He had been so-often Precaution'd. And "tho' the Army did not Desert Him, as they did "in England; yet, when it came to Trial, they "basely fled the Field, and left it a Spoil to his "Enemies; nor cou'd they be prevail'd upon to "Rally, though the Loss, in the whole Defeat, "was but Inconsiderable: So that henceforward "He never more determin'd to Head an Irish-"Army, and did now resolve to shift for Himself, as "they themselves must do. That it had often been "Debated, in case such a Resolution shou'd happen, "Whether, upon Deserting the City of Dublin, the "same might not be Fired? He did therefore Charge "them, on their Allegiance, That they neither shou'd "Rifle it by Plunder, nor Destroy it by Fire; which "in all Kingdoms wou'd be judg'd very Barbarous, and must be believ'd to be done by His "Orders; and if done, there wou'd be but little "Mercy to be expected from an Enrag'd Enemy. Concluding, "He was necessitated to yield to "Force, but wou'd never cease to labour their "Deliverance, as long as He liv'd.

His Majesty having stay'd at Dublin one Night, the next Morning, attended by the Duke of Berwick and Tyrconnel, and the Marques of Powis, He Posted away to Waterford, where He arriv'd the same Day, taking care to have the Bridges broke down behind him, for fear of being Pursued. There He went on-Board a Vessel call'd the Count de Lauzun, that was ready to receive Him: But the Sieur Foran, who Commanded the Squadron, meeting him at Sea, desir'd him to go on-Board one of his Frigots, for his quicker Passage; and by this means he got over once more into France, and fix'd his Residence at St. Germains. 1690. K. James returns to France.

So soon as King James was gone, all the Considerable Papists fled from Dublin, and the Protestants were releas'd, who possess'd themselves of the Militia-Arms, and, with the Assistance of the Bishops of Meath and Limrick, form'd a Committee to take Care of Things, and sent Letters to King William, to give him an Account of what had pass'd, and humbly to Pray His Majesty to Honour that City with his Presence. K. William Invited to Dublin.

King William, before He left England, was very sensible of a Dangerous Conspiracy against Him, form'd upon the Hopes and Expectation of Success to King James and the French Power; and therefore, Four Days before He Set out for Ireland, He Publish'd a Proclamation for the Apprehending of several Disaffected-Persons, who, by Information given upon Oath, had Conspired together to raise Rebellion, and, for that Purpose, had made Provision of Arms, and had Listed themselves in several Regiments, Troops and Companies, under pretence of Commission from the late King James. His Majesty well knew of an intended Invasion from France, and a concerted Insurrection in England, if good Opportunity shou'd offer, by any Advantage obtain'd by the French-Fleet, which was at this time more Formidable than was expected, or cou'd be well imagin'd; and our own English-Navy was, for this one Year, inferior to it. His Majesty, however, was not wanting to make the best Preparations He cou'd by Sea; and having fitted up as good a Fleet as the Exigence of his Affairs wou'd admit, He Appointed the Earl of Torrington Admiral, Ralph Delaval Esq; Vice-Admiral, and George Rooke Esq; Rear-Admiral, to Command the Red-Squadron; and made Mr. Russel Admiral of the Blue, with Sir John Ashby Vice-Admiral, and Sir Cloudesley Shovel Rear-Admiral, under him. And because there was a Common-Suspicion, that some of the Officers and Sea-men were Disaffected to the present Government, therefore, to purge 'em, while the Fleet lay in the Downs, this Address was made a Test of their Loyalty to King William: A Plot in England, against K. William.

"WE the Flag-Officers, Captains, and other "Officers of Your Majesties Navy, being "now ready to enter upon Action, for the Service "of Your Majesties, and the Defence of our "Country, do most humbly beg Leave to Declare "to GOD, Your Majesties, and the whole "World, That we do acknowledge Your Ma-"jesties to be the Undoubted Rightful King and "Queen of England, and the Dominions thereto "belonging: And we do hereby solemnly Re-"nounce all Allegiance and Obedience to the late "King James; and do faithfully Promise, That "we will, with our Lives, Defend and Assist "Your Majesties, against the said late King "James, his Adherents, and all Your Enemies "whatsoever. Address of the Fleet.

The Queen administred the Government with great Application to Business, and with a very distinguishing Temper and Constancy of Mind. She had a mighty Weight of Cares upon Her; the The Queen's wise Administration in the King's Absence.

1690. the Danger of Her Royal Conſort in Ireland; the Imminent Appearance of an Invaſion from France; and at Home a divided People, ſome profeſtly owning an Allegiance to King James, and even others who had taken the Oaths, waiting for an Opportunity to renounce 'em. Under all theſe dubious Apprehenſions Her Majeſty betray'd no Fear, and loſt no Time. Aſſoon as She heard the King was ſafely Landed in Ireland, She began to Exerciſe the Power, by Act of Parliament devolv'd upon Her, in Two Seaſonable Proclamations, both Dated the ſame Day, June the 17th. One commanding all Papiſts and reputed Papiſts forthwith to depart the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and from within Ten Miles of the ſame. Another for the Confinement of Popiſh Recuſants within Five Miles of their reſpective Dwellings. And there was great Need of the utmoſt Vigilance and Care to prevent the Ruin of the Nation; for King James's Adherents, who by this Time began to be diſtinguiſh'd by the Name of Jacobites, being furniſhed by King William's Abſence with a promiſing Opportunity, to Attempt the Reſtoring of their Abdicated Monarch, were concerting Meaſures with France to put their Deſigns in Execution. It was Agreed, that while Part of the French-Fleet ſhould bear up the Thames, the Jacobites in London, who were grown very Bold and Numerous, by the Flocking of that Party from all Parts of the Country thither, ſhould have made an Inſurrection, and have Seiſed the Queen and Her Chief Miniſters. Then certain Perſons were to have taken upon 'em the Adminiſtration of Affairs till the Return of King James, who was to leave the Command of his Army to his Generals, and haſten with all Speed into England. The other Part of the French-Fleet, having join'd their Gallies, was to have Landed Eight Thouſand Men at Torbay, with Arms for a greater Number. After which the Gallies and Men of War were to Sail into the Iriſh-Sea, to hinder the Return of King William and his Forces, and the Diſcontented Scotch were to have Revolted at the ſame Time in ſeveral Parts of that Kingdom.

The French-Fleet having enter'd the Channel, as before concerted, hover'd ſome time about the Engliſh-Coaſt, as expecting the Effect of the Conſpiracy that was to have broke out the 18th of June. The Vigilant Queen would not run the Hazards of Delay, but ſent immediate Orders to Admiral Torrington to Fight the Enemy where-ever he ſhould meet him. Accordingly on the 24th of June that Admiral Sail'd from St. Helens the Wind at North-Eaſt, and ſtood toward the French-Fleet, which was ſeen the Evening before off of Freſh-Water Gate in the Iſle of Wight; but the Wind taking him ſhort, He came to an Anchor near Dungneſſe, within Five Leagues of the Enemy, who at Eight next Morning were at Compton-Bay. On June the 30th, (the Day before the Battle at the Boyne) the Two Fleets drew up in Lines of Battle off of Beachy, and about Nine in the Morning, the Dutch having the Van-Guard began the Fight, as alſo did ſome of the Engliſh; but not being Seconded by the reſt of the Engliſh-Fleet, which unexpectedly ſtood away, ſeveral of the Dutch-Ships, after they had fought moſt Gallantly, were either Burnt, Sunk or Diſabled, and the Engliſh that Engag'd were very much ſhatter'd. The Fight continu'd from Morning till Evening, the Dutch maintaining their Stations with ſo much Reſolution and Bravery againſt the whole French Force, which conſiſted Eighty-two Men of War, that they had much ado to eſcape being all deſtroy'd. Among other Officers they loſt in this unequal Battle, were Rear-Admiral Jan Dick, Rear-Admiral Brackel, and Captain Nordel; on the Engliſh Side, Captain Botham, Captain Pomroy, with Two Captains of the Marine-Regiments. Admiral Torrington was diſcarded, and afterwards brought to his Tryal, where he pleaded the Inequality of Strength and the Diſadvantage of the Wind, and was thereupon Acquitted: Yet the Action was thought ſo Inglorious that he ſuffer'd extremely in his Reputation among the People, who were always apt to call a Misfortune a Miſcarriage. It is certain that in the Year 1697. when ſeveral French-Officers who had been in the Engagement, came over into England after the Peace, when they could not be ſuſpected of any Partial Deſign, they openly Juſtify'd and Commended the Earl's Conduct, and ſaid, "He deſerv'd to be Rewarded "rather than Cenſur'd, ſince He had preſerved "the beſt Part of the Fleet from being totally "deſtroy'd.

The News of the Advantage got by the French at Sea had no ſooner reach'd London, but the Fears of a Deſcent created a general Conſternation, which immediately ſpread itſelf through the whole Kingdom. The Queen was not Ignorant of the Danger, but did all that was poſſible to conceal her own Fears, and to inſpire her Subjects with Valour and Reſolution. The Lord-Mayor, and Aldermen, and the Lieutenancy of London were not wanting on this Critical Juncture to expreſs their Zeal and Affection for the Government: For Attending Her Majeſty in Council, they declar'd the unanimous Reſolution of the City, to Defend and Preſerve Their Majeſties and their Government upon this extraordinary Juncture, with the Hazard of their Lives and the utmoſt of their Power; repreſenting to Her Majeſty that the ſeveral Regiments of the Militia of the City, conſiſting of about Nine Thouſand Men are compleat in their Numbers, well-armed, and appointed, and ready to be Raiſed immediately, and to proceed in Their Majeſties Service: That the Lieutenancy alſo had reſolved, that Six Regiments of Auxiliaries ſhou'd be Raiſed for the Service; and that the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons in Common-Council Aſſembled, had unanimouſly Reſolved, by the voluntary Contribution of themſelves and other Citizens, forthwith to raiſe and ſet out a Large Regiment of Horſe and One Thouſand Dragoons, for Their Majeſties Service, (and had made conſiderable Progreſs therein already,) and Reſolved likewiſe to maintain them at their own Charge in the Service for a Month, or longer, if there ſhall be Occaſion. And they prayed Her Majeſty that She would be pleaſed to Nominate and Appoint Officers to Command them. All which Her Majeſty moſt graciouſly accepted, and was pleaſed to thank them for their Readineſs, Loyalty and Zeal on this Occaſion: and to the laſt Part anſwered, That She would Conſider of it, and Appoint Officers to Command according to their Deſire.

The French threaten'd a Deſcent.

Loyal Addreſs from the City of London;

About the ſame Time, to Suppreſs the Fears of a Revolt in the Weſt, an Addreſs was preſented to the Queen by Shadrach Vincent, Eſq; from above Ten Thouſand Tinners of Cornwall, giving all Aſſurances of Fidelity and Obedience, and faithfully promiſing (notwithſtanding the Artifice and ill Deſigns of diſaffected Men to withdraw them from their Loyalty) an unalterable Allegiance to Their Majeſties, owning and acknowledging Their Majeſties alone to be their Lawful and Rightful King and Queen, and diſclaiming all Allegiance to the late King James, or to the Pretended Prince of Wales after him. Within few Days after, the Deputy-Lieutenants and Officers of the Militia for Great Loſs of the Engliſh and Dutch.

1690. for Middlesex and Westminster, made a Solemn Address and Solemn Declaration, That they perceived there were many mischievous and dangerous Practices, Consultations and Contrivances of Papists, and many others disaffected to Their Majesties and Their Government; and that it was most Notorious that the French-King by Confederacy with the late King and his Adherents, had made a bold Invasion of Their Majesties Dominion of the Narrow Seas, designing to destroy their Royal Fleet, and in Consequence to bring the Protestants of this Kingdom under his Tyranny and cruel Yoke of Bondage; and therefore they hold themselves bound in Duty to declare upon this Occasion, their deep Sense, Hatred and Abhorrence of the vile Ingratitude of those Papists and professt Protestants, who, notwithstanding Their Majesties Pardoning and Protecting them, had by Conspiracies with the late King's Adherents, or by their Murmurings against Their Majesties and the Present Government, or by their Refusal of the Oaths of Fidelity and Obedience to their Majesties, encouraged, assisted or abetted the late King in his Claims and Pretences of any Right and Title to the Government of these Realms, &c.

Wise Measures taken by the Queen.

Under these Encouragements the Queen forgot nothing, that the most active Prudence could suggest, as fit to be done in such a Juncture, without Hurry or a too visible Concern: She Publish'd a Proclamation, July the 5th, requiring all Seamen and Mariners to render themselves to Their Majesties, with suitable Rewards for coming in, and Penalties for absenting: She gave out Commissions, to put the Standing-Forces in a Condition to oppose the Enemy, and She Order'd the Militia in the Western Parts, to be in a readiness of Defending the Coasts and Assisting the Army: And to strike a Terror into the Conspirators with France, She Publish'd a Proclamation for Apprehending Edward Henry, Earl of Lichfield; Thomas, Earl of Aylesbury; William, Lord Montgomery; Roger, Earl of Castlemaine; Richard, Viscount Preston, Henry Lord Bellasys; Sir Edward Hales, Sir Robert Thorold, Sir Robert Hamilton, Sir Theophilus Oglethorpe, Colonel Edward Sackvile, Lieutenant-Colonel William Richardson, Major Thomas Soaper, Captain David Lloy'd, William Penn, Esq; Edmond Elliot, Esq; Marmaduke Langdale, Esq; and Edward Rutter; being Persons who had Conspired with divers other disaffected Persons, to disturb and destroy the Government, and for that Purpose had abetted and adhered to their Majesties Enemies in the present Invasion. Nor was Her Majesty's Care of Affairs confin'd within Her own Dominions; for while She put Herself in a Posture of Defence at Home, She dispatch'd Mr. Harbord to the States-General, to let them know, how much Her Majesty was concern'd, at the Misfortune that had befall'n their Squadron in the late Engagement, and at their not-having been Seconded as they ought to have been; which Matter Her Majesty had directed to be examin'd into, in order to Recompense those that had done their Duty, and to Punish such as should be found to have deserv'd it: That Her Majesty had given Orders for Re-fitting the Dutch-Ships that were Disabled, at Her own Charge, and Commanded that all possible Care should be taken of the Sick and Wounded Seamen; and that Rewards should be given to the Widows of those that were Kill'd, behaving themselves bravely in the Fight, to encourage others to do well for the future. Moreover Mr. Harbord told the States, that Her Majesty had Order'd Twelve Great Ships to be forthwith fitted out, and that Her Majesty hop'd the States would likewise do their utmost to Reinforce their Fleet in this Conjuncture: And Lastly, he acquainted them with the King's Happy Successes in Ireland. The States receiv'd this Message with great Satisfaction, and unanimously resolv'd to fit out immediately Thirteen Capital Ships and Six Frigots.

Victory of the Boyne prevented all Fears and Dangers.

And yet all this Wisdom had hardly been sufficient to prevent the fatal Consequences of our Defeat at Sea, if the Victory at the Boyne, obtain'd the very next day, had not put a sudden and effectual Check to the Jacobite-Party. There has been a common Mistake spread among many People, That King William would not have hazarded a Battle, but upon an Express receiv'd that Morning, of the Beating of his Fleet, which he kept secret till the Action was over. But this is impossible to be reconcil'd to the Nature of the thing, in the Circumstances of Time and Place. King William having rested his Forces for one Night only, sent a Detachment next day to invest Drogheda, where was a great Magazine of Stores. The Governour, at first, seem'd resolute to defend the Place; but upon a Message from the King, That if His Majesty was forc'd to bring his Cannon before that Place, he must expect no Quarter, he march'd out with the Garison, having their Baggage only, but leaving all their Arms and Stores behind them.

King William's March.

On July 3. The Duke of Ormond, and Monsr. Auverquerque, were Detach'd with Nine Troops of Horse to secure the City of Dublin: The next day His Majesty, with the whole Army, march'd the same way, and on the 5th Encamp'd at Finglas; where he was inform'd, That King James was embark'd at Waterford, with the Duke of Berwick, Mr. Fitz-James, the Lord Powis, the Lord Tyrconnel, and the Marques Delere: That some French Ships being arriv'd at Kingsale, many that had fled from the Battle, were posting thither to get away for France, but that the greatest Body of the Irish were gone towards Athlone: That 300 of the Swiss had deserted the Enemy; that the Town of Wexford had declar'd for King William, and that Sligo was abandon'd by the Irish.

His Entry into Dublin.

On Sunday, July 6. King William rode in a Triumphant manner into Dublin, and went directly to St. Patrick's Church, attended by the Bishops of Meath and Limerick; and after the Publick Services were Solemnly perform'd, Dr. King Preached an affectionate Sermon upon the Power and Wisdom of the Providence of GOD, in protecting his People and defeating their Enemies. The Mayor and Aldermen waited on His Majesty, and the People endeavour'd, by all Demonstrations of Joy, to express their just Sense of their great and happy Deliverance. In the Afternoon, the King return'd to the Camp; where the next day he Publish'd his Royal Declaration, "Promising both his Pardon "and Protection to all the People of the Kingdom "of Ireland, who either remain'd at home, or ha- "ving fled from their Dwellings, should by the "First day of August next, repair to their usual "Places of Abode, and Surrender up their Arms: "But threatning condign Punishment to all the "desperate Leaders of the present Rebellion, who "had violated those Laws, by which the Kingdom "of Ireland was united, and inseparably annex'd "to the Imperial Crown of England; and had "call'd in the French, and committed all manner "of Violences and Depredations against the Pro- "testants of that Country, &c.

The King pursues the Irish Forces.

On July 9. The King decamp'd from Finglas, and divided his Army into Two Bodies: With the greater 1690. greater His Majesty remov'd to Crumlin, Three Miles South of Dublin; and the other, consisting of Four Regiments of Horse, Two of Dragoons, and Ten of Foot, was sent towards Athlone, under the Command of Lieutenant-General Douglas; who reaching that Place on July 17. sent a Drummer to Summon it; but Colonel Grace, the Governour, a sturdy resolute Man, fired a Pistol at the Messenger, and said, These are the only Terms that I am for. Upon this rude Answer, Douglas resolv'd to make a General Assault, and had made some Progress in the Attempt of it; but for want of Forage, and upon a Report, That Sarsfield was advancing with Fifteen Thousand Men to relieve the Place, Douglas held a Council of War; wherein it was thought fit to raise the Siege, which he accordingly did on the 25th, having lost near 400 Men before the Town, of whom the greater part died of Sickness.

Entertained at Kilkenny.

His Majesty having left Brigadeer Trelawny to command at Dublin, advanc'd with his Army towards Kilkenny; where, on July 19. he was splendidly Entertain'd by the Duke of Ormond, in his Castle, which had the good luck to have been preserv'd by Count Lauzun, with all the Goods and Furniture, and a Cellar well-stor'd. On the 21st the Army encamp'd at Carrick, from whence Major-General Kirk, with his own Regiment, and Colonel Brewer's, as also a Party of Horse, was sent towards Waterford, to demand Possession of that Town. The Two Regiments in Garison, at first refus'd to Surrender, but upon drawing down the heavy Cannon, and the sending for more Forces, they agreed to march out with Arms and Baggage, on the 25th, and so were conducted to Mallon. The Fort Duncannon, a Place of good Strength, which commands the River of Waterford, was likewise surrendred the next day. His Majesty went and view'd Waterford the same day it was given up, and took care that no Persons should be molested, contrary to the Articles of Surrendry: Among others, the Lord Dover was admitted to a more particular Protection, as having formerly apply'd himself, when the King was at Hillsborough, by Major-General Kirk's means, to desire a Pass for himself and Family to Flanders. The Lord George Howard did here likewise accept of his Majesty's Mercy.

Advances toward Limerick.

On July 27. The King left the Command of the Army to Count Soames, and went away to Carlow, in order to return to Dublin, and embark for England. But after some few Days, having an Account from the Queen, that the Designs of the Malecontents were discover'd and prevented, the Loss at Sea pretty well repair'd, and that the French had only Burnt One small Village in the West, and so gone off again, His Majesty resolved to return to the Army; which on the 4th Day of August He found encamp'd at Golden-Bridge, and by the 7th He reached Carrickelliss, within Five Miles of Limerick, where Lieutenant-General Douglas join'd him. The next Morning the Earl of Portland and Brigadeer Steward were detach'd towards Limerick with Nine Hundred Horse and Twelve Hundred Foot, who advanc'd within Cannon-shot of the Town with little Opposition; and in the Evening the King himself, attended by Prince George, Monsieur d'Auverquerque, Lieutenant-General Ginkle, and several other great Officers, with about Two Hundred Horse, went to view the Posture of the Enemy, and the Avenues to the Town. On the 9th the whole Army decamp'd at Five in the Morning, and made their Approaches in excellent Order, and drove the Enemy before them, till they came to a narrow Pass between two Bogs, within half a Mile of the Town, where the Irish Horse made a stand, and the Hedges were lin'd with Musquetteers; but Colonel Earle led on his Foot with incredible Bravery, and continu'd this Hedge-Fight for two Hours, till he had driven the Irish under the very Walls of the Town, and possess'd himself of two Advantageous Posts, call'd, Cromwel's Fort, and the Old Chappel. The Army being well-posted, the King sent a Trumpeter with a Summons to the Town: A great many of the Garison were for Capitulating, but Monsr. Boisseleau, the Governour, the Duke of Berwick, and Colonel Sarsfield, oppos'd it with a great deal of Heat, saying, There was by this time an actual Insurrection in England; That the Dauphin was anded there with a great Army, and that the Prince of Orange would quickly be oblig'd to withdraw his Forces thither. Hereupon Boisseleau sent the Trumpeter back with a Letter, directed to Sir Robert Southwel, Secretary of State, (to avoid owning the Title of King William) importing, That he was surpriz'd at the Summons, but he thought the best way of gaining the Prince of Orange*'s good Opinion, was, by a Vigorous Defence of the Town, which his Master had committed to his Trust.* About Eight in the Evening, the King went to his Camp, a little Mile from the Town, having been on Horseback from Five in the Morning, giving the necessary Orders, and exposing himself amidst the greatest Dangers: Nor was he safe in his Tent; for some Deserters having given the Enemy an Account of the Situation of it, they play'd so very briskly that way, that his Majesty was at last prevail'd with to remove.

Summons the Garison.

On August 11. One Obrian, an honest Country Gentleman, came to the Camp, and gave Notice, That Sarsfield with a Body of Five or Six Hundred Horse and Dragoons, had pass'd the River Shannon in the Night, Nine Miles above Limerick, and was out about some Extraordinary Design. The King immediately suspected an Attempt upon his Train of Artillery, that was then upon the Road from Kilkenny, under a small Guard; and therefore his Majesty gave Order, That Sir John Lanier with Five Hundred Horse should march to meet the Train. But whereever the Fault lay, it was One or Two in the Morning before the Party set out, and even then they advanc'd very slowly, till after they saw a great Light in the Air, and heard a strange rumbling Noise, which some rightly conjectur'd to be the Train blown up. For the Artillery having the day before march'd beyond Cullen, to a little old Ruinous Castle call'd Ballenedy, not seven Miles from the English Camp: Sarsfield lurk'd all that day in the Mountains, and having notice where and how the Convoy lay, he took with him Guides that brought him to the very spot; where he surpriz'd them, killing about Sixty, and putting the rest to Flight: After which he gathered the Carriages and Waggons of Bread and Ammunition into one heap, he fill'd the Guns with Powder, and placing their Mouths into the Ground, set fire to a Train that blew up all the Heap with a most astonishing Noise. The Irish got some Booty upon this Occasion, but took no Prisoners; only a Lieutenant of Colonel Earle's being Sick in a House hard by, was stripped and brought to Sarsfield; who us'd him with Civility, and told him, If he had not succeeded in that Enterprize, he would have gone to France. The Party of Horse that was sent from the Camp, came up in sight of the Enemy's Rear, after the Count Sarsfield's successful Attempt upon the Train of Artillery.

1690. the Buſineſs was over; but Wheeling to the Left, to Intercept them in their Retreat over the Shannon, the Iriſh paſs'd clear another Way, and got ſafe into Limerick.

The Siege of Limerick Carried on.

However, the Siege was Carry'd on, and the Trenches were Open'd on the 17th of Auguſt, when the Prince of Wirtemburgh Lieutenant-General, with the Major-General Kirke, Tetteau, and Sir Henry Bellaſis Brigadeer, with Seven Battalions, enter'd the Trenches, and advanc'd near 300 Paces, and made themſelves Maſters of two Redoubts. The 18th, the Trenches were Reliev'd by Lieutenant-General Douglas, the Lord Sidney, and Count Naſſau, Major-Generals, and Brigadeer Stewart, who approach'd another ſtrong Redoubt of the Enemy; while His Majeſty, in the thickeſt of the Fire, rode up to Cromwell's-Fort, and as his Horſe was juſt entring the Gap, He was ſtay'd by a Gentleman that came up to ſpeak with Him, when, in the very Moment, there came a Cannon-Ball, that grounded upon that very Gap, and cover'd the King with Glorious Duſt. His Majeſty took little Notice of it, but alighting, went and laid Himſelf down within the Fort. On the 19th, the Trenches were Reliev'd by Prince Wirtemburgh, who advanc'd farther towards the ſaid Redoubt, which the King Order'd to be Attack'd the next Day, when Lieutenant-General Douglas, the Lord Sidney, Count Naſſau, and Brigadeer Stewart, were again on the Guard: And the Signal being given about Two in the Afternoon, the Engliſh Attack'd the Fort with admirable Bravery, and, after an obſtinate Fight, drove out the Enemy, killing 40 of their Number. About Half-an-hour after, the Iriſh made a great Sally with near 2000 Horſe and Foot, but were vigorouſly Repuls'd. The 21ſt, the Trenches were carry'd on, and ſo well-finiſh'd, as to hinder any more Sallies. The 22d, the Beſiegers batter'd the Enemy's High-Tower, from whence they had fired into the Trenches, and quite Levell'd them, and in the Night threw ſeveral Bombs and Carcaſſes into the Town, as they did, the next Day, Red-hot Bullets, which ſet ſeveral Houſes, and a Magazine of Hay, on-fire. All the Batteries being finiſh'd the 24th, and Thirty Pieces of Cannon mounted on 'em, the Trenches, by the 25th, were advanc'd within thirty Paces of the Ditch, a Breach was made in the Wall near St. John's-Gate, and part of the Paliſado's on the Counterſcarp beaten down by the 26th: So that on the next Day, the King Commanded the Cover'd-way or Counterſcarp, and two Towers or Forts that were on each ſide of the Breach, and contiguous to the Wall, to be Attack'd, and that the Men ſhou'd advance no farther, but make a Lodgment there. About Half-an-hour after Three, the Signal was given, and the Granadeers under Monſieur La Barthe leapt over the fartheſt Angle of the Trenches, and ran towards the Counterſcarp, firing their Pieces, and throwing in their Granado's, with ſo much Bravery, that the Iriſh threw down their Arms, and ran as faſt as they cou'd into the Town: Which the Engliſh perceiving, they enter'd the Place, pell-mell with 'em; and had certainly carry'd it, if the Regiments who were to ſecond the Granadeers upon the Counterſcarp, had not ſtopt there, as having no Orders to go farther, for the Iriſh were all running from the Walls, quite over into the Engliſh-Town; but ſeeing that few of the Engliſh had enter'd the Breach, they Rally'd again, Fac'd the Aſſailants, and ply'd them ſo warmly, that ſeveral of 'em were Kill'd, and many mortally-Wounded. The Iriſh being fluſht with this Succeſs, ventur'd upon the Breach again; while the Women came up, and exerted all their Fury, in pelting the Engliſh with Stones, Broken Bottles, and any Inſtruments of Miſchief that came next to their hands. The Men, for meer ſhame, were the more Valiant; ſo that after Three Hours on equal fighting, the Engliſh were forc'd to retire to their Trenches, having loſt about 600 Men Kill'd upon the ſpot, and about as many Mortally-Wounded. 1690.

Attack bravely made;

But unſucceſsful.

The King, who ſtood nigh Cromwel's-Fort all the while, when the Action was over (which laſted from Six to Seven) return'd to his Camp, very much Concern'd at the Diſappointment, and thought fit to Raiſe the Siege: So, on the 30th of Auguſt, the Heavy-Baggage and Cannon were ſent away; and the next Day, the Army Decampt, and March'd off in very good Order, without any Diſturbance from the Enemy, towards Clonwel, under the Command of Count Soames. The King Raiſes the Siege;

Then His Majeſty having Conſtituted the Lord Sidney, and Thomas Coningsby Eſq; Lords-Juſtices of Ireland, He embarqu'd at Duncannon-Fort, with Prince George, and ſome other Perſons of Diſtinction, on the 5th of September, and arriv'd next Day, towards Evening, in King's-Road, with three Yachts, two Men of War, and ſome Tenders. His Majeſty being come a-ſhore, lay that Night at King's-Weſton; on Sunday went to Bath, and lay the Night following at the Duke of Beaufort's at Badmington: On Monday His Majeſty lodg'd with the Duke of Somerſet at Marlborough, and the next Night at Windſor; and next Day, about Four in the Afternoon, came to Kenſington, where, that Night in Council, He Order'd a Commiſſion to be Prepar'd, for Proroguing the Parliament to the Second Day of October next; and a Proclamation, to give Notice, That His Majeſty, on that Day, expected a full Attendance of the Lords and Commons. And returns to England:

The next Day, being Thurſday, September the 11th, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Recorder, Attended the King at Kenſington, humbly to Congratulate His Majeſty, upon the happy Succeſs of His Arms in Ireland, the wonderful Preſervation of His Royal-Perſon, and His ſafe Return into this Kingdom. Is Received with many Congratulations.

In the Afternoon, the Biſhop of London, with his City-Clergy, Attended the King and Queen, to pay their Duty and Congratulation to Their Majeſties, upon the ſame happy Occaſion.

And ſoon after, the Lieutenancies of London and Middleſex made the like Congratulations.

And Addreſſes of the ſame Nature were brought from ſeveral Companies and Corporations.

On Thurſday the 2d of October, the Parliament Met at Weſtminſter; and His Majeſty made this Speech to both Houſes: Meeting of the Parliament.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

" SInce I laſt Met you, I have us'd My " beſt Endeavours to Reduce Ireland " into ſuch a Condition this Year, as that it " might be no longer a Charge to England. " And it has pleas'd God to bleſs my En- " deavours with ſuch Succeſs, that I doubt " not but I ſhould have been fully poſſeſs'd " of that Kingdom by this time, had I been " Enabled to have gone into the Field as " ſoon as I ſhou'd have done, and is more- " eſpecially The King's Speech.

1690. " especially necessary in Ireland, where the " Rains are so great, and begin so early.

" I think My Self oblig'd to take Notice, " how well the Army there have behav'd " themselves on all Occasions, and born great " Hardships with little Pay, and with so " much Patience and Willingness, as could not " but proceed from an affectionate Duty to " my Service, and a Zeal for the Protestant-Religion.

I have already made it evident, how much " I have preferr'd the Satisfaction of my Subjects, before the most solid Advantages of " the Crown, by parting with so considerable " a Branch of its Inheritance: And it is no-less apparent, that I have ask'd no Revenue " for My Self, but what I have readily " subjected to be Charg'd to the Uses of " the War.

" I did, at My Departure, give Order " for all the Publick-Accompts to be made " ready for Me, against My Return, and I " have Commanded them to be Laid before " the House of Commons; by which they will " see, that the real Want of what was neces-sary beyond the Funds Given, and the not-getting in due Time That for which Funds " were Assign'd, have been the Principal-Causes why the Army is in so much Arrear " of their Pay, and the Stores for the Navy " and Ordnance not Supply'd as they ought " to be.

" Now, as I have neither spar'd My " Person, nor My Pains, to do you all the " Good I cou'd; so I doubt not, but if you " will as cheerfully do your Parts, it is in " your Power to make both Me and your-selves Happy, and the Nation Great. And " on the other hand, it is too plain, by what " the French have let you see so lately, That " if the present War be not Prosecuted " with Vigour, no Nation in the World is " expos'd to greater Danger.

" I hope therefore, there will need no " more upon that Subject, than to Lay before " you, Gentlemen of the House of Commons, " the State of what will be necessary for the " Fleet and Armies; which cannot possibly " admit of being Lessen'd in the ensuing " Year: And to Recommend to your Care, " the Clearing of My Revenue, so as to Ena-ble Me to Subsist, and to Maintain the " Charge of the Civil-List; the Revenue " being so Engag'd, that it must be wholly " apply'd, after the First of November next, " to Pay off the Debts already Charg'd upon " it: And therefore, a present Consideration " must be had of the Arrears of the Army, " which shall likewise be Laid before you; " and for all which, I must desire a Sufficient " and Timely Supply.

" It is further necessary to Inform you, " That the whole Support of the Confederacy " Abroad, will absolutely depend upon the 1690. " Speed and Vigour of your Proceedings in " this Session.

" And here I must take Notice, with " great Satisfaction, of the Readiness which " My Subjects of all Degrees have shewn, " both in this City, and in their several Coun-ties, by giving their Assistances so cheerfully " as they did in My Absence, while the French-Fleet was upon Our Coasts. And besides " this so convincing Mark of the Good-Incli-nations of My People, I have found, through " all the Countries where I pass'd, both at " My Going into Ireland, and in My Return " from thence, such Demonstrations of their " Affection, that I have not the least doubt, " but I shall find the same from their Repre-sentatives in Parliament.

" I cannot Conclude, without taking No-tice also, how much the Honour of the Na-tion has been expos'd, by the Ill-Conduct " of My Fleet, in the last Summer's Engage-ment against the French: And I think " My Self so much Concern'd to see it Vin-dicated, that I cannot rest Satisfy'd, till an " Example has been made of such as shall be " found faulty, upon their Examination and " Trial; which was not practicable while the " whole Fleet was Abroad, but is now put " into the proper Way of being done as soon " as may be.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

" I look upon the future Well-being of " this Kingdom, to depend upon the Result " of your Counsels and Determinations at this " Time; and the Benefit will be Double, by " the Speed of your Resolutions: Insomuch, " that I hope you will Agree with Me in " this Conclusion; That whoever goes about " to obstruct or divert your Applications to " these Matters, preferably to all others, can nei-ther be My Friend nor the Kingdom's.

Address of the Two Houses:

The Parliament taking into Consideration the weighty Matters Recommended to them, and that Lay before them; the Lords, in the first place, on the 6th of October, Presented an Address to His Majesty, wherein they expres'd, " How " extremely sensible they were, of the great " Benefit and Advantage His late Expedition " into Ireland had procured to all his Subjects " in general, and also the Success of His Arms " in that Kingdom; which was, under God, " owing to His Majesty's Valour and Conduct: " Wherefore they thought it their Duty, to return " him their humble and hearty Thanks, for all " those signal Evidences He had given to his " People, which had carry'd him, on so many " Occasions, to Venture a Life that was so Dear " to them; and to Despise all Hazards, to pro-cure the Settlement of His Kingdoms, the Peace " and Tranquility of His Subjects, and the Esta-blishment of their Religion. And as it was impos-sible but so-much Bravery of Mind, such an " Undaunted Courage, and a Heart so exalted " above any Apprehensions, in the midst of all " Dangers,

The Lords.

1690. " Dangers, muſt gain His Majeſty the Admiration " and Eſteem of all the World, and even of His " Enemies themſelves, who had felt the Effect of " ſo great Vertues; ſo they did not doubt, but " ſuch Extraordinary Qualities, muſt Unite the " Hearts of all His People in ſuch a Tenderneſs, " aſwell as Duty, for His Royal-Perſon, as was " neceſſary for the Compleating of what He had " ſo Glorioufly Begun.

Their Lordſhips alſo being very ſenſible of the Queen's Prudent Adminiſtration, during His Majeſty's Abſence in Ireland, next Day acknowledg'd, " The " great Advantage the Nation had receiv'd, by the " eminent Reſolution, aſwell as Prudence, She had " ſhewn in the King's Abſence, and in ſuch Cir- " cumſtances of Difficulty, as wou'd have diſcom- " pos'd a Mind that had not been rais'd above " them, as Her Majeſty had approv'd Hers to be, " by that undeniable Evidence: And they De- " clared, That Her Majeſty having preſerv'd the " Peace and Quietneſs of the Kingdom, by Her " Prudent Adminiſtration, againſt the Dangers " threaten'd by a Powerful Enemy; the Remem- " brance of ſuch Extraordinary Vertue muſt " ever dwell in their Minds, and engage them, " in Juſtice, upon all Occaſions, to expreſs their " Gratitude, as became Her moſt Dutiful Sub- " jects.

The Commons, though not quite ſo forward as the Lords, yet, with no leſs Senſe of Duty and Acknowledgments to Their Majeſties, on the 9th of October, repreſented to the King, Addreſs of the Commons. " Their Grateful Senſe of that Unparallel'd Good- " neſs, and Tender Affection to His People; " which, for the Reſcuing of the Kingdom of " Ireland from a Tyrannous and Foreign Yoke, " and Eaſing His Subjects of that Kingdom, of " the exceſſive Charge of a Lingring War, had " induced Him to undertake a Hazardous Voyage, " and too freely to expoſe to all the Dangers of " War, that Invaluable Life, upon which the " whole Proteſtant-Intereſt, and Common-Liberty of " Europe, ſo much depended: That it was, next " under GOD, to His Conduct and Example, that " they muſt aſcribe the Succeſs of the Expedition, " and to which they muſt owe their Hopes of " the Speedy and Entire Reduction of that King- " dom, and of ſeeing themſelves in a Condition " to make His Enemies ſenſible of the Strength " and Power of England, under a King who Knew " and Purſued its Intereſt. They moſt heartily " Congratulated His Majeſty's Succeſs, and ſafe " Return to His People, who were Unanimouſly " Perſwaded, That their Peace, Security and Hap- " pineſs, were bound up in His Safety: And " They did, in the Name of All the Commons of " England, Aſſure Him, That they wou'd be ever " Ready to Aſſiſt Him, to the utmoſt of their " Power; and as the beſt and trueſt Way of " expreſſing their Gratitude, wou'd endeavour " effectually to Support His Government againſt " all His Enemies.

In their Addreſs to the Queen, on the ſame Day, they expreſs'd, " The deep Senſe they had " of that Goodneſs, Wiſdom and Courage, which " Her Majeſty had manifeſted, in the greateſt " Difficulties, and moſt preſſing Dangers, during " the King's Abſence, at a Time when a Potent " Enemy was upon our Coaſt, when the Nation " was Weaken'd in that Part which was its " proper Strength, and depriv'd of the Security " of His Majeſty's Preſence." Here they De- clared, " The Reſolution, Her Majeſty ſhew'd in " the Adminiſtration, gave Life to Her Subjects, " and made them exert a Strength and Force " unknown to the former Reigns: That Her " Zeal for the Publick, Encourag'd them to ſhew 1690. " ſuch Cheerfulneſs in their Duty, as Diſappointed " the Hopes and Deſigns of all the Open and " Secret Enemies of the Government: And that " the grateful Remembrance of that (which " reviv'd the Memory of the moſt happy Times) " wou'd for ever remain in the Hearts of Her " People; and cou'd never fail to be expreſs'd " in all Inſtances of Loyalty and Obedience from " themſelves, and all the Commons of England.

The ſame Day theſe Addreſſes were Preſented (October the 9th) the Commons began to Make- good their Aſſurances of Loyalty, by Voting, That a Supply be Given to Their Majeſties, for the Entire Reducing of Ireland, and Securing the Peace of this Kingdom, and Carrying on a Vigorous War againſt France. The next Day, they Granted the Sum of One million, ſeven hundred ninety one thouſand, ſix hundred ninety five Pounds, for the Navy, and Building of New Ships: And on the 4th of the ſame Month, they Voted the Sum of Two millions, two hundred ninety four thouſand, five hundred and ſixty Pounds, for the Maintaining an Army of Sixty nine thouſand, ſix hundred thirty ſix Men; which His Majeſty had ſignify'd to that Houſe, that He thought Neceſſary for the next Year's Service. Votes of the Commons.

To Levy theſe great Sums, the Commons Reſolved,

1. " To Charge an Aſſeſſment of One hun- " dred thirty ſeven thouſand, ſix hundred forty one " Pounds, by the Month, for One Year, upon " all Lands.

2. " That an Additional-Duty be laid upon " all Wrought and Raw-Silks, and all Foreign- " Linen.

3. " That a Duty of Six-pence per Gallon, be " laid upon all Low-Wines of the Firſt-Ex- " traction.

4. " That an Additional-Duty of Ten per Cent. " be laid upon all Foreign-Timber and Wood; and " the like Duty, above what was already charg'd, " upon all Wrought-Silks, Callico, Indian-Linen.

5. " That ſeveral Duties be laid upon Foreign- " Seeds, Oil, Hops, Pepper, and all Grocery-Ware, " (except Sugar and Tobacco.)

6. " That the Exciſe upon all Beer, Ale, and " other Liquors, be Doubled: And,

7. " That an Additional-Duty be laid upon " Foreign-Iron, Yarn of Flax or Hemp, and all " Manufactures of Glaſs.

Theſe ſeveral Funds falling much ſhort of Anſwering the Supplies Granted to Their Maje- ſties, it was Reſolv'd, October 17th. " That the " Sum of One Million be raiſed, upon the Cre- " dit, or by the Sale of the Forfeited Eſtates in " Ireland, and that an Addreſs be preſented to " His Majeſty, That He would be pleaſed to " Command the Commiſſioners in Ireland, to make " a Return to His Majeſty of the Names of " the Perſons in Rebellion in that Kingdom, and " of their Eſtates and Value thereof, and that " the ſame might be tranſmitted to the Houſe " of Commons". This Addreſs having been drawn up and Reported to the Houſe, October the 22d. by Sir Thomas Clargis, and the Queſtion being put, That the ſaid Addreſs with Amendments be Agreed unto? It paſſed in the Negative. How- ever, it was Reſolved the ſame Day, That a Bill be brought in for Attainting of the Perſons that were or had been in Rebellion in England, or Ireland; and for Confiſcating their Eſtates, and for applying the ſame to bear the Charge of the War.

1690. War. This Bill was not preſented to the Houſe till the 2d of December, and upon a Second Reading, December the 8th, It was Order'd, That a Clauſe be brought in for reſerving a Proportion of the Forfeitures in England and Ireland to His Majeſty's ſole Diſpoſal, which Clauſe, when Reported on December the 18th, was diſagreed to by the Houſe. At length the Bill with ſeveral Amendments being Ingroſſed, and Read the Third Time and Paſſed, was ſent to the Upper-Houſe on the 23d of December, where it was laid by, notwithſtanding ſeveral Meſſages from the Commons to put their Lordſhips in Mind of it. The truth is, the Court did underhand oppoſe the Paſſing of this Bill, not only becauſe the King deſign'd to recompenſe the Services of ſeveral Perſons with Part of the Forfeitures; but becauſe this Fund could not in due time have yielded the Sum it was given for.

Acts Paſſed. On Monday the 10th of November, the King went to the Houſe of Lords, and gave his Royal Aſſent to an An Act for granting an Aid to Their Majeſties of One Million, Six Hundred Sixty-one Thouſand, Seven Hundred and Two Pounds.

And on Tueſday the 18th of November, His Majeſty came again to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Sanction to,

1. An Act concerning the Commiſſioners of the Admiralty.

2. An Act to Prohibit the Covering of Houſes and other Buildings with Thatch or Straw, in the Town of Marlborough in the County of Wilts.

3. An Act to Veſt divers Meſſuages and Tenements (the Eſtate of David Bigg, Eſq;) in Truſtees, to be Sold; and for laying out the Money to be Raiſed thereby, in the Purchaſe of Lands more to his Convenience, to be Setled to the ſame Uſes.

4. An Act to Veſt the Manor and Lands late of George Vilet, Eſq; in Truſtees, to be Sold for Raiſing Portions for his Daughters.

Violent Attempt on Mary Wharton, Infant. Captain James Campbel, a Scotch-Gentleman, Brother to the Earl of Argyle, aſſiſted by Archibald Mongomery and Sir John Johnſton, did on November the 14th forcibly Seize on Mrs. Mary Wharton, a Rich Heireſs of about Thirteen Years of Age, and carried her away from her Relations in Great Queen-Street, and Married her againſt her Will. Whereupon His Majeſty iſſued out his Royal Proclamation the next Day, for the Apprehending of Captain Campbel and his Abettors.

Bill againſt Clandeſtin Marriages Not long before there had been a Bill brought in to the Houſe of Commons, on October the 26th, to prevent Clandeſtine Marriages, and People thought the Paſſing of it wou'd have been expedited upon this Violence committed by Campbel: But upon Conſideration that this Bill was attended with many Inconveniences, and might hinder many Younger Brothers from making their Fortunes, it was drop'd into Silence. However, another Bill was brought into the Houſe of Commons, Dec. 4. For making void the Marriage between Mrs. Wharton and Mr. Campbel; which, notwithſtanding the Earl of Argyle's Petition in his Brother's behalf, did quickly go through Both Houſes.

The Commons were very forward in propoſing and diſpatching the neceſſary Supplies for the Government: So that on Tueſday, Nov. 25. His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and being attended with the uſual Solemnity, gave the Royal-Aſſent to,

1. An Act for the Doubling the Exciſe upon Beer, Ale and other Liquors, during the ſpace of One Year. Bill paſſ

2. An Act to Enable Elizabeth Mountague, Widow, to let Leaſes for Years, of Houſes and Ground in Stepny, in the County of Middleſex.

And then His Majeſty was pleas'd to make this Speech to Both Houſes.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

King's Speech. "I Take this Occaſion, with great willingneſs to aſſure you, that I am extremely ſenſible, of the Zeal and Chearfulneſs of all your Proceedings in this Seſſions of Parliament; and of the Readineſs, which you Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons have ſhewn, in granting ſuch large Supplies, towards the preſſing Occaſions of the Army and Navy.

"And I do farther aſſure you, that I ſhall not be wanting on my Part, to ſee them carefully apply'd to thoſe Uſes for which you intend them.

"At the ſame time, I muſt obſerve to you, that the Poſture of Affairs abroad, does neceſſarily require my Preſence at the Hague, before the end of this Year; and by Conſequence I muſt deſire you to loſe no time, in the diſpatching and perfecting of ſuch further Supplies, as are ſtill neceſſary for the Navy and Army: And not for them only, but it is high time alſo to put you in mind of making ſome Proviſion for the Expence of the Civil Government, which has no Funds for its Support, ſince the Exciſe, which was deſign'd for that Service, and alſo the other Branches of the Revenue, have been apply'd to other Publick Uſes; and therefore I earneſtly recommend it to your ſpeedy Conſideration.

Reſolutions of the Commons The Day before Nov. 24. the Commons had Reſolv'd, "1. That the ſeveral Duties laid upon Goods Imported, be granted to Their Majeſties for the Term of Five Years, to commence from the 10th of November, and no longer. 2. That the Duties impos'd upon Wines and Vinegars, by an Act made 1 Jac. 2. and upon French-Linen and wrought-Silks and Stuffs, and all Eaſt-India Linen, and other Manufactures, &c. impos'd by another Act made in the ſame Year, ſhould be continu'd until the 24th Day of June, 1696. And 3. That the Duty impos'd upon Tobacco, by an Act made 1 Jac. 2. ſhould be continu'd to the like Term, and no longer." At the ſame time it was Order'd, "That a Bill or Bills be brought in, "For Granting to Their Majeſties the ſeveral "Duties or Impoſitions upon theſe ſeveral Heads". But all this fell ſhort of the Supplies that had been Voted by the Houſe; and therefore it was Reſolv'd, Dec. 19. "That the remainder of a Sum, "not exceeding 4086255 Pounds, for the Supplies "to be Granted to Their Majeſties, be rais'd "by doubling the Additional Duties of Exciſe, "upon Beer, Ale and other Liquors, mention'd "in an Act of the Firſt Year of Their Maje-1690. "ſties Reign, Entitl'd, An Act for an Additional "Duty of Exciſe upon Beer, Ale and other Li- "quors, to begin from the time the Act for "doubling the Duty of Exciſe upon Beer, Ale, "and other Liquors, during the ſpace of One "Year, did expire". And a Bill was Order'd to be prepar'd, in purſuance of the ſaid Reſolution.

On Saturday, Dec. 20. His Majeſty came again to the Houſe of Peers: And being ſeated on the Throne, and the Commons attending, gave the Royal Aſſent to,

Acts paſt.

1. An Act for Granting to Their Majeſties certain Impoſitions upon all Eaſt-India Goods and Manufactures, and upon all Wrought-Silks, and ſeveral other Goods and Merchandizes, to be Imported after the 25th day of December, 1690.

2. An Act for the Continuance of ſeveral former Acts therein mention'd, for the laying ſeveral Duties upon Wines, Vinegar and Tobacco.

3. An Act for puniſhing Officers and Soldiers who ſhall Mutiny and Deſert, and for puniſhing Falſe-Muſters.

4. An Act for reviving a former Act, for Regulating the Meaſures and Prices of Coals.

And to Sixteen Private Acts.

King's Speech.

After which His Majeſty acquainting Both Houſes, "How ſenſible he was of their good "Affections towards him, and of their ſincere "Endeavours to promote the true Intereſt of their "Country, in continuing to provide further Supplies towards defraying the Charge of the War, "which he would take care to ſee diligently "and ſtrictly apply'd to the Uſes for which "they gave them." He further added, "He "had lately acquainted them, that the Poſture "of Affairs abroad, would not admit of deferring his Journey to the Hague, much beyond "that time; and that he put them in mind of "it now, in hopes that Conſideration would "prevail with them to uſe all poſſible Diſpatch "of what ſtill remain'd to be done, for the "more vigorous Proſecution of the War": And concluded with telling the Commons, "That if "ſome Annual Proviſion could be made for "augmenting the Navy, and Building ſome new "Men-of-War, it would be a very neceſſary "Care at that time both for the Honour and Safety of the Nation.

Reſolution of the Commons for Reuiting the Navy.

The Commons having taken His Majeſty's Speech into Conſideration, particularly the latter part of it, Unanimouſly Reſolv'd, on Dec. the 24th, Firſt, That a Supply be given to Their Majeſties for the building of Ships of War, not exceeding the Sum of 570000 Pounds. And Secondly, That the ſaid Supply, ſo to be given to Their Majeſties, be for the Building of Seventeen Third-Rate Ships, of Sixty Guns apiece, to be added to the Ships in the Eſtimate already provided to be built. Three days after, it was Reſolv'd, "That this Supply ſhould be rais'd by Additional Duties upon Beer, Ale and other Liquors; "and Order'd, That an Enacting Clauſe be prepar'd, in purſuance to the ſaid Reſolution." They had paſs'd a Bill, for Appointing and Enabling Commiſſioners for taking the Publick Accompts; and had Order'd the ſeveral Members to put into Glaſſes at the Table, the Names of Nine Perſons, to be Commiſſioners in the ſaid Bill: By which Method, on Dec. 26. the Majority fell on Sir Robert Rich, Sir Thomas Clargis, Paul Foley, Eſq; Robert Auſtin, Eſq; Sir Matthew Andrews, Sir Benjamin Newland, Sir Samuel Bernardiſton, Sir Peter Collaton, and Robert Harley, Eſquire.

On Monday, January 5. The King being now impatient to go over to the Congreſs in Holland, came to the Houſe of Peers, and with the uſual Solemnity gave the Royal Aſſent to,

Acts paſt.

1. An Act for appointing Commiſſioners to take and ſtate the Publick Accompts of the Kingdom.

2. An Act for the Raiſing the Militia of this Kingdom, for the Year 1691. altho' the Months-pay formerly advanc'd be not re-paid.

3. An Act for Relief of Poor Priſoners for Debt or Damages.

4. An Act for preventing Vexatious Suits, againſt ſuch as acted for Their Majeſties in Defence of the Kingdom.

5. An Act for the Encouraging the Diſtilling of Brandy and Spirits from Corn, and for laying ſeveral Duties on Low-Wines, or Spirits of the firſt Extraction.

6. An Act for granting to Their Majeſties ſeveral Additional Duties of Exciſe upon Beer, Ale, and other Liquors, for Four Years, from the time that an Act for doubling the Duty of Exciſe upon Beer, Ale and other Liquors, during the ſpace of One Year, doth expire.

7. An Act for the more effectual putting in Execution, An Act, Entitl'd, An Act for prohibiting all Trade and Commerce with France.

8. An Act to Enable Thomas Earl of Ayleſbury, and Elizabeth Counteſs of Aylesbury, his Wife, to make Proviſion for payment of Debts, and to make Leaſes of their Eſtates.

9. An Act for Incorporating the Proprietors of the Water-works in York-Buildings, and for the Encouraging, Carrying on, and Settling the ſaid Water-works.

10. An Act for Veſting certain Lands (the Eſtate of Thomas Manwaring, Gent.) in Truſtees to be ſold for the payment of Debts.

11. An Act to Enable John Rocheſter, Eſq; to ſell Lands for payment of Debts.

After which His Majeſty was pleas'd to make a moſt Gracious Speech to Both Houſes of Parliament, as follows.

My Lords and Gentlemen:

King's Speech.

"HAving lately told you, That it would "be neceſſary for Me to go into "Holland much about this time, I am very glad to find, that the Succeſs of your "Endeavours to bring this Seſſion to a happy Concluſion has been ſuch, that I am "now at Liberty to do it. And I return "you My hearty Thanks, for the great Diſpatch you have made, in finiſhing the "Supplies you have deſign'd for carrying on "the War; which it ſhall be my Care to "ſee Duly and Punctually Apply'd to that "Service for which you have given them. "And I do likewiſe think it proper to aſſure you, That I ſhall not make any "Grant of the Forfeited Lands in England

1690. " and Ireland, till there be another Opportunity of Settling that Matter in Parliament, in ſuch Manner as ſhall be thought moſt Expedient.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

" As I have reaſon to be very well-ſatisfied with the Proofs you have given Me of your Good Affections in this Seſſion of Parliament, ſo I promiſe My Self the Continuance of the ſame, at your Return into your ſeveral Countries. And as every Day produces ſtill freſh Inſtances of the Reſtleſneſs of our Enemies, both at Home and Abroad, in Deſigning againſt the Proſperity of this Nation, and the Government Eſtabliſhed; So I cannot doubt, but that the Union and good Correſpondence between Me and my Parliament, and my Earneſt and Conſtant Endeavours on the one hand, joined with the Continuance of your Zeal and Affection to Support Me on the other, will, by the Bleſſing of GOD, be at all times too ſtrong for the utmoſt Malice and Contrivance of Our Common Enemies.

And then the Lord-Chief-Baron, Speaker of the Houſe of Lords, declar'd to Both Houſes, " That it was His Majeſty's Pleaſure, that they " ſhould Adjourn themſelves until the 31ſt of " March next; and that if His Majeſty ſhould " think fit that the Parliament ſhould then Sit, He " would give them timely notice thereof by " his Proclamation.

And accordingly Both Houſes of Parliament did Adjourn to the 31ſt of March next.

Before we leave this Seſſion of Parliament, it ought to be obſerv'd, that beſides the Bill relating to the Forfeited Eſtates in Ireland, there were ſeveral others that were left unfiniſhed; particularly,

A Bill to regulate Tryals in Caſes of Treaſon: which was much talk'd of in the Houſe of Commons, as a great Defence of their Liberties and Lives, and yet was put off from time to time.

Another relating to the African-Trade.

Another, Againſt Robbers on the High-way.

Another, For the ſpeedier determining Elections of Members of Parliament.

Another, To charge the Eſtate of the late Lord Jeffreys, in Leiceſterſhire, with the Sum of 14760*l*. and Intereſt, to Edmund Prideaux, Eſq;

Another, For Regulating and Licenſing Hackney-Coaches.

Another, For the Enabling Chirurgeons to Adminiſter inward Medicines in Caſes of Surgery: which drop'd, on a Petition againſt it by the Phyſicians and Apothecaries.

A Bill was alſo brought in, For reducing Intereſt-Money, from 6 to 4 per Cent. which after a Second-Reading was rejected.

Affairs abroad.

Some things hapned during this Seſſion, that ought to be remembred. The Duke of Savoy had ſuffer'd extremely by the French Arms, under the Command of Catinat and Monſ. S. Ruth; and having loſt, in effect, the whole Dukedom of Savoy, except the Town of Montmelian, he began now to be ſenſible, that he could not depend, either on the Emperor, or the K. of Spain for the Recovery of his Dominions; and therefore he wiſely thought of making Application to the States-General of Holland, and principally to His Britannick Majeſty, the Head and Support of the Grand Alliance: And to that purpoſe, he ſent away the Count de la Tour, Baron of Bourdeaux, and Counſellor of State, Preſident of his Finances in Savoy, and Intendant of his Houſhold, a Man of great Parts and Addreſs. This Envoy Extraordinary having diſpatch'd his Buſineſs at the Hague, came immediately over to England; and on Nov. 2. made the following Speech to His Majeſty at his firſt Publick Audience.

1690.

SIR,

Speech of the Duke of Savoy's Envoy.

" HIS Royal Highneſs, my Maſter, do's by me, Congratulate your Sacred Majeſty's Glorious Acceſſion to the Crown. It is due to your Birth, and deſerv'd by your Vertue, and is maintain'd by your Valour. Providence had deſign'd it for your Sacred Head, for the Accompliſhment of his Eternal Decrees, which after a long Patience, do always tend to raiſe up Choſen Souls, to repreſs Violence, and protect Juſtice. The wonderful Beginnings of your Reign, are moſt certain Preſages of the Bleſſings which Heaven prepares for the Uprightneſs of your Intentions; which have no other Scope, than to reſtore this Flouriſhing Kingdom to its Firſt Greatneſs, and break the Chains which Europe groans under. This Magnanimous Deſign, worthy of the Heroe of our Age, fill'd his Royal Highneſs with inexpreſſible Joy: But he was conſtrain'd to conceal it in the ſecret of his Heart; and if at laſt he has been free to own it, he is oblig'd to the very Name of your Majeſty for it, ſince that alone has made him conceive ſome Hopes of Liberty, after ſo many Years of Servitude.

" My Words, and the Treaty which I have Sign'd at the Hague, with your Majeſty's Miniſters, do but faintly expreſs the Paſſion which my Maſter has to Unite himſelf by the moſt inviolable Ties to your Service. The Honour, SIR, which he has to be Related to you, has ty'd the firſt Knots of this Union: The infinite Reſpect which he has for your Sacred Perſon, has, as it were, knit them faſter; and the Generous Protection which you are pleas'd to grant him, will, without doubt, make them indiſſoluble. Theſe are the ſincere Sentiments of His Royal Highneſs, to which I dare not add any thing of mine: For how Ardent ſoever my Zeal may be, and how profound the Veneration which I bear to your Glorious Atchievements, I think I cannot better expreſs either, than by a Silence full of Admiration.

There

1690. There were ſome other Domeſtick Affairs during the ſame Seſſion, that are worthy Obſervation. Our Fleet, commanded by the New-Admirals, Sir Richard Haddock, Henry Killegrew, Eſq; and Sir John Aſhby, arriv'd in the Downs, October the 8th. They came from Cork-Harbour, and brought home with them the Earls of Clincarty and Tyrone, the Lord Carne, Colonel Margellicot, and ſeveral other Priſoners. On Oct. 9. His Majeſty was pleas'd to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon George Meggot, Eſq; High-Sheriff of Norfolk, upon his delivery of an Addreſs from that County, Congratulating His Majeſty's good Succeſs and Safe-Return. About the ſame time, His Majeſty appointed Thomas Baker, Eſq; to be his Conſul at Algiers. In the beginning of November, His Majeſty was pleas'd to order a New-Commiſſion to paſs the Great Seal, Conſtituting the Right Honourable Sidney Lord Godolphin, Sir John Lowther of Lowther, Bar. Vice-Chamberlain of His Majeſty's Houſhold, Richard Hambden, Eſq; Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Stephen Fox, Knt. and Thomas Pelham, Eſq; Commiſſioners of Their Majeſties Treaſury. At the beginning of December, His Majeſty was pleaſed to Confer a Mark of his Royal Favour upon Colonel John Cutts, for his Faithful Services and zealous Affection to his Royal Perſon and Government, and therefore Created him a Baron of the Kingdom of Ireland, by the Stile and Title of Baron Cutts of Gouran in the ſaid Kingdom. One Godfrey Croſs, of Lydd, in the County of Kent, Inn-holder, who went on Board the French-Fleet whilſt it lay on that Coaſt, to give Intelligence and bring back Inſtructions, was try'd at the Kings-Bench-Bar, and found Guilty of High-Treaſon, and according to Sentence pronounc'd againſt him, was Executed in Southwark, on December 8. Henry Lord Viſcount Sidney, one of the Lords-Juſtices of Ireland, was call'd over by His Majeſty, and being made one of the Principal Secretaries of State, he took the uſual Oath at the Council-Board, on Dec. 26. His Highneſs George William, Duke of Zell, Eldeſt Prince of the Houſe of Brunſwick and Lunenburgh, was Elected Knight-Companion of the Moſt Noble Order of the Garter, in a Chapter, held December 30. at Kenſington, in the Preſence of the Sovereign. On January 1ſt. Sir John Trevor, Knt. Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, and Firſt Lord-Commiſſioner of the Great Seal of England, was, by His Majeſty's Command, Sworn of His Majeſty's Moſt Honourable Privy-Council.

Domeſtick Affairs.

Honours and Preſents.

Review of Ireland. To look back to Ireland: There were ſtill ſeveral Towns beſides Limerick in poſſeſſion of the French and Iriſh, and their Forces were yet very numerous, which gave the Friends of King James ſome hopes of Reducing that Kingdom to his Obedience. But they were not a little ſurpriz'd to hear that the Engliſh-Fleet was arriv'd before Cork-Harbour, the 21ſt of September, with ſome Forces under the Command of the Earl of Marlborough, who immediately acquainted the Duke of Wirtemburgh, and Major-General Scravenmore with his Arrival. The next day his Lordſhip found that the Enemy had a Battery of Eight Guns to oppoſe his Entry into the Harbour; but he ſent Three Boats aſhore, with ſtout Fellows, who by thick Firing, oblig'd the Iriſh to quit their Guns.

Earl of Marlborough before Cork.

On the 23d. The greateſt part of the Land-Forces were ſent up the Paſſages, headed by the Duke of Grafton; and being come next Day within a Mile of the Town of Cork, they began to mount their Cannon, and to begin a Formal Siege. The Duke of Wirtemburgh and the Earl of Marlborough being both Lieutenant-Generals, there happen'd a Warm Diſpute betwixt them, about the Chief Command: The firſt laying Claim to it becauſe he was a Prince, the other, with great Temper, inſiſting upon his Right, both as Eldeſt Officer, and becauſe he led the Troops of his own Nation; whereas the Duke of Wirtemburgh was only at the Head of Auxiliaries. The wiſe Monſ. la Meloniere interpoſing, the Earl of Marlborough was contented to ſhare the Command with the Duke, leſt his inſiſting on his full Right ſhould retard his Majeſty's Service. Accordingly, the Earl of Marlborough Commanded the Firſt Day, and gave the Word, Wirtemburgh; and the Duke of Wirtemburgh Commanded the next, and gave the Word, Marlborough. Under their Conduct and Bravery, they ſoon brought the Beſieg'd to demand a Parley, and to give Hoſtages for a Truce: But not accepting the Terms offer'd them, the Beſiegers made a conſiderable Breach in the Walls, and reſolved to Storm the Town. The Grenadeers, under the Lord Colcheſter, led the Van, and marched forward with incredible Bravery, though all the while expos'd to the Enemy's Fire; having an Example of Glory ſet them by the Duke of Grafton, the Lord O Brian, Colonel Granville, and ſome other reſolute Volunteers: But in this Approach, the Duke of Grafton received a Wound in the Shoulder, of which he ſoon after died. All things being now ready for a General Aſſault, the Beſieg'd thought fit to prevent it, by beating a ſecond Parley: And at laſt, the Earl of Tyrone, and Colonel Rycaut, being ſent from Colonel Makilicut, who Commanded in the Place, agreed to the Earl of Marlborough's Conditions: Which were, Sept. 28. 1690.

That the Gariſon, conſiſting of Four Thouſand Men, ſhould be all Priſoners of War, both Officers and Soldiers.

That no Prejudice ſhould be done to them or the Inhabitants.

That the General would uſe his endeavours to obtain His Majeſty's Clemency towards them.

That all the Arms, as well of the Inhabitants, as of the Gariſon, ſhould be ſecured.

That all the Proteſtant-Priſoners ſhould be ſet at Liberty.

That the Old Fort ſhould be delivered up within an Hour, and the Two Gates of the City the next Morning.

And that an Exact Account ſhould be given of the Warlike Ammunitions and Proviſions in the Magazines.

The Earl of Marlborough was reſolv'd to purſue his good Succeſs, and therefore immediately ſent away a Detachment of Horſe and Dragoons, under the Command of Brigadeer Villiers, to Summon the Town and Forts of Kingſale; and His Lordſhip ſetting out from Cork on the 1ſt of October, arriv'd at Five-Mile-Bridge the ſame Day, and the next, before Kingſale; and having form'd his Camp in the Evening, gave Directions to make his Approaches towards the New-Fort, while Major-General Tetteau was Order'd to Attack the Old.

The Earl of Marlborough's wiſe Conduct and good Succeſs.

The next Morning early, Tetteau having paſs'd the River in Boats, made a Feint of Storming the Fort in the weakeſt Place, where moſt of the Beſieged were ready to receive him: But in the interim, another Detachment made a bold Aſſault upon another Place, where the Enemy

1690. leaſt ſuſpected them, and by that means were ſoon Maſters of a Baſtion. At the ſame time, ſeveral Barrels of Powder, happening to take fire, blew up near Forty of the Iriſh: Upon which the reſt retir'd into an Old Caſtle in the midſt of the Fort, and immediately ſubmitted to be Priſoners of War.

This Buſineſs being over, the Earl of Marlborough ſent to Summon the New-Fort, which was much more conſiderable than the other: But Sir Edward Scot (the Governor) readily anſwer'd, That it wou'd be time enough to Capitulate a Month hence. Thereupon the Engliſh Open'd their Trenches, October the 5th, and on the 9th, had advanc'd them to the Counterſcarp; but the Ill-Weather hinder'd the comingup of the Cannon till the 11th. After a conſiderable Breach, and a Falſe-Attack, all things were prepar'd for a Storm, when the Enemy Beat a Parley. On the 15th, Hoſtages being Exchang'd, the Articles were Agreed on, and Sign'd about Midnight, by which the Middle-Baſtion was to be Deliver'd up the next Morning; and the Gariſon, conſiſting of about 1100 Men, was to March out the next Day after, with Arms and Baggage, to be Conducted to Limerick.

By Subduing this Sea-port-Town, and that of Cork, an effectual Stop was put to all Supplies from France, at leaſt on the Southern-Coaſts; and the Iriſh were almoſt confin'd to the Province of Ulſter, where it was harder to ſubſiſt, than in any other Parts of that Kingdom.

Upon the firſt News of the Engliſh-Fleet ſailing towards Ireland, Count Lauzun, afraid of being Blockt-up at Galloway, went off from thence with the Duke of Tyrconnel, Monſieur Boiſſeleau, and the miſerable Remains of his French-Troops, leaving the General Command of the Iriſh-Forces to the Duke of Berwick, which was afterwards given to Monſieur St. Ruth.

The Earl of Marlborough, having perform'd this Glorious Expedition, in as little Time as, conſidering the Seaſon of the Year, the Voyage itſelf requir'd, embark'd again, and arriv'd at Kenſington on the 28th of October, where he was very favourably receiv'd by His Majeſty, who had a high Eſteem of his Courage and Conduct, and was heard to ſay, That He knew no Man ſo fit for a General, who had ſeen ſo few Campaigns.

Ireland Reduc'd. Ireland ſeem'd now to be Reduc'd to the Obedience of King William; and therefore, at the beginning of December, His Majeſty Eſtabliſh'd a Privy-Council, of the Lord-Primate of Ireland, the Lord-Chancellor, the Lord-Treaſurer, and the Arch-Biſhop of Dublin for the time being, James Duke of Ormond, Edward Earl of Meath, Henry Earl of Drogheda, Francis Earl of Longford, Richard Earl of Ranelaugh, Arthur Earl of Granard, Adam Viſcount Lisbourn, the Biſhop of Meath for the time being, Robert Fitz-Gerald Eſq; Sir Henry Fane, William Hill Eſq; and certain Miniſters of State for the time being.

And within few Days after, His Majeſty 1690. diſpos'd of the Vacant Biſhopricks, as follows: The Arch-Biſhoprick of Caſhel, to Doctor Marſh Biſhop of Ferns; the Biſhoprick of Clogher, to Dr. Tenniſon Biſhop of Killabah; the Biſhoprick of Elfin, to Dr. Digby Biſhop of Limerick; the See of London-Derry, to Dr. William King; the See of Ferns, to Dr. Vigors Dean of Armagh; the See of Limerick, to Dr. Wilſon Dean of Raphoe; the See of Clonfert, to Doctor Fitzgerald Dean of Cloin; the See of Killalah, to Dr. Lloyd Dean of Aronry. And upon the Recalling of the Lord Sidney, His Majeſty Appointed Sir Charles Porter to be One of the Lords-Juſtices and Lord-Chancellor of Ireland.

The King was now Preparing to go over to the Famous Congreſs at the Hague; and therefore, the next Day after the Riſing of the Parliament, His Majeſty ſet out, Attended by the Great-Officers of His Houſhold, and divers others of the Nobility and Gentry. He lay that Night at Sittingborne, and intended to embarque the next Evening at Margate; but finding, upon His Arrival at Canterbury, that the Wind was ſet in Eaſtwardly, with a hard Froſt, He thought fit to return to Kenſington on January the 9th, with Intention to proceed on His Voyage for Holland, with the firſt Change of Weather. The King Prepares for the Congreſs at the Hague.

So, on Friday the 16th of January, the King went to Graveſend, and Embarqu'd there, with divers of the Nobility, and other Perſons of Quality, attending Him, under a Convoy of Twelve Men-of-War, Commanded by Rear-Admiral Rooke. When, with ſome Trouble, they came on the Dutch-Coaſt, the Froſt had been ſo ſevere, and the Ice near the Shore was ſo great, that it appear'd to be extremely Dangerous to attempt Landing: But the King, with whom the Sea did not agree, and whoſe Buſineſs required Haſte, went into a Shallop, and Order'd the Sea-men to Put-off. The Seamen themſelves were afraid; and all the Perſons of Quality about the King, wou'd have diſſwaded Him from it, by repreſenting the prodigious Danger to which he muſt expoſe His Royal Perſon: But nothing being able to move Him from His Reſolution, they put away from the Fleet, and quickly loſt ſight of 'em. Night came on, and the King remain'd for Eighteen Hours together, expos'd to the Injuries of the Air and Cold, to the Mercy of the Sea, and the Chance of Privateers, having nothing but his Cloak to cover him; and the Sea ran ſo high, that He and all the Company were daſht and waſht with Waves: At laſt the Shallop, by Break-of-Day, came near the Iſle of Goree, where His Majeſty went a-Shore, and got a little Refreſhment in a Fiſherman's Cottage. Then His Majeſty went into his Boat again, and happily Landed at Orange-Polder; from whence He went to Hounſlerdike, where He was Met by the Deputies of the States, who Conducted Him to the Hague, by Six that Evening. Embarks at Graveſend. Is in very great Danger. Lands ſafely.

And becauſe His Majeſty came ſo ſuddenly, as to prevent the Reception that was intended by the Magiſtrates of that Place, Monday next was Appointed for Solemnizing their Publick-Joy on that Occaſion, with Fire-works, Bonfires, and Triumphal-Arches: And they Order'd another Day to be Obſerv'd with Publick and Solemn-Devotion, for Returning Thanks to Almighty GOD, for the King's Safe-Arrival, and to Implore His Bleſſing upon His Majeſty's Arms, and thoſe of that State, and Allies.

1690. Congreſs at the Hague.

And now began the moſt Glorious Congreſs that ever yet appear'd, of Chriſtian Princes and Miniſters. The Electors of Bavaria and Brandenburgh; the Dukes of Lunenburgh, of Zell, and of Wolfembuttel; the Landgrave of Heſſe-Caſſel, Prince Chriſtian Lois of Brandenburgh, Prince Waldeck; the Prince of Naſſau Stadtholder of Frieſland, the Prince of Naſſau Saarbrug Governor of Boiſleduck, the Prince of Naſſau Dillemburgh, the Prince of Naſſau Idſtein, the Duke-Adminiſtrator of Wirtemburg, the two Princes of Ansbach, the Landtgrave of Heſſe D'Armſtadt, the Prince his Brother, the Duke of Sax-Eyſenach, Prince Philip Palatine, the Duke of Zulsbach, the Prince of Wirtemburg Nieuſtadt, the Prince of Wirtemburg, and the Prince his Brother; the Duke of Courland, and Prince Ferdinand his Brother; the Prince of Anhalt Zeerborſt, the Landtgrave of Homburg, Three Princes of Holſtein-Beck, the Duke of Holſtein, Prince of Commercy, the Prince-Palatine of Birkenfelt: To which we may add the Princeſs of Naſſau-Frieſland, the Princeſs of Radzeville, the Counteſs of Soiſſons, the Princeſs of Sax Eyſenach, and other Illuſtrious Perſons.

It wou'd be too tedious to give the Names of all the Counts that appear'd on this Solemn Occaſion; however, we'll mention a few of them: And the moſt Remarkable were, the Counts of Horn, Erbach, Tirimont, de Brouay, de Gryal, d'Arco, de Rivera, de Sanfra, de Lippe, d'Eſpenſe, de Fugger, de Denhof, de Carelſon; with the Barons of Pallant and Spaein, the Rhingrave and his Brother; the Marqueſſes of Caſhlemonlayo, and Caſtanaga Governour of the Spaniſh-Netherlands; and the Generals, Chauvert, d'Elwicht, Barfus, d'Autel, Palfi, &c.

But we ſhou'd more particularly name the Ambaſſadors and Foreign-Miniſters preſent in this Aſſembly: And here you had, from the Emperor, the Counts of Windigrats and Berka, with the Chevalier de Campecht; from the King of Spain, Don Emanuel de Colonna; from the King of Denmark, the Count de Rebenklan, and M. Centhe; from the King of Sweden, the Count of Oxenſtern; from the King of Poland, M. Moreau; from the Elector of Bavaria, the Baron of Boomgarden, and M. Prielmeyere; from the Elector of Brandenburg, M. Van Dieſt and Smettau; from the Elector of Saxony, M. Haxhauſem; from the Elector of Treves, the Baron de Leyon, and Monſieur Champagne; from the Elector of Mentz, M. Talberg and Meyers; from the Elector of Cologne, the General and Baron Beruſaw, and M. Soelmaker; from the Elector-Palatine, M. Hertermans; from the Duke of Savoy, the Count of Pielat, and the Preſident de la Tour; from the Duke of Zell, M. Zieger; from the Biſhop of Munſter, M. de Nort; from the Landtgrave of Heſſe-Caſſel, the Baron Gorts, and M. Reppelaar; from the Duke of Wolfembuttel, the Baron Croſek; from the Duke of Hanover, M. Klekk; from the Duke of Holſtein-Gottorp, M. Tourken; and from the Prince of Liege, Counſellor Mean. Neither are we to omit taking Notice of thoſe Noble Perſons of His Majeſty's own Subjects, that Attended Him upon this Solemnity, and they were, the Dukes of Norfolk and Ormond, with the Earls of Devonſhire, Dorſet, Eſſex, Nottingham, Scarborough and Selkirk, my Lord Biſhop of London, my Lord Dramlendrits, my Lord Durſley, the Earls of Portland and Monmouth, Duke Schomberg, his Brother Count Maynhard, &c. 1690.

The great Deſign of this Congreſs, was for all the Confederate-Princes and States to concert Meaſures with King William, in order to Preſerve the Liberties of Europe: And therefore His Majeſty, in a very Pathetical SPEECH, repreſented to 'em; Deſign of this Congreſs.

"THat the Imminent Dangers wherein "They found themſelves, ſufficiently "diſcover'd the Errors that had been com- "mitted; ſo that He needed not uſe many "Arguments, to ſhew them the Neceſſity "of taking Juſter and Better Meaſures: "That, in the Circumſtances They were in, "it was not a Time to Deliberate, but Act: "That the Enemy were Maſters of all the "Chief-Fortreſſes that were the Barrier of "the Common-Liberty; and that he wou'd "quickly poſſeſs himſelf of all the reſt, if "a Spirit of Diviſion, Slowneſs, and particular "Intereſt, continu'd among them: That "every-One ought to remain perſwaded, "That Their reſpective Particular Intereſts "were compriz'd in the General-one: That "the Enemies forces were very Strong, and "that they wou'd carry Things, like a Tor- "rent, before them: That it was in vain, "to oppoſe Complaints, and fruitleſs Clamours, "or unprofitable Proteſtations againſt Injuſtice: "That it was neither the Reſolution of a "Barren Diet, nor the Hopes of ſome Men- "of-Fortune, ariſing from frivolous Founda- "tions, but Soldiers, Strong Armies, and a "Prompt and Sincere Union between all the "Forces of the Allies, that muſt do the Work; "and that theſe too muſt be brought to "Oppoſe the Enemy without any Delay, if "they wou'd put a Stop to his Conqueſts, "and ſnatch out of his Hands the Liberty "of Europe, which he held already under "a heavy Yoke. King William's Speech.

Concluding, "That, as for Himſelf, He "wou'd neither ſpare His Credit, Forces, "nor Perſon, to Concur with them in ſo "Juſt and Neceſſary a Deſign; and that He "wou'd come in the Spring, at the Head "of the Troops, faithfully to Make-good "His Royal Word, which He had ſo ſolemnly "Engag'd to Them.

This Speech, from a Prince in whom they all confided, had ſo good Effect, that they came to a Reſolution, of employing Two Hundred Twenty Two Thouſand Men againſt France; of which the King of England, the Emperor, and the King of Spain, were to find each of them Twenty Thouſand. But notwithſtanding the large Reſolution of the Congreſs;

1690. large Proportions promis'd by divers Princes and States of Germany, yet England and Holland were forc'd to pay them, and to bear the Burden of the War.

And their Solemn Declaration.

" SINCE We look upon the Union that " is between Us, as the Work of God " alone; It is but reaſonable that We ſhould " make a Solemn Proteſtation to him, to " deliberate nothing in this Aſſembly, but " what may be very juſt and equitable. " We Solemnly Proteſt, before God, That " Our Intentions are, That We will never " break off this Union, nor make any Peace " with Lewis the XIVth, till the following " Articles be Executed: To the Obligati- " on of which, We oblige Our ſelves for " ever.

I. " Till he has made Reparation to the " Holy See, for whatſoever he has acted a- " gainſt it; and till he has annull'd and " made void all thoſe Infamous Proceedings " againſt the Holy Father Innocent XI.

II. " Till he has Reſtor'd to each Party " concern'd, what he has taken ſince the " Peace of Munſter; and till he has Demoliſh'd " Briſac, and deliver'd up the Country of " Ceay to the Canton of Bern.

III. " Till he has Reſtor'd to the Prote- " ſtants all their Poſſeſſions and Goods; " and till there be an entire Liberty of Con- " ſcience throughout the whole Extent of the " French Dominions.

IV. " Till the Eſtates of the Kingdom " be Re eſtabliſh'd in their Ancient Liber- " ties; ſo that the Clergy, the Nobility, and " the Third Eſtate, may enjoy their Ancient " and Lawful Privileges: And till the Kings " for the future ſhall be oblig'd to call " together the ſaid Eſtates, when they " deſire any Supply; without the Conſent " of whom, they ſhall not raiſe any Mony, " after any manner, or for any pretence " whatſoever.

V. " Till the Tax upon Salt, that upon " the Third Eſtate, and an infinite number " of other unreaſonable Taxes and Impoſiti- " ons, be Aboliſh'd for ever.

VI. " Till he has Reſtor'd to the Parlia- " ments their Ancient and Rightful Autho- " rity; that ſo they might be Enabled to " diſtribute to every one Juſtice freely, " and without reſtraint, according to their " Conſciences.

VII. " Till all the Towns of the King- " dom be Re-eſtabliſh'd in their Ancient Pri- " vileges; and till their Revenues be Reſtor'd, " which had been taken from them with ſuch " Violence and Injuſtice.

" GOD, who knows the Intention of " Our Hearts, knows that we bear no " Hatred againſt the French Nation; and " that We do not aſpire to have the Law- " ful Dominions of the Kingdom of France. " And if all thoſe who are Inhabitants " would join with Us, We ſhould ſoon " diſpatch this Affair, without Effuſion of " Blood, and without Deſolation of the " Kingdom. And We promiſe all thoſe " that ſhall do it; That we will treat " them as Our particular Friends, and pre- " ſerve their Towns and Poſſeſſions as if " they were Our own. And as for thoſe " that ſhall not do it; We ſhall look " upon them as Perſons that have approv'd " and abetted all theſe Perſecutions, Burn- " ings and other Devaſtations that have " been made: And We will make them " feel, without Mercy, thoſe Pains and " Torment, which they have been the Oc- " caſion that ſo many poor People have ſuf- " fered. 1690.

" We were willing that the whole World " ſhould have a perfect Knowledge of Our " Reſolutions: Partilularly the French Gen- " tlemen and Perſons of Honour, who are " Oppreſt with the heavy Load of the Go- " vernment, and can no longer endure the " Slavery which they lie under: To the " end they may be able to take ſuch Mea- " ſures, as may be aſſiſting to Us in Re- " covering for them their Ancient Liberty, " which has been ſo cruelly and ſo unjuſtly " taken from them.

Progreſs of the French Arms.

In the mean time, the French King was reſolv'd to be before-hand with the Confederates; and therefore having divided his Army into two Bodies, with one of them he Beſieg'd and took Nice from the Duke of Savoy; and with the other he inveſted the ſtrong City of Mons, on March 15. and came before it in Perſon, Six Days after, accompanied by the Dauphin, the Duke of Orleans, and his Son the Duke of Chartres. The Trenches were open'd the next Day, and were advanc'd with great Expedition. The Prince de Bergu was Governour of the Town, and had a Gariſon of about Six Thouſand Horſe and Foot in the Place.

King William, upon News of the Siege, returned from Loo to the Hague; from whence he diſpatch'd Prince Waldeck to Hall near Bruſſels, where the Forces were to Rendeſvouz; and the King himſelf arriv'd there, on April 6. where he found an Army of about Fifty Thouſand Men: Yet the Spaniards had been ſo careleſs and ſlow, that there was nothing provided for the Expedition, no not ſo much as the neceſſary Carriages; ſo that the French had leiſure to go on with their Siege: And tho' in the Attack they made upon one of the Half-Moons, on the 7th of April at Night, they were repuls'd with conſiderable Loſs; yet the Burghers were ſo terrify'd with the Bombs, and influenc'd by the Popiſh-Clergy, to be of the French Intereſt, that they preſt the Governour to Capitulate, which he refuſing, they ſent a Drummer of their own to beat a Parley, and threatned to open the Gates, and to deliver both him and the Gariſon into the Beſiegers hands. This made the Governour at laſt comply; ſo that the Town was Surrendred April the 10th. N.S. upon Honourable Terms. Whereupon King William immediately left the Army, return'd to the Hague, embark'd for England, and arriv'd at Whitehal on the 13th of April.

In

1690. Jacobites plot.

In His Majesty's Absence, the Jacobites were plotting for the Restoration of their Master, and held several Meetings, from whence they transmitted their Sentiments to the Royal-Club (as they call'd it) in Covent-Garden; who were to digest them into such Methods for Practice, as should govern the whole Party.

The Result of their several Consultations, was,

1. That being unable to Re-inthrone the late King by their own Strength, they should endeavour to obtain Assistance from France, who had formerly made them such Promises of Invading England.

2. Since Delays were dangerous, sending Letters into France hazardous, and the Court at St. Germains Factious and Treacherous; That some Man of Quality and known Ability, should go over into France, to transact that Matter, from the whole Party.

This Project having the Approbation of the Leading-Club, in December, 1690. the Lord Preston, Mr. Ashton, and Mr. Elliot, were pitch'd upon as proper Persons to be sent into France: They hired a Vessel of Mrs. Jane Prat, of Barkin in Essex, for their Transportation; and went on Board her near Battle-Bridge, Dec. 30. But Discover'd the whole Plot being discover'd, the Government order'd Captain Billop to attend their Motion: Who accordingly suffer'd them to Sail before Gravesend, and then boarded and took them. The Plotters taken up. In Mr. Ashton's Bosom were found a Pacquet of Papers and Letters, whereby it abundantly appear'd, that they were going to France to promote the Treasonable Designs of Invading the Realm, Subverting the Government, and Restoring the late King, by the Assistance of French-Forces. So on Jan. 16. Sir Richard Graham, Bar. Viscount Preston in the Kingdom of Scotland, John Ashton, and Edmund Elliot, Gent. were Arraign'd at the Old-Baily, upon an Indictment of High-Treason, to which they pleaded Not Guilty. d. Preston and Mr. Ashton found guilty. The next Day the Lord Preston was brought to his Tryal; and after a full and clear Evidence, the Jury found him Guilty. On Jan. 12. Mr. Ashton was likewise found Guilty, and the Court proceeded to pass Sentence of Death against both of them, as in Cases of High-Treason. Mr. Ashton was Executed at Tyburn, on Jan. 28. but the Lord Preston, by the Intercession of his Friends, and in consideration of his Discovering the whole Conspiracy upon Oath, obtain'd Their Majesties Pardon. As for Mr. Elliot, there being no positive Proof against him, he was not brought to his Tryal. Soon after, the Queen issued out a Proclamation, for Discovering and Apprehending Francis late Bishop of Ely, William Penn, Esq; and James Graham, Esq; for Conspiring with divers Enemies and Traitors; and particularly with the Lord Preston and Mr. Ashton, lately Attainted of High-Treason. But the Clemency of the Government was so very great, that among the multitude of Conspirators, no one suffer'd but Mr. Ashton.

Offices & Honours. On March 11. The Office of Post-Master-General, was Granted by Letters Patent to Sir Robert Cotton, of Hattley St. George in the County of Cambridge, Knt. and Thomas Frankland, Esq;. On March 19. Nicholas Dupin, Esq; Deputy-Governor of the King and Queen's Corporation of the Linen-Manufacture in England and Ireland, waited on Her Majesty, to give Her an Account of the great Success and Progress made in it, by employing many Thousands of the Poor, &c. With which Her Majesty was extremely satisfy'd; and to encourage it by Her own Example, She was pleas'd to bring up the Work of making Fringes, wherein She busied Her own Royal Hands, and was quickly imitated, not only by Her Maids of Honour, but by all the Ladies and Gentlewomen throughout the whole Kingdom. 1690.

As to the State of Religion; The Non-Jurors of the Church of England, began to think of a Separation from their late Brethren, that they might be distinguish'd in Communion as well as in Politicks. They were indeed highly Discontented with the present Settlement, and very uneasie for the Return of King James; tho' they could not but think the Consequence must be Popery and French-Power. There was about this time a Pamphlet Publish'd, Entitl'd, A Modest Enquiry into the Causes of the present Disasters of England: Wherein the Author charges the disaffected Clergy, whom he calls the Lambeth Holy-Club, with being the Principal Managers of the Jacobite-Plot, for bringing the French Fleet into the Channel. He alledges, The Non-juring Clergy make a separate Communion

The Publick Misfortunes imputed to this Party.

" That the first step the Clergy made, was, " The Writing against the taking the New-Oaths to " Their Majesties, enjoyn'd them by Act of Parliament; " and the buzzing into the Ears of their Votaries, " The Unlawfulness of those Oaths, and the continuing " Right of King James to the Crown.

" That there being very few of the disaffected " Clergy, that had the Courage to lay down their " Places for the Oaths; the next step of the Plot " was to cheat the World and their own Consciences, with the Ridiculous Distinction of taking the " Oaths to a King de Facto, and not de Jure: " Which is as much as to say, That Their Majesties were not Lawful and Rightful King and " Queen of England, but de Facto only; that is, in " English, downright Usurpers.

" That this Distinction did not only give scope " to take the Oaths to their Majesties, but also to " Pray for them by Name in their Pulpits; tho' " some of more Sincerity than the rest, would not " pray for them at all: And yet to prevent any " Trouble from the Law, they wisely pray'd in " general Terms, for the King and Queen; which " might be taken either for King James and Queen " Mary, or King William and Queen Mary: And " others of a more nice Stomach yet, would not " Pray for the King and Queen, but, for the King " and Royal Family.

" That the Plot being Lame, because the Machines that mov'd it were debarr'd from the Pulpit; it was found out, that the Act of Parliament, Enjoining the Oaths to Their Majesties, admitting of some favourable Interpretation in Law, upon the part of those that only Preach'd, but had no Cure of Souls: Thereupon Dr. S—— one of the greatest Champions, mounted the Chair first, with the loud Acclamations of the Party; and as an Introduction to his Sermon, gave his Auditors an Account of the happy Discovery he had made of so great a Blessing, as his having " Liberty to Preach to them, notwithstanding the Act " of Parliament about taking the Oaths.

" That he was follow'd by a great many, both " in London and in the Country; who partly by " stealth, and partly by the Pious Zeal of some of " their own sort of Church-Wardens, got up into " the Pulpit, to Trumpet up the People to a Dissatisfaction with the Government.

" That all these steps of the Plot, were back'd " with the History of Passive Obedience, which was " handed about in Triumph among the Party.

" That in this Pamphlet are muster'd a great " many Expressions of English Divines, both Ancient and Modern; altho' the most of the Citations be far wide of the Question, and refer only " to Obedience to Magistracy in general, and the " Unlawfulness of Private Persons their rising up " against the Government upon any frivolous Pretence.

" That

1690. "That the next Engine of the Plot, was the "happy Reſult of a kind of Oecumenick-Council of "the Whole Party; The Liturgy of the Church "of England muſt be laid aſide, and a New one "muſt be Calculated for the Meridian of King "James's tottering Fortune. That in this New-"Liturgy, they Pray'd thus: Reſtore us again the "Publick-Worſhip of thy Name, the Reverend Ad-"miniſtration of thy Sacraments; Raiſe up the "former Government, both in Church and State, "that we may be no longer without King, without "Prieſt, without God in the World. —— That "when they came to Pray for King James, the "Jacobite-Club had exhauſted all their Rhetorick "and Zeal, in the following Words: Protect and "Defend thy Servant, our Sovereign Lord the "King; Strengthen his Hands, and the Hands of "all that are put in Authority under Him, with "Judgment and Juſtice, to Cut off all ſuch Workers "of Iniquity, as turn Religion into Rebellion, and "Faith into Faction; that they may never Prevail "againſt us, or Triumph in the Ruine of this Church "among us. To this end, Defend the King; Bind "up his Soul in the Bundle of Life, and let no "Weapon form'd againſt Him proſper: Be unto "Him a Helmet of Salvation, and a ſtrong Tower "of Defence, againſt the Face of his Enemies: "Let his Reign be proſperous, and his Days many: "Make him Glad, according to the Days wherein "thou haſt Afflicted him, and for the Years "wherein thou haſt made him ſuffer Adverſity: "Give him the Necks of his Enemies, and alſo, "every Day more and more, the Hearts of his Sub-"jects: As for thoſe that are Implacable, cloath "them with Shame; but upon Himſelf, and his "Poſterity (that is, the Prince of Wales) let the "Crown flouriſh.

"That the General-Council having Compos'd "this New-Liturgy, there were above Ten thouſand "of them Printed, and Diſpers'd up and down "among the Party, which they Us'd in their "Cabals; laying aſide a great part, and ſometimes "all the Old-Liturgy.

"That there were many of the Holy-Club "detach'd up and down, to Perſwade Money'd-"People, who Wiſh'd-well to the Cauſe, to Con-"tribute for the Subſiſtence of King James's "Caſhier'd-Officers.

"That King William being reſolv'd to Venture "his Perſon once more, for the Safety of theſe "Kingdoms, his Journey to Ireland concluded "upon, and the moſt and the better-Diſciplin'd "part of the Army to Attend His Majeſty, it was "impoſſible to leave any conſiderable Force be-"hind Him in his Abſence: Likewiſe, That the "Tranſportation of the Queen of Spain, and "the Convoy of the Streights-Merchant-men, under "Admiral Killigrew, had carry'd a conſiderable "part of our Fleet to the Mediterranean; and "another part of it, Commanded by Sir Cloudeſley "Shovel, was to Attend His Majeſty and the Army "to Ireland; ſo that the Grand-Fleet was not to "have been ſo Conſiderable as otherwiſe it wou'd "have been.

"That all theſe Circumſtances rais'd the "Courage of the Plotters, who thought this the "only Time to put their Deſign in Execution.

"That, in order to that, at one of their Ge-"neral-Meetings in London, where it was neceſ-"ſary ſome of the Clergy ſhou'd be preſent, to "Bleſs ſo Pious a Work, it was Concluded, To "Preſent a Memorial, in the Name of the Loyal "and Diſtreſſed Subjects of England, (for ſo they "nam'd themſelves) to His Moſt Chriſtian Ma-"jeſty; Humbly Inviting Him, out of His Unparal-"lel'd Goodneſs, and for the Affection He always "bore to Oppreſſed-Virtue, that He wou'd Aſſiſt "them, in Reſtoring their Lawful King, His An-"cient Allye and Confederate, to His Throne; "and in breaking the Yoke of Uſurpation, under "which theſe Three Nations were at this time "ſo heavily Groaning. 1690.

A Memorial of this Party, to the French King.

"That there had been Two or Three Memorial's "Preſented to the French-King, before this, over-"and-above a conſtant Correſpondence betwixt "the French-Miniſters of State, Monſieur de Croiſſy, "and them. And the Clergy, who were the great "Contrivers and Managers of this, and who, by "their Profeſſion, are, for the moſt part, extraor-"dinary Credulous of any thing they incline to, "did really believe, that immediately upon the "Appearing of the French-Fleet, and the Burning "of ours, (which they thought as ſure) there "wou'd certainly be a General-Inſurrection through "a great many Places of the Kingdom, in order "to Join them at their Landing, and to Declare "for King James.

The Pamphlet (out of which I have made this ſhort Abſtract) Reflecting ſo highly on the Non-Juring-Clergy: The Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhops of Norwich, Ely, Bath and Wells, and Peterborough, both in their own, and in the Name of their abſent Brother the Biſhop of Glouceſter, Publiſh'd a Paper, wherein they did Solemly, and in the Preſence of God, Proteſt and Declare; The Non-juring-Biſhops Vindicate themſelves.

I. That theſe Accuſations, caſt upon them, were all of them Malicious Calumnies, and Diabolical Inventions.

II. That they knew not who was the Author of the New-Liturgy, nor had any Hand in it, neither did they Uſe it at any time.

III. That they never held any Correſpondence, directly or indirectly, with Monſieur de Croiſſy, or with any other Miniſter or Agent of France; and if any ſuch Memorial had been Preſented to the French-King, they never knew any thing of it: And that they did utterly Renounce both this, and all other Invitations, ſuggeſted to be made by the French.

by them, in order to any Invaſion of this Kingdom.

IV. That they utterly Deny'd and Diſown'd all Plots charg'd upon them, as Contriv'd and Carry'd on in their Meetings at Lambeth; the Intent thereof, being to Adviſe, how, in their preſent Difficulties, they might beſt keep their Conſciences void of Offence, towards God, and towards Man.

V. That they were ſo far from being the Authors or Abetters of England's Miſeries, that they did, and ſhou'd to their dying-hour, heartily and inceſſantly Pray for the Peace, Proſperity and Glory of England; and ſhou'd always, by God's Grace, make it their daily Practice, to ſtudy to be Quiet, to bear their Croſs patiently, and to ſeek the Good of their Native-Country.

And as they had, not long ſince, either Actually, or in full Preparation of Mind, hazarded All they had in the World, in Oppoſing* Popery and Arbitrary-Power in England; ſo they ſhou'd, by God's Grace, with greater Zeal, again ſacrifice All they had, and their very Lives too, if God ſhou'd be pleas'd to Call them thereto, to Prevent Popery, and the Arbitrary-Power of France, from Coming upon them, and Prevailing over them; the Perſecu-tion of their Proteſtant-Brethren there, being freſh in their Memories.

The King came out of the Maeze on Sunday Morning April the 12*th.* attended by part of the Dutch Squadron, being Ships of the Firſt and Second Rank, who came to joyn our Fleet at the Buoy in the Nore; where as His Majeſty paſs'd by, he was Saluted with a Diſcharge of all the Cannon from the Ships, and the repeated Huzza's of the Seamen, expreſſing their Joy and Duty in a particular and extraordinary manner. After a very quick Paſſage the King arrived at Whitehall, on Monday Evening April 13. when immediately Bonfires, Illuminations and Ringing of Bells demonſtrated the general Joy for His Majeſty's ſafe Return. His Majeſty having diſpatched the weighty Affairs of haſtning out the Fleet, and making due Preparations for the Campaign in Flanders, he could ſpare no time for Sports or Eaſe; but in purſuance of His Royal Reſolution to Command the Confederate Army this Summer, He ſet out from Kenſington on Friday May the 1*ſt.* very early in the Morning, and arrived at Harwich about Six in the Evening, where He went immediately on Board the Mary Yatch; but the Wind hanging Southwardly with the Tide of Flood, hindered their going to Sea that Night, upon which His Majeſty came aſhore; and embarking again next Day, about Nine in the Morning, ſet Sail with a fair Wind for Holland, attended by a Squadron of Men of War under Command of Rear-Admiral Rook. The next Day about Six in the Morning His Majeſty Landed near Mazeland-Sluice, and went that Night to the Hague, where the next Morning all the Foreign Miniſters waited on him to Congratulate his ſafe Arrival. On Friday following, the King went to Loo, and from thence ſent away Count de Solmes, and the Lord Marlborough to Flanders, to put all things in a readineſs againſt His Majeſty's Arrival. Some few Days after, May 31. N. S. His Majeſty parted from Loo, and having paſſed through Breda, on Saturday following He put himſelf at the Head of the Confederate Army; where he was attended by the Duke of Ormond, the Marqueſs of Wincheſter, and the Earl of Eſſex; who reviving the Ancient Cuſtom of the Engliſh Nobility, choſe rather to ſhare with their Prince in the Honourable Hazards of the Field, than to lead an inactive and inglorious Life at Home. And it was indeed no Credit to our Nation, that their Example was not follow'd by more of their Quality. His Majeſty having diſappointed Bouffliers in his Attempt upon Liege, endeavour'd to bring Marcſchal de Luxemburgh to an Engagement, as well by ſeveral Marches and Counter-marches He purpoſely made, as by the Umbrages he gave him of Attacking Maubeuge or Mons; but the Cautious French General very induſtriouſly avoided Fighting, and would afford no opportunity for it, but upon very great Advantage; wherefore His Majeſty having blown up the Fortifications of Beaumont, a place he had made himſelf Maſter of, March'd the Army towards Aeth; and leaving it under the Command of Prince Waldeck, He went away for Loo on September the 17*th.* The ſame Day the Confederate Army March'd from Ickonwell to Leuze, and Decamp'd again on the 19*th.* in the Morning, advancing towards Cambren; and about Eleven a Clock the whole Right Wing, with the Body of the Foot, and the greateſt part of the Horſe of the Left Wing, had paſſed the little River and Defile near Catoir. The Duke of Luxemburgh being inform'd of this Motion, and encouraged by his Britannick Majeſty's Abſence, Advanced at the ſame time with the Troops of the French King's Houſhold, and a ſtrong Detachment of his Cavalry, making together Fifty Five Squadrons, his ſwift March not being diſcover'd, by reaſon of a great Fog; and Charg'd the Rear Guard of the others with great Fury. Count Tilly who commanded in the Rear, drew up his Men as well as the ſuddeneſs of the Attack would permit, and received the Shock with great Bravery, but was ſoon overpower'd, and put into Diſorder. By this time ſeveral of thoſe that had already paſſed the River, were brought back by the Lieutenant Generals Overkirk and Obdam, and forming a Second Line, gave an opportunity to the Firſt to Rally. Two Battalions were likewiſe Poſted behind the Hedges adjoining to the Defile, who much Gall'd the Enemy. Here the Conflict was very Fierce, till the ſecond Line was alſo forc'd to give Ground before the Enemy; but the Cavalry being ſoon rally'd by Monſieur Overkirk, who ſignalized his Valour and Conduct on this Occaſion; the French, who were unwilling to puſh the Action too far, for fear of the Dutch Infantry, which was alſo Marching up, Retreated in ſome Haſte and Confuſion; contenting themſelves with having Kill'd about a Thouſand of the Confederates, and amongſt them, ſome Men of great Diſtinction, with the Loſs themſelves of about half the Number. And with this Action the Campaign ended on that ſide.

Notwithſtanding the many Diſappointments the Jacobites had already met in their bold Deſigns, they began this Year with freſh Attempts to ſubvert the preſent Government. To accompliſh this, they maintain'd a conſtant Correſpondence with the Court of France, who Fed 'em with liberal Promiſes of Aſſiſtance with Men, Arms and Money; which raiſed their Hopes and Expectations, that England ſhould be ſpeedily Invaded and Conquer'd, if a Project that was then on Foot, did not accompliſh the Work by a greater Diſpatch, and Reſtore King James without the loſs of much Blood. With theſe dark Sayings, ſome of the Jacobites entertain'd the Reſt, and did not ſcruple to boaſt that a great Thing was then on Foot, that would Confound the Williamites. What ſhould be meant by this Great Thing, appeared afterwards to be the King's Murder: His Majeſty's Enemies being unwilling to wait any longer the uncertain Fate of War, thought this Project the beſt Expedient for their Purpoſe, and this Time moſt agreeable. For to Aſſaſſinate His Majeſty in Flanders, would admit of more Excuſes, and more Safety, than in any other

This Helliſh Enterprize, with the Promiſe of great Rewards, being communicated to Bartholomew Lineire Sieur de Granvaile, he and Dumont who had been formerly retain'd for the ſame purpoſe, undertook to put it in Execution while the King was at Loo; but miſſing their Opportunity, they followed his Majeſty to his Camp in Flanders. From hence Granvale returned to the French Army, and Dumont, according to the Orders given him, enter'd himſelf into the Confederate Army, that he might take his Opportunity when his Majeſty went to viſit the Grand Guard, or the Lines, to ſhoot him in the Back, and then make the beſt of his way to a Body of Horſe, that Granvale and Colonel Parker, the chief Contriver of this bloody Deſign, ſhould have in readineſs upon a previous intimation to reſcue and carry him off. But Providence took care of the Preſervation of Europe, that ſo viſibly depended upon his Majeſty's ſingle Life; and whether Dumont's Heart fail'd him, or whether his Confederates deſerted him, or whatever elſe was the reſtraining Cauſe, after ſome Weeks Attendance he went to the Court of Hannover, and for this Year gave over the accurſed Project of Aſſaſſinating His Majeſty; who ſafely return'd to Loo, and having ſpent there near Two Months in Hunting, he came to the Hague to ſettle the State of the War for the Enſuing Year. On Sunday October 18. he Embark'd on the Mary Yacht in the Maeſe, being attended by a Squadron of Men of War, under Command of Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, Rear Admiral of the Blue. On Monday about 9. in the Morning His Majeſty landed at Margate, and came that Night to Kenſington; upon which the Cannon were Fired from the Tower, and all the Streets were fill'd with Bonfires, Illuminations, and all poſſible ſigns of Joy for His Majeſty's Safe Return.

Affairs in Ireland.

To take a ſhort View of the Affairs in Ireland; the greateſt Miſchief done there to the Engliſh, was by the Iriſh Robbers, called Rapparees, who committed great Spoils and Cruelties, and then retreated into their Boggs and Faſtneſſes, where the Regular Forces could not reach them: Nor were the Lords Juſtices more ſucceſsful in their Attempts to Suppreſs 'em, either by offers of Mercy to ſuch of 'em as ſhould ſubmit to Their Majeſties Obedience, or by propoſing a Reward for every Head of a Rapparee. King William's Forces being conſiderably Augmented by the Addition of thoſe Troops, which under Mackay had happily compleated the Reduction of the Scotch Highlands; Lieutenant General Ginkle, Commander in Chief, decamped from Mullingar on June 6. and came the next day before Ballimore; the Marqueſs De Ruvigny, Major-General, being ſent before with a Detachment of Horſe and Dragoons, to poſſeſs himſelf of a Paſs between that Place and Athlone: The Batteries being rais'd, the General Sent a Meſſage on June 8. to Colonel Ulicke Bourke, Governor of the Town, That if he and the Garriſon would Surrender within Two Hours, he would ſave their Lives, and make them Priſoners of War; if not, they were to expect no Mercy. To which the Governor made a ſhuffling ſort of Reply, in hopes of getting better Terms; but the Cannon and Bombs having made two ſeveral Breaches, the Pontoons being put into the Water, and all things ready for a Storm, it ſtruck ſo great a Conſternation, that the ſame Evening the Garriſon, which conſiſted of 780 Men, beſides Four Field Officers, and 259 Rapparees, laid down their Arms and Submitted at Diſcretion.

Ballimore Surrendred.

The Engliſh put this Town into a better Condition, and March'd from thence on June 18*th.* when being joined by the Prince of Wirtemberg, they encamp'd at Balymony's Paſs, whilſt a ſtrong Detachment of Horſe advanc'd towards Athlone. On the 19*th* the Van-guard march'd from Balymony, and beat the Enemy from ſeveral Out-Ditches of the Engliſh Town of Athlone, on this ſide the Shannon, and lodg'd themſelves there. The next day, a Battery of Ten 18 Pounders having ruin'd a Baſtion near the Water-ſide, the General ordered an Aſſault to be made; the Engliſh at the word went deſperately on, and in the midſt of the reſiſting Iriſh kept firing, till they came to the Breach, which a French Captain of Granadiers firſt mounted, throwing his Granado, firing his Piece, and ordering his Men to do the ſame. His Bravery ſo encourag'd his Party, that though he was kill'd in the Action, yet the Iriſh were ſoon forc'd to quit the Place; ſome flying over the Bridge to Connaught's ſide, and the reſt leaping into the Shannon where many were drown'd.

Siege of Athlone.

After this Succeſs, Batteries were planted againſt the Iriſh-Town of Athlone, and by the 22d the Cannons and Mortars began to play very briskly on the North-Eaſt-ſide of the Caſtle. The 25th was ſpent in raiſing more Batteries, one below, and another above the Bridge, while another was Erected oppoſite to a Baſtion the Iriſh had made on the other ſide the River. At the ſame time the General was concluding Methods, to March part of his Army over the Shannon, at a Ford towards Lanesborough, but that Deſign being fruſtrated, he reſolved to force his way through the Engliſh Town, and therefore laboured hard to gain the Bridge, wherein he found no ſmall Difficulty. However, on the 27th, the Engliſh burnt the wooden Breaſt-work the Enemy had made on the other ſide of the broken Arch; and the next Morning, had laid their Beams over, and partly Plank'd them; which a Party of the Beſieg'd endeavouring to ruin, they were all killed in the Attempt. This did not diſcourage another Party of theirs to ſet about the ſame work, which they deſperately effected, throwing down the Planks and Beams into the River. This made the General reſolve to carry on the work by a cloſe Gallery on the Bridge; but this too was burnt by the Enemy; and there ſeem'd no way left to paſs the Shannon. So on the 30th, a Council of War was held, and it was warmly debated, Whether to attempt the River, or to March off? There were not wanting great Reaſons for the latter; but the Duke of Wirtemberg, the Major Generals Mackay, Talmaſh, Ruvigny, and Tetteau, and Col. Cambon, urg'd, That no brave Action could be perform'd without Hazard; That the Attempt of taking the River and paſſing it ſafely, was like to be attended with Succeſs; and proffer'd themſelves to be the Leaders of the Reſt. Their Opinion prevail'd; and all things being ready about Six that Evening, upon a Signal given, Captain Sandys, and Two Lieutenants, led the firſt Party of Sixty Granadiers, all in Armour, and 20 a-Breaſt, ſeconded by another ſtrong Detachment of Granadiers, (which were to be ſupported by Six Battalions of Foot) who intrepidly took the River, a little to the left of the Bridge, againſt a Baſtion of the Enemies; the Stream being very rapid, and the Paſſage very difficult, by reaſon of ſome great Stones that were in the River. At laſt, by an incredible piece of Bravery, they forc'd their way through Water, Fire and Smoak, and gain'd the oppoſite Bank, while the reſt were laying Planks over the broken part of the Bridge, and bringing down the Pontoons. By theſe means the Engliſh paſſed over ſo faſt, that in leſs than half an hour they were Maſters of the Town, while the Gariſon in diſtraction fled away to the Army near encamp'd. The Engliſh were no ſooner enter'd the River, but an Expreſs

Braver in paſſing the Shannon.

1691. preſs was ſent from the Town to Monſieur St. Ruth, who commanded the Army, for ſpeedy Succours; but he anſwered, It was impoſſible for the Engliſh to pretend to take a Town, and he ſo near with an Army to defend it. He would give a Thouſand Piſtoles they durſt attempt it. The brave and active Sarsfield replied, He knew it was a difficult Enterprize, but not too difficult for Engliſh Courage to attempt; and therefore preſs'd St. Ruth to ſend away ſome Forces to relieve the Town. Which that General refuſing to do, and ſtill turning the Attempt into a Jeſt, ſome hot Words paſſed betwixt him and Sarsfield, that were thought to have their fatal Conſequence not long after. St. Ruth being ſoon convinced that the Engliſh were in actual poſſeſſion of the Place, ordered ſeveral Detachments to beat them out again: But then he was ſenſible of another Overſight, in not Levelling of thoſe Fortifications of Athlone, that were next his Camp. For now the Engliſh us'd the Enemies Works againſt themſelves, and ſtruck ſuch a Terror upon the whole Army of French and Iriſh, that they decamped that very Night.

Thus was the Iriſh Town of Athlone (when proudly thought inacceſſible) reſolutely taken in an Hour's time. It is a hard matter to match in Hiſtory ſo brave an Enterprize; a fortified Town attack'd croſs a deep and wide River, only by Three Thouſand Men; in the face of a Great Army, who were Maſters of all the Fords by the Retrenchments they had caſt before them. And therefore it was but Juſtice, that General Ginkle ſhould entail on his Family the Honour of this Atchievement, by the Title which was afterwards beſtow'd upon him, of Earl of Athlone.

This happy General having continued at Athlone, till he had put it into a Poſture of Defence, marched out with his Army on July 10. and having reach'd Ballinaſloe, encamp'd along the River Suck upon Roſcommon ſide; which was a very good Paſs, and which if the Iriſh had ſecur'd, they would have given the Engliſh a great deal more trouble. But they indeed poſſeſs'd themſelves of a more advantagious Poſt; for they lay on the other ſide of Aghrim Caſtle, three Miles beyond Ballinaſloe, and were extended from the Church of Kilcommodon, on their Right, to a Place called Gourtnapon, about two Miles in length: On their Left run a Rivulet, having ſteep Hills and little Bogs on each ſide; next to which was a large Red Bog, almoſt a Mile over; in the end whereof ſtood the Caſtle of Aghrim, commanding the Way that led to their Camp; paſſable for Horſe no where but juſt at the Caſtle, by reaſon of a ſmall River, which running thro' a moiſt Ground, made the whole a Moraſs. This Moraſs extended it ſelf along to the Right, where there was another Paſs at Urachres, having a riſing Ground on each ſide; and the Iriſh Camp lay along the Ridge of a Hill, on the ſide of which ſtood two Daniſh Forts, about half a Mile's diſtance from the Bog below, and this cut into ſmall Encloſures, which the Iriſh lined very thick with Muſquetiers, and kept a Communication between them.

General Ginkle having viewed the Enemy's Camp, found it of very difficult Acceſs; but conſidering he had now advanced ſo far, that he muſt either fight his Way through, or retreat with Loſs and Shame, he brought up his Army to front the Enemy, and provoke them to Battel. St. Ruth ſuppoſing by the way of Appearance in the Engliſh, that they were reſolved to attack him, he made a ſolemn Speech, and told the poor Iriſh, "How ſucceſsful he had been in "ſuppreſſing Hereſie in France and Savoy, and "bringing over a vaſt Number of deluded Souls "into the Boſom of the Mother-Church. That "for this Reaſon his Maſter had made choice of "him, before others, to eſtabliſh the Church in "Ireland, on ſuch a Foundation, that it ſhould "not for the future be in the power of Hell or "Hereticks to diſturb it: And that all good Roman Catholicks depended on their Courage, "to ſee thoſe Glorious Things effected. He con- "feſs'd, Matters did not entirely anſwer his Ex- "pectation, ſince he came among them; but "that ſtill All might be eaſily recovered. He "was now inform'd, that the Prince of Orange's "Heretical Army was reſolv'd to give them Bat- "tel; that therefore now or never was the time "for them to recover their loſt Honours, Privi- "leges, and Eſtates of their Anceſtors. They "ought now to remember, that they were no "Mercenary Soldiers; that their All was now "at ſtake, and the happy Event would be to re- "ſtore a pious King to his Throne, to propa- "gate the Holy Church and Faith, and at a blow "to extirpate Hereſy. He begg'd them to raiſe "their Courage, by aſſuring themſelves, that "they ſhould have King James's Love and Gra- "titude, Lewis the Great's Protection, himſelf "to Lead them on, the Church to Pray for "them, and the Saints and Angels to carry their "Souls into Heaven." Then he concluded with a ſtrict Order, To give Quarter to none, eſpecially not to ſpare any of the French Hereticks in the Service of the Prince of Orange.

On Sunday July 12. the Engliſh Army marched early in the Morning towards the Enemy, but the Weather proving foggy, they halted till about Noon, when they advanced in as good Order as the Nature of the Ground would permit. The General having view'd the Poſture of the Iriſh, and ſeeing the neceſſity of making himſelf Maſter of the Paſs of Urachres, he ſent a Daniſh Captain to force it; but they failing in the Attempt, he order'd Two Hundred of Cunningham's Dragoons to march to certain Ditches nigh the Ford, to keep the Enemy from coming over; while the Army in the mean time continued their March. By this time it was Two-a-Clock; and the General finding it neceſſary to gain that Ford, and the other Ways that lead to the Right of the Iriſh Camp, as the moſt proper Means to attack them, commanded Cunningham's Dragoons at the Ditch, to advance towards a Party of the Enemy that were poſted on the other ſide; who thereupon, with another Party that ſuſtained them, retired behind a Hill nearer the Camp, where a great Body was poſted: Now all theſe being ſtill reinforced by others, obliged the Engliſh Dragoons to retreat. Upon which the General order'd Eppinger's Dragoons to get between thoſe Bodies and the Camp of the Enemy: Who preſently diſcovering this Motion, would by the Advantage of quick Reinforcements have been too hard for the Engliſh, had not the Dragoons been ſeconded by my Lord Portland's Horſe, who behaved themſelves here with exceeding great Bravery. Now what was at firſt only a Skirmiſh, engaged a conſiderable Body on both ſides; but the Enemy retiring in ſome time, brought the Generals together to Conſult, whether it was not better to defer the Battel till next Morning? Which was agreed on ſo far, that the Tents were order'd to be ſent for: But when, by what had already happened, they perceived the Enemy to be in ſome Diſorder, the Battel was fully reſolved on. Wherefore it was agreed by the Advice of Major General Mackay, to begin the Fight on the Enemy's Right; whereby it was propoſed to draw part of their Strength from Aghrim Caſtle, near to which their Main Body was poſted: That ſo

Advance of the Engliſh towards the Iriſh Army.

1691. the Right Wing of the Engliſh might have an eaſier Paſſage over, to attack their Left; and then the whole Engliſh Army might have the opportunity to engage, which otherwiſe could not poſſibly be; and this Advice had its deſired End. About half an hour after Four in the Afternoon, the Engliſh Left Wing moved towards the Enemy, and the Battel began afreſh by Five. The Ditches were ſtrongly lined by Iriſh Muſqueteers, and their Horſe advantagiouſly poſted to ſupport them; and here the Iriſh behaved themſelves like Men of another Nation, or at leaſt as if they had been out of their own Country; defending their Poſts with unparallel'd Obſtinacy. Nor would they ſtir from one ſide, till the Engliſh put their Pieces over at the other; and then having Lines of Communication from one Ditch to another, they would preſently poſt themſelves, and flank the Engliſh; which occaſion'd great Firings on both ſides, and continu'd on the Left almoſt an Hour and half, before the Center and the Right Wing of the Army began to engage. In the mean time the main Army advanc'd, and Major General Mackay, and the other Officers, obſerving ſeveral Bodies of the Enemy's Horſe and Foot draw off from the Left, and move towards the Right, where they were hard put to it by the Engliſh; our General laid hold of the opportunity, and ordered the Foot to march over the Bog which fronted the Enemies main Body. Now the Regiments of Erle, Herbert, Creighton, and Brewer, going over the narroweſt Place, where the Hedges on the Enemies ſide ran fartheſt into the Bog, they had Orders to march to the loweſt of the Ditches adjoining to the ſide of the Bog, and there to Poſt themſelves till the Horſe could come about by Aghrim Caſtle, and ſuſtain them; and till the other Foot had marched over the other Bog before, where it was broader; and were ſupported by Foulk's and Brigadier Stuart's Regiments. Erle's and the other Three Regiments, purſuant to their Orders, advanced over the Bog, moſt of them paſſing up to the middle in Mud and Water; and upon their near Approach to the Ditches, received the Enemies Fire; which yet did not hinder them from marching to the loweſt Hedge, and to beat the Iriſh from thence; and ſo on from Hedge to Hedge, till they were got very near their main Body: But the Iriſh had ſo well ordered the matter, that they had an eaſy Paſſage for their Horſe among all thoſe Hedges and Ditches; which yet being obſerved by the valiant Colonel Erle, he encouraged his Men, by telling them, there was no way to come off, but to be brave. However, the Engliſh being both flanked and fronted, and expoſed to all the Enemies Fire from the Neighbouring Hedges; they were forced from their Ground, and to retreat again to the Bog with conſiderable Loſs. And among others, the brave Colonels Erle and Herbert being taken Priſoners, the former, after being twice taken and retaken, at loſt got clear of the Enemy; but the other, as was reported, was barbarouſly murthered by the Iriſh, when they ſaw he was like to be reſcued.

The Battel.

Difficulties and Diſadvantages to the Engliſh ſide.

While things paſſed after this manner on this ſide, Colonel St. John's, Colonel Tiffin's, the Lord George Hamilton's, the French Refugees in Engliſh Service, and ſeveral other Regiments, were marching over below upon the Bog; while the Iriſh lay ſo cloſe in their Ditches, that many of the Engliſh were doubtful, whether they had any Men at that Place or no. But no ſooner were the French Proteſtants and the reſt got within Twenty Yards of the Ditches, but the Iriſh fired very furiouſly upon them; which the other ſuſtained with intrepidity, and ſtill bravely preſſed forwards, though they could ſcarce ſee one another for Smoak. And now the Battel ſeem'd ſo doubtful for ſome time, that a Stander-by would rather have judged the Victory inclin'd to the Iriſh; for they had driven the Engliſh Foot in the Center ſo far back, that they were almoſt got even with the Great Guns, (planted near the Bog) of which the Engliſh had no Benefit in that Conjuncture, becauſe of the mixture of the Iriſh with their own Men.

1691 The Battel very doubtful.

We hear little all this while of the Horſe; but while the Infantry was thus engaged, Major General Ruvigny's Regiment of French Horſe, and Sir John Lanier's, being both poſted on the Right, the latter was afterwards drawn to the Left, where they did great Service; and the Right Wing of the Engliſh Horſe were in the mean time making the beſt of their way to ſuccour the Foot; being ſenſible of the extream danger they were in, and that all lay at ſtake. The Cavalry, beſides the Showers of Bullets poured on them from a Body of the Enemies Dragoons and Foot, that were conveniently poſted under a Covert Place, was likewiſe obliged to preſs and tumble over a very dangerous Paſs; but having with incredible Bravery ſurmounted all theſe Difficulties, they lodged themſelves at laſt in a dry Ditch, in the hotteſt of the Enemies Fire from Aghrim Caſtle, and ſome old Walls and adjoining Hedges. It was reported, that St. Ruth obſerving the great Difficulties the Engliſh Horſe encounter'd with upon this occaſion, ſhould ſay, They are brave Fellows, 'tis pity they ſhould be ſo expoſed.

The Engliſh Foot all this while laboured under very great Diſadvantage in the Center; which being obſerved by the brave Talmaſh, he haſted with ſome freſh Men to their Relief; and ordered the broken Regiments to halt and face about: Which they immediately obeyed, and bravely charged the Iriſh, who had advanced upon them to the very Center of the Bog; killed above Three Hundred of them before they could retreat out of it; and then marched boldly up to their old Ground from whence they had been beaten. At the ſame time Mackay fell upon the Enemy, with a good Body of Horſe on their Left; and among the reſt, the French Regiment of Horſe had forced a Regiment of Iriſh Dragoons from an Advantagious Poſt, and put Tyrconnel's Horſe to flight. Whereupon Ruvigny, at the Head of Oxford's Horſe, ſupported by his own Regiment, went along the ſide of the Bog, and bore all down before him. And now the Horſe and Foot of the Engliſh Right, and the Iriſh Left Wing, being mixed, there was nothing but a continual Fire, and a very ſharp Diſpute all along the Lines: The Iriſh with great Reſolution endeavouring to maintain their Ditches, and the Engliſh to beat them out from thence. However, the Fight did not appear much longer to be doubtful: For tho St. Ruth, when he ſaw the Engliſh Foot in the Center repulſed, in an Extaſy of Joy told thoſe about him, he would now beat the Engliſh Army to the very Gates of Dublin; yet ſeeing with great Concern Oxford, Ruvigny, Langſton, and Bierly's Horſe, with Leviſon's Dragoons, preſſing over towards the Caſtle; he ordered a Brigade of his own Horſe to march up. Then riding to one of his Batteries, and giving the Gunners Orders where to fire; and afterwards leading on ſome Horſe towards the Place where he ſaw the Engliſh endeavour to get over; as he rode down the Hill of Kilcommodon, the Place where the main Streſs of the Battel was fought, being juſt under the Iriſh Camp; he was killed with a Cannon Ball As ſoon as he fell, his Body was removed behind the Hill, and his Guard

St. Ruth kill'd.

1691. Guard going off at the ſame time, this was no ſooner obſerved by the Iriſh Horſe, but many of them drew off alſo, and in a ſhort time their Army was driven to the top of Kilcommodon Hill, where their Camp had lain; which being level'd and expoſed to the Engliſh Shot more openly, they began now to betake themſelves to an open Flight, the Foot towards a large Bog behind them on the Left, and the Horſe on the High-way towards Longhreah.

The Iriſh Army defeated.

While all this was doing in the Right Wing and Center, the Engliſh to the Left, that firſt Engaged, bravely maintained their Ground; and though the Iriſh once or twice did make themſelves Maſters of the Chevaux de Friſe that covered the French Foot of Refugees, yet they couragiouſly regained them again: However, little happened on their ſide for near Two Hours together; neither did the Daniſh Horſe and Foot that were on the Left of all, diſturb the Enemy as yet, but kept in Awe ſeveral Bodies of Horſe and Foot that Faced them on the other ſide of the Rivulet: But then perceiving Mackay's Battalions in the Center to drive the Enemy before them, leſt thoſe Bodies that Faced them ſhould fall back to the relief of the Flying Party, they Engaged them very briskly, and were at firſt received with great Reſolution; but the Iriſh being on the Decline, they all Fled out of the Field, their Foot being miſerably Slaughter'd by the Engliſh Horſe and Dragoons, and their Horſe purſued near Three Miles; but the Night coming on, with a thick miſty Rain, prevented the Engliſh from getting between them and a very advantageous Paſs near Longhreah, which gave many of them an opportunity to eſcape: However it was computed, that no leſs than Four Thouſand of the Iriſh were Slain upon the Spot; and of the Engliſh Seven Hundred Killed, and as many Wounded: Which ſtill makes the Victory to be the more conſiderable, ſince the Engliſh Army did not make up above Eighteen Thouſand effective Men; whereas the Iriſh were computed at Twenty Thouſand Foot, and Five Thouſand Horſe and Dragoons. As for the Honour of this great Day, the Renowned General Ginkle had ever the Modeſty to confeſs, that it was principally owing to the Conduct and Bravery of the Marqueſs of Ruvigny, and of the Oxford and French Regiments of Horſe.

The Victory very great.

The Engliſh lay upon their Arms all Night, and then after a few Days of Refreſhment, the General March'd them on to Galloway, the moſt conſiderable Place now left in the Hands of the Iriſh, next to Limerick, and having Poſted his Troops about the Town, he ſent them a Summons to Surrender. The Lord Dillon Governour ſent Anſwer, that Monſieur D' Uſſon who Commanded in Chief, as well as himſelf, and the reſt of the Officers, were reſolved to Defend the Place to the laſt Extremity. But for all this Boaſt, the Engliſh had no ſooner march'd part of their Forces over the River, and taken a Fort the Iriſh were then Building, but a Parly was Beat, and Hoſtages were immediately Exchanged. But the Iriſh demurring upon the manner of Surrender, the General grew Impatient, and ſent once or twice to them to come to a ſpeedy Concluſion. At laſt Lieutenant General Bourke, one of the Iriſh Hoſtages was allow'd to go in, to whom Major General Talmaſh, who ſeem'd rather inclined to lay the Treaty aſide, and take the Town by Storm, ſaid, When you are ready to begin again, give us a Sign by firing a Gun into the Air. But the other Reply'd, they would not fire a Gun from within, till they were Provoked from without. After ſome time, the Articles were Agreed on, and the Town deliver'd into the Hands of the Engliſh on July the 20*th*. The conſequence of which was the Submiſſion of Balderick O Donnel, with a conſiderable number of Men under his Command; and a March of the Engliſh Army towards Limerick; where Tyrconnel Died on Auguſt the 14*th*. as if the ill Condition of his Maſter's Affairs had broke his Heart.

Death of Tyrconnel.

On Auguſt the 25*th*. the Engliſh Army reached Limerick, and that ſame Day made themſelves maſters of Ireton and Cromwell Forts, which were now order'd to be called Mackay and Naſſaw's, becauſe gained by thoſe Commanders; Two Days after Caſtle Connel, and Caſtle Carruck a Gunnel that ſtood upon the Shannon, Three Miles below the Town, were Attack'd, and the Garriſons of both made Priſoners of War. At the ſame time ſome Engliſh Ships came up the River, and Fired among the Iriſh Horſe, that were Encamped near the Banks of it; who were much Surprized, becauſe they had been made to believe that the Engliſh had no Ships there, or elſe that thoſe they had muſt Fly or be Deſtroyed by the French Fleet which they Hourly expected. But though the Siege was vigorouſly carried on, and the Bombs did great Execution upon their Camp, and in their Town, yet on the 17*th*. of September it was warmly Debated in a Council of War, whether they ſhould proſecute the Siege, or March over the River, and Deſtroy all the Enemies Forage in the County of Clare, and then turn the Siege into a Blockade. It was ſo far carried for the latter, that an Engineer was ordered to go with a Detachment towards Kilmalock, and Fortify that Place, But before he got out of the Camp he was countermanded, and a great many Palliſadoes were brought into Mackay's Fort, as if the Army intended to Winter there. On the 19*th*. it was reſolved to paſs the River with a great Party, either to preſs the Siege on that ſide, or at leaſt to Burn the Enemies Forage. On the 22*d*. General Ginkle with indefatigable Courage paſſed the Shannon over a Bridge of Boats with ſtrong Detachments of Horſe and Dragoons, Ten Batallions of Foot, and Fourteen Pieces of Cannon, leaving Prince Wirtembergh, Mackay and Talmaſh to command on this ſide. The Enemy continually Fired upon them all the Morning from ſeveral Batteries, but without any great harm; and in the Afternoon a Party of Colonel Mathews's Dragoons was vigorouſly Attacked by a ſtronger Detachment, till the Engliſh Foot coming up, the Iriſh retreated under their Cannon. Then all the Engliſh Grenadiers, ſuſtained by Four Regiments of Foot, were commanded to Aſſault the Works that covered Thomon Bridge, wherein the Enemy had Poſted above Two Hundred Men The Diſpute was Hot and Obſtinate for a while, and the Attack extreamly hazardous, the Beſieged plying the Aſſailants with their Cannon from the King's Caſtle, and Two or Three more Batteries, as alſo with their ſmall Shot from the Wall; however the Iriſh being furiouſly preſt upon by the Grenadiers, were abandoning their Poſts, when a ſtrong Detachment was ſent from the Town to ſupport them; but the Engliſh advanced with ſuch Courage and Bravery, that they Beat the Enemy and Purſued them over the Bridge into the Town. A French Major who commanded at Thomon Gate, fearing the Engliſh would enter into the Town Pell-mell with the Run-aways, ordered the Draw-bridge to be drawn up, and left the whole Party expoſed to the Fury of their Purſuers, who Killed Six Hundred of them, and made above a Hundred and Sixty Priſoners, beſides a great number were puſhed into the Shannon.

Here

1691. Hereupon the Engliſh lodged themſelves within Ten Yards of the Bridge, notwithſtanding a high Tower that ſtood near the hither end of it; the Iriſh finding all Communication cut off between them and their Horſe, and beginning to deſpair of the French Succours, entertained ſome thoughts of Surrendring; for Colonel Wachop looking out of the Tower, called to Lieutenant General Scravenmore, and deſired leave to come and Speak with him, which was readily granted. After ſome Diſcourſe he deſired the ſame liberty for Sarsfield to Speak with Major General Ruvigny, which was likewiſe allowed him; and accordingly they both Diſcourſed about Offers and Terms of Surrendry, and towards the Evening they return'd into the Town; the next Day Sarsfield and Wachop came out again, and deſired a Ceſſation of Arms for Three Days, till they could ſend to Lieutenant General Sheldon, who lay with about Fifteen Hundred Horſe at Six Mile Bridge, to the end they might be included in the general Capitulation; which being granted, the Priſoners in the Town were thereupon releaſed. On the 26*th*. Sarsfield and Wachop Dined with the General, and it being then agreed that Hoſtages ſhould be Exchanged in order to a farther Treaty, my Lord Cutts, Sir David Collier, Colonel Tiffin and Colonel Piper, were ſent into the Town in the room of the Lords Weſtmeath, Evagh, Timelſtone and Lowth, who remained in the Engliſh Camp; the next Day the Iriſh ſent out their Propoſals, but in ſuch extravagant Terms, that General Ginkle returned Anſwer, That though he was a Stranger to the Laws of England, yet he underſtood that what they inſiſted upon was ſo far contradictory to 'em, that he could not grant any ſuch thing. And thereupon ordered a new Battery to be raiſed; but upon the Requeſt of the Iriſh, he ſent 'em in Twelve Articles, which proved to be the ſum of the Capitulation. On October the 1*ſt*. the Lords Juſtices of Ireland arrived in the Engliſh Camp, and after ſome farther Conferences with the Commiſſioners, on the part of the Gariſon, and their Troops in the County of Clare, the Articles were finally concluded on October the 3*d*. for a Surrendry of the Caſtle of Limerick, and the Caſtles of Roſs and Clare, with all other Places and Caſtles that were ſtill in the hands of the Iriſh. Theſe Articles conſiſted of two parts, Civil and Military: The Firſt being ſigned by the Lords Juſtices and General, but the Latter by the General only: By the Military Articles, All Perſons that were willing to leave the Kingdom, were to have liberty for paſſing into France, or to have Protection if they were willing to remain here; but General Ginkle receiving a Letter on the 5*th*. of October, from a Lieutenant Colonel in the Iriſh Army, wherein he complained of being Confined for refuſing to go into France, he reſented this Violence to that Degree, that he immediately order'd Four Guns to be planted on Bolls Bridge, and ſaid in ſome Paſſion, He would teach the Iriſh to play Tricks with him. Sarsfield thereupon came into the Engliſh Camp, and ſome ſharp Words paſſed between him and the General: Sarsfield ſaid at laſt, It is true Sir, I am now in your Power. Not ſo (replyed General Ginkle,) but you ſhall go in again, and do the worſt you can. However, all things were calm'd at laſt, and the Priſoner enlarged, and as many of the Iriſh as were willing to go, were Shipp'd off for France; where upon their Arrival, they were welcomed with a Comforting Letter from King James, Directed to Lieutenant General Sheldon, then the Officer in Chief with them; the Subſtance of which was, "That having been "Informed of the Neceſſities which forced the "Lords Juſtices and the General Officers of his "Forces to Surrender Limerick, and the other "Places that remained to him in his Kingdom "of Ireland; he would not defer to let him and "the reſt of the Officers know, that he was exceedingly ſatisfied with his and their Conduct, "and with the Valour of the Soldiers, but moſt "particularly with their Reſolution of coming "to Serve where he himſelf was in Perſon; aſſuring them that he ſhould never forget this "Act of Loyalty, nor fail when in a Capacity "to give them above others particular Marks of "his Favour. In the mean time he charged Sheldon to Inform 'em that they were to ſerve under his Majeſty's Command, and by his Commiſſions, and that his Brother the King of France had already given Orders to Cloath them, and furniſh them with all Neceſſaries, and to give them Quarters of Refreſhment.

Articles of Surrendry.

K. James's Letter.

Thus ended the Iriſh War with the Surrendry of Limerick, to the immortal Honour of General Ginkle, and with ſo much the more Glory to the Engliſh, in that the Iriſh were ſo powerfully ſupported by the King of France, who had ſent out another Fleet of Men of War, and Store-Ships, for the Relief of Limerick, who happen'd to arrive in Dingle Bay, but a Day or Two after the Articles were Sign'd. The News of the Surrender of Limerick was carried over to King William at the Hague, by Mr. Henry Furnace, and His Majeſty beſtowed the Honour of Knighthood upon the welcome Meſſenger.

End of the War in Ireland.

There was nothing extraordinary done this Year at Sea, for the Fleets being now of almoſt equal Strength on both ſides, the French as cautiouſly avoided an Engagement, as they fought it the Year before. Their chief Aim was to intercept our Turkey Fleet, which was exceeding Rich: And to that end they hover'd a long time about the Iriſh Coaſt; but through a particular Providence, they had but ſome few Days left the Offing of Kingſale before the Smyrna Fleet on July the 3*d*. came all ſafe into that Harbour, under a Convoy of Fourteen Men of War, Commanded by Captain Aylmer, having been held back Seven Weeks by contrary Winds, in their Paſſage from Cadiz. The Engliſh Grand Fleet all this while kept another Courſe, not for want of Zeal or Fidelity in the Commander in Chief, but of Intelligence; For as ſoon as the Brave Admiral Ruſſel was inform'd that they were got into Kingſale, he Steer'd thither from Cape Clear, and afterwards took all imaginable Care for their being ſafely Convoyed into their reſpective Ports, and then ſtood over to Uſhant, in queſt of the Enemy, who, he was inform'd were return'd that way to their own Coaſts. Being come within ſome Leagues of Breſt, he underſtood they lay at Belle-Iſle, ſecured in ſuch a manner, that is was impoſſible to Attack them; whereupon he return'd towards the Engliſh Shore, but met with ſuch a violent Storm, that the Coronation, and One or Two more Ships of leſs Conſideration were loſt; and the Admiral himſelf had much a-do to get the reſt of the Fleet ſafe into Plymouth.

Affairs at Sea.

On Thurſday October 22. the Parliament met at Weſtminſter; and His Majeſty made this Speech to Both Houſes.

Parliament meet.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I Have appointed this Meeting of the Parliament as ſoon as ever the Affairs abroad "would admit of My Return into England, that "you might have the more time to Conſider of "the Beſt and moſt Effectual Ways and Means "for the carrying on of the War againſt France "this next Year.

King's Speech.

"I am

1691. "I am willing to hope, That the good Succeſs with which it hath pleaſed God to Bleſs My Arms in Ireland this Summer, will not only be a great Encouragement to you to proceed the more Cheerfully in this Work, but will be look'd upon by you as an Earneſt of future Succeſſes, which your timely Aſſiſtance to Me, may, by God's Bleſſing, procure to Us all. And as I do not doubt, but you will take Care to Pay the Arrears of that Army, which hath been ſo Deſerving and ſo Proſperous in the Reducement of Ireland to a Peaceable Condition; So I do Aſſure you, there ſhall no Care be wanting on My Part to keep that Kingdom, as far as it is poſſible, from being burthenſome to England for the future.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I do not doubt but you are all ſenſible, That it will be neceſſary, We ſhould have a ſtrong Fleet next Year; and as early at Sea as we had this Summer. And I muſt tell you, That the great Power of France will as neceſſarily require, that We ſhould maintain a very Conſiderable Army ready upon all Occaſions, not only to Defend Our Selves from any Inſult, but alſo to Annoy the Common Enemy, where it may be moſt Senſible to them: And I do not ſee how it is poſſible to do this with leſs than Sixty five thouſand Men.

"I ſhall only add, That by the Vigor and Diſpatch of your Counſels and Aſſiſtance to Me in this Seſſion of Parliament, you have now an Opportunity in your hands, which, if neglected, you can never reaſonably hope to ſee again, not only to Eſtabliſh the future Quiet and Proſperity of theſe Kingdoms, but the Peace and Security of all Europe.

Both Houſes Congratulated His Majeſty upon His Safe and Happy Return, after ſo many Hazards to which He had expoſed His Royal Perſon; And upon the Succeſs of His Majeſty's Arms in Reducing of Ireland; And did aſſure His Majeſty, that they would aſſiſt Him to the utmoſt of their Power, in carrying on a Vigorous War againſt France, in order to procure an honourable and laſting Peace to His own Dominions, and to ſecure His Neighbours from the Injuries and Invaſions of the Common Oppreſſor; hoping with His Majeſty, That the Victories of this laſt Summer were happy Preſages of the Proſperity of His future Enterprizes." Addreſſes were alſo Preſented to the Queen, to acknowledge Her Prudent Care in the Adminiſtration of the Government during His Majeſty's Abſence. And on the ſame day the Parliament met, a Proclamation was Publiſhed for a General and Publick Thangſgiving, to be obſerved on November 26. Foraſmuch as it had pleas'd Almighty God, of his Infinite Goodneſs, to Protect His Majeſty from great and manifold Dangers in His late Expedition beyond the Seas, and bring Him back in Safety; and to Preſerve Their Majeſties and Their Government againſt all the wicked Machinations and Deſigns of open and ſecret Enemies; and by a wonderful Succeſs of Their Arms to reduce the Kingdom of Ireland entirely to Their Obedience, whereby Their Majeſties are now Eſtabliſhed in the full Poſſeſſion of Their Three Kingdoms, and in a Condition, with the Bleſſing of God, to ſettle the ſame in a firm and laſting State of Safety, Honour, and Proſperity.

On Octob. 28. The Commons receiv'd and read a Bill, For Abrogating the former Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance in Ireland, and inſtead thereof to Eſtabliſh the Oaths of Fidelity and Allegiance taken here to Their Majeſties. At the Second reading of this Bill, the Statute of 2. Eliz. made in Ireland, appointing the former Oaths to be taken, was alſo Read; after which the Bill was Committed, and upon the Third Reading Paſſed. When it was ſent up to the Lords for their Concurrence, their Lordſhips made ſome Amendments to it, which occaſion'd two Conferences between Both Houſes. But the Reſult of the laſt, was Dec. 10. That the Lords gave their Concurrence without inſiſting on their Alterations. 1691.

A Motion for a Supply to His Majeſty had been made on Octob. 30. but was not debated till Nov. 6. when it was unanimouſly Reſolved, That a Supply be Granted to Their Majeſties for the carrying on a vigorous War againſt France; and at the ſame time it was Ordered, That His Majeſty be deſired to cauſe the State of the War for the next Year's Service, in relation to both the Fleet and Land Forces, to be laid before the Houſe. Votes for a Supply

On Nov. 9. An Eſtimate of the Charge of Their Majeſties Navy for the Year 1692, was delivered in by the Commiſſioners of the Admiralty; which having been Examin'd, the Commons Voted the Sum of Fifteen hundred ſeventy five thouſand eight hundred and ninety eight Pounds for thoſe Uſes, including the Ordnance, and the Charge of Building One Dry Dock and Two Wet Docks at Portſmouth. And the Lord Ranelaugh, purſuant to His Majeſty's Directions, having laid before the Commons a Liſt of the Land Forces, It was Reſolved Nov. 19. That an Army of Sixty four thouſand nine hundred twenty four Men, without including Officers, was neceſſary for the Service of the Year 1692, in order to the ſecuring the Peace of the Kingdom, and the carrying on a vigorous War againſt France. Much time was ſpent in ſtating and examining the Eſtimate of the Charge of the Army, General Officers, Hoſpitals, Train of Artillery, and Their Tranſport Ships; as alſo in conſidering how far the Kingdom of Ireland could contribute toward the Charge of the Forces there; But it was at laſt Reſolved Jan. 4. That a Sum not exceeding 1935787 Pounds, together with the Sum of 165000 Pounds, to be anſwer'd out of the Revenue of Ireland, be the Sum for the Land Forces, for the Service of the Year 1692. So that the Money Granted this Year for the Fleet and Army, amounted to Three millions four hundred eleven thouſand ſix hundred ſeventy ſeven Pounds. For the Admiralty. For an Army.

Upon Ways and Means to raiſe theſe great Supplies, It was Reſolved: Firſt, "That the "Duties of Exciſe for Beer, Ale, and other "Liquors, which were payable for a Year from the "17. of Nov. laſt, be continued for another Year. "Secondly, That the Sum of One million ſix "hundred fifty one thouſand ſeven hundred and "two Pounds be Granted upon Land. And "Thirdly, That the Salaries, Fees, and Perquiſites of all Offices under the Crown ſhould be "to the Uſe of the War, except Five hundred "Pounds to be allowed to ſuch reſpective Offi-"cers, and except the Salaries of the Speaker "of the Houſe of Commons, the Lords Com-"miſſioners of the Great Seal, the Judges, Fo-"reign Miniſters, and the Pay of Commiſſion "Officers ſerving in the Fleet and Army." But many other incident Affairs obſtructed the Buſineſs of the Supply, eſpecially the Caſe of the Eaſt-India Company. Ways and Means.

For on October 28. ſeveral Merchants, their Majeſties Subjects, preſented a Petition to the Commons againſt the Eaſt-India Company; and at the ſame time the Eaſt-India Company put up another Petition in behalf of themſelves; the Conſideration of both which was referr'd to a Committee of the whole Houſe. About a Fortnight after, the Heads of the Complaints againſt the Eaſt-India Company, were deliver'd to their Affair of the Eaſt-India Company.

Gover-

1691. Governor; to which they having put in their Answer, the same was communicated to the Petitioners, and the East-India Company order'd to make their Defence on the 20*th* of November. Not only the appointed Day, but several others were spent in examining the Accompts which Sir Joseph Herne, the Governor of the East-India Company, deliver'd in as a State of their Stock and Debts at Home and Abroad; and in considering several other Petitions relating to the East-India Trade; till at last the Commons agreed to the following Resolutions: "1. That a Sum not "less than 1500000 l. and not exceeding Two "Millions, was a Fund necessary to carry on the "East-India Trade in a Joint-Stock. 2. That no "one Person should have any Share in a Joint-"Stock for the East-India Trade, exceeding "5000 l. either in his own Name, or any other "in Trust for him. 3. That no one Person "should have above one Vote in the said Com-"pany; and that each Person who had 5000 l. "Stock therein, should have one Vote. 4. That "the Company to Trade to the East-Indies, should "be oblig'd to Export every Year in their Trade, "Goods being the Growth and Manufacture of "this Nation, to the Value of 200000 l. at least. "5. That no private Contracts should be made, "but all Goods Sold at publick Sales by Inch of "Candle, except Salt-Petre, for the use of the "Crown. 6. That the East-India Company be "oblig'd to Sell to the King yearly, Salt-Petre "refin'd (the Refraction not exceeding Four or "Five per Cent. out of 112.) Five hundred Tuns "at the rate of 30 l. per Tun. 7. That no Lot "should be put at any Sales in the East-India "Company at one time, exceeding 500 l. 8. That "no Person should be Governor or Deputy Go-"vernor of the Company to Trade to the East-"Indies, who had less Share in the Stock than "2000 l. or Committee-Man that had less than "1000 l. 9. That the Election of Governor, "Deputy Governor, and Committee for the "Company to Trade to the East-Indies, be made "every Year. 10. That all Dividends be made "in Money. 11. That no Dividends be made "without leaving a sufficient Fund to pay all "Debts, and carry on the Trade. 12. That a "Valuation of the Stock be made every Five "Years by the Accomptant of the Company "upon Oath, to be seen by all such as are con-"cerned therein. 13. That no Ships, either "with Permission or without, for the future, be "allowed to go to the East-Indies, except only "such as should be of a Company, or be Esta-"blish'd by Act of Parliament. 14. That no By-"Laws should be binding to the Company, but "such as were approv'd by a General Court of "Adventurers, and were not repugnant to the "Laws of the Land. 15. And Lastly, That the "Joint Stock of a Company to Trade to the "East-Indies, be for Twenty one Years and no "longer." The next day the Three following Resolutions were added to the rest, viz. "That all "Persons now having above the Sum of 5000 l. in "the Stock of the present East-India Company, in "their own or other Persons Names, be oblig'd "to sell so much thereof as should exceed the "said Sum of 5000 l. at the Rate of 100. l. for "every Hundred: That the Members of the "Committee of the East-India Company, be ob-"liged to give Security, to be approv'd of by the "House, that the Stock and Estate they now had "should be made good 749000 l. all Debts paid; "And Lastly, That (Security being first given) "an Humble Address be Presented to His Ma-"jesty, to Incorporate the present East-India "Company by Charter, according to the Regu-"lations agreed upon by the House, that the "same might pass into an Act." On the 23d of December, Sir Thomas Cook, Sir William Langhorne, Sir Thomas Rawlinson, and others, the Committee of the East-India Company, deliver'd in Proposals concerning Security to be given; which being disapproved, the said Committee was order'd to produce the Persons they proposed to be Security; and an Account of the Sums for which each Person would be Security: Which being done accordingly, the Commons, after a long Examination of the whole Matter, approv'd of the Security propos'd; and appointed a Committee to prepare and bring in a Bill to establish an East-India Company, according to the Regulations and Resolutions agreed upon by the House. 1691.

Regulations in Paymen of the Army.

On the 3d of November, the Commons having consider'd the State of the Nation, Resolv'd, That the paying the Army any other ways, than by Musters of effective Men, was a great wasting of Their Majesties Treasure: And a Bill was Order'd to be brought in for Paying of the Army accordingly; and for better Paying of Quarters; And likewise for preventing of false Musters, and Punishing Mutineers and Deserters. At the same time the Commons Resolv'd, That the Miscarriages of the Fleet should be enquir'd into by a Committee of the whole House. A Week after, Admiral Russel presented to the House the Instructions given by the Commissioners for Executing the Office of Lord High Admiral of England; a List of the Ships; and an Extract of several Letters and Orders, touching the Proceedings of the said Fleet, during the last Summer's Expedition: All which were compar'd and examined with the Copies of the Several Orders that had been issued by the Commissioners of the Admiralty to the said Admiral; and a List of the Ships that had been Lost or Damag'd since the Year 1688. Deliver'd to the House of Commons by the Lord Falkland, from the Commissioners of the Admiralty.

And of Miscarriages in the Fleet.

Suspicion of Intercepted Papers.

On the 12th of Nov. The Commons were acquainted, That Mr. Bridges, a Member of their House, could give an Account of an Information given him by a Captain in Their Majesties Fleet, That Sir Ralph Delaval had lately taken a French Boat going for Ireland, with Papers of dangerous Consequence to the Government. Whereupon Mr. Bridges was Order'd to name the Person: And he having nam'd the Lord Danby; a Conference was desired with the Lords upon Matters relating to the Safety of the Kingdom; but upon a full and tedious Examination of the whole Affair, it was found that there was not a Copy of any Letter from the Earl of Nottingham, to Sir Ralph Delaval, in the Packet taken on Board the said French Vessel; but only a Letter written by his Lordship to Sir Ralph, for sending up the Papers by him Intercepted. Upon this Occasion the Commons took into their Consideration the Confessions and Examinations of the Lord Preston and Mr. Crone; which according to their Desire, the King had order'd to be laid before the House.

Dr. Wellwood question'd by the Commons.

About this time Dr. Wellwood, a Doctor of Physick, to signalize his Affection to the Government, employ'd his Eloquent Pen in detecting and exposing the sinister Designs of Their Majesties Enemies, in a Weekly Paper, Entituled, Mercurius Reformatus, or the New-Observator; but his Zeal having carried him so far as to reflect on the Proceedings of the Commons, That House, ever Jealous of their Privileges, Order'd both the Author and Printer of the said Paper to be sent for in Custody of their Serjeant at Arms, from whence they were at last discharg'd, after having been Reprimanded for their Offence. However Dr. Wellwood was fully recompenced for the everal ills re-cted.

Several other Affairs amuſed the Houſe of Commons to little purpoſe; as a Bill for Regulating Abuſes in Elections and Returns to Parliament; which was rejected after a Third Reading; A Bill for the better improvement of the Woollen Manufacture of this Kingdom; which was alſo thrown out before a Second Reading; A Bill for the better Repair of the Harbour of Dover; which was likewiſe rejected; A Bill to Regulate the Hackney Coaches; another to Diſcourage the Exportation of Bullion, and Encourage the Importation of it, and converting the ſame into the Coin of this Realm; And a Third, to Encourage Privateers; wherein no Progreſs was made.

On Thurſday December 24. His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave His Royal Aſſent to, 1. An Act for Granting to Their Majeſties certain Impoſitions upon Beer, Ale and other Liquors for One Year. 2. An Act for Abrogating the Oath of Supremacy in Ireland, and appointing other Oaths. 3. An Act for Preſerving Two Ships Lading of Bay-Salt taken as Prize, for the Benefit of their Majeſties Navy. 4. An Act for the better aſcertaining the Tythes of Hemp and Flax; and to ſeveral Private Acts. On the Thurſday following, being the laſt day of the Year, His Majeſty came again to the Houſe of Peers, and gave his Royal Aſſent to the Act for Granting an Aid to their Majeſties, of the Sum of Sixteen Hundred Fifty One Thouſand Seven Hundred Fifty Two Pounds Eighteen Shillings, towards the carrying on a Vigorous War againſt France: As alſo to one private Act; after which His Majeſty concluded with this Gracious Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I Muſt not loſe this Occaſion of returning "you my hearty Thanks, for the great "Proofs you continue to give me of your Zeal "and Reſolution, to Support and Aſſiſt me in "the Vigorous Proſecution of the War againſt "France next Year; And I do aſſure you it ſhall "be my greateſt Care, that the Aſſiſtances you "give Me, may be ſo applied, as to render "them moſt Effectual for the Aids you deſign "them. But I muſt take notice to you at the "ſame time, with ſome Trouble, that the New "Year is already come, while our Preparations "for it are not only more backwards, but thoſe "of our Enemies, as we have reaſon to think, "in greater forwardneſs than they were the laſt "Year: I find my ſelf therefore neceſſitated "from this Conſideration, moſt earneſtly to re-"commend to you Gentlemen of the Houſe of "Commons, the haſtning ſuch further Supplies "as you deſign to enable me with, for the Pro-"ſecution of the War.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"The Seaſon being ſo far advanced, this pre-"ſent Seſſions cannot admit of a much longer "Continuance, and therefore I muſt recom-"mend to you the Diſpatch of all ſuch other "Bills alſo, as you ſhall Judge neceſſary for the "Publick Good.

ill for gula-ig Try-s in Ca-s of ligh rtaſon.

Both Houſes were now engag'd in a warm Diſpute, rais'd by the Bill for Regulating Tryals in Caſes of High Treaſon. This Bill having been laid aſide by the Lords in the preceding Seſſion, was now again brought in and paſſed by the Commons; and on Nov. 18. ſent up to the Lords for their Concurrence. The Lords, beſides other Amendments, added this Clauſe to it. That upon the Tryal of any Peer or Peereſs, for any Treaſon or Miſpriſion of Treaſon; All the Peers who have a Right to Sit and Vote in Parliament, ſhould be duly Summoned Twenty Days at leaſt before every ſuch Tryal, to appear at every ſuch Tryal: And that every Peer ſo ſummoned, and appearing on ſuch Tryals, ſhould Vote in the Tryal of ſuch Peer or Peereſs ſo to be tryed; he and they firſt taking the Oaths mentioned in an Act of Parliament made in the Firſt Year of King William and Queen Mary; Entitled, An Act for Abrogating the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance, and Appointing other Oaths; and Subſcribing and audibly Repeating the Declaration mentioned in an Act of Parliament made in the Thirtieth Year of King Charles the Second; Entituled, An Act for the more effectual Preſerving the King's Perſon and Government, by Diſabling Papiſts from Sitting in either Houſe of Parliament. 1691.

Conference and Debates on this Matter.

This Clauſe being diſagreed to by the Commons, and at Two ſeveral Conferences inſiſted on by the Lords; a Free Conference was manag'd between Both Houſes on Jan. 5. wherein Mr. Charles Mountague, the Chief of thoſe who ſpoke for the Commons, argued, "That this "Bill was begun by the Commons, for the equal "Advantage of ſuch Lords and Commons who "had the Misfortune to be accus'd of Treaſon, "or Miſpriſion of Treaſon. That when it was "firſt returned from their Lordſhips with very "many Amendments, the Commons were ſo "willing to comply with the deſire of their "Lordſhips, and to give the Bill a ſpeedy Paſ-"ſage, that they Agreed to all thoſe Amend-"ments, except Two; That ſome of them were "of a very nice Nature, and related to things "of which the Commons have ever been moſt "tender. That at the Firſt Conference the "Commons gave their Lordſhips the Reaſons "that induced them to make ſuch Amendments; "which did ſo far ſatisfie their Lordſhips, that "they did agree to the Firſt Amendment pro-"poſed by the Lower-Houſe; though they did "inſiſt upon this other, for which they delivered "their Reaſons at the Second Conference. That "thoſe Reaſons had been Solemnly and Delibe-"rately conſidered by the Commons, and that "they had not found them ſufficient to convince "them; ſo that they did ſtill diſagree with the "Lords in the foremention'd Clauſe. That it "was very unfortunate that no Bill for the Re-"lief of the Subject in theſe Caſes had been "tendred for many Years laſt paſt, but either "this Clauſe, or ſomething of the like Nature "had unhappily clogged it, and been the occa-"ſion of loſing it; and as this was never "thought reaſonable to be admitted formerly, "ſo neither could the Commons conſent to ſo "great an alteration of our Conſtitution as this "would introduce; That ſuch an Alteration was "far beyond the Intent and Deſign which the "Commonshad in preparing this Bill; That they "were deſirous that all Men ſhould have a fair "and equal way of making their Defence; They "wiſhed, that the Guiltleſs ſhould by all neceſ-"ſary Proviſions be Protected, and allowed all "Juſt Means of making their Innocence mani-"feſt; but they did not deſign to ſubvert the "Eſſence and Conſtitutions of the Courts, nor "intend to diſable the Crown in one of its moſt "neceſſary Prerogatives, or to place a Judica-"ture in other hands, than thoſe to whom the "Laws of England, and the Cuſtom of the "Realm had committed it. That the Clauſe "now in Diſpute ſtruck at no leſs than this, "and in Conſequence at the Alteration of the "Government of England. That the Govern-"ment of England is Monarchical, and the Mo-"narch has the Power of Conſtituting Courts "and Offices for Adminiſtration of Juſtice, tho' "they are to proceed according to the known "Rules and Limitations of Law. That the "Judges 1691. " Judges are Conſtituted by his Commiſſion, the " Sheriffs are of his Nomination and Appoint- " ment, and theſe are to return the Pannel of " Jurors, who are to paſs on the Lives of the " Commoners; and that in like manner 'tis the " Prerogative of the Crown, to conſtitute a " Lord High Steward, who by his Serjeant at " Arms does Summon a competent Number of " Peers to be Triers of their Lordſhips. But " that this Clauſe took away theſe Powers from " the High Steward, and therefore it took away " ſo much from the Regal Authority; and it " would amount to no leſs, than to render the " Subjects Independent on the Crown, in the " Pleas of the Crown; wherein above all other " things, the Life, Peace, and Safety of the " Government is concern'd. That the Com- " mons had ſtill the ſame Opinion of the Ho- " nour and Integrity of the Lords, which they " had received from the Experience of paſt " Times; but that their deſign in paſſing that Bill, " was to prevent thoſe Abuſes in Trials for " Treaſon in Inferior Courts for the future; by " means of which, during the Violence of the " late Reign, they had obſerved many had loſt " their Lives. That the things to which the Bill " extended, were of ſuch a Nature, that ex- " cept only in one Inſtance, (that is, the " time of the delivery of the Copy of the " Pannel; for it was agreed even in my Lord " Ruſſel's Caſe, That the Subject hath a Right to " have a Copy of the Pannel) the Lords had an " equal Benefit with the Commons. That the " Commons did not obſerve, that the Clauſe " ſent down by the Lords does relate to the like " Grounds of Complaint; for no Inſtance could " be given of any Peer who ſuffered during the " late Reign, from whence a juſt Cauſe of Ob- " jection might ariſe to the preſent method of " Trying Peers; That the only Two Perſons " Proſecuted, came off, though purſued with " great Violence: The one, becauſe the Grand " Jury could not be prevailed upon to find the " Bill; the other was Acquitted upon his Trial, " by the Juſtice of his Peers. That by all the " Circumſtances of the Trial of the Lord De- " lamere it is manifeſt, that if there was any un- " fairneſs in the method of Trial, it then would " have appear'd; that the Violence of thoſe " times was ſuch, that the Commons were not " protected by that Innocency which has ſince " been declared in Parliament; yet then the Lord " Delamere was Acquitted by the Juſtice and Ho- " nour of his Peers; and it might ſeem ſtrange " to Future Ages, that the Commons ſhould be " contented, that the method of Trials ſhould " be continued, which was not ſufficient to pro- " tect their Innocency; and their Lordſhips alter " that which had proved a Bulwark to their " Lives. That the Commons alſo thought the " Clauſe to be of a different Nature from the " Bill, becauſe the Bill did not make any alteration " in the Court, or in the Nature of the Trial, " which the Commons apprehended was done " by the Clauſe; for thereby the Court is no " longer conſtituted by the Precept of the Lord " High Steward, who receives his Commiſſion " from the Crown, but the whole Order of " Peers have a Right to make up the Court, and " all the Friends, Relations, and Accomplices " of the Perſon are to be his Triers. That there " was another great Alteration in the Conſtitu- " tion of the Court, as the Clauſe was Penn'd; " for this Method, preſcribed by the Clauſe, " was for the Trial of every Peer, and accord- " ing to that Method every Peer who had a " Right to Sit and Vote in Parliament, was to " be Summon'd, and might Appear and Vote.

" Now it was agreed by the moſt learned Au- 1691.
" thors, that the Lords Spiritual are Peers; and
" whoſoever would go about to defend the con" trary Opinion, would find it very difficult to
" anſwer the ſeveral Records of Parliaments,
" and other Authorities, where this Point is aſ-
" ſerted; particularly the well known Claim in " Parliament of Archbiſhop Stafford, in the Reign
" of Edward III. and the famous Proteſtation in
" the Second of Richard II. (when the Biſhops
" thought fit to abſent themſelves from Parlia-
" ment, becauſe matters of Blood were to be
" agitated there) wherein their Right of Peerage
" is directly aſſerted; and this Proteſtation be" ing Enrolled at the deſire of the King, and
" with the Conſent of the Lords and Com-
" mons, ſeemed to be of the Nature of an Act
" of Parliament. That if the Law Books might " come in for Authorities in ſuch a Point,
" there are Caſes, where the Pleas of the Bi-
" ſhops, as Peers, have been judicially allow'd;
" ſo that this Clauſe did directly let in the Lords
" Spiritual to Try and be Tried, as other Peers,
" who are Noble by Deſcent; not that the " Commons were diſſatisfied with this, if this
" were the only matter; for the Lords Spiritual
" in all probability, by their Learning and In" tegrity would greatly aſſiſt at the Trial of " Peers; and the Commons were well enough
" diſpoſed to let in theſe Noble Prelates to any
" Privileges in Point of Trial, which ſhould be
" propoſed by the Houſe of Peers: But this
" was urged to make good the Poſition laid
" down before, that by this Clauſe the Conſti-
" tution of the Court was quite altered; it ha-
" ving been taken for Law, that the Lords Spi-
" ritual are to be Tried as other Peers, or to be
" preſent and Vote at the Trial of any other
" Peer, at leaſt out of Parliament; for as to " their Right in Parliament, how far they are
" reſtrained by the Canons Agitare Judicium,
" how far theſe Canons have been receiv'd in Eng-
" land, and what the uſage of Parliament hath
" been, was not the preſent buſineſs That had
" this Bill come down from the Lords firſt, and
" the Commons had added a Clauſe, That no
" Commoner ſhould be Tried for Treaſon, but before
" all the Twelve Judges, and a Jury of Twenty Four
" Perſons, and to have taken away all Challenges for
" Conſanguinity, which if it was conſidered, was
" ſomewhat of the Nature of the Lords Clauſe,
" though it did not go ſo far; if the Lords had " thought fit to have uſed the ſame Reaſon for
" diſagreeing to ſuch a Clauſe, as the Commons
" had done in the preſent Caſe, that it was different
" from the deſign of the Bill, it would have ſatisfied
" the Commons. And that the ſame Reaſons, which
" the Commons received from the Lords at the
" laſt Conference, if they had been delivered
" by the Commons, would not have been con-
" vincing to their Lordſhips.

" The Commons likewiſe obſerved, that the " Lords in the Clauſe, or in their Reaſons, had
" not ſtated any Cauſe of Objection to the pre-
" ſent Method of their Trials, and therefore the " Commons wondred, that the Lords (as they ex-
" preſt themſelves in their Reaſons) ſhould con-
" ceive that they were diſtinguiſhed, ſo as to be more
" expoſed in their Trials, than the meaneſt Subject;
" ſince the Commons did not find, but that they
" enjoy'd this great and high Privilege (upon
" which ſo great a Value has been juſtly put) as
" fully, as ever any of their Noble Anceſtors did.
" That 'tis by this Privilege the Body of the " Peers has been preſerved ſo long; That if " any Lord at any time, ſhould be diſpoſed to
" expoſe himſelf in defence of the common Li-
" berties of the People, the Commons are ſecu-

" rity

1691. " rity to him from being oppreſt by falſe Accu-
" ſations; Twelve of them muſt agree to find
" a Bill before he can be Indicted, and that Bill
" cannot be found, but upon the Oaths of Two
" Credible Witneſſes. That the Commons
" look'd upon the Method of Trials, which the " Lords would alter, to have been as Ancient as
" the Conſtitution of the Government. That
" it appears in the Year Books to have been pra-
" ctiſed in the Firſt Year of Henry IV. and to " have been well known at that time. That
" indeed it could not be ſuppoſed to have been
" an Innovation then; the Lords, who had juſt
" before depoſed King Richard II. being too
" great to ſuffer ſuch an Innovation, and Henry
" IV*th*'s Title not ſufficiently Eſtabliſhed to at" tempt it. That the reaſon, why no older In-
" ſtances of Proceedings before the Lord High
" Steward are to be found, is this, that this very
" Henry IV. when Duke of Lancaſter, was the laſt
" High Steward who ever had any fix'd Intereſt in
" the Office; ſo that the Office being ſo long ſince
" ceaſed, all the Records are loſt, and the very Nature
" and Power of the Office, except in this Inſtance of " Trying Peers, and determining Claims at Coro-
" nations, is likewiſe loſt: But ſince that time the " High Steward being only Pro hac vice, the " Proceedings are commonly tranſmitted into
" other Courts, and ſo come to be found.

" The Commons urg'd, that if there be any " Objection to that Method of Trying of Peers,
" it muſt be founded on a ſuppoſition of Partia-
" lity and Unfairneſs of Conſtituting a High
" Steward, or in the High Steward himſelf, and
" the Peers ſummoned by him, and that the " Commons were unwilling to enter into ſuch
" kind of Suppoſals. As to the Partial conſti-
" tuting of the High-Steward, if that might be
" ſuppoſed, it was an Objection to the Conſti-
" tution which entruſts the Crown with the Ad-
" miniſtration of Juſtice. That that Suppoſal
" might as well extend to the Conſtitution of
" the Judges and Sheriffs, and every other part " of the Adminiſtration. And if upon ſuch a
" Suppoſal or Diſtruſt, the Remedy muſt be to
" take away that part of the Adminiſtration out
" of the Crown (as was done in this Clauſe)
" the Reaſon muſt carry the Thing ſo far, that
" the Nature of the Government would be alter'd.
" As to the Partiality of the Lord High Steward
" and the Peers; the Commons were unwilling
" to ſuppoſe that it is poſſible, That Twelve
" Peers ſhould be ever found (for that Number
" muſt agree, or the Perſon Accuſed is ſafe)
" who can ſo far forget their Honour, and the " Noble Order they are of, as for Revenge or
" Intereſt to Sacrifice an Innocent Perſon. But " if the Lords would ſuppoſe that ſuch a Num-
" ber of Peers might be capable of being enga" ged in ſo ill and ſo diſhonourable Things, then
" the Commons thought themſelves excus'd, if
" they ſuppos'd, that other Paſſions and Motives
" might alſo prevail on the Peers; ſuch as Pity
" in Friends, Partiality in Relations, and the Con-
" ſideration of their Safety, in the Caſe of Accom-
" plices. The Commons further Alledg'd, That
" moſt Men, and eſpecially Engliſh-Men, enter
" unwillingly into Matters of Blood: That the
" moſt indifferent Peers would be moſt likely to
" abſent themſelves, either from a Conſideration
" of diſſatisfying the Crown on the one hand,
" or drawing on themſelves the miſchiefs of a
" Breach with the Family of the Perſon accuſed
" on the other; (for it is to be obſerved, that a
" Reſtitution of the Family follows generally in a
" ſhort time); or at leaſt the Love of Security,
" and Care of not engaging too far (for thoſe
" Tryals for the moſt part happen in unquiet and
" troubleſome Times) would keep indifferent
" Men away. But the Care for a Friend muſt 1691.
" not fail to bring Friends to the Trials; The " Concern to preſerve the Family from that
" Stain, would bring Relations; and if there be " any Accomplices, they muſt be ready for their " own ſakes to acquit the Accuſed: And proba-
" bly their Number muſt be conſiderable in theſe
" Caſes; for it is not to be imagin'd, that a Lord
" can enter into thoſe baſe and deteſtable Acti-
" ons, which may be performed by ſingle Per-
" ſons; ſuch as Poyſoning or Aſſaſſinating the " Prince. That the Treaſons which it can be
" imagin'd that Lords might be engag'd in, muſt
" be ſuch as ariſe from Faction in the State,
" which many muſt be engag'd in; and if ſome
" Accident diſcovers ſufficient Matter for a
" Charge againſt one of the Parties, the reſt,
" who are conceal'd ſtill, would have as good
" Right to try their Confederate, as any indiffe-
" rent Lord: And no doubt but it is their Inte-
" reſt to Acquit him; and how far at ſome times
" this alone might go towards turning the Scale
" of Juſtice, might deſerve to be conſider'd; eſ-
" pecially in times which might happen hereafter,
" becauſe they happen'd heretofore, when there
" might be ſeveral Titles ſet up to the Crown,
" and great Parties form'd. That this was a Law
" that was to have a perpetual continuance. And
" that the ſame Loyalty, Wiſdom and Zeal,
" which appear'd now in their Lordſhips, ſhould
" be deriv'd down to all their Poſterity, was a
" thing rather to be wiſhed than depended upon;
" If therefore the Clauſe had a tendency towards
" letting in an Impunity for Treaſon, the Com-
" mons look'd upon themſelves as juſtifi'd in diſ-
" agreeing to it: For they thought it obvious to
" every one, of what Conſequence it would be " to the Conſtitution, if ſuch a Body as the " Peers, who have already ſuch Privileges of all
" ſorts, ſhould have Impunity of Treaſon added,
" and what that muſt naturally end in.

" The Commons Agreed with the Lords, That
" a good Correſpondence between the Two
" Houſes was neceſſary for the Safety, Honour,
" and Greatneſs of the Nation; and could never
" think, that it was to be interrupted by their re-
" fuſing any thing, which might endanger the " Conſtitution; Aſſuring them, The Commons
" would never fail in improving all true Intereſt
" of the Lords; but they perſwaded themſelves,
" that the Lords would be of Opinion, That to
" introduce any thing which tended to an Im-
" punity for Treaſon, was neither the true Intereſt
" of the Crown, the Lords, nor the Commons.

" The Managers for the Lords who ſpake at
" the Conference, were the Duke of Bolton, the Argu-
" Marqueſs of Halifax, the Earls of Pembroke, Ro- ments of
" cheſter, Mulgrave, Nottingham, Monmouth, and the Lords.
" Stamford; and the Subſtance of what they Al-
" ledg'd, was, That the Lords were ſorry to be
" of any Opinion different from the Commons,
" eſpecially in a Clauſe of ſo great Importance,
" which did concern not only their Well-being,
" but their Being. That they had not differ'd
" from the Commons in any thing propounded
" for their Security; and hop'd the Commons
" would have the ſame Conſideration for theirs.
" That nothing was ſo proper for a Parliament,
" as to provide Defences for Innocency; that in
" ill times, Neceſſity; in good, Prudence, puts them
" upon it; and tho' theſe were good times, in
" reſpect of the preſent Government, yet they " might ſay, they were Unquiet and Unſafe; and
" ſince none but a good Prince would ever paſs
" ſuch Laws as theſe are, this was the moſt pro-
" per time to provide for the Subjects; for a good
" King would not only be willing to protect them
" while he lives, but to provide for their Securi-
" ty after his Death. That this concerned not 1691. "only themſelves, and therefore they would "ſpeak the more freely; That 'tis too narrow a "Conſideration for a Parliament to ſeek only "their preſent Ends; that their Anceſtors had "farther Thoughts, and the Lords did not doubt "but the Commons would have ſo too. That "there can be no good done in times of Trouble "and Invaſion of Right, but by Agreement of "Both Houſes; That there might come a Prince "that might endeavour to invade the Liberties of "the People, and then the Commons would be "glad to have the Concurrence of the Lords: "And they deſired the Commons would conſider "in ſuch a Caſe, whether it would not be a "great diſcouragement for the Lords to Act, un-"leſs they might be as ſecure, at leaſt, as the "Commons. That if there might be ſuch Prin-"ces, was it fitting that Part of the Govern-"ment, which is ſo neceſſary to their Concur-"rence, ſhould be under ſuch Terms for their "Lives, that they dare not Oppoſe them with "Vigor, nor Act, becauſe they lye under "Shackles? That the Lords would do what is "Juſt, though this Clauſe ſhould not paſs, but "they would be loth that theſe Lords that are "eminent for their Publick Service, ſhould be "eminent for their Suffering for it.

"That in the Caſe of Impeachments, which "are the Groans of the People; and for the "higheſt Crimes, and carry with them a greater "ſuppoſition of Guilt than any other Accuſation, "there all Lords muſt Judge; but when there "comes a private Proſecution, which may pro-"ceed from the Influence of particular Men, "then the Lord lyes under the hardſhip of being "tried by a few Peers choſen to Try him, when "all the People may Sigh and Wiſh for him, but "ſuch a Clauſe would do him more good. That "ſuppoſe an ill Miniſter ſhould apprehend an "Impeachment in Parliament, what manner of "way could that Man hope better to come off "by, than by being Try'd before a Parliament "Sits, where his Judges may be choſen ſo par-"tially as he ſhall come off; and it ſhall be ſaid "no Man can legally undergo Two Trials for "the ſame Offence?

"That this Way of Trial was not ancienter "than Henry VIII. and that it was introduc'd "then to take off thoſe that he did not like. "That in his time the Duke of Bucks was taken "off in this manner by Cardinal Woolſey; and "Anne of Bullen was condemn'd by her own Fa-"ther. And afterwards, a Party was choſen to "condemn the Duke of Somerſet, and the Duke of "Northumberland. That the Caſe of the E. of "H——— is no good Caſe, nor truly reported. "For the Parliament-Rolls, 2. Richard 4. menti-"on his being Beheaded by the Rabble in Eſ-"ſex.

"That this Clauſe did not alter the Conſtitu-"tion any more, than as in ſome ſenſe, every "New Law may be ſaid to alter the Conſtitu-"tion: And if the Commons ſay it is altered, "becauſe formerly it was by a ſelect Number, "and now all muſt appear; that did not ſeem "to alter the Conſtitution, for the High Steward "might Summon them all. That the Lord High "Steward formerly Summon'd the Court; and "he Summons it ſtill. That the Nature of the "Court was not alter'd by the Magis or Minus, "any more than the King's-Bench ceaſes to be the "ſame Court, when there are Three or Four "Judges in it.

"That tho' this Clauſe did not (as was ſaid) "purſue the Ends of the Bill, yet either Houſe "has a Power of adding what they think may "make it better. And tho' this was of a diffe-"rent Nature, there had been Inſtances of Ad-"ditions of different Natures: But this was ſo 1695. "far from it, that it agreed entirely with it, and "was as ſuitable and neceſſary as any Part of it. "That the Commons were not well ſatisfied, "when the Commiſſions of the Judges ran du-"rante bene placito: And could it be thought rea-"ſonable, that the Lords, who are the Supream "Judicature, ſhould not ſtay in their Lives, "Quam diu ſe bene geſſerint? That tho' the King "did now appoint the Sheriffs, it was not al-"ways ſo: And ſince the Crown has made them, "the Commons have this Security; that they "may Challenge Thirty Five of the Pannel pe-"remptorily, and all the reſt for Cauſe. But "that the Judges and Sheriffs are made before "the Crime committed; ſo that it is impoſſible "for the Judges or Sheriffs to have Prejudice a-"gainſt any Man; but the Lord High Steward "is appointed after they know the Priſoner, and "he ſhall be Try'd according to the Humour of "the Times they are in. There may be Lords "inclin'd one way or other: But in this Place "there is a ſtrong Thing join'd with this Paſſi-"on; which is, Making their own Fortunes by "Serving the preſent Times. That ſince the "Trial of the Peers in time of Parliament muſt "be by the whole Houſe; where was the In-"conveniency, that at all times they ſhould be "Tried as in Parliament? That 'twas a little "Favour the Lords asked in this Clauſe, conſi-"dering the Privilege of Parliament for Three "Years laſt paſt had always been ſubſiſting; and "was likely to continue ſo during this War: So "that the Objection was taken away, as to the "preſent Government. For they would have "the Advantage of a Parliamentary Trial, and "poſſibly in time to come, there might be an "Inquiſition for what was done now; and it "would be well to have the faireſt Way of Pro-"ceeding in that Matter. That in the Caſe of "the Lord Delamere, there were ſeveral Lords "then in Town, and there were a great many "of theſe Lords not choſen; and 'tis a greater "Queſtion, whether that Noble Lord had come "off as he did, if he had not receiv'd ſuch No-"tice from the Grand Jury, and every thing had "been made out ſo plain. That the Argument "uſed by the Managers, that they would not "allow any thing that tends to an Impunity, "was a large Aſſertion, and ought to be an Ar-"gument againſt the Bill: Becauſe it might hap-"pen, that by giving a Copy of the Indictment, "and Witneſſes being upon their Oaths, a Guil-"ty Man might eſcape, and then he had an Im-"punity, tho' this was not intended. That all "that could be done in theſe Caſes, was to put "in ſuch reaſonable Caution, and as far as the "Bill could provide for. That this Clauſe could "not extend to the Biſhops; for it related only "to Trials out of Parliament; and they are on-"ly Peers in Parliament where they may take "their Privilege to hear, and then go out again, "and do not Vote in Blood: And by the Word "(Peers) it muſt be underſtood of ſuch Peers "only, as are Peers in reſpect of their Blood. "That the Lords were of Opinion, Seven Peers "were ſufficient to condemn a Peer; but this "made no Alteration in the Argument; for "there is not much more difficulty in getting "Twelve than Seven. Indeed, there might be "a greater Difference, where a Crown or Go-"vernment was not concern'd. That the Ex-"cellency of a Jury is that they are taken Ex Vi-"cinitate. What is the reaſon of this? Why, in "Caſe of falſe Witneſſes, it is his Neighbour "that is to ſave the Man. But what Security "have the Lords, when the Lords are pick'd out "to Try them who are not of their Acquaint-1691. "ance; and the Lords, that know the whole "Courſe of their Lives to be contrary to what "is ſworn againſt them, ſhall not be choſen? "That it is implied in the Commiſſion of the "Lord High Steward, that all the Peers ſhould "be Summon'd; for by the Commiſſion, all the "Peers of the Realm are commanded to attend "him, and be obedient to him: So that the King "does not only give Liberty, but ſeems to com-"mand it.

The Commons Reply. "The Managers of the Commons by way of "Reply, ſaid, That this Clauſe would alter the "Conſtitution of this Court, and thereby a very "conſiderable Part of the Conſtitution of the "Government, and that for the worſe. That 'tis "not to be granted, That any new Law does al-"ter the Conſtitution. That a new Law may "be made to ſtrengthen or reſtore the Conſtitu-"tion againſt Abuſes; it may be Declaratory, it "may Aſcertain things, that were left to reaſona-"ble Diſcretion, which are the Circumſtances "and Accidents; and notwithſtanding ſuch new "Laws, the Subſtance of the Conſtitution re-"mains the ſame. That ſo by this Bill the Per-"ſon Indicted was to have a Copy of his In-"dictment Ten Days before he ſhould Plead; "whereas now by the Common Law he was to "have the Indictment read to him as often as he "needs, and to have Copies of ſo much of it, "as he hath occaſion to uſe, and reaſonable time "to Plead. That by this Bill, he was to have "his Witneſſes Sworn, which in ſome Learned "Men's Opinion was the Law before; however, "it was but a Circumſtance added to the Teſti-"mony. That likewiſe by this Bill, he was to "have a Copy of the Pannel before the Trial, "whereas by the Courſe uſed now, he hath a "Copy a reaſonable time before. And that by "the Law now he is to have a reaſonable time "to prepare for his Trial, which time, this Bill "aſcertain'd to a Number of days. But the Com-"mons urg'd, That the Alteration by the Clauſe "in Queſtion, was in a moſt ſubſtantial Part, "and which highly affected the Conſtitution of "the Government.

"That if a like Clauſe were brought in, That "every Commoner ſhould be try'd by all the "Freeholders of the County that would appear, "(or ſuch of them as they ſhould depute), it "could not be well deny'd, that this were a "change to the Conſtitution of the Govern-"ment. That it might as well be ſaid, That it "is not any altering of the Conſtitution, to di-"veſt the Crown of the Power of making "Judges in Courts of Law and Equity, and other "Courts; or making Juſtices of the Peace, or "other Officers. That it was Granted in Par-"liament, 28. Edw. I. that the People of any "County ſhould chuſe the Sheriffs; but there-"upon enſued ſuch Factions, Confuſions and "Miſchiefs in the County, that by the deſire of the "People in Parliament, 1. Edw. II. the Power of "making Sheriffs was ſettled in the Crown. That "tho' the High Steward be ſaid to be the Court, "yet the Peers Triers are ſo neceſſary a part of "the Court, that the Conviction or Acquittal de-"pends entirely on them; and therefore not only "the Number of Triers, but the Nature of the "Court might be properly affirm'd to be alter'd "by this Clauſe. That the Commons were Sur-"priz'd when they heard it Alledg'd, That this "Court and courſe of Trial was firſt introduc'd "in Henry VIII's time, by Cardinal Woolſey, in "the Caſe of the Duke of Bucks; and that all "Trials of Peers before were in Parliament. "That the Statute made 15. Edw. III. manifeſtly "proves the contrary; it ordain'd that Peers "ſhould be tried by the Peers in Parliament; but "provides, That if any Peer ſhould chuſe to be "Try'd elſewhere than in Parliament, he might. 1691.
"That indeed, the Statute was Repeal'd, 17. Ed. "III. (becauſe it was ſo injurious to the Prero-"gative) but yet it ſhews there was then ſuch "a Court and courſe of Trial as this out of Par-"liament; for they could not in Edw. III's di-"vine that there ſhould be ſuch a new Court and "manner of Trial erected in Henry VIII's time. "That the Trial of the Earl of H—, Henry IV. "Reported in the Year Books, is no more to be "queſtion'd, than any other Caſe there: And it "is cited as Authentick, by Stampford, in his "Learn'd Treatiſe of the Pleas of the Crown: "And his Opinion alſo is, That this way of Tri-"al was meant in the Judicium Parium, menti-"on'd in Magna Charta; and Stampford is of grea-"ter Authority in this behalf, for that he was "Contemporary to the Reign of Henry VIII. and "could not have been unacquainted with this In-"novation, if ſuch there had been made, in that "time. That the very Clauſe now in Queſtion "did affirm the Legality of this way of Trial; "for it diſtinguiſhes Treaſons, which corrupt the "Blood, from others, and left all other Treaſons "and all Felony to be try'd by Peers, ſummon'd "by the High Steward, as was now us'd; which "ſhew'd too, that there was no great Danger ap-"prehended to the Peers from this kind of Tri-"al. That the Commons did not admit that a "Peer can be convicted by Seven Peers; that "there muſt be Twelve at leaſt to concur in the "Verdict: That it is not only ſaid by my Lord "Cook, but the Law is, That no Man ſhall ſuffer ca-"pitally at the King's Suit, unleſs his Offence be form'd "by Twenty four at leaſt; that is, Twelve to find "the Indictment, and Twelve to give the Verdict. "That Twelve Peers muſt agree in the Verdict, "was reſolv'd in the Lord Daeres's Caſe, 26. Hen. "VIII. which is remembred in Moor's Reports. "And that the Caſe of every Peer that has been "Convicted, is a Proof of this; for it cannot be "ſhown that ever any Peer was Convicted by "fewer than Twelve. That this Duodecim Virile "Judicium, (ſometime in uſe in Foreign Coun-"tries) was always approv'd and eſtabliſh'd by "the Law of England, and underſtood to be that "Authority, to which the determination of con-"teſted Facts is entruſted.

"And therefore in all other Commiſſions and "Precepts as well as theſe of the High Steward, "wherein the Commiſſion is in general Words, "(viz.) To Return or Summon, tot & tales, "ſuch and ſo many Perſons, by whom the Truth "of the matter may be tried; it is to be anſwer'd "and performed by the bringing of Twelve Per-"ſons, who are to agree in the determining of the "Matter enquired of. And as to that Clauſe "which requires all Peers to be attending, it is "but a Clauſe of the ſame Form and Nature, as "in the Commiſſions of Oyer and Terminer, and "other Commiſſions; and imports no more than "that all Perſons ſhould attend, that are re-"quired to do ſo by Law; and it can be no "more inferr'd from theſe Words, that the High "Steward is to Summon all the Peers, than from "the like Words in other Commiſſions, That all "Freeholders are to be Summoned.

"That it is the common Notion of our Law, "that no Man ſhall be Convicted of a Crime, "but by the unanimous Judgment of Twelve un-"exceptionable Perſons, Summon'd by the King's "Officer; that the Commons have Liberty of "Challenging, becauſe that Fear or Corruption, "or other Cauſe of Partiality may be ſuppoſed "among them. That the Lords have no Chal-"lenge, but all Peers are eſteem'd unexceptio-"nable, becauſe nothing ſo Mean and Diſho-1691. " nourable, is to be presumed among them. That " their Lordships Ancestors chose to distinguish " themselves from their Inferiors, and always " claimed and enjoyed a Priviledge to be en- " trusted otherwise than the Commons are (viz.) " They are upon Honour, not upon Oath; are " not Changeable; give their Verdict Seriatim; " may have more than Twelve on a Trial, and " have claimed a Liberty to Eat and Drink be- " fore their Verdict; and they used to Value " themselves upon these things, as Dignities and " Privileges. That now the Commons that are " forbid to speak otherwise of the present Peers " than of their Ancestors, are to be excused, if " they think no otherwise of them.

"nora-

" Moreover, the Commons observed, that " what their Lordships had alledged concerning " the Inconveniences or Abuses that had been " or might be in this way of Trial, was grounded " upon undue suppositions concerning the Peers, " or upon Mistakes, and not warranted by Ex- " perience. They said, they thought it a strange " and foreign Supposition, that a great and " Guilty Minister finding himself liable to an " Impeachment next Session of Parliament, " should by his Power procure himself to be " Tried and Acquitted by an Inquest of Peers, " on purpose by a Plea of Autre-faits to prevent " a Second, and true Examination of his Crimes; " for he must first be Indicted of the Treason, " and then run a hazard, whether his Power " will be and continue sufficient to oblige so " many Peers to Acquit him by an untrue Ver- " dict. That there is no Example in this kind, " and if such an unheard-of Proceeding should " ever happen, it is left to consideration, whe- " ther a Parliament could not vindicate a King- " dom against so gross and fraudulent a Contri- " vance. Besides, that the Court as it was or- " dered by this Clause, would be no less liable to " such abuse. That their Lordships did not as- " sign any sufficient Instances of any Injustice " in this Court, and perhaps this Court has conti- " nued the most unblemished in point of Justice " of any Court whatsoever. That in the few " Trials which have been there for Treason, " there have been Two Acquittals (viz.) of " the Lord Dacres, and the Duke of Somerset, " besides that of the Lord Delamere. That the " Duke of Northumberland's Crime was Notori- " ous, he having been in open Rebellion against " Queen Mary. That if the Earl of Wiltshire " had been forced to sit on the Trial of his " Daughter Anne Bullen, it seems to shew a " greater fairness; and if the Court had been " constituted according to this Clause, he must " have been Summon'd; and if the Trial had " been in Parliament, he (as well as all " other Peers) had been obliged to come. But " that the Tradition about that Matter was re- " ctified by the Discovery made by a Reverend " Prelate, in his History of the Reformation, (a " Book approved of by their Lordships) where " it is made appear that that Earl did not sit " upon the Trial of the Queen. That if all " Power must be abolished, which is possible to " be abused, there must be no Power left to the " King, or Lords, or Commons; and perhaps " there were no harder Cases to be found, than " those wherein all Three have concurred, of " which the Attainting Cromwell Earl of Essex, " without suffering him to come from the Tower " to be heard, is an Instance. That if any In- " quisition might be made into what is now do- " ing, 'twere better to lay aside the Clause, that " no Body might have any Dependance, but " upon the safety of the present Government.

" That the High Steward is made pro hac vice, 1691. " or after the Crime, is no singular thing; for " the Justices of Oyer and Terminer, and of Goal " Delivery, are made so Twice a Year or oftner, " and all hold all their Places during the King's " Pleasure. That notwithstanding this Clause, " the High Steward is still to be appointed by " the King in the same manner as before; and " in all Treasons, (but those mention'd) and in " all Felonies, he continues to have the same " power of Trying a Peer, by an Inquest of " Peers, Summon'd by his Precept, as is now " used; by which alone the Lives and Fortunes " of the Peers will remain exposed to as much " danger, as they were (if any there were) be- " fore this Bill. The Commons acknowledged " they had known, that when a Peer hath stood " Indicted, sitting a Parliament, the Indictment " hath been by the King's Writ of Certiorari re- " moved into the House of Peers, there to be " Tried by all Peers, but they did not know that " of necessity that must be done, or that such " Peers might not then be Tried in the Or- " dinary Court; and it would be highly incon- " venient in Case of long Parliaments, if it " might not be so. But that is no concluding " Argument, that because there is this extraor- " dinary way of Trial, therefore the ordinary " should be taken away.

" That there is also another way of Trial, " which in other Capital Offences concerns the " Peers too, that is, by a Jury of Freeholders; " which their Lordships in this Debate discom- " mend, because those Freeholders were of the " Vicinage, and the Prisoner might Challenge " Thirty Five without Cause, and by this the " Peers as well as Commons are to be Tried in " an Appeal of Rape, Murther or other Felony; " but it was supposed that their Lordships would " not allow it to be a good Argument, that " therefore they should be order'd to be Tried so " in Treason and Indictments of Treason, but " they held it a Privelege to be Tried in such " Cases by their Peers, in the manner now used.

" That the Method of Tryal appointed by " this Clause, was worse than this now in being, " and it had nothing of the Nature and Virtue " of a Trial in Parliament; for the Lords House " hath Power to send for, and cause all the " Peers to come (as they did upon the Trial of " the late Lord Stafford) but to this intended " Court none are to come, but such as voluntа- " rily will, nor is it required, that there should " be Twelve, or any certain Number; if but " Two or Three appear it is enough, and pro- " bably none would come but the Complices, " and Abettors, and Favourers, and Friends, and " Relations of the Party; nor is it possible to " bring together all the Peers there, as in Par- " liament, for in Parliament the House of Peers " may appoint or adjourn the Proceedings at " or to any time or times, and as often as they " think fit, till the House be full, but the Pro- " ceeding in this Court before the High Steward " is the Work but of one Day.

" In the last place the Commons replied; " That they did not find reason to pass this Clause " from what was so much pressed by their Lord- " ships, viz. That the Clause did provide such de- " fence for the Peers, as would encourage them to ad- " venture to join boldly with the Commons in asserting " the publick Liberties. For the Commons did not " find, by the present Constitution, the Lives " and Fortunes of Innocent Peers were (as " their Lordships intimated) exposed to the Will " of a great and Malicious Minister; and if " they were, they did not see, that they would " be protected by this Provision, since it extend-1691. "ed but to ſome Treaſon, and to no Felonies; "and might ſay, It did not deſerve the name of "Adventure for their Lordſhips to act only upon Terms "of perfect Safety. And on the other Hand, "the Commons apprehended it would afford too "great a Proſpect of Safety to Guilty Peers, and "might embolden them to attempt againſt the "Crown or publick Liberties.

" ed

"The Commons acknowledged, that theſe "were good times, and if they were unquiet or "unſafe, 'twas in relation to the Crown, and "not to the Peers, the Peerage was in no danger; "the Peers had Power enough, and the Crown "had not too much, nor ought to be rendred "leſs ſafe; therefore the Commons would inſiſt "upon the old ways, keep the Balance of the "Government as they found it, and not change "the Laws of England, which had hitherto been "uſed and approved."

This Conference occaſion'd great Debates in both Houſes, and was followed by Three other free Conferences; the Reſult of all which was, that the Lords inſiſted upon their Clauſe, and that the Commons adher'd to their Diſagreement to it.

Beſides this Diſpute between the Two Houſes of Parliament, ſeveral other Affairs contributed to draw this Seſſion into a greater length than the King deſired. The Conſideration of the Moneys due to the Orphans of the City of London, and the Bill brought in for their Relief, took up a great deal of time; as did alſo the Additional Bill for appointing and enabling the Commiſſioners to Examine, Take, and State the Publick Accounts of the Kingdom; which having paſſed the Lower Houſe, was on Jan. 19. ſent up to the Upper for their Concurrence: But the Lords having made ſome Amendments to it, which the Commons did not approve, the Bill was thereupon loſt.

The Amuſement given to Both Houſes by one William Fuller, was another Cauſe of Delay and Interruption to Publick Buſineſs. The Conſpiracy of the Papiſts in Lancaſhire to raiſe a Rebellion in this Kingdom, in order to Re-enthrone the late King James, was atteſted by ſeveral Witneſſes, and was abundantly confirm'd by the Papers taken with the Lord Preſton and Mr. Aſhton. Upon this moral Demonſtration of a Plot, ſome Perſons of Note were ſeized, and Search was made after others; which brought the Buſineſs to be examin'd before the Commons. At this Juncture, the ſaid Fuller being then a Priſoner in the Kings-Bench, ſet up for an Evidence, and at his own deſire was brought to the Bar of the Commons; where he produced ſeveral Papers, which were peruſed by the Houſe; and according to his Prayer, It was Reſolved on Jan. 4. That an Application be made to His Majeſty, That He would pleaſe to give to Mr. Fuller a Blank Paſs for Two Perſons, for their ſafe coming from beyond Sea or any other Place hither, to give their Evidence, for their Protection while they were here, and for their ſafe Return, if deſir'd. About Six Weeks after, Fuller was order'd to attend the Houſe of Commons with the Perſons mentioned by him; but he counterfeiting himſelf Sick, and not able to come abroad, ſeveral Members on Feb. 22. were order'd to repair to him to ſecure his Papers, and to take his Information upon Oath. The next day Fuller's Examination was preſented to the Houſe and read; wherein he mention d Mr. James Hayes and Colonel Thomas Delaval to be the Two Witneſſes he intended to produce: Upon which, ſeveral Members, attended by Meſſengers, were order'd to go to the Places directed by Fuller, and bring the ſaid Perſons with 'em. They went, but found no ſuch Perſons: Whereupon Fuller was order'd to produce them himſelf, and alſo one Mr. Jones; which he not being able to do, the Commons unanimouſly declared on Feb. 24. That William Fuller is a notorious Impoſtor, a Cheat, and a falſe Accuſer; having ſcandaliz'd their Majeſties and their Government, abuſed this Houſe, and falſly accuſed ſeveral Perſons of Honour and Quality. And they farther Reſolved, That an Addreſs be preſented to His Majeſty, to command his Attorney-General to Proſecute the ſaid Impoſtor. Fuller was accordingly proſecuted, and ſentenc'd to ſtand in the Pillory: Which Ignominy he underwent with no Modeſty or Remorſe. 1691. Cenſur'd for an Impoſtor, Cheat, and falſe Accuſer.

The Houſe of Commons having conſider'd of the Supply to be Granted to Their Majeſties, order'd on Jan. 6. That a particular State of the Revenue, and a Computation of the Civil Liſt, be laid before 'em: Which was accordingly done the next day by His Majeſty's Vice-Chamberlain. On Jan. 12. a Committee was appointed to receive Propoſals for raiſing a Sum of Money towards carrying on the War againſt France, upon a Fund of Perpetual Intereſt: And Three Days after, It was Reſolved, That towards the making good the Sums of Money intended to be given by an Act made in the Second Year of Their Majeſties Reign, For granting ſeveral Additional Duties of Exciſe, upon Beer, Ale, and other Liquors, for Four Years, &c. the Additional Duties granted by the ſaid Act, be continued till the 17th day of May, 1697. for the Uſes in the ſaid Act mentioned. Civil Liſt.

The Commons having examin'd the Papers relating to the Revenue and Civil Liſt, repealed the Reſolution they had taken on the 12th of December, concerning the Salaries, Fees, and Perquiſites of all Offices under the Crown; and likewiſe Reſolv'd on Jan. 19. That all Penſions granted by the Crown, except Penſions payable to the Queen Dowager, and the Princeſs Anne of Denmark, and ſuch other Penſions as ſhould be excepted by the Houſe, be be applied towards carrying on the War: And that towards raiſing the Supplies for the ſame Purpoſes, a Tax by a Quarterly Poll be granted to Their Majeſties. By a Bill brought in for that purpoſe, all Perſons (except ſuch as received Alms of the Pariſh, poor Houſekeepers and their Children,) were to pay 12 d. Quarterly for One Year: All Tradeſmen and Artificers, having an Eſtate of the clear Value of Three hundred Pounds and upwards, Ten Shillings: All Gentlemen, or reputed Gentlemen, having an Eſtate of Three Hundred Pounds or more, as alſo all Clergymen and Teachers who had any Eccleſiaſtical Benefice or Contribution, to the Value of Eighty Pounds per Ann. or upwards, Twenty Shillings: Every Lord of Parliament, either Spiritual or Temporal, the Sum of Ten Pounds: And all Perſons who ſhould refuſe to take the Oaths to Their Majeſties, double the Sums charg'd by the reſpective Heads. A Poll-Tax.

Beſides the Taxes already mentioned, the Commons again Reſolved, That the Forfeited Eſtates in England and Ireland ſhould be veſted in Their Majeſties, to be applied to the Uſe of the War: But the Two Bills which they had paſſed for that purpoſe on Feb. 12. lay neglected in the Houſe of Lords, notwithſtanding the repeated Meſſages ſent to their Lordſhips to put them in mind of the ſame. Bill for Forfeited Eſtates in England and Ireland.

On Jan. 4. The Commons order'd the Lord Caſtleton, Sir Henry Goodrick, and Five more of their Members, to attend upon General Ginkle with the Thanks of the Houſe both to him and the Officers who under him had contributed to the Reduction of Ireland, for the great Services they had thereby performed to Their Majeſties and theſe Kingdoms. General Ginkle made a very grate- Thanks of the Houſe to Gen. Ginkle.

1691. ful Anſwer: He acknowledg'd this diſtinguiſhing Honour done him by the Houſe of Commons, which he valued above a Triumph: Adding with a great deal of Modeſty and Juſtice, That the Succeſs of Their Majeſties Arms in Ireland, was owing chiefly to the Valour of the Engliſh; and that he would take Care to communicate the Vote of that Houſe to the Officers that ſerv'd in Ireland; and always endeavour the Proſperity of Their Majeſties and the Government. And for a farther Mark of Honour, His Majeſty was pleaſed on Feb. 20. to create this Brave General, Earl of Athlone in the County of Roſcommon, and Baron of Aghrim in the County of Galloway in Ireland, for the great Services he had performed to Their Majeſties, in the Reduction of that Kingdom. A Week after, that General, the Duke of Wirtembergh, the Lieutenant-Generals Scravenmore, Lanier and Talmarſh, Major-General Ruvigny, with other the General and Field-Officers in Town, who had ſignaliz'd themſelves in the Iriſh Expedition, were Invited and Nobly Entertain'd at Merchant-Taylors-Hall, by Sir Thomas Stamp Lord-Mayor, the Aldermen, Sheriffs, and the moſt Eminent Citizens and Merchants of London; who upon this Occaſion gave all imaginable Demonſtrations of their Affection and Loyalty to the Government, and of Honour and Reſpect to thoſe who had ſupported it by their Valour.

A Bill for the Eſtabliſhment of an Eaſt-India Company, having been receiv'd by the Commons on Jan. 16. ſeveral Petitions were preſented to the Houſe againſt it: To which an unſatisfactory Anſwer being deliver'd by the Committee of the Eaſt-India Company, the Houſe Reſolved thereupon on Feb. 6. That an humble Addreſs be made to His Majeſty, to diſſolve the preſent Eaſt-India Company, according to His Power reſerved in their Charter; and to conſtitute another Eaſt-India Company, for the better preſerving the Eaſt-India Trade to this Kingdom, in ſuch manner as His Majeſty in His Royal Wiſdom ſhould think fit. This Addreſs being preſented to the King on Feb. 10. His Majeſty expreſs'd himſelf to this effect: That it was a Matter of very great Importance to the Trade of this Kingdom: That He would conſider of it, and in a ſhort time give the Commons a poſitive Anſwer. In the mean time His Majeſty on Feb. 8. conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on Capt. John Goldsborough, who was going for the Eaſt-Indies, in the Quality of the Company's Commiſſary-General.

Petition of the Commons to diſſolve the Eaſt-India Company

About the middle of January, many of the French Proteſtants preſented a Petition to the Commons, praying the Conſideration of that Houſe, in order to their Relief. This Petition having had but little effect, by reaſon of the multiplicity of Affairs that were depending in that Houſe; thoſe diſtreſſed Refugees apply'd themſelves to the King, with their Caſe in Print, and their Majeſties Declaration of the 25*th.* of April 1689. in their favour. Both which his Majeſty commanded to be laid before the Commons on February the 17*th.* A Week after, the Commons conſidered his Majeſty's Meſſage, and the Motion already made for a Supply to be given towards the Relief of the Petitioners: But before they came to a Reſolution, His Majeſty's Affairs requir'd their Riſing, by a ſudden Adjournment, which prevented the Paſſing ſeveral Bills that were depending; ſuch as firſt, A Bill for Leſſening the Intereſt of Money; which the Commons had paſſed and ſent up to the Lords for their Concurrence. Another, for Diſabling Minors to Marry without the Conſent of their Fathers or Guardians; and for preventing Clandeſtine Marriages; which the Lords had ſent down to the Commons. A Third, for the Paying of the Army according to the Muſters of effective Men, Puniſhing Mutineers and Deſerters, and Preventing falſe Muſters; to which the Lords had made ſome Amendments that occaſion'd great Diſputes. A fourth, for Aſcertaining the Commiſſions and Salaries of the Judges; which, tho' it had paſſed Both Houſes, was not confirmed by the Royal Aſſent. A Fifth, againſt the Buying and Selling of Offices. A Sixth, for the better Apprehending of Highway-Men. A Seventh, To prevent Frauds by Clandeſtine Mortgages. And an Eighth, againſt Duelling. As for the Bill to empower the Courts of Chancery and Exchequer to accept of the Solemn Anſwer in Evidence of any of the People called Quakers: And another, for Confirming the Charters of the Univerſity of Cambridge: Both theſe came to the Queſtion in the Houſe of Commons, That they ſhould paſs; but in both it was carried in the Negative.

His Majeſty being deſirous to be early in Holland, came on Wedneſday February the 24*th.* to the Houſe of Peers, attended with the uſual Solemnity; and gave his Royal Aſſent to 1. An Act for raiſing Money by a Poll, payable Quarterly for one Year, for the Carrying on a Vigorous War againſt France. 2. An Act for Raiſing the Militia of this Kingdom for the Year 1692. altho' the Month's Pay formerly advanced he not repaid. 3. An Act to take away the Benefit of the Clergy from ſome Offenders, aad to bring others to Puniſhment. 4. An Act againſt Correſponding with their Majeſties Enemies. 5. An Act for the better Explanation and Supplying the Defects of the former Laws for the Settlement of the Poor. 6. An Act for the better Repairing and Amending the Highways; and for Settling the Rates of Carriage of Goods. 7. An Act for the better Ordering and Collecting the Duty upon Low Wines and Strong Waters, and preventing the Abuſes therein. 8. An Act for the Encouragement of the Breeding and Feeding of Cattle. 9. An Act for the more effectual Diſcovery and Puniſhment of Deer-ſtealers. 10. An Act for Relief of Creditors againſt fraudulent Deviſes. And to ſeveral Private Acts. After which, His Majeſty made this Speech to Both Houſes. Acts paſſed.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I Return my hearty Thanks to you all, for the great Demonſtrations you have given Me of your Affections in this Seſſions, and for your Zeal for the Support of the Government. King's Speech

"And I muſt thank you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, in particular, for the great Supplies you have granted for the Proſecution of the War. I aſſure you, I ſhall take Care ſo to Diſpoſe of the Money you have given Me for the Publick Occaſions; as that the Whole Nation may be entirely ſatisfied with the Application of it.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I think it proper to acquaint you with My Intentions of going beyond Sea very ſpeedily; which I am afraid have been already retarded, more than is convenient for the preſent Poſture of Affairs: And upon that Account I think it neceſſary to put an end to this preſent Meeting; The Seaſon of the Year being now ſo very far advanced, that it may prove of the laſt ill Conſequence to continue it any longer.

Then the Lord Chief Baron, Speaker of the Houſe of Peers, ſignified to 'em His Majeſty's Pleaſure, That they ſhould Adjourn themſelves to the 12*th.* day of April next; and accordingly Both Houſes ſo Adjourned. But on March 19. a Proclamation was publiſh'd for Proroguing the Parliament from the 12*th.* day of April, to the 24*th.* day of May next: At which day, Their Maje- Parliament Adjourn'd and then Prorogued.

1691. Majeſties would expect the Attendance only of ſuch Members, as ſhall be Reſident in or near the Cities of London and Weſtminſter; and that convenient Notice ſhould be given by another Proclamation, of the time when the Parliament ſhall meet, and fit for the Diſpatch of Buſineſs, to the end, that the Members of Both Houſes may order their Affairs accordingly.

As to the Civil Honours and Preferments beſtow'd this Year; on April 30. His Majeſty was pleaſed as a mark of his Royal Favour, to confer the Honour of Knighthood on Abſtrupus Danby of Maſſamſhire in the County of York, Eſq; On May 7. John Earl of Bridgwater was Sworn One of their Majeſties moſt Honourable Privy Council; and ſoon after the ſame Honour was done to John Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who on June 4. took his Place at that Board. On October 22. when the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London waited on the King to Congratulate His Majeſty's ſafe Return into England, and the Happy Succeſs of His Majeſty's Arms, in the entire Reducing of the Kingdom of Ireland, His Majeſty was pleaſed to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Richard Levett Eſq; one of the Sheriffs. In the beginning of Michaelmas Term His Majeſty was pleaſed to appoint Sir Edward Nevill one of the Barrons of the Court of Exchequer, to be one of the Juſtices of the Common Pleas, in the place of Peyton Ventris Eſq; Deceaſed, and John Powel Eſq; Serjeant at Law to be in his room one of the Barons of the Exchequer, on whom his Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on his Birth-Day, Nov. 4. About the ſame time the King was pleaſed upon the Death of Sir William Huſſy, his late Ambaſſador at the Ottoman Port, to appoint William Harbord Eſq; one of the Privy Council, to be his Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the Grand Signior, who Embarked for Holland, November 10. to proceed by the way of Vienna on his Journey towards Turkey. On Tueſday February 2*d.* at a Chapter of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter, held at Kenſington, in the Preſence of the Sovereign, His moſt Serene Highneſs John George the Fourth, Elector of Saxony, and the Right Honourable Charles Earl of Dorſet and Middleſex, Lord Chamberlain of His Majeſty's Houſhold, were Elected Knights Compannions of the ſaid Moſt Noble Order. About the middle of February His Majeſty was pleaſed to appoint Sir William Phipps Knight, to be Governour of the Province of the Maſſachuſetts Bay, and Commander in Chief of all the Militia of New England, as alſo Sir Edmond Andros Knight, to be Governour of Virginia, Benjamin Fletcher Eſq; to be Governour of New York, and Samuell Allen Eſq; to be Governour of New Hampſhire in New England. On February 27*th.* James Johnſton Eſq; late Envoy Extraordinary from their Majeſties to his Electoral Highneſs of Brandenburgh, Kiſſed Their Majeſties Hands upon his being made Conjunct Secretary of State with the Lord Secretary Stair, in the Kingdom of Scotland. On March 1. Lawrence Earl of Rocheſter, Richard Earl of Ranelaugh, Charles Lord Cornwallis, and Sir Edward Seymour Bar^{t}. were Sworn of Their Majeſties moſt Honourable Privy Council; and on the ſame Day William Earl of Bedford took the uſual Oaths, as Lord Lieutenant of the County of Middleſex, and His Majeſty delivering the Privy Seal to Thomas Earl of Pembrook, his Lordſhip's place of Commiſſioner in the Admiraltry was given to Charles Lord Cornwallis, and at the ſame time Sir Edward Seymour Bar^{t}. and Charles Mountague Eſq; were conſtituted Commiſſioners of Their Majeſty's Treaſury, in the Places of Sir John Lowther of Lowther Bar^{t}. Vice-Chamberlain of His Majeſty's Houſhold, and Tho. Pelham Eſq; who had reſigned the ſame. On March 3*d.* Henry Lord Viſcount Sidney, one of Their Majeſties Principal Secretaries of State, delivered up the Seal to His Majeſty, being prepared to go Their Majeſties Lieutenant General, and General Governour of the Kingdom of Ireland. And on the ſame day, His Majeſty was pleas'd to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Godfrey Kneller Eſq; Principal Painter in Ordinary to Their Majeſties. On March 17. Anthony Lord Viſcount Falkland, and Robert Lord Lexington were Sworn of Their Majeſties moſt Honourable Privy-Council: And near the ſame time, His Majeſty was pleas'd to create Thomas Coningsby Eſq, one of the Lords Juſtices of Ireland, a Baron of that Kingdom, by the Name and Style of Thomas Baron Coningsby of Clanbrazile in the County of Armagh. On the laſt day of the Year, March 24. Vere Earl of Weſtmorland took the uſual Oaths, as Joint Lord-Lieutenant of the County of Kent, with the Right Honourable Henry Lord Viſcount Sidney; and Charles Lord Lanſdown was Sworn likewiſe Joint Lord-Lieutenant of the County of Devon and Cornwall, with John Earl of Bath: And the ſame time John Dive Eſq; was Sworn Clerk of Their Majeſties moſt Honourable Privy-Council in Ordinary.

Among other Occurrences of this Year, it may be obſerv'd, That on Tueſday, July 20. His Excellency Don Pedro de Ronquillo, Conde de Gramedo, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the King of Spain, after having reſided many Years at this Court, and been employed in ſeveral Eminent Negotiations, in which he acquitted himſelf with great Zeal and Ability, Died; and on July 30. in the Evening, his Body was by Her Majeſty's Order privately depoſited in King Henry the Seventh's Chappel at Weſtminſter, till it could be Tranſported to Spain. On Nov. 8. Signior Hain Tolledano, Envoy Extraordinary from the Emperor of Feſſe and Morocco, had his publick Audience of Their Majeſties, with the uſual Ceremonies.

Death of Don Pedro de Ronquill, the Spaniſh Ambaſſador.

In the Affairs of Religion, nothing ſeem'd more to diſturb the Peace of the Church, and to threaten the Security of their Majeſties Reign, than the Perſeverance of the Nonjuring Biſhops and Clergy: And therefore when a ſufficient time had been allow'd to bring 'em into the ſettled Government, His Majeſty was now reſolv'd to fill up their Vacant Dignities: and therefore, among other Preparations for his going over to the Campaign in Flanders, he publiſh'd his Intentions of filling up the Vacant Dignities in manner following. Dr. Tillotſon Dean of St. Paul's, was to be promoted to the Arch-Biſhoprick of Canterbury, in the room of Arch-Biſhop Sancroft; Dr. Patrick Biſhop of Chicheſter, to be Tranſlated to the Biſhoprick of Ely, in the room of Biſhop Turner; Dr. Beveridge Rector of St. Peter's Cornhill, was to be promoted to the Biſhoprick of Bath and Wells, in the room of Biſhop Kenn; Dr. Fowler to the See of Glouceſter, in the room of Biſhop Frampton; Dr. Cumberland to the See of Peterborough, in the room of Biſhop White; Dr. Moor to the See of Norwich, in the room of Biſhop Lloyd; and Dr. Grove to the See of Chichiſter, void by the Tranſlation of Biſhop Patrick; and Dr. Sherlock Maſter of the Temple, now reconciled to the Government, was Nominated to the Deanery of St. Paul's; Dr. Cumber to the Deanery of Durham, in the room of Dr. Greenvill; Mr. Talbot to the Deanery of Worceſter, in the room of Dr. Hicks; and Dr. Woodward to the Deanery of Sarum. On May 9. His Majeſty was pleaſed upon the Death of Dr. Lamplugh, late Archbiſhop of York, to

State of Religion.

The King reſolved to fill up the vacant Dignities.

The ſeveral Promotions.

1691. to Nominate Dr. Sharp, Dean of Canterbury, to be Archbiſhop of that See. On May 16. in purſuance of Their Majeſties Conge de Elire, and Letter Miſſive, Dr. John Tillotſon was by the Dean and a full Chapter, unanimouſly Elected Archbiſhop of Canterbury; And in like manner, on May 21. Dr. John Moor, Rector of St. Andrew's Holbourn, was Elected Biſhop of Norwich. On May 27. Their Majeſties were pleaſed, upon the Death of Dr. Herbert Crofts, late Biſhop of Hereford, to Nominate Dr. Gilbert Ironſide, Biſhop of Briſtol, to Succeed him in that See; and the next day, the Queen was pleaſed to Grant to Dr. George Hooper, Rector of Lambeth, the Deanery of Canterbury, Vacant by the Promotion of Dr. Sharp. On May 31. Dr. Tillotſon was Conſecrated Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in the Church of St. Mary-le-Bow, in London, by the Biſhops of Winchester, St. Aſaph, Salisbury, Worceſter, Briſtol, and Oxford, appointed by Commiſſion for that purpoſe, which was performed with the uſual Order and Solemnty: All the Great Officers of State, and moſt of the Nobility in Town, with many other Perſons of Quality, being preſent to expreſs the great Eſteem and Reſpect they had for his Grace, and the Satisfaction they receiv'd in his Promotion. Four days after, his Grace was Sworn of the Privy Council; and Their Majeſties always repoſed a moſt entire Confidence in his Prudence, Moderation, and Integrity. On June 9. The Dean and Chapter of York, with unanimous Conſent, Elected Dr. John Sharp, Dean of Canterbury, to be Archbiſhop of that See. And the Dean and Chapter of Peterborough, unanimouſly Elected Dr. Richard Cumberland, Rector of Brampton in Northamptonſhire, and Miniſter in Stamford in Linconſhire, to be Biſhop of Peterborough. The next day, the Dean and Chapter of Ely, Elected Simon Lord Biſhop of Chicheſter, to be Biſhop of Ely: The Dean and Chapter of Glocester did alſo, with unanimous Conſent, Elect Dr. Edward Fowler, Miniſter of Cripplegate in London, to be Biſhop of that See. And becauſe Dr. Beveridge, after ſome Conſideration, thought fit to decline the Acceptance of the See of Bath and Wells, Their Majeſties were pleaſed to Nominate Dr. Richard Kidder, Dean of Peterborough, to be Biſhop of that See; and Dr. John Hall, Maſter of Pembrook Colledge in Oxford, to be Biſhop of Briſtol; and Dr. Samuel Freeman, Miniſter of Covent-Garden, London, was Promoted to the Deanery of Peterborough.

Conſecration of New Biſhops.

When all Preliminaries had been rightly adjuſted, on Sunday July 8th. the New Prelates, Dr. John Sharp, Lord Archbiſhop of York; Dr. John Moor, Lord Biſhop of Norwich; Dr. Richard Cumberland, Lord Biſhop of Peterborough; and Dr. Edward Fowler, Lord Biſhop of Glouceſter, were Conſecrated at St. Mary-le-Bow, by the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Biſhops of Winchester, Salisbury, Worceſter, Ely, and Briſtol, with the uſual Order and Solemnity. The Ceremony of the Biſhop of Ely's Tranſlation, with that of the Confirmation of the other Biſhops aforementioned, had been performed the Thurſday before in the ſame Church, with the accuſtomed Formalities. On Auguſt 30. Dr. Robert Grove, Biſhop of Chicheſter; Dr. Richard Kidder, Biſhop of Bath and Wells; and Dr. John Hall, Biſhop of Briſtol, were Conſecrated at St. Mary-le-Bow, by the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Biſhops of Salisbury, Worceſter, Norwich, and Glouceſter, with the uſual Solemnity. On Nov. 25. His Majeſty was pleaſed upon the Death of Dr. Thomas Barlow, late Biſhop of Lincoln, to Nominate Dr. Thomas Tenniſon, Vicar of St. Martins, to Succeed him in that See; being recommended (ſays a late Writer) to Their Majeſties Favour and Eſteem, by his Exemplary Piety, and his great Moderation towards Diſſenters; whom Their Majeſties ſtill endeavoured, by all gentle (which indeed are the moſt effectual) Methods, to bring over to the National Church. 1691.

Their Majeſties began the New Year with an Exemplary Care for the Publick Reformation of Manners; and for that purpoſe, Iſſued out this Excellent Proclamation againſt Vicious, Debauch'd, and Prophane Perſons. Care for Reformation of Manners

William R.

"AS We cannot but be deeply Senſible of "the great Goodneſs and Mercy of Al- "mighty God (by whom Kings Reign) in giv- "ing ſo happy Succeſs to Our Endeavours for the "Reſcuing theſe Kingdoms from Popiſh Tyran- "ny and Superſtition; and in Preſerving Our "Royal Perſons, Supporting Our Government, "and Uniting the Arms of moſt of the Princes "and States in Chriſtendom againſt Our Common "Enemy: So We are not leſs touched with a Re- "ſentment, that (notwithſtanding theſe great "Deliverances) Impiety and Vice do ſtill abound "in this Our Kingdom: And that the Executi- "on of many good Laws, which have been "made for Suppreſſing and Diminiſhing thereof, "have been groſsly Neglected, to the great Diſ- "honour of God and Our Holy Religion: "Wherefore, and for that We cannot expect In- "creaſe or Continuance of the Bleſſings We and "Our Subjects Enjoy, without providing Reme- "dies to prevent the like Evils for the future; "We judge Our Selves bound, by the Duty We "owe to God, and the Care We have of the "People Committed to Our Charge, to pro- "ceed in taking ſome effectual Courſe therein. "And being thereunto moved by the Pious Ad- "dreſs of our Archbiſhops and Biſhops, We "have thought fit, by the Advice of Our Privy "Council, to Iſſue this Our Royal Proclamati- "on; and do declare Our Princely Intention "and Reſolution, to Diſcountenance all manner "of Vice and Immorality in all Perſons, from "the higheſt to the loweſt Degree in this Our "Realm. And we do hereby for that purpoſe, "ſtraitly Require, Charge, and Command, "all and ſingular Our Judges, Mayors, Sheriffs, "Juſtices of the Peace, and all other Our Offi- "cers Eccleſiaſtical and Civil, in their reſpective "Stations, to Execute the Laws againſt Blaſphe- "my, Prophane Swearing and Curſing, Drunken- "neſs, Lewdneſs, and Prophanation of the Lord's- "day, or any other diſſolute, immoral, or diſor- "derly Practices, as they will Anſwer it to Al- "mighty God, and upon Pain of Our Higheſt "Diſpleaſure. And for the more effectual Pro- "ceeding herein, We do hereby Direct and "Command Our Judges of Aſſizes, and Juſtices "of Peace, to give a ſtrict Charge at the re- "ſpective Aſſizes and Seſſions, for the due Pro- "ſecution and Puniſhment of all Perſons that "ſhall preſume to Offend in any the kinds afore- "ſaid; And alſo of all Perſons that, contrary "to their Duty, ſhall be Remiſs or Negligent in "putting the ſaid Laws in Execution.

Given at Our Court at Whitehall the One and twentieth Day of January 169½. In the Third Year of Our Reign.

This Royal Piety and Zeal laid the Foundation of the laudable and uſeful Societies for the Reformation of Manners; of which, this Account has been ſince given. "It is very well "known, that in the late Times, Prophane "Swearing and Curſing, Drunkenneſs, open "Lewdneſs and Prophanation of the Lord's- Account of the good Deſign for Reformation of Manners day,

1691. "day, were generally discouraged and suppres- "sed. And it is as well known to our shame, "That these Sins have not only revived among "us, by reason of the Impunity of Offenders, "the Countenance and Preferment they have "met with, and the Contagion of great and ill "Examples; but have been committed with "great Impudence, and without Controul; "without either Shame or the Fear of the Laws: "So that they were seen and heard at Noon- "day, and in our open Streets. And, as if we "were resolved to out-do the Impieties of the "very Heathens, Prophaneness and even Blas- "phemy was too often the Wit and Entertain- "ment of our Scandalous Play-Houses; and "sincere Religion became the Jest and Scorn of "our Courts in the late Reigns.

"And even after the Accession of K. William "to the Crown, tho' Popery immediately vanish- "ed, Immorality and Prophaneness still kept "their Ground, as if they expected an Establish- "ment with our Liberties, after so long and "peaceable a Possession. Reformation was in- "deed talk'd of by some Persons, as an excel- "lent Thing; and as a proper Way of expres- "sing our Thankfulness to Almighty God for "his Mercies to this Nation; and to procure a "Continuance of 'em to us, and to our Posteri- "ty: But Vice was look'd upon as too formida- "ble an Enemy to be provoked; and publick "Reformation was thought so difficult an Un- "dertaking, that those who gave it very good "Words, judged it not safe to set about it in the "Time of War, whilst there were so many in "Arms on the other side; and therefore they "seemed to decline the Thoughts of it, till we "should see the End of the Uncertain War we "were engaged in. When Things were in this "dismal and almost desperate State, it came in- "to the Hearts, it seems, of Five or Six private "Gentlemen of the Church of England, to en- "gage in this difficult and hazardous Enterprize: "Who considering, That the higher the Tide of "Wickedness was, the more need there was of "opposing it; That our crying Sins were our "greatest Enemies, and most threatned our Ru- "in; That they found Laws in force against "'em; and that they should have the Laws of "God, with the Prayers of Good Men on their "side; resolved, whatever Difficulties they "met with, to make their Efforts, for promo- "ting the Execution of our Laws against Pro- "phaneness and Debauchery, and the Suppres- "sing of 'em by Advisable Methods.

Notwithstanding a furious Opposition from Adversaries, the ill Offices of those from whom better Things might have been expected, and the unkind Neutrality of Friends; these Gentle- men, who in a little time began to add some others to their Number, not only kept their Ground, but made further Advances. And this Affair being laid before the Queen, in the Ab- sence of His Majesty, by a Prelate of great Learning and Fame, (the late Lord Bishop of Worcester); She had just Sentiments of it; and therefore thought it became Her to give it Countenance. She graciously Condescended to Thank those who were concerned in it, and readily promised them Her Assistance: And af- terwards, upon this Application made to Her Majesty, She was pleased to direct this Gracious Letter to the Justices of the Peace in the Coun- ty of Middlesex, for the Suppressing of Prophane- ness and Debauchery.

Mary R.

Queen's Letter. "TRusty and Well-beloved, We Greet you "well. Considering the great and in- "dispensible Duty incumbent upon Us, to pro- "mote and encourage a Reformation of the "Manners of all Our Subjects; that so the "Service of God may be Advanced, and those "Blessings be procured to these Nations, which "always attend a Conscientious Discharge of "our Respective Duties, according to Our seve- "ral Relations; We think it necessary, in or- "der to the Obtaining of this Publick Good, to "recommend to you the putting in Execution, "with all Fidelity and Impartiality, those Laws "which have been made, and are still in force "against the Prophanation of the Lord's-Day; "Drunkenness, Prophane Swearing and Cursing, and "all other Lewd, Enormous, and Disorderly Pra- "ctices; which by a long continued Neglect, "and Connivance of the Magistrates and Offi- "cers concerned, have universally spread them- "selves, to the Dishonour of God, and Scandal "of Our Holy Religion; whereby it is now "become the more necessary for all Persons in "Authority, to apply themselves with all possi- "ble Care and Diligence, to the Suppressing "of the same. We do therefore hereby charge "and require you, to take the most effectual "Methods, for putting the Laws in Execution "against the Crimes abovementioned, and all "other Sins and Vices, particularly those which "are most prevailing in this Realm; and that "especially in such Cases where any Officer of "Justice shall be guilty of any of those Offen- "ces, or refuse or neglect to discharge the Du- "ty of his Place, for the Suppressing them; "that so such Officer, by his Punishment, may "serve for an Example to others. And to this "end, We would have you careful and diligent, "in encouraging all Constables, Church-War- "dens, Headboroughs, and all other Officers "and Persons whatsoever, to do their Part in their "several Stations; by timely and impartial Informa- "tions, and Prosecutions against all such Offenders; "for preventing of such Judgments which are "solemnly denounced against the Sins above- "mentioned. We cannot doubt of your Per- "formance hereof; since it is a Duty to which you "are obliged by Oath, and are likewise engaged to the "Discharge of it, as you tender the Honour of Al- "mighty God, the flourishing Condition of his Church "in this Kingdom, and the Continuance of his Holy "Religion among us, and the Prosperity of your Coun- "try. And so We bid you farewel.

Given at our Court at Whitehall, the Ninth Day of July, One Thousand Six Hundred Ninety One. In the Third Year of Our Reign.

By Her Majesty's Command. Nottingham.

It is said of Her Majesty, That when there was further Occasion, She show'd She was in earnest to promote this Design, by taking more effectual Methods for that purpose. The same Writer asks leave to present the World with this short Scheme of the Design, and this Account of the Managers of it.

Scheme of the Design, and Ma- nagers of it. "I. There is a very large Body of Persons "compos'd of the Original Society before-men- "tioned, with the Additions that have been "since made of Persons of Eminency in the "Law, Members of Parliament, Justices of Peace, "and Considerable Citizens of London, of known "Abilities, and great Integrity; who frequent- "ly meet to Consult of the best Methods for car- "rying on the Business of Reformation, and to "be ready to advise and assist others that are al- "ready engaged, or any that are willing to join "in the same Design.

"This Society is at a considerable Yearly "Charge, for the effectual Managing their Bu- "siness; 1691. "fineſs; but takes no Contributions of any but "their own Members; by whoſe Endeavours, "as was ſaid before, Thouſands of Offenders in "London and Weſtminſter have been brought to "Puniſhment, for Swearing, Drunkenneſs, and "Prophanation of the Lord's-Day: And a great "Part of the Kingdom has been awakened, in "ſome Meaſure, to a Senſe of their Duty in "this Reſpect; and thereby a very hopeful Pro-"greſs is made towards a General Reforma-"tion.

"A Second Society is of about Fifty Perſons, "Tradeſmen and others, who have more eſpeci-"ally apply'd themſelves to the Suppreſſion of "Lewdneſs, by bringing the Offenders to Legal "Puniſhment. Theſe may have actually ſup-"preſſed and routed out about Five Hundred Diſ-"orderly Houſes, and cauſed to be puniſhed ſome "Thouſands of Lewd Perſons, beſides Swearers, "Drunkards, and Prophaners of the Lord's-Day; "as may appear by their Printed Liſts of Offen-"ders. Theſe Perſons, by their prudent and le-"gal Management of their Buſineſs, have recei-"ved great Countenance and Encouragement "in our Courts of Judicature, and very particu-"lar Encouragement and Aſſiſtance for ſeveral "Years paſt, from the Lord Mayor and Court of "Aldermen; who are ſenſible of the great Ser-"vice that is done by them, which they expreſs "upon proper Occaſions.

"III. A Third Society is of Conſtables, (of "which Sort of Officers, Care is taken to form "Yearly a new Body in this City) who meet "to Conſider of the moſt effectual Way to Diſ-"charge their Oaths; to acquaint one another "with the Difficulties they meet with; to reſolve "on proper Remedies; to divide themſelves in "the ſeveral Parts of the City, ſo as to take in "the whole to the beſt Advantage; for the in-"ſpecting of Diſorderly Houſes, taking up of Drun-"kards, Lewd Perſons, Prophaners of the Lord's-"Day, and Swearers, out of the Streets and Mar-"kets; and carrying them before the Magi-"ſtrates: And I muſt obſerve, that is found a "very ſucceſsful Method for Conſtables to take, "for the Suppreſſing of the abominable Sin of "Swearing; when Private Perſons are negligent "in giving Informations, and the Magiſtrate is "careleſs of his Duty.

"IV. A Fourth Rank of Men, who have been "ſo highly Inſtrumental in this Undertaking, that "they may be reckoned a Corner Stone of it, is "of ſuch as have made it ſome part of their Bu-"ſineſs to give Informations to the Magiſtrate, as "they have had opportunity, of ſuch Breaches "of the Laws as were before mention'd. Many "of theſe Perſons have given the World a great "and almoſt unheard-of Example, in this corrupt "Age, of Zeal and Chriſtian Courage, having un-"derwent at the beginning more eſpecially of "theſe Proceedings, many Abuſes and great Re-"proaches, not only from exaſperated and hard-"ned Offenders, but often from their luke-warm "Friends, irreligious Relations, and ſometimes "from Unfaithful Magiſtrates, by whom they have "been Reviled, Brow-beaten, and diſcouraged "from performing ſuch important Service, ſo "neceſſary to the Welfare of their Country. And "herein theſe brave Men have acted with ſo "great Prudence as well as Zeal, that foreſeeing "it might one day be the Policy of the Enemy "of all Goodneſs, and the Buſineſs of wicked "Men, who are his Inſtruments, and who could "not generally be brought to Shame and Puniſh-"ment for their Infamous Practices, but by their "means to raiſe Prejudices in the Minds of bad "and unthinking People againſt them, and to "diſparage their Proceedings, by whiſpering of "Jealouſies of their being influenced in what 1691.
"they did by worldly Conſiderations; that the "World may be challenged to make appear,
"That theſe Societies have been ſo much as
"treated with by any Perſon whatſoever, to
"give Informations with any Promiſe of a Re-
"ward, or that they have ever received the leaſt
"Advantage by any Convictions, upon theſe *Sta-
"tutes* againſt Prophaneneſs and Debauchery; the "Money ariſing thereby, being wholly appro-
"priated to the Poor, except the third part of the "Penalty, upon the Statute againſt Prophanation of
"the Lord's-day, which, in ſome Caſes, the *Ma-
"giſtrate* hath a bare Power to diſpoſe of; but
"was never, that we know of, received by any "one of theſe Perſons. Which I thought fit to
"obſerve, as a laſting Anſwer to any Objecti-
"on of this kind, in Juſtice to them who have "gone through Frowns and Reproaches for the ſake
"of doing ſo much Good: And that all Men
"may ſee with how great Reaſon it is, both
"from the Character of the Perſons concerned
"in the Diſcharging of this Service to Religion
"and their Country, as well as from the Nature
"and Neceſſity of it (which I ſhall hereafter
"enquire into), that the Name of an Informer
"is now become much more Glorious among wiſe
"and good Men, than it was grown Contemptible
"by the ill Practices of ſome in our days: And "that it does therefore appear truly Honourable
"for Perſons of the greateſt Quality, to give *In-
"formations* in theſe Caſes for the Service of the
"moſt High God, as ſome among us of *greater
"Ranks* than the World does perhaps think of,
"have of late done, and which it hath been ob-
"ſerved in divers Diſcourſes lately Publiſhed, that
"even Princes under the Jewiſh Diſpenſation were
"not aſhamed to do. Now when theſe things were Ezra 9. 1,
"done, the Princes came to me, ſaying, The people 2.
"*of Iſrael, and the Prieſts, and the Levites have "not ſeparated themſelves from the People of the Lands,
"doing according to their Abominations*, &c.

"V. There are Eight other regulated and *mixt
"Bodies* of Houſekeepers and Officers in the ſeveral
"Quarters of London, Weſtminſter, and Southwark,
"who differ in their Conſtitution from thoſe before
"mentioned, but generally agree in the Methods
"of inſpecting the Behaviour of Conſtables and
"other Officers, and going along with them, and
"aſſiſting them in their ſearching of *Diſorderly
"Houſes*, in taking up of Offenders, and carrying
"them before the Magiſtrate; and alſo in giving
"Informations themſelves, as there is Occaſion.

"VI. Beſides theſe before-mentioned, there "are about Nine and thirty Religious Societies of
"another kind, in and about London and *Weſtmin-
"ſter*, which are propagated into other Parts of "the Nation; as Nottingham, Gloceſter, &c. and
"even into Ireland, where they have been for
"ſome Months ſince ſpreading in divers Towns
"and Cities of that Kingdom; as Kilkenny, *Drog-
"heda*, Monmouth, &c. eſpecially in Dublin, where
"there are about Ten of theſe Societies, which
"are promoted by the Biſhops and Inferior Clergy
"there. Theſe Perſons meet often to Pray, *ſing
"Pſalms*, and Read the Holy Scriptures together;
"and to Reprove, Exhort, and Edify one another
"by their Religious Conferences. They moreover
"carry on at their Meetings, Deſigns of Charity
"of different kinds; ſuch as relieving the Wants
"of Poor Houſekeepers, maintaining their Children at
"School, ſetting of Priſoners at Liberty, ſupporting
"of Lectures and daily Prayers in our Churches.

"Theſe are the Societies which our late *Gra-
"cious Queen*, as the Learned Biſhop that hath
"writ Her Life tells us, took ſo great Satisfaction
"in, that She enquired often and much about
"them, and was glad they went on and prevail-
"ed;

1691. "ed, which, thanks be to God, they continue to "do; as the Reverend Mr. Woodward, who hath "obliged the World with a very particular Ac- "count of the Rise and Progress of them, hath "lately acquainted us. And these likewise are "Societies that have proved so exceedingly Ser- "viceable in the Work of Reformation, that they "may be reckoned a chief Support to it; as our "late Great Primate, Archbishop Tillotson, decla- "red upon several Occasions, after he had exa- "mined their Orders, and enquired into their "Lives, That he thought they were the best Friends "to the Church of England.

1692. The Queen being now in Administration of Affairs, began the Year with a seasonable Proclamation, dated March the 26*th.* for appointing a Publick and General Fast, to be observed throughout this Kingdom, on Friday April the 8*th.* and thenceforth on the Second Wednesday of every Month during the present War; for Imploring the Blessing and Protection of Almighty God, in the Preservation of their Majesties Sacred Persons, and Prosperity of their Arms both at Sea and Land.

Proclamation for a General Fast.

Queen Dowager returns to Portugal.

The Queen Dowager, who under all the Exigencies of Publick Affairs, had behaved Her Self, and govern'd Her Family, in a very prudent and inoffensive Manner; was now resolv'd to leave this Kingdom, and to retire to Her Native Country: And therefore, committing the Care of Her Palace, and Servants, and Estate, to the Charge of the Earl of Feversham, Her Majesty departed from Somerset-House on Wednesday March the 30*th.* and lay that Night at Rochester, the next at Canterbury, on Friday at Dover; whence She embark'd for Calais, from thence to continue Her Journey by Land to Portugal.

Sir Rowland Gwyn accused of Scandal.

Sir Rowland Gwyn, Treasurer of their Majesties Chamber, was complain'd of by the Lord Sidney, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; for speaking some Words reflecting on his Lordship, as if he had been Guilty of Bribery and Corruption. Sir Rowland was requir'd before Her Majesty in Council, to show what Grounds he had for his Accusation: And not being able to make it out, he was turn'd out of his Place; tho' otherwise a Person who had been very much Instrumental to the present Settlement. And to vindicate the Honour of the Lord Sidney, this Order of Council was published from the Court at Whitehall, April the 7*th.* 1692.

Vindication of the Lord Sidney.

"A Complaint having been made by the "Lord Sidney, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, a- "gainst Sir Rowland Gwyn, for Words spoken on "the 21*st.* or 22*d.* day of March last by him, re- "flecting upon his Lordship, as if he had taken "Money for disposing of Places in Ireland; and "Sir Rowland Gwyn having been required by "Her Majesty to show what Grounds he had for "speaking the said Words; (for doing whereof "he had Time given him to this day;) And "now being called in and heard, and not being "able to make out the said Matter, or to show "any Ground for speaking the said Words; Her "Majesty thereupon in Council was pleased to "declare, That the said Words were Ground- "less and Scandalous; and that Her Majesty "is fully satisfied of the Falshood of the "same.

The King in Holland.

His Majesty had embarked for Holland on the 5*th.* of March, had arrived the next Morning in the Maese, had landed at Orange-Polder, had gone the same day to the Hague, and not long after to Loo. But before he could begin the Campaign, the Jacobites in England began to be elevated with the Hopes of their Master's Restoration, and industriously to conspire for him. One Lunt who was employ'd to bring over and disperse King James's Commissions, having had the good Fortune to be discharg'd from Imprisonment, was again entertain'd in 1691. by the Lancashire Papists, to List Men, and Buy Arms; that if His Majesty should be taken off in Flanders, they might be ready for an Insurrection in England, as soon as the Blow was given. These Preparations having spent the Summer of the Year 1691. and the Campaign in Flanders being ended, without any News either of the Assassination or Invasion, Lunt was sent in November into France, to acquaint the Abdicated Monarch, That they were in a Condition to receive Him; and therefore desir'd Him to inform them, when His Affairs would permit Him to make a Descent into this Kingdom. Lunt return'd in December following, with Advice; That King James would be in England the next Spring; and that in the mean time Colonel Parker, and others, should be sent over with full Instructions how to put themselves into a Posture fit for His Majesty's Reception; for now the Descent from La Hogue was resolv'd upon.

1692. Plots of the Jacobites.

Colonel Parker, and Johnson the Priest, who in Conjunction with some few others, had projected the intended Murder of the King, Landed in England about the latter end of Jan. last; and thinking the Assassination of His Majesty to be the only means to make the Invasion practicable, and the Conquest of England easy, they communicated this Design to as many as they could Trust: And (as Mr. Goodman deposed) were in hopes to have done it before the King went to Holland; but they were so long in contriving how, by whom, when, and where it was to be done, that the time happily lapsed before their Consultations came to Maturity: However, Parker assur'd 'em that the Assassination Plot would be re-assum'd in Flanders, by the same Persons who had undertaken it last Compagin. While King James was preparing for a Descent, He was to leave His Queen Big with Child, and drawing near Her Time; upon which Occasion, He sent a Letter, dated April 2. to several Lords and others of His late Privy Council, requiring such of them as could possibly come, to pay their Attendance at St. Germains, to be Witnesses of the Labour of His Royal Consort; which Letter was also Directed to the Dutchesses of Somerset and Beaufort, the Marchioness of Hallifax, the Countesses of Derby, Mulgrave, Rutland, Nottingham, Lumley, and Danby; the Ladies Brooke, Fitzharding, and Fretchville; and to the Wives of these following Commoners, of Sir John Trevor Speaker, Sir Edward Seymour, Sir Christopher Musgrave, Sir Thomas Pope Blount, Sir John Guise, Thomas Foley, Esqs; Sir Thomas Stamp, Lord Mayor, Sir William Ashhurst, Sir Richard Levett, the Two Sheriffs; and in Conclusion, to Dr. Hugh Chamberlain, a Person Eminent for the Practice of Midwifry; but none of these Persons answer'd that Invitation. So that without their Appearance the Queen was said to be soon after deliver'd of a Daughter.

Letter of K. James, to attend at the Queen's Delivery.

Progress of the Jacobite Plot.

When the Scheme of a Descent was fully laid in France, Colonel Parker and others, were sent over to communicate it to the Jacobite Party here. This the Colonel did, by calling some General Officers, and other Confederates together, and acquainting 'em (according to the Depositions of Captain Blaire, before the Privy Council) That their Old Master had now obtain'd of the Most Christian King, Thirty thousand effective Men, and that when the Spring was a little more advanc'd, K. James, who was already marching into Normandy, would 1692. be wafted over with them into England; with Aſſurance, that if that Number was not great enough to reduce His Rebellious Subjects, France would ſpare Him Thirty thouſand more. Therefore He deſir'd all to be in a readineſs with the greateſt Speed and Secrecy imaginable: And addreſſing himſelf particularly to Captain Blaire, (at the inſtance of Johnſon the Prieſt) he told him, He was going to Command in Lancaſhire, but intended to move Southward at His Majeſty's Landing; and therefore deſired the Captain to join him, in regard his own Men were Raw, and the Captain's, for the moſt part, were all old Officers and Soldiers.

When Parker went into Lancaſhire, he took with him ſeveral good Officers; ſome of which ſtaid with him in that County, and others he diſpos'd of in Yorkſhire, and the Biſhoprick of Durham. His Head-Quarters were at Mr. Walmſley's at Dungan-Hall; from whence he iſſued out his Orders. And becauſe their Arms were (for fear of Diſcovery) hid in Woods or Hedges, or buried between Walls, or laid up in Cellars and Out-houſes, he order'd 'em all to be taken out and diſtributed among the Officers and Liſted Men: While Mr. James Fountaine, a Lieutenant Colonel to the Lord Montgomery, and Colonel Holman were Compleating each a Regiment of Horſe in London to join the Late King at his Landing.

K. James prepares for a Deſcent.

For by this time K. James had left Paris, and was come to La Hogue with a conſiderable Army of Engliſh, Scotch, Iriſh, and French, ready to embark for England. And to prepare the way, he had ſent over a very formal Declaration to this Effect.

Sends over a Declaration.

"That whereas the French King according to his Promiſe, had put him into a way of endeavouring his Reſtoration, and to that end had lent him as may Troops as were enough to unty the Hands of his Subjects, and to make it ſafe for them to return to their Duty, and repair to his Standard; and yet purpoſely declined the ſending over ſuch numerous Forces, as might raiſe Jealouſie in the Minds of any of his good Subjects; as if he intended to take the Work out of their Hands, and deprive them of ſo glorious an Action as the Reſtoration of their Lawful King (all which Troops he promiſed to ſend away, as ſoon as he was put into peaceable Poſſeſſion) though the thing was obvious enough in it ſelf, and that he did not think himſelf obliged to ſay any more upon that occaſion, than that he came to aſſert his own juſt Rights, and to deliver his People from the Oppreſſions they lay under: Yet, conſidering how ſtrangely they were deluded by the Prince of Orange's Declaration, and to prevent as much as in him lay, the ſame for the future, he was willing to look back, and take the Matter from the beginning. And it could not be forgotten, that as ſoon as he had notice of the Prince's Intentions to Invade him, he put himſelf both by Sea and Land, into the beſt poſture of Defence he was able; and ſeemed to have done the ſame ſo effectually, that tho' the French King offered him conſiderable Succours, he refuſed them, and threw himſelf wholly upon the Fidelity of the Engliſh Army; and at the ſame time applied himſelf to give reaſonable Satisfaction to the Minds of his good Subjects, and undeceive them in reſpect to the Danger of the intended Invaſion: But they perceiv'd it not till it was too late, and the Defection grown ſo general, that he was at length neceſſitated to retire into France, in order to avoid the preſent Danger which threatned him, and to preſerve himſelf for better Times, and a more happy Opportunity, which was then put into his Hands. 1692.

"Upon that Foundation of Juſtice or common Senſe, the Prince's Faction in England, were pleas'd to Treat his Eſcape out of the hands of his Enemies, in the Style of an Abdication; which was never before uſed to ſignifie any thing, but a voluntary Reſignation: But upon which, they built ſuch a Superſtructure, as to make an Ancient Hereditary Monarchy become Elective. Then he goes on to ſhew the Miſeries and Inconveniencies, which he ſuppoſes had already, and would ſtill attend ſuch unwarrantable Proceedings; inſiſts upon the indiſputable Title of his only Son, hoping his Queen was then with Child of another; ſets forth the calamitous Condition of Europe, by reaſon of that War, an end of which there could be no reaſonable Proſpect of till his Reſtoration; he comes to prohibit his Subjects to pay any Taxes to ſupport the preſent Uſurpation; and to gain them all over to his Service, he declares he would pardon all of them that ſhould return to their Duty, (except the Perſons hereafter named) provided all Magiſtrates, upon notice of his Landing, made ſome publick Manifeſtation of their Allegiance to him, and Submiſſion to his Authority: And he further declared, that if any of the Soldiery, who were in the Prince's Service, ſhould come in to him, they ſhould be Pardoned, and have their Pay and Arrears. Likewiſe He promiſed to Maintain the Church of England, and earneſtly recommended to his Parliament the ſettling of Liberty of Conſcience, and in a Word, to do every thing that might tend to the Honour and Welfare of the Nation.

But out of this offer of Pardon, he was pleaſed to except the Duke of Ormond, the Marqueſs of Winchester, the Earls of Sunderland, Bath, Danby and Nottingham, and the Lords Newport, Delamere, Wiltſhire, Colcheſter, Cornbury, Dunblain and Churchill; the Biſhops of London and St. Aſaph; Sir Robert Howard, Sir John Worden, Sir Samuel Grimſton, Sir Stephen Fox, Sir George Treby, Sir Baſil Dixwell, Sir James Oxenden, Dr. John Tillotſon, Dr. Gilbert Burnet, Francis Ruſſel, Richard Leveſon, John Trenchard Eſq; and Charles Duncomb Citizen of London; together with all ſuch as offered perſonal Indignities to him at Feverſham, and thoſe who as Judges, and Jurymen, had a hand in the Murder of Mr. Aſhton, Mr. Croſs, &c. and likewiſe all Spies and ſuch as had betrayed his Councils during his late Abſence from England.

Perſons excepted out of K. James's Pardon.

The Queens Wiſe Conduct.

The Queen being Informed of the deſigned Invaſion, with a Maſculine Courage and aſſiduous Care, gave Orders for haſtning out the Fleet, and putting the Militia in readineſs. She ſent over for Three Regiments of Foot, Colonel Selwin's, Beveridg's, and Lloyd's from Holland, under the command of Lieutenant General Talmaſh, which together with ſome other Troops remaining then in the Kingdom, did afterwards form a Camp near Portſmouth. To be the better ſecured from the dangers of an Inſurrection, She Publiſhed a Proclamation May 4. "Commanding all Papiſts and reputed Papiſts, forthwith to depart from the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and from within Ten Miles of the ſame. And to provide for the Advice and Aſſiſtance of a ſitting Parliament, She publiſhed another Proclamation May 5. requiring the Attendance of the Members of Both Houſes, on May 24. the Day to which the Parliament had been Prorogued, declaring that they ſhould on the ſaid day Meet and Sit for the Diſpatch of ſuch Weighty and Important Affairs,

"as

1692. "as may be requiſite for the ſafety of the Kingdom, "in a Time when it was threatned with a powerful "Invaſion from abroad." In the next place She cauſed a diligent Search to be made after ſeveral of the moſt Diſaffected Perſons, and ordered Warrants to be Iſſued out againſt them, upon which they withdrawing themſelves from their uſual Places of Abode, and being fled from Juſtice She publiſhed a Proclamation May 9. to Diſcover, Take and Apprehend Robert Earl of Scarſdale, Edward Henry Earl of Litchfield, Edward Lord Griffin, Charles Earl of Newbourg, Charles Earl of Middleton, Charles Earl of Dunmore, the Lord Forbs Eldeſt Son of the Earl of Granard, James Griffin Eſq; Sir John Fenwick, Sir Theophilus Oglethorp, Sir Andrew Foreſter, Colonel Henry Slingsby, James Grahme Eſq; ------- Orby, Second Son of Sir Thomas Orby Deceaſed, Colonel Edward Sackville, Oliver St. George Eſq; Son of Sir Oliver St. George, Major Thomas Soaper, Charles Adderly Eſq; David Lloyd Eſq; George Porter Eſq; Son of Thomas Porter Eſq; Deceaſed, and Edward Stafford Eſq; And to be the better guarded, She order'd the Militia of Weſtminſter, being Two Regiments of Foot of about Fifteen Hundred Men each, and a Troop of Horſe to appear in Hide Park on Monday May 9. under the Earl of Bedford Lord Lieutenant of Middleſex; and the next Day, the Train'd Bands of the City of London, in Six Regiments, under the Command of the Lord Mayor, and other their reſpective Colonels, conſiſting together of about Ten Thouſand Men, were drawn out in the ſame place. Her Majeſty was pleaſed to go in Perſon among 'em on both Days, and was extreamly pleaſed with the good Order they appeared in, and the great Zeal and Readineſs they ſhew'd for Her Majeſty's Service.

Proclamation to prevent ſuſpected Perſons.

The Fleet under the Command of Admiral Ruſſel paſſed through the Downs on May the 8*th.* where they were joyned by Admiral Allemonde, with the Dutch Squadron under his Command, and ſoon after met the other part of our Fleet from St. Hellens, under Command of Sir Ralph Delaval, and Rear Admiral Carter. Some time before, the Jacobites had ſent over Captain Lloyd Expreſs to the Lord Melford, to acquaint his Lordſhip, "that they had corrupted ſeveral of "the Engliſh Sea Commanders, particularly Rear "Admiral Carter, and with that falſe Intelli- "gence they tranſmitted to him an exact Liſt "of the Number and Rates of the Engliſh Fleet, "and how long it would be before it was poſſible "they could be joined by the Dutch; Praying "his Lordſhip to lay it before the moſt Chriſtian "King, and procure his Command to Mareſchal "de Tourville to ſeek and immediately to Fight "the Engliſh, before they could be Reinforced "by the Hollanders." Upon the receipt of this Meſſage, the Lord Melford applied himſelf to the King of France, who immediately gave his poſitive Commands to Tourville to Engage the Engliſh Fleet, without waiting for the Thoulon Squadron, under Monſieur D'Eſtrees. Upon this Occaſion a Report was ſpread abroad, as if ſome of the Officers of Their Majeſties Fleet were Diſaffected, or not hearty in Their Service, and that the Queen had thereupon order'd the Diſcharge of many of 'em from their Employments. Her Majeſty was with great Wiſdom ſenſible, that nothing could prevent the Truth of this Rumour, more effectually than to declare Herſelf convinc'd of the falſhood of it. And therefore She Commanded the Earl of Nottingham to Write to Admiral Ruſſel, and to let him know, that Her Majeſty was ſatisfied that this Report was raiſed by the Enemies of the Government, and that She Repoſed ſo entire a Confidence in their Fidelity and Zeal for Their Majeſties Service, and the Defence of their Country, that She had Reſolved not to diſplace any one of them. Which being communicated to 'em by the Admiral, they ſent up a very Dutiful and Loyal Addreſs, wherein ſay they, We Humbly preſume to Addreſs our ſelves to your Majeſty at this juncture, to undeceive the World in thoſe Falſe and Malicious Reports that have been lately ſpread in prejudice of Your Maieſty's Service, by People of an unreaſonable Diſſaffection to Your Majeſty's Government, and an obſtinate Averſion to the Quiet and Good of our Country; That there are ſome amongſt us that are not truly zealous for, and entirely devoted to your Majeſty's Service. We do therefore moſt humbly beg your Majeſty's leave to add to our repeated Oaths this Aſſurance of our Fidelity, that we will with all imaginable Alacrity and Reſolution, venture our Lives in the Defence of your Majeſties undoubted Rights, and the Liberty and Religion of our Country, againſt all Foreign and Popiſh Invaders whatſoever. This Addreſs was ſign'd by Sir John Aſhby Admiral of the Blue, Sir Ralph Delaval Vice Admiral of the Red, Mr. Rook Vice Admiral of the Blue, Sir Cloudeſly Shovel Rear Admiral of the Red, Mr. Carter Rear Admiral of the Blue, and by other Commanders in the Fleet; and was preſented on May 16. by the Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty. Her Majeſty accepted it very Graciouſly, being pleaſed to ſay, That She always had this Opinion of the Commanders, but was very glad, this was come to ſatisfie others.

The Fleet ſet out.

Intelligence ſent from France.

Prudence of the Queen.

Loyalty of the Seamen.

Upon this Aſſurance which the Queen gave and receiv'd from Her Fleet, She publiſh'd a Proclamation the ſame day; declaring that the Parliament ſhould be Prorogued from May the 24*th.* to the 14*th.* of June next; giving this for the Chief Reaſon: Our Navy being now at Sea, and joined with that of our Allies, and in a Readineſs (by the Bleſſing of God) to Reſiſt and Repel the Deſigns and Attempts of our Enemies. Whereby Her Majeſty expreſſed an Intrepid Temper, and indeed a Prophetick Spirit.

Parliament Prorogued.

Whilſt the Jacobites were pleaſing themſelves with hopes of approaching Succeſs, the firſt thing that put a Damp upon 'em, was the various Reports about the Joining of the Engliſh and Dutch Fleets. Once they had notice they were Joined, but this being contradicted the next Day, leſt that Report ſhould have Influence upon the French, they ſent over Sir Adam Blaire to aſſure them that the Dutch were not yet come up; yet ſo it happen'd, that before the Gentleman could reach Dover, they had certain News that the Fleets were Joined indeed; and therefore one Mr. Clark was diſpatched into France to acquaint them with this fatal Junction. But Mr. Clark was ſo far from gaining Credit to his Report, (Sir Adam Blaire averring the contrary) that he was Impriſoned as a ſpreader of Falſe News, till ſeveral other Expreſſes confirm'd his Account. Thereupon the King of France ſent Meſſenger upon Meſſenger to Tourville to decline Fighting; but theſe Counter-orders arrived too late.

For on the 19*th.* of May, whilſt both France and England were at a-gaze in dubious Expectation of this important Event; about Eleven in the Morning, the French Admiral bore down and Engaged the Confederate Fleet off Cape Barfleur; and both Fleets continued Fighting till about half an hour paſt Four in the Afternoon, when the French towed away with all their Boats; the great Firing on both ſides having ſoon occaſion'd a Calm. But a freſh Gale ſpringing up about Six, the Blue Squadron renew'd the Fight, and maintain'd it till Ten at Night; when the French being worſted, and having had Four Ships blown up, ſteer'd away for Conquet-Road.

French Fleet Engage the Engliſh.

All

1692. And are beaten.

All that Night it was very Calm, and Foggy the next Morning; but about Eleven it beginning to clear up a little, the Engliſh ſaw the French Fleet about Two Leagues from them, very much leſſen'd in their Number, not ſeeming to be above Thirty Eight Men of War; after whom they made all the Sail they could. But about Ten it grew Calm again; and at Three in the Afternoon the Two Fleets came to an Anchor, but weighed about Eleven at Night, and anchor'd next Morning. On the 21*ſt.* the Engliſh Sail'd again againſt the Enemy, the Admiral ſteering towards Barfleur, and the Dutch and Blue Squadron towards the Road of Alderney, thro' which Part of the French Fleet got ſafe to St. Malo's, the Engliſh not thinking it ſafe to purſue them that way; for which Sir John Aſhby was queſtion'd in Parliament. Sir Ralph Delaval had better Succeſs: For off of Cherbourg he burnt the Royal Sun, a Ship of a Hundred and Four Guns, commanded by Admiral Tourville; the Admirable, a Ship of a Hundred and Two Guns; and the Conquerant, that carried Eighty Guns; with Three more of leſſer Rate. Admiral Ruſſel was no leſs ſucceſsful in purſuit of Thirteen French Men of War, who hawl'd in for La Hogue: In which Bay he anchor'd the 21*ſt.* and next day ſtood in, and ſent Vice-Admiral Rook with ſeveral Men of War, Frigats, Fire-ſhips, and Arm'd Boats, to endeavour to deſtroy that Part of the Enemies Fleet. But the French had got their Ships ſo very near the Shore, that not any of the Men of War, except their ſmall Frigats, could do any Service. However, that Night Six of the Enemies Men of War were burnt, and the next Day the other Seven, beſides ſeveral Tranſport-Ships. The Attempt was very difficult and dangerous, but was perform'd with that Conduct and Reſolution, and the Seamen in the Boats were ſo animated by their Victory, that they took poſſeſſion of ſeveral of the Enemies Ships, and drove the French with their own Guns, from their Platforms and Batteries, on Shore; and all this in the ſight of the French and Iriſh Camp, that lay ready to invade England.

Deſtruction of French Ships.

Relation of this Victory in Two Letters.

The moſt Authentick Relations of this Glorious Action at Sea, are given in Two Letters from our Fleet, which deſerve to be here inſerted. The Firſt from Admiral Ruſſel; the Second from Sir Ralph Delaval.

Admiral Ruſſell's Letter, dated May 20. 1692.

Cape Barfleur, S. W. Diſtance Seven Leagues.

"YEſterday about Three in the Morning, "Cape-Barfleur bearing S. W. and by S. Di- "ſtance Seven Leagues, my Scouts made the "Signal for ſeeing the Enemy. The Wind Weſter- "ly, the French bore down to me, and at Ele- "ven engaged me, but at ſome diſtance. We "continued Fighting till half an hour paſt Five "in the Evening, at which time the Enemy "towed away with all their Boats, and we after "them. It was Calm all day. About Six there "was a freſh Engagement to the Weſtward of "me, which I ſuppoſed to be the Blue. It con- "tinued Calm all Night. I can give no parti- "cular Account of Things; but that the French "were beaten, and I am now ſteering away for "Conquet Road, having a freſh Gale Eaſterly, but "extream Foggy: I ſuppoſe that is the Place "they deſign for. If it pleaſe God to ſend us a "little Clear Weather, I doubt not but we ſhall "Deſtroy their Whole Fleet. I ſaw in the night "Three or Four Ships blow up, but I know not "what they are. So ſoon as I am able to give "you a more particular Relation, I will not be "wanting. 1692.

Sir Ralph Delaval's Letter to the Earl of Nottingham; on Board the Royal Sovereign near Cherburgh, May 22.

"I Believe it my Duty to acquaint you, That "on the 21*ſt.* Inſtant, Admiral Ruſſell having "made the Signal for the Fleet to cut their Ca- "bles, I obſerved the French to be forced from the "Race of Alderney, (where they anchor'd) to the "Eaſtward; and finding that ſome of them en- "deavour'd for the Bay of Cherburgh, I ſtood in "for that Place; where I found Three Three- "Deck'd Ships of the Enemies, but ſo cloſe to "the Shore, and within ſome Rocks, that it was "not ſafe for me to attempt them, till I had in- "formed my ſelf of the Road, they being hawl- "led into Shoal-Water: I immediately took my "Boats, and Sounded within Gun-ſhot of them; "which they endeavoured to prevent, by Firing "at us. And that no time might be loſt, I "went immediately on Board the St. Albans; "where, for the Encouragement of the Seamen, "I hoiſted my Flag; and having ordered the "Ruby, with Two Fireſhips, to attend me, I "ſtood in with them, leaving the Great Ships "without, as Drawing too much Water. But "coming very near, they galled ſo extremely, "and finding the Fire-ſhips could not get in; I "judged it beſt to Retreat without Shot, and "there Anchor'd; and immediately called all "the Captains. Where it was reſolved to at- "tempt them on the Morning with all the Third "and Fourth Rates, and Fire-ſhips. But after "having drawn them into Four Fathom and a "half Water, I found we could not do our Bu- "ſineſs, the Water being Shoal: Upon which "I order'd Three Fireſhips to prepare themſelves "to attempt the Burning of them; going my "ſelf with all the Barges and Tenders, to take "them up, if by the Enemies Shot they ſhould "miſcarry. Indeed, I may ſay, and I hope "without Vanity, the Service was warm; yet "God be praiſed, ſo effectually performed, that "notwithſtanding all their Shot both from their "Ships and Fort, Two of our Fire-ſhips had "good Succeſs, by Burning Two of them; the "other by an unfortunate Shot was ſet on Fire, "being juſt going on Board the Enemy. In- "deed ſo brave was the Attempt, that I think "they can hardly be ſufficiently rewarded; and "doubt not but Their Majeſties will do them "Right. The Third French Ship being run a- "ſhore, and obſerving the People on Board to "go a-ſhore by Boats full; I order'd the St. Al- "bans, the Reſerve, and others, to fire upon her, "judging it might cauſe them to quit her: And "after having Battered her ſome time, I obſer- "ved ſhe made no Reſiſtance. I took all the "Boats armed, and went on Board her. I found "abundance of Men on Board, and ſeveral "wounded, but no Officers: And having cauſ- "ed all the People, as well thoſe that were "wounded as others, to be taken out, I ſet her "on fire; and had I not had notice by my "Scouts, that Thirty Ships were ſtanding with "me, had ſent all the French on ſhore, who are "now very troubleſome to me. The Ships we "ſaw proved to be Sir John Aſhby and the Dutch "coming from the Weſtward. We are proceed- "ing together to the Eaſtward to La Hogue; "where I am inform'd Three or Four of the E- "nemies Ships are; and if ſo, I hope God will "give us good Succeſs. I expect to find the Ad- "miral to-morrow; where I hope to hear he "has deſtroyed ſome of the Enemies Ships, having

1692. " ing left him in Chase of them last Night, " standing to the Eastward, and pretty near them, " as I judged. My Lord, I hope you will ex- " cuse me, if I presume to pray, you will use your " Interest with the Queen, That a Reward may " be given to the Three Captains of the Fire- " ships, and several of the others; for greater Zeal, " and greater Bravery, I never saw. I pray your ex- " cuse for being thus Tedious, and thus Particular. " Pray God preserve Their Majesties, and that " Their Arms may be ever Crowned with Suc- " cess by Sea and Land, shall be the Prayers and " Endeavours of, &c.

P.S. Captain Heath burnt Tourville's Ship, the Royal Sun, which was the most difficult. Capt. Greenway burnt the other, called the Conquerant. The Admirable was burnt by our Boats. Captain Fowlis attempted the Royal Sun, but was set on Fire by the Enemies Shot; yet deserves as well as the others.

After these two Relations, there came other Letters from the Fleet, which gave this farther Account of prosecuting our happy Success. " On " May 23d, in the Afternoon, Admiral Russell " sent in Vice-Admiral Rook, with several light " Frigates and Fire-ships, together with all the " Boats of the Fleet well Armed, to Burn the " French Ships which he had forced Ashore near " la Hogue. The Attempt was very Difficult and " Dangerous; but it was made with such Con- " duct and Resolution, and our Men in the Boats " behaved themselves so bravely, taking Possessi- " on of several of the Enemies Ships, and beat- " ing the French with their own Guns from their " Platforms on the Shore, that Six of the said " Ships were burnt that Night, and Six more the " next Morning, in Sight of the French and Irish " Camp who Fired upon us: Of these, Six were " of Three Decks, and the other Six, from Six- " ty to Seventy Guns; and One Ship of Fifty " six Guns was Overset, and utterly lost; many " of the French Seamen perished with their Ships, " and a greater Number were taken Prisoners. " From the latter we hear, That they lost Four " or Five great Ships in the Fight, one of which " was Monsieur Gabarel's, Admiral of the Blue " Squadron, of Ninety odd Guns; so that we " have destroy'd about 21 of their biggest Ships, " besides the two Frigates, and other small " Craft: And had it not been for the Foggy " Weather, few of the rest would have escaped. " On the other side, we have not lost one Ship, " except Fire-ships, which were spent upon Acti- " on; and besides Rear-Admiral Carter, and Co- " lonel Hastings, we have not lost one Commissi- " on Officer. As to the Number of Seamen " that were Killed or Wounded in the Engage- " ment, we can yet give no certain Account " thereof.

" On the 25th, Admiral Russell set Sail from " la Hogue, and Anchored the 26th off of St. " Helens, after having burnt twenty of the " Enemies Transport Ships, (they having there " about Fifty in all), and sent Sir John Ashby, " with a Squadron of English and Dutch Men of " War, and several Fire-ships, to make the like " Attempt if he found it practicable, upon their " Shipping at Havre de Grace. The Admiral had " given Orders, That publick Prayers and " Thanksgivings should be made to Almighty " God on the 27th, throughout Their Majesties " Fleet, for this Great and Signal Victory.

K. James despondes, and writes a melancholy Letter.

King James felt this to be so heavy a Blow, that he never recover'd the Impression of it; he seem'd now to recede from all hopes of His Restoration, and fell to writing this Melancholy Letter to the French King.

Monsieur, My Brother,

" I Have hitherto with something of Constan- " cy and Resolution supported the Weight of " all the Misfortunes, which it has pleased Hea- " ven to lay upon Me, so long as My self was " the only Sufferer: But I must acknowledge " this last Disaster utterly overwhelms Me; and " I am altogether Comfortless, in reference to " what concerns Your Majesty, through the great " Loss that has befallen Your Fleets. I know too " well, that My Unlucky Star it is, that has " drawn down this Misfortune upon Your Forces, " always Victorious, but when they Fought for " My Interests. And this is that which plainly " tells Me, That I no longer Merit the Support " of so great a Monarch, and who is always sure " to Vanquish when he Fights for Himself. For " which Reason it is that I request Your Majesty, " no longer to concern Your Self for a Prince " so Unfortunate as My Self; but Permit Me to " retire with My Family to some corner of the " World, where I may cease to obstruct the usu- " al Course of Your Prosperities and Conquests, " which only My Misfortune could interrupt. " It is not just, that the Potentest Monarch in " the World, and the most Flourishing above all " others, should share in My Disgrace, because " You are too Generous: 'Tis better much, that " I shall only Retire till it please Omnipotent " Providence to be more propitious to My Af- " fairs. But howsoever it pleases over-ruling " Heaven to dispose of Me and Mine, or into " whatsoever Recess I may be thrown, I can as- " sure Your Majesty, That I shall always pre- " serve, to the last Gasp of My expiring Breath, " that due Acknowledgment which I still retain, " of Your Favours and constant Friendship. Nor " can any thing more contribute to my Consola- " tion, than to hear, as I hope to do, when I " have wholly quitted Your Dominions, of the " quick Return of all Your wonted Triumphs " both by Sea and Land, over Your Enemies " and Mine, when my Interest shall be no lon- " ger intermixed with Yours. I am,

Monsieur, My Brother,
Yours, &c.
James Rex.

The Queen wisely improves this great Success.

The Wise and Happy Queen was no sooner Inform'd of the Victory, but She sent a Gratuity of Thirty thousand Pounds, down to Portsmouth, to be Distributed among the Seamen and Soldiers; Order'd Medals to be made for Tokens of Honour to the Officers; and caused the Bodies of Rear-Admiral Carter, and Colonel Hastings, who were Slain in the Engagement, to be honourably Interr'd. At the same time, Her Majesty considering to what Advantage this Success might be improv'd, by making a Descent into France, before the Enemy had recover'd their Consternation, Order'd great Preparations to be made towards it. On the 23d of July, All the Forces design'd for this Expedition, were Ship'd off at Portsmouth: And on the 25. The Duke of Leimster, who commanded in chief, Embark'd on Board the Breda. The Orders, as 'tis usual, were not to be open'd till they were at a certain Distance at Sea; and in regard they set Sail with a fair Wind, in the most favourable Season of the Year, there was no small Expectation of some considerable Enterprize. But 4 or 5 Days after, Intelligence came, That all the Transport Ships had put into St. Hellens Road, with part of the Fleet which they met off of Torbay. This unexpected Return occasion'd various Conjectures; but all that came to publick Notice, was, That the next day after the Fleets were join'd, Admi-

1692. ral Ruſſel and the reſt of the Commanders went on Board the Breda, where the Duke of Leimſter's Commiſſion was open'd; and that on the 29*th.* a Council of War was held on Board the General, where it was Reſolved, that they ſhould Steer towards the Coaſt of England. On the 8*th.* of Auguſt the Tranſport Ships, and a Squadron of Men of War arrived in the Downs, from whence they Sailed on the 20*th.* and Two Days after Landed at Oſtend; after having kept the French upon their own Coaſts in continual Alarms.

The Queen and Her Three Kingdoms being now ſecured at Home; let us ſee how Affairs are carried on Abroad. The Duke of Bavaria through the Influence of King William, was this Year made Governor of the Spaniſh Netherlands; who put thoſe Provinces into a far better State than formerly: Yet this did not hinder the King of France from attempting the Siege of Namur, one of the Strongeſt Places in all thoſe parts, both by its advantagious ſituation on the Confluence of the Sambre and the Maeſe, and by the excellent Fortifications, eſpecially a Caſtle built upon a Hill, in an Angle formed by thoſe Two Rivers. His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty inveſted the Town in Perſon, May 25. N. S. open'd the Trenches on the 29*th.* and purſued the Siege with ſo much Vigor and Diligence, that in Four Days He made Himſelf Maſter of all the Out-works, next St Nicholas Gate. The Gariſon ſeeing it was in vain to withſtand an Army encouraged by the preſence of their Monarch, Surrendred the City on June 5*th.* upon Articles, and retired into the Caſtle.

Campaign Abroad.

Upon the News of this Siege, King William with the Confederate Army under his Command, Decamped from Anderleck on the 27*th.* of May, N. S. Marched to Diegon, the next day towards Louvain, and pitch'd his Camp near Bethlem Abby, from whence he continued his March towards Namur, on the 3*d.* of June. But before His Majeſty removed, he gave the Enemy notice of His great Victory at Sea, by a Tripple Diſcharge of His Cannon, which were anſwered by Volleys of Small Shot from the Two Lines of the Army. 'Tis reported that the French King heard this Noiſe with a great deal of Unconcern; ſaying to this effect, Here's a mighty Pudder indeed about Burning Two or Three Ships. But what Face ſoever He put upon the Matter, the Conſequence ſhew'd it was the unhappieſt Blow He received during the whole Courſe of this War. For thereby His Sea-Coaſts remained expoſed to the Inſults of the Engliſh; nor has he been ever able to put out a Fleet, to meet the Confederates in the Channel.

The Duke of Luxemburgh who cover'd the Siege of Namur, with an Army of Seventy Thouſand Men, upon Information that the King of England moved towards the Mehaigne, march'd that way; and on June 8. the Two Armies almoſt equal in numbers, advanced in ſight of one another, the River only remaining between 'em. King William poſſeſſed himſelf of all the Poſts upon the Mehaign on his ſide, as Luxemburgh did of Two Villages ſurrounded with ſtrong Hedges and Thickets on the oppoſite Banks. The Confederates had ſuch an entire Command of the River by their Batteries, that the ſame Evening His Majeſty ordered the Pontoons to be laid over it, in order to Attack the Enemy the next Day. All things were in a readineſs for that Deſign; but the ſame Night and ſome following Days, the Weather proved ſo Rainy, that a ſtop was put to King William's Glorious Enterprize. The moſt remarkable Action before the Caſtle of Namur was the taking of Fort William, which was raiſed by that great Engineer Colonel Coehorne, and Defended by himſelf. The King of France being reſolved to carry this Work at any rate, cauſed it to be Aſſaulted on June 21. And though all the Efforts of his Men prov'd unſucceſsful, yet they return'd to the Storm the next Day. The Beſieged made an incredible Reſiſtance, Repulſing twice the Enemy with great Slaughter; but they return'd with freſh and redoubled Force, till they made themſelves Maſters of the Cover'd-way, and cut off the Beſieged from their Communication with the Caſtle. Monſieur Coehorne being dangerouſly Wounded, the Garriſon who thought themſelves no longer in a condition to hold out, deſired to Capitulate, reſerving only ſo much time to themſelves, as to ſend to the Prince of Barbanſon, Governour of the Caſtle, to give him notice of their Reſolution, which he readily allow'd; and thereupon Fort William, which from this time was called Fort Coborne, was ſurrendred up to the French, and the Conſequence of this Loſs, was the Surrender of the Caſtle it ſelf, on July 10.

K. William attempts to raiſe the Siege.

At this time King William lay encamp'd at Melle, where He form'd a Deſign to Surprize Mons, but was diſappointed in it. From Melle His Majeſty Marched His Army to Genap, thence to Hall, and on Auguſt 1*ſt.* over the River Senne, when he was joined by the Hannover Troops, to the Number of Eight Thouſand Men. On the other hand the King of France contenting himſelf with the Glory of having taken Namur in ſight of the Confederate Army, left the Command of his Forces to Luxemburgh, who pitch'd his Camp in an Advantagious Poſt, covered by a Wood and thick Hedges, between Enghine and Steenkirk, where His Brittanick Majeſty Reſolved to Attack him, upon the information of ſome Perſons that were thought to underſtand the Nature of the Ground.

Forms a Deſign of ſurprizing Mons

Accordingly on Sunday Auguſt 3. our Army marched early in the Morning, the Heavy Baggage being ordered to repaſs the Senne at Hall. There were ſeveral Defiles to paſs, and the ways to be made, which made it a tedious March; but however about Ten a Clock the Prince of Wirtemburgh with the Vanguard, which conſiſted of Four Battalions of Engliſh Foot, Two of Danes, and a Detachment of Churchill's Brigade, advanced towards the Enemy, and fell upon them with ſo much Vigor that he drove them from Hedge to Hedge, poſted himſelf in the Wood that fronted the Right Wing of their Army; and erected Two Batteries of Cannon, on little Eminences, one on the Right, and the other on the Left of the Wood. Whilſt theſe Batteries were playing upon the Enemy, the Confederate Army marched up to the head of the Defile, (about half an Engliſh Mile from the Wood) where it open'd in a little Plain, not above half a League over, which terminated upon the Right of the Wood, and upon ſeveral Rows of high Trees, planted in order. Upon the Right of this Plain, there was a Farm, which ſoon after the Engagement was ſet on Fire by the Enemy, to cover (by the Smoak) ſeveral of their Battalions that were order'd this way. From the head of the Defile, upon the Left of the Plain, there was a deep hollow Way with high Trees and Hedges upon the Banks of it, which reach'd as far as the Wood where the Van-Guard was poſted, and where it branch'd it ſelf into two other deep Ways, and going thro' the Wood upon the Left to the Danes Attack, and to that of the Guards; and the other upon the Right, going along the outſide of the Wood. Between theſe two laſt, were poſted the Regiments of Sir Robert

1692. bert Douglas, Colonel Fitz-Patrick, and Colonel O Farrel.

When the Confederate Army was come up to the head of these Defiles, and just entring into the small Plain, they were order'd to halt, except the English Life-Guards, and Horse and Dragoons, and the Lord Cuts's, Lieutenant-General Mackay's, Sir Charles Graham's, and the Earl of Angus's Regiments; which being interlin'd with the Horse, were commanded at the same time to the Right Skirts of the Wood; whilst Prince of Hesse's, Collonel Lowther's, and the Earl of Leven's Regiments were also intermix'd with the Left-Wing of Horse, and posted upon the outside of the Wood. Things being thus disposed, and the Army continuing in their halt, Prince Wirtemberg, after he had Cannonaded for above two Hours, began the Attack with the Danes upon the Right, which was immediately followed by the other Four English Regiments, as compos'd the Van-Guard; and seconded by Cuts's, Mackay's, Angus's, Graham's, Lowther's, the Prince of Hesse's, and Leven's Regiments. Never was more terrible, and at the same time more regular Firing heard; for during the space of two Hours, it seem'd to be continu'd Claps of Thunder. The Van-Guard behav'd themselves with so much Bravery and Resolution, that tho' they receiv'd the Charge of several Battalions of the Enemies one after another, yet they drove them beyond one of their Batteries of Seven Pieces of Cannon; of which the Danes, and the second Battalion of the Regiment of English Guards possessed themselves, and which Colonel Wachop, who Commanded the English, would have sent away, had not the French cut off the Traces, and carried away the Horses. Sir Thomas Douglas with his first Battalion, charged several of the Enemies, and beat them from three several Hedges, and made himself Master of the fourth; when going through a Gap to get on the other side, he was unfortunately kill'd upon the Spot. All the other Regiments behav'd themselves with equal Bravery, firing Muzzle to Muzzle thro' the Hedges, they on the one side, and the Enemy on the other.

The King being made sensible of the Difficulties the Van-Guard had to Encounter, by one of Prince Wirtemberg's Aids de Camp, who had already sent two Messengers to Count Solmes, to no purpose, His Majesty dispatched away Count Paulin, one of his Aids de Camp, with positive Orders to Count Solmes, who Commanded the Main Body, to send more Foot to the Prince's Assistance: But Count Solmes, who ever was envious of the English, and who besides had a particular Jealousie of Prince Wirtemberg's Commanding the Attack, (an Honour which he would have had himself) instead of obeying his Majesty's Commands, order'd the Horse to March, and the Foot to Halt; which prov'd the loss of the Day: For the Ground was so straight, and the Enemy had such Hedges, Copses, and Ditches to cover them, that there was nothing to do for the Horse; so that when the Van-Guard began to Engage, they had none but part of the Infantry interlin'd with the Left-Wing of the Horse, to second them, the Body of the Foot being almost a Mile in the Rear. However, the King made all possible diligence to get the Infantry up, ordering a Brigade to march to the Wood, and forming a Line of Battel in the Plain, with such Foot as could come up. The eagerness of the Soldiers to follow their Royal Leader, and to engage the Enemy, was such, that they put themselves into some Disorder, and took more time to form their Battalions, than could now conveniently be spar'd; so that before they could reach the Default of Count Solmes.

Wood, the Van-Guard and Infantry of the Left-Wing being over-power'd by Thirty Battalions of the Enemy, that charged them continually one after another, and by a fresh Body of Dragoons brought up by Boufflers, they were forc'd to retreat in great Confusion, and to leave the Wood to the Enemies Possession. The English Life-Guards ow'd their Preservation to the Danish Foot-Guards; and Baron of Pibrack's Regiment of Lunenburghers being in Disorder upon the Skirt of the Wood, and the Colonel himself being dangerously Wounded upon the Place, Sir Bevil Granville who Commanded the Earl of Bath's Regiment, march'd up to his Relief, receiving the Enemies Fire before he suffer'd any Person of his Battalion to discharge once. By this Method he lodg'd himself in the Hollow-way near the Wood, ordered his Serjeants to carry off the Baron of Pibrack, and maintain'd his Post, till he was commanded to leave it by the Prince of Nassau. 1692.

Great Loss of the English.

The King enrag'd at the Disappointment of the Van-Guard, for want of a timely Relief, expres't his Concern, by often repeating these Words: Oh! my poor English, how they are abandon'd! Nor would he admit Count Solmes to his Royal Presence for many Months after. And now, considering the Fight was not to be renew'd without endangering the loss of the whole Army, Luxemburgh being considerably Reinforc'd by Boufflers; and besides, the Night drawing on, His Majesty commanded a Retreat, which was perform'd with admirable Order, and without any great disturbance, from the Enemy; who never durst engage the English in the Rear.

In this Battel the Confederates lost the Brave Lieutenant-General Mackay, Sir John Lanier, Sir Robert Douglas, the Earl of Angus, and divers other Gallant Officers; above Two Thousand Men kill'd, Three Thousand wounded, or made Prisoners, and several Pieces of Cannon. As for the French, bating the Honour of remaining Masters of the Field, they had not much reason to boast of any Advantage, having had the Prince de Turenne, the Marquis de Bellefonds, the Marquis de Tilladet, the Brigadeer Stoupa, the Marquis de Firmiacon; and several other Men of Distinction, and Two Thousand private Soldiers kill'd, and near as many wounded. Neither had they come off so cheap, had it not been for the Chevalier de Millevoix, one of the Elector of Bavaria's Domesticks, who had already given, and still endeavour'd to give further Intelligence to the Mareschal de Luxemburgh, of the King's Motion and Designs; for which he was hang'd on a Tree in the Right Wing of His Majesty's Army.

A more Infamous Criminal was about this time deliver'd up into the Hands of Justice: For the Chevalier de Granvale returning from Paris, where he had engag'd one Leefdale, a Person of a good Family near Boisleduc, to join with Dumont, in the hellish Design of Assassinating King William, he appointed a Meeting at Uden, whither Dumont was come from Hanover. There it was agreed, That when the King should pass along the Lines, or when the Army should decamp, Dumont should be in Ambush, and Shoot His Majesty; and that as soon as the Murder was committed, a Party of Three Thousand Horse from the Duke of Luxemburgh's Army, and Headed by Monsieur Chamlays, and Colonel Parker, should rescue the Assassins, to colour the Villany with the shew of a Stratagem of War. But Providence still watching for His Majesty's Safety, permitted the Black Conspiracy to be discovered by Leefdale and Dumont; who related all the Circumstances of the Contrivance, and who they were that put Granvale upon this Wicked 1692. Attempt. Thereupon Granvale was Taken at Eyndenhoven; afterwards Tried by a Court Martial, and according to his Sentence, Hang'd, Drawn and Quartered, after he had made a full Confeſſion of his Crimes, without being put to the Torture. At his Execution he ſeem'd very Penitent, and expreſt ſome Reſentment againſt thoſe by whom he was undone. And 'tis with Horror that Hiſtory is obliged to ſay, that if we may give Credit to this Criminal's Dying Words, and the Depoſitions upon Record; not only Miniſters of State and Ambaſſadors, but even an Archbiſhop, nay, a Crown'd Head were at leaſt Privy to that deteſtable Project.

Granvale executed.

There was little more done this Campaign in Flanders, except the Defeat of a Party from Namur, by a Detachment from the Troops of Liege, commanded by Count Serclaes de Tilly; and the Bombarding of Charleroy by Monſieur de Boufflers. As for the Engliſh Forces, which landed at Oſtend on the 1ſt. of September (N. S.), under the Command of the Duke of Leimſter; they poſſeſſed themſelves of Furnes and Dixmuyde, which they began to fortifie, and by which the King ſeem'd to have ſome Great Deſign that way: But whatever it was, all miſcarried: Both theſe Places being abandoned to Boufflers by Count Horn, towards the beginning of the Year 1693. which King William much reſented in him; who, till now, always had a great Share in His Majeſty's Eſteem. Perhaps the ſame touch'd the Count very near, for he did not live long after.

Actions of the D. of Savoy.

The Duke of Savoy, who had been brought into the Confederacy by the Powerful Intereſt of King William, and was ſupported in it by great Sums of Money, and by conſiderable Forces under the Duke of Leimſter, now Duke of Schomberg; march'd in the Month of July at the Head of Twenty Thouſand Men, invaded the Province of Dauphinè: And having plunder'd La Roche, Chanteloue, and ſome other Villages; he made himſelf Maſter of the Caſtle and High-Lands of Guilleſtre. Whence on Auguſt the 5th. he croſs'd the River Durance, and moved towards the City of Ambrun: Which, after a briſk Siege of about Nine Days, was ſurrender'd upon Articles on Auguſt the 15th. Here the Duke of Savoy found Twenty Pieces of Cannon, and conſiderable Quantity of Proviſions; and the City preſently granted him Forty Thouſand Livres Contribution, which they Borrowed at Grenoble for that purpoſe. Beſides which, his Highneſs ſeiz'd upon Sixty Thouſand Livres in Gold, which was the French King's Money in the Hands of the Pay-Maſter of the Troops: And not only the City of Ambrun, but all the Neighbouring Towns and Villages, were at the ſame time put under Contribution. Here likewiſe the Duke of Schomberg publiſh'd a Declaration on Auguſt the 29th. in the Name of His Britannick Majeſty, inviting People to join him; and aſſuring them, That the King of England had no other End in cauſing his Forces to enter France; but only to reſtore the Nobility and Gentry to their ancient Splendor, the Parliaments to their priſtine Authority, the People to their juſt Privileges, and even to grant his Protection to the Clergy; and, in ſhort, to cauſe the Edict of Nants to be revived, of which the Kings of England had been made Guarantees. Encourag'd by this Declaration, ſeveral of the French Proteſtants that had been forc'd to abjure their Religion, took this Opportunity to make their voluntary Recantation before Monſieur Du' Bourdieu, the Duke of Schomberg's Chaplain. From Ambrun, the Army marched directly to Gap, a City upon the Frontiers of Provence; whoſe Inhabitants open'd their Gates to Prince Eugene of Savoy, upon his firſt appearing before it; and gladly conſented to Pay Contributions, to preſerve their Houſes from being burnt and pillag'd: A Treatment, which near Eighty Caſtles and Villages receiv'd from the Germans, in Retaliation of the Barbarities committed by the French in the Palatinate. Not only Grenoble, the Capital of Dauphinè, but the Neighbouring Provinces, and the Wealthy City of Lyons, began already to tremble: And, indeed, never had the Allies a fairer Opportunity of ſhaking the immenſe Power of France. But the Duke of Savoy's falling ſick of the Small Pox, and which was of more fatal Conſequence, the Spirit of Diviſion that crept among the Generals, not only hinder'd the Deſign that had been form'd of taking Briangon and *Qu'iera*s, but likewiſe incapacitated them to keep what they had already conquer'd. Thus having plunder'd the Country, deſtroy'd all the Proviſions they could not conſume or carry away, burnt all that refus'd to contribute; they blew up the Fortifications of Ambrun, took Money to ſave the Houſes, and ſo put an end to the Campaign. It is obſerv'd, that Monſieur Du' Bourdieu carried away with him above Two Hundred French Proteſtants, who choſe rather to expoſe themſelves to Beggery and Contempt in Foreign Nations, than to live in Plenty and Honour in their Native Land; where they muſt be forc'd to join in Divine Worſhip with thoſe whom they and their Fore-fathers did account to be Idolaters. It is farther obſervable, That Their Majeſties improv'd the Duke of Savoy's Alliance, toward the Reſtoration of the Vaudois; who, thro' the Violence of their late Perſecutions, were unable to keep up the Form of any Diſcipline, or even any Publick Worſhip; being unable to maintain a Miniſter, or a Schoolmaſter, among 'em. Monſieur Du' Bourdieu acquainted the Biſhop of St. Aſaph with their miſerable Condition; deſiring him to ſollicit Her Majeſty's Bounty in their behalf. That worthy Prelate, eminent for Piety, Charity, and Learning, chearfully laid hold on this Occaſion to ſerve the Proteſtant Intereſt; and finding the Queen as ready to Grant as he was to Ask; a Fund was eſtabliſhed out of Her Majeſty's Privy Purſe, for the Maintaining of Ten Preachers, and as many Schoolmaſters, in the Valleys of Piedmont.

1692.

The Duke viſited with the Small Pox.

Retires with his Army.

Good Offices to the Vaudois and other Poor Proteſtants.

To look home again: There was a famous Sham-Plot, invented with great Villany in Newgate, by one Robert Young; who had been committed to that Place till he diſcharg'd a Fine impos'd upon him for other Rogueries: And being very expert in Counterfeiting Hands, he was inſtructed by one Henry Pierſon, a Priſoner in the ſame Place for Debt, to contrive a Plot, and Father it upon the Earls of Marlborough and Salisbury, the Biſhop of Rocheſter, and ſome others. Pierſon being ſoon after at Liberty, employ'd one Stephen Blackhead to carry Letters between himſelf and Young. By a certain Stratagem, Young happen'd to ſee the Earl of Marlborough's Hand; which he counterfeited ſo cunningly, that it was very difficult to diſcern the true from the falſe. Afterwards he drew up an Aſſociation, and affixt to it the Hands of the Earls of Marlborough and Salisbury, as alſo Sir Bazil Firebraſs's, the Biſhop of Rocheſter's, and the Earl of Cornbury's; which Two laſt were writ by another Hand. And that the more Credit might be given to this pretended Plot, Young forg'd ſeveral Letters in the Name of the Lord Marlborough, ſuppoſed to be directed to himſelf; which Blackhead uſed to bring to him again. In the Month of April, Blackhead went three times to the Biſhop of Rocheſter's Houſe at Bromley, upon a Sham Errand from a ſuppos'd Divinity Doctor;

A Sham Plot by Young.

Biſhop of Rocheſter falſly accuſed.

1692. Doctor; but with no other intent than to convey the forg'd Association into a secret Place, where it was afterwards found by the King's Messengers; Who, upon information given by Young against that Reverend Prelate, came first to secure his Person, and then to search his House. His Lordship was some Days under Confinement; but upon a strict Examination of the whole Matter before the Council, and the Confronting of Blackhead with Young, the Forgery was evidently discover'd, and his Lordship's Innocence made manifest.

Earthquake. On Thursday September the 8*th*. about Two in the Afternoon, there happen'd an Earthquake in London and other Parts adjacent, which lasted about a Minute, and was felt very sensibly, not only in England, but in Flanders and other Parts of the Continent. The King was then in his Camp at Dinner, in an old decay'd House; which shaking very much, and every one apprehending it was ready to fall, His Majesty was prevailed with to rise from Table, and go out of the House: But the Surprize was soon over. On September the 13*th*. the Queen publish'd a Proclamation, for the better Discovery of Seditious Libellers; who endeavour'd not only to Traduce and Reproach the Ecclesiastical and Temporal Government of this Kingdom, and the Publick Ministers of the same; but also to stir up and dispose the Minds of Their Majesties Subjects to Sedition and Rebellion. And on the same day another Proclamation was publish'd, For the more effectual Discovery and Apprehending of Highway-Men and Robbers; by promising a Reward of Forty Pounds to the Discoverers or Apprehenders, after the Conviction of 'em.

The King withdraws from the Army. His Majesty parted from the Camp at Grammen on Friday September the 27*th*. having left the Command in Chief of the Army with the Elector of Bavaria. On Saturday His Majesty arriv'd at Breda, and went thence to his Court at Loo, to divert Himself for some few days. After some Refreshment he went to Brussels, and held a Council of War: Wherein he gave Orders for the March of the Forces into Winter-Quarters; and went thence to the Hague. He soon after embarked on Board the Mary-Yatch, attended by Sir Cloudesly Shovel with several Men of War, and landed safe at Yarmouth on October the 18*th*. He lay the next Night at Sir John Duke's, next Sexmondham. On Thursday October the 20*th*. the Queen met Him near Newhall; and about Eight in the Evening, Their Majesties came to Kensington, having passed thro' the City of London amidst the Acclamations of the People, and continued Illuminations of the Houses; which was follow'd with Bonfires, Discharging of Cannon, Fireworks, and other Demonstrations of an extraordinary Joy, for His Majesty's safe Return.

Returns to England.

Congratulated by the Lord-Mayor & Aldermen. On the Saturday following, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Recorder of London, attended His Majesty at Kensington: Where they Congratulated His Majesty's safe Return; and declared their high Satisfaction in His Majesty's Great and Glorious Enterprizes, for the Preservation of these Nations, and the Good of Christendom: With Assurance of their steady Resolutions to Assist His Arms, and Support His Government to the utmost of their Power. His Majesty received them very Graciously; and, as a Mark of His Favour, was pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthod upon Salathiel Lovel, Serjeant at Law, their Recorder. Who then in the Name of the rest, humbly invited the King and Queen to Honour the City at Dinner upon the Lord-Mayor's Day, at Guildhall. Their Majesties were pleased to accept the Invitation; and on October the 29*th*. the Day of Sir John Fleet's being Sworn Lord-Mayor, Their Majesties came into the City, attended by all the Great Officers of the Court, and a numerous Train of Nobility and Gentry in their Coaches; the Militia of London and Middlesex making a Lane for 'em. Their Majesties were pleased from a Balcony prepared for 'em in Cheapside, to see the Show. After which, They were conducted by the Two Sheriffs to the Guildhall; where Their Majesties, the Nobility, Privy Counsellors, the Judges, and the Ladies of the Chiefest Quality, Dined at several Tables. The Entertainment was Great and Magnificent, and Their Majesties were extreamly well satisfied with it; and the King was pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon John Wildman, William Gore, James Houblon, Aldermen; Leonard Robinson, Chamberlain; Rowland Aynsworth, William Scowen, Josiah Child, and John Foach, Citizens.

On Octob. 10. It had been ordered by Her Majesty in Council, That the Monthly Fast appointed by Their Majesties Proclamation, of the 24th day of March 1691. be for the present Discontinued till further Order; And on Octob. 22. A Proclamation was publish'd for a Publick Thanksgiving, on Thursday Octob. 27. in London and Westminster, and within the Bills of Mortality; and on Thursday Nov. 10. in all other Parts of the Kingdom: Forasmuch as it hath pleased Almighty God of his infinite Goodness, to Preserve Their Majesties and Their Government, against the Designs and Attempts of Their open and secret Enemies, to give Their Majesties a great and signal Victory at Sea against the French Fleet; to Protect His Majesty's Person from the many and great Dangers of the War, in His late Expedition beyond the Seas: To disappoint and defeat the barbarous and horrid Conspiracy, for taking away His Sacred Life by Assassination, and to bring Him back in Safty to this Kingdom. On Friday Nov. 4. His Majesty's Birth-day, the Parliament met at Westminster, whither His Majesty went by Water, and being Seated on the Throne, made this Speech to Both Houses.

Publick Thanksgiving.

Parliament meet.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech. "I Am very glad to meet you again in Parliament, where I have an Opportunity of "Thanking you for the great Supplies you have "given Me for the Prosecution of this War. "And I hope by your Advice and Assistance, "which has never fail'd Me, to take such Measures as may be most proper for Supporting "Our Common Interest against the excessive "Power of France.

"We have great Reason to Rejoyce in the "Happy Victory, which by the Blessing of God, "We obtained at Sea: And I wish I could tell "you, That the Success at Land had been answerable to it: I am sure my own Subjects had "so remarkable a Part in Both, that their Bravery and Courage must ever be remembred to "their Honour.

"The French are Repairing their Losses at Sea "with great Diligence, and do design to Augment their Land Forces considerably against the "next Campaign; which makes it absolutely necessary for Our Safety, that at least, as great "a Force be maintained at Sea and Land as We "had the last Year; And therefore I must ask "of you, Gentlemen of the House of Commons, a Supply suitable to so great an Occasion.

"I am very sensible how heavy this Charge is "upon My People; and it extreamly Afflicts "Me, that 'tis not possible to be avoided, without exposing Our Selves to inevitable Ruin and "Destruction. The Inconvenience of sending "out of the Kingdom great Sums of Money for "the Payment of the Troops Abroad, is, indeed,

"very

1692. "very considerable; and I so much wish it could "be Remedied, that if you can suggest to Me "any Methods for the Support of them, which "may lessen this Inconvenience, I shall be ready "to receive them with all the Satisfaction imagi- "nable.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"None can desire more than I do, That a Descent "should be made into France; and therefore "notwithstanding the Disappointment of that "Design this last Summer, I intend to Attempt "it the next Year, with a much more conside- "rable Force; and so soon as I shall be enabled, "all possible Care and Application shall be used "towards it.

"And upon this Occasion I cannot omit tak- "ing Notice of that Signal Deliverance, which "by the good Providence of God, We received "the last Spring, to the Disappointment and "Confusion of Our Enemies Designs and Ex- "pectations: This has sufficiently shewn us how "much We are exposed to the Attempts of France, "while that King is in a Condition to make "them; Let us therefore improve the Advantage "we have at this time of being joyned with most "of the Princes and States of Europe against so "Dangerous an Enemy: In this surely all Men "will agree, who have any Love for their "Country, or any Zeal for Our Religion: I "cannot therefore doubt but you will con- "tinue to Support Me in this War against the de- "clared Enemy of this Nation; and that you "will give as speedy Dispatch to the Affairs be- "fore you, as the Nature and Importance of "them will admit, that Our Preparations may "be timely and effectual for the Preservation of "all that is dear and valuable to Us.

"I am sure I can have no Interest but what is "yours; We have the same Religion to Defend; "and you cannot be more concern'd for the "Preservation of your Liberties and Properties "than I am, that you should always remain in "the full Possession and Enjoyment of them; "for I have no Aim, but to make you a Happy "People.

"Hitherto I have never spared to Expose My "own Person for the Good and Welfare of this "Nation; and I am so Sensible of your good "Affections to Me, that I shall continue to do so "with great Chearfulness upon all Occasions, "wherein I may contribute to the Honour and "Advantage of England.

This Judicious Speech was received with the Universal Approbation it deserv'd, and made a proper Impression in the Minds of Both Houses of Parliament. The Commons by an Address to the King, Nov. 14. "Acknowledged the great "Affection His Majesty show'd to His Subjects, "by taking Notice of their Bravery and Cou- "rage; by that sensible Concern He Express'd "for the Charges on His People, and by that "tender Regard for the Preservation of their Re- "ligion, Liberties, and Properties, as must ever "be remembred with Gratitude, by all His Faith- "ful Subjects. They likewise Acknowledged "the Favour of God, in Restoring His Majesty "in Safety to His People, after so many Hazards "and Dangers, to which He had expos'd His Sa- "cred Person, that there might be nothing want- "ing on His Part, to Oppose the Ambitious De- "signs of His Enemies, and to Maintain the Ho- "nour of England, and the Liberties of Europe. "They also Congratulated His Deliverance from "the secret and open Designs, which the Malice "of His Enemies had form'd against Him. And "assur'd Him, That they would always Advise "and Assist His Majesty in the Supporting of His "Government, against all His Enemies.

The Commons at the same time presented their Thankful Acknowledgment to the Queen, "For "Her Gracious and Prudent Administration of "the Government, whilst His Majesty was ha- "zarding His Royal Person Abroad; and for the "Blessings of Peace they enjoy'd at Home, un- "der Her Auspicious Reign, at a time when the "greatest Part of Europe was suffering the mise- "rable Effects of War. They also Congratula- "ted, not only the Signal Deliverance they re- "ceived from a bold and cruel Design, form'd "and prosecuted for Their Destruction, when it "was just ready to be executed, but likewise the "Return of Her Majesty's Fleet, with so com- "pleat and glorious a Victory, as was not to be "equall'd in any former Reign. Assuring Her Ma- "jesty, That the greatest Sense they had of their "Happiness under Her Government, should be al- "ways manifested in constant Returns of Duty "and Obedience, and a firm Resolution to do all "that was in their Power, to render Her Reign "Secure and Prosperous. 1692.

Proceed- ings of the Com- mons.

The first Business of Importance the Commons went upon on November 11. was the Bill formerly projected, for Regulating Tryals in Cases of High Treason; which at the Second Reading on Nov. 18. was referr'd to a Committee of the whole House; and a Clause being presented Dec. 1. to be added to the Bill, a Debate arose thereupon; the Result of which was, That the Bill was Order'd to lye upon the Table; and no farther mention was made of it during this Session.

Thanks to Admiral Russel.

On the same day Nov. 11. The Thanks of the Commons, by Order of the House, were given by the Speaker to Admiral Russell, one of their Members, for his great Courage and Conduct in the late Victory obtain'd at Sea; and this seem'd to secure that Admiral against any Re- flections on his Behaviour in that memorable Action. But through Envy or Prejudice, it was the next day suggested, that the Advantage gain'd upon the Enemy might have been much better Improv'd. Upon which, the House enter'd upon Examining the several Instructions, Orders and Results of Councils of War, touching the last Summer's Expedition, in relation to the Proceed- ings of the Fleet, and the Descent intended to be made upon France, after the Victory at Sea. Upon the 19. Nov. Sir John Ashby being examin'd, particularly in relation to the French Men of War that made their Escape into St. Malo; he gave the Commons an Account of the Proceed- ing of the Ships under his Command, in and af- ter the Engagement; with which they were so well pleas'd, that the Speaker, by Direction of the House, acquainted him, That the House took notice of his ingenuous Behaviour at the Bar; and that he had given an Account to the Satisfaction of the House; and was dismist from farther Attendance. The next thing the House took into Consideration, was, Why a Descent had not been made into France? Admiral Russell was question'd about it; but he Excus'd himself, by saying, That Twenty Days had past between his first Letter to the Earl of Nottingham, after the Fight, and his Lordship's Answer. And on the other hand, the Earl made it appear, That he had Acted ac- cording to the Orders he had receiv'd, which was all he could do, as Secretary of State. Whilst these things were in Agitation, the Lords at a Conference communicated to the House of Commons some Papers which their Lordships had re- ceiv'd from the King, relating to those Affairs; which Papers being Read in the Lower House, it was Resolved, That Admiral Russell in his Command of the Fleet, during the last Summer's Expedi- on, had behav'd himself with Fidelity, Courage, and Conduct.

Sir John Ashby ho- nourably acquitted.

On

1692. On the 14th of November, Sir Edward Seymour deliver'd to the Commons a Meſſage from His Majeſty, in Anſwer to their Addreſs the laſt Seſſion, in relation to the Eaſt-India Company. Upon occaſion of this Meſſage, the Houſe took into Conſideration the Matter relating to that Company; and after a great deal of time ſpent in it, a Bill was, Dec. 14. brought in for Preſerving, Regulating, and Eſtabliſhing the Eaſt-India Trade. The Bill was near Two Months depending, and occaſioned ſeveral Debates; the Reſult of which was, That the Commons, March 3. preſented an Addreſs to His Majeſty, That He would pleaſe to Diſſolve the Eaſt-India Company upon Three Years warning to the ſaid Company, according to the Power reſerv'd in their Charter. To this, the King, with His uſual Prudence and Reſerve, made Anſwer, That He would always do all the Good in His Power for this Kingdom; and that He would conſider of their Addreſs.

Affairs of the Eaſt-India Company.

The Supply which was mov'd for on the 15th of November, was unanimouſly Granted on the 22d of the ſame Month; and after Conſideration of the State of War for the Year 1693. it was Dec. 2. Reſolved, That the Sum of 1926516 Pounds be Granted to Their Majeſties for the Charge of the Navy; (including the Charge of the Ordnance, and the Finiſhing Their Majeſties Naval Yard at Hamoſe, near Plymouth; and the Building Four Bomb Veſſels, and Eight New Ships of the Fourth Rate.) And Dec. 10. The Sum of Two millions and ninety thouſand five hundred ſixty three Pounds for the Land Forces; including the extraordinary Charge of the Office of Ordnance, in relation to the Land Service, and the Charge of the Tranſports, Hoſpitals, Contingencies, and other extraordinary Charges of the War. Beſides which it was Reſolved, Dec. 3. That for the making good the Sum of 1341700 Pounds intended to be rais'd by the Act for a Quarterly Poll, the Sum of 750000 Pounds be Granted to Their Majeſties.

Supply Granted.

To levy theſe vaſt Sums it was Reſolved, 13. Dec. Firſt, That there be a Pound Rate of Four Shillings in the Pound for One Year, Charg'd upon all Lands, according to their yearly Value; as alſo upon all Perſonal Eſtates; and upon all Offices and Employments of Profit, other than Military Offices in the Army and Navy. Secondly, That there be a Fund of 70000 Pounds per Annum, ſet apart out of the Hereditary Exciſe till the 17th of May 1697. And afterwards by an Additional Exciſe upon Beer, Ale, and other Liquors, for the Payment of the Intereſt of a Million of Money, to be rais'd by Perſons voluntarily paying in that Sum, the Principal paid in to be ſunk, and the Perſons paying in the ſame, to Receive during their Lives, their reſpective Proportions of the ſaid 70000 Pounds, according to the Sums paid by them, with the Advantage of Survivorſhip, till all the Lives be determin'd. And Thirdly, Feb. 3. That certain Additional Impoſitions be laid upon Merchandiſe.

Ways and Means.

That part of the King's Speech, whereby His Majeſty ſeem'd to deſire the Advice of the Commons, took up a great deal of time. After ſeveral Debates, a Committee was appointed Dec. 12. to conſider how the Army abroad, in Their Majeſties Pay, might be ſupplied with Bread, Cloaths, and other Proviſions of the Growth of this Kingdom, to prevent the Exportation of the Coin thereof. And as for the Navy, a Motion being made Jan. 11. That His Majeſty be humbly adviſ'd to Conſtitute a Commiſſion of the Admiralty, of ſuch Perſons as were of known Experience in Maritime Affairs, it paſs'd in the Negative: But however, it was carried, that His Majeſty ſhould be Adviſ'd by that Houſe, That for the future, all Orders for the Management of the Fleet, ſhould paſs through the Hands of the Lords Commiſſioners for the Executing the Office of Lord High Admiral of England. Which Vote ſeem'd to be occaſion'd by the Difference between the Earl of Nottingham, and Admiral Ruſſil. 1692.

The Conſideration of the Petition preſented Nov. 7. by the Sheriffs, and ſeveral Aldermen of the City of London, in favour of the Orphans of the ſaid City, being put off from time to time, William Goodwin and Henry Goodwin, and others of the Diſtreſſed Orphans, preſented alſo a Petition to the ſame Effect: Both which being conſidered, the Commons at length, Feb. 17. Order'd a Bill to be brought in for ſatisfying the Debts due to the ſaid Orphans: But upon a Debate that aroſe at the ſecond Reading, the Bill was committed to a Committee of the whole Houſe, where it remain'd unfiniſh'd.

Caſe of the Orphans.

A Bill for the better Preſervation of Their Majeſties Perſons, which by the unanimous Conſent of the Commons, was order'd to be brought in on the 1ſt. of December, was nevertheleſs rejected at the ſecond Reading, the 14th. of that Month. The ſame Fate, Dec. 17. attended the Bill to aſcertain the Fees of Officers of Juſtice.

Bills Rejected.

Not many Days before, Sir Edward Huſſey preſented to the Houſe of Commons, a Bill touching Free and Impartial Proceedings in Parliament; which was Receiv'd, Read the firſt time, and ſome time after paſs'd, and ſent up to the Lords for their Concurrence. By this Bill ſeveral Perſons in Employments, both Military and Civil, were incapacitated to Sit in the Houſe of Commons: Which caus'd it to be very much oppos'd by the Lords that ſtood up for the Court; though on the other hand, ſeveral Peers ſpoke vehemently for it; and among the reſt, the Earl of Mulgrave, who upon this Occaſion, made this moſt Memorable Speech.

Earl of Mulgrave's Speech.

My Lords,

" This Debate is of ſo great Conſequence, that " I reſolv'd to be ſilent, and rather to be adviſed " by the Ability of others, than to ſhew my own " want of it: beſides it is of ſo nice a Nature, " that I who ſpeak always unpremeditately, ap- " prehend extreamly, ſaying any thing which " may be thought the leaſt Reflecting; though " even that ought not to reſtrain a Man here " from doing one's Duty to the Publick, in a " Buſineſs where it ſeems to be ſo highly con- " cerned.

" I have always heard, I have always read, that " Foreign Nations, and all this part of the World " have admired and envied the Conſtitution of " this Government. For not to ſpeak of the " King's Power, here is a Houſe of Lords to " adviſe him on all Important Occaſions, about " Peace or War; about all things that may con- " cern the Nation; the care of which is very " much intruſted to your Lordſhips. But yet, " becauſe your Lordſhips cannot be ſo Conver- " ſant with the generality of the People, nor ſo " conſtantly in the Country as is neceſſary for " that purpoſe, here is a Houſe of Commons " alſo choſen by the very People themſelves, " newly come from among them, or ſhould be " ſo, to repreſent all their Grievances, to ex- " preſs the true Mind of the Nation, and to diſ- " poſe of their Money, at leaſt ſo far as to begin " all Bills of that Nature; and if I am not mi- " ſtaken, the very Writ for Elections ſent down " to the Sheriffs, does impower them to chuſe; " what? Their Repreſentatives.

" Now my Lords, I beſeech you to conſider " the meaning of that Word Repreſentative; is it " to do any thing contrary to their Mind? It " would be abſurd to propoſe it: And yet how " can it be otherwiſe, if they, after being choſen, " change their Dependency, engage themſelves 1692. " in Imployments plainly inconſiſtent with that " great Truſt repoſed in them? And that I will " take the liberty to demonſtrate to your Lord- " ſhips they now do, at leaſt according to my " humble Opinion.

" I will Inſtance, Firſt in the leaſt and loweſt " Incapacity they muſt be under, who ſo take " Employments.

" Your Lordſhips know but too well what a " general Careleſsneſs there appears every Day, " more and more in the publick Buſineſs; if ſo, " how is it likely that Men ſhould be as diligent " in their Duty in Parliament, as that Buſineſs " requires, where Employments and a great " deal of other Buſineſs ſhall take up both their " Minds and their Time?

" But then in ſome Caſes 'tis worſe, as in " Commands of the Army, and other Employ- " ments of that kind, when they muſt have a " Divided Duty: For it does admirably become " an Officer to ſit Voting away Money in the " Houſe of Commons, while his Soldiers are " perhaps taking it away at their Quarters, for " want of his Preſence to Reſtrain them, and of " better Diſcipline among them; nay perhaps, " his Troop or Regiment may be in ſome Acti- " on abroad, and he muſt either have the ſhame " of being abſent from them at ſuch a time, or " from that Houſe where he is entruſted with " our Liberties.

" To this I have heard but one Objection by " a Noble Lord; That if this Act ſhould paſs, the " King is not allowed to make a Captain, a " Colonel, without diſabling him to ſit in Par- " liament.

" Truly, if a Captain has only deſerved to " be Advanced for expoſing himſelf in Parlia- " ment, I think the Nation would have no great " Loſs in the King's letting alone ſuch a Prefer- " ment.

" But, my Lords, there is another ſort of In- " capacity yet worſe than this, I mean that of " Parliament-Mens having ſuch Places in the " Exchequer, as the very Profit of them depends " on the Money given to the King in Parliament. " Would any of your Lordſhips ſend and in- " truſt a Man to make a Bargain for you, whoſe " very Intereſt ſhall be to make you give as much " as he can poſſibly?

" It puts me in mind of a Farce, where an Actor " holds a Dialogue with himſelf, Speaking firſt " in one Tone, and then Anſwering himſelf in " another.

" Really, my Lords, this is no Farce, for it's " no Laughing matter to undo a Nation: But " 'tis altogethr as unnatural for a Member of " Parliament to ask firſt in the King's Name for " ſuch a ſort of Supply; give an Account from " him how much is needful towards the Paying " ſuch an Army, or ſuch a Fleet; and then im- " mediately give by his ready Vote, what he had " before ask'd by his Maſters Order.

" Beſides, my Lords, there is ſuch a Neceſſity " now for long Seſſions of Parliaments, and the " very Privileges belonging to Members are of " ſo great Extent, that it would be a little hard " and unequal to other Gentlemen, that they " ſhould have all the Places alſo.

" All the Objections that have been made, " may be reduc'd to theſe.

" Firſt, 'Tis told us, that 'tis a Diſreſpect to the " King, that His Servants or Officers ſhould be " Excluded.

" To this, I deſire it may be conſider'd, That " 'tis in this Caſe, as when a Tenant ſends up " any Body to Treat for him: Would any of " your Lordſhips think it a diſreſpect; nay, " would the King himſelf think it any, if the " Tenant would not wholly refer himſelf to one 1692. " of your own Servants, or the King's Com- " miſſioners in the Caſe of the Crown? And if " he chuſes rather ſome plain honeſt Friend of " his own, to ſupply his Abſence here, will any " blame ſuch a Proceeding, or think it unman- " nerly?

" Beſides, your Lordſhips know even this Act " admits them to be Choſen, notwithſtanding " their Employments, provided the Electors " know it firſt, and are not deceived in their " Choice.

" All we would prevent, is, That a good Rich " Corporation ſhould not chuſe to intruſt with " all their Liberties, a plain honeſt Country " Neighbour, and find him within Six Months " changed into a preferr'd cunning Courtier; " who ſhall tye them to their Choice, tho' he is " no more the ſame Man, than if he were turn'd " Papiſt; which by the Law, as it ſtands alrea- " dy, puts an Incapacity upon him.

" Another Objection is, That this Act may by " its Conſequence prolong this Parliament; " which they allow would be a very great " Grievance, and yet ſuppoſe the King capa- " ble of putting it upon us; which I have too " much Reſpect for him to admit of: Tho' I am " glad however, that 'tis objected by Privy- " Counſellors in Favour, who conſequently, I " hope, will never adviſe a thing which they " now exclaim againſt as ſo great a Grievance.

" But pray, my Lords, what ſhould tempt the " King to ſo ill a Policy? Can he fear a freedom " of Choice in the People, to whoſe Good Will " he owes all his Power, which theſe Lords ſup- " poſe he may uſe to their Prejudice?

" And therefore give me leave to ſay, as I " muſt not ſuſpect him of ſo ill a Deſign, as the " perpetuating this Parliament, ſo he cannot, he " ought not to ſuſpect a Nation ſo entirely, I " was going to ſay ſo fondly Devoted to him.

" My Lords, no Man is readier than my ſelf " to allow that we owe the Crown all Submiſſion, " as to the time of Calling Parliaments accord- " ing to Law, and appointing alſo where they " ſhall Sit. But with Reverence be it ſpoken, " the King owes the Nation entire freedom in " chuſing their Repreſentatives; and it is no leſs " his Duty, than 'tis his true Intereſt, that ſuch " a fair and juſt Proceeding ſhould be uſed to- " wards us.

" Conſider, my Lords, of what mighty Con- " ſequence it may be, that ſo many Votes ſhould " be Free, when upon one ſingle one may de- " pend the whole Security or Loſs of this Na- " tion: By one ſingle Vote ſuch things may " happen, that I almoſt Tremble to Think: By " one Single Vote a General Exciſe may be " granted, and then we are all loſt: By one " ſingle Vote the Crown may be Impower'd " to name all the Commiſſioners for raiſing the " Taxes, and then ſurely we ſhould be in a fair " only way towards it.

" Nay, whatever has happen'd, may again be " apprehended; and I hope thoſe Reverend Pre- " lates will reflect, that if they grow once ob- " noxious to a prevalent Party, one ſingle Voice " may be as dangerous to that Bench, as a ge- " neral diſſatisfaction among the People proved " to be once in a late experience: Which I am " far from ſaying by way of Threatning, but " by way of Caution.

" My Lords, We may think, becauſe this con- " cerns not the Houſe of Lords, that we need " not be ſo over-careful of the Matter; but there " are Noblemen in France, at leaſt ſuch as " were ſo before they were Enſlav'd, who that " they might domineer over others, and ſerve a

" preſent

1692. "preſent Turn, perhaps, let all things alone ſo "long till the People were quite Maſter'd, and "the Nobility themſelves too, to bear them "Company.

"So that I never met a Frenchman, even of "the greateſt Rank, (and ſome had Ten Thou- "ſand Piſtoles a Year in Employments) that "did not envy us here, for our Freedom from that "Slavery which they groan under. And this I "have obſerv'd univerſally; except juſt Mon- "ſieur de Louvoy, Monſieur Colbert, or ſuch Peo- "ple: Becauſe they were the Miniſters them- "ſelves, who occaſion'd theſe Complaints, and "thriv'd by the Oppreſſion of others.

"My Lords, This Country of ours is very "apt to be provok'd; we have had a late Expe- "rience of it. And tho' no wiſe Man, but "would bear a great deal, rather than make a "buſtle; yet really the People are otherwiſe, "and at any time change a preſent Uneaſineſs "for any other Condition, tho' a worſe: We "have known it ſo too often, and ſometimes re- "pented it too late.

"Let them not have this New Provocation, "in being debarr'd from a Security in their Re- "preſentatives: For Malicious People will not "fail to infuſe into their Minds, that all thoſe "Vaſt Sums, which have been, and ſtill muſt "be rais'd towards this War, are not diſpos'd a- "way in ſo fair a manner as ought to be: And "I am afraid they will ſay, their Money is not "given, but taken.

"However, whate're Succeſs this Bill may "have, there muſt needs come ſome good Effect "of it: For if it paſſes, it will give us Security; "if it be obſtructed, it will give us Warn- "ing.

The Courtiers being too numerous, the other Party took an occaſion from an Objection they made, to wit, That this Act might by its Conſe- quence prolong this Parliament, which they allow'd would be a very great Grievance; to bring in and paſs another Bill, for the frequent Calling and Meet- ing of Parliaments; which they ſent down to the Commons, January the 21*ſt*. for their Concur- rence. But the King having no mind to part with this Parliament ſo long as the War laſted, refus'd His Aſſent to this Bill; although the Lords had agreed to the Amendments made to it by the Commons.

Bill for frequent Parlia- ments refu's'd by the King.

On Friday January the 20*th*. His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, attended with the uſual Solemnity; and gave His Royal Aſſent to 1. An Act for granting to Their Majeſties an Aid of Four Shillings in the Pound for One Year, for carrying on a Vigorous War againſt France. 2. An Act that the Inhabitants of the Province of York may diſpoſe of their Perſonal Eſtates by their Wills, notwithſtanding the Cuſtom of that Province. And to Eleven Pri- vate Bills.

Acts paſ- ſed.

January the 21*ſt*. A Complaint having been made to the Houſe of Commons, of a Printed Pamphlet, entitled, King William and Queen Ma- ry Conquerors; as containing Aſſertions of dange- rous Conſequence to Their Majeſties, to the Li- berties of the Subject, and Peace of the King- dom: The Houſe, upon Examination of the Matter, Order'd the ſaid Pamphlet to be burnt by the Hands of the Common Hangman; and that His Majeſty be deſir'd to Remove Mr. Ed- mund Bohun, the Licenſer, from his Employment, for having Allow'd the ſame to be printed. In this Debate it was ſuggeſted, that Dr. Burnet, Bi- ſhop of Sarum, had recommended this Notion of Conqueſt, in his Paſtoral Letter to the Clergy of his Dioceſe; tho' he had done it only upon a favourable Suppoſition, not in a way of Aſſer- tion: However, the Majority in the Warmth of Debating, and ſome of 'em for the ſake of Alluſion to the Author's Name, paſſed the ſame Cenſure on that Excellent Letter, and Or- der'd it publickly to be burnt by the Common Executioner. On January the 24*th*. the Lords came to a like Reſolution; That the Aſſertion of King William and Queen Mary's being King and Queen by Conqueſt, was highly Injurious to their Ma- jeſties, and inconſiſtent with the Principles on which this Government is founded, and tending to the Sub- verſion of the Rights of the People. Which Vote be- ing communicated to the Commons; that Houſe on the next day unanimouſly concurr'd with their Lordſhips, with the Remarkable Addition of ſome Words; viz. Injurious to Their Majeſties Rightful Title to the Crown of this Realm.

In deteſta- tion of the Noti- on of Conqueſt.

On Thurſday January the 26*th*. His Majeſty came again to the Houſe of Peers, and gave His Royal Aſſent to, 1. An Act for granting to Their Majeſties certain Rates and Duties of Exciſe, upon Beer, Ale, and other Liquors; for ſecuring certain Recompences and Advantages in the ſaid Act mentio- ned, to ſuch Perſons as ſhall voluntarily Advance Ten Hundred Thouſand Pounds, towards carrying on the War againſt France. 2. An Act for taking Special Bails in the Country, upon Actions and Suits depend- ing in the Courts of King's-Bench and Common- Pleas, and Exchequer at Weſtminſter. And to One Private Act.

Acts paſ- ſed.

About this time, ſeveral Officers of the Army wanting Men to Compleat their Companies, a- greed with thoſe that had Warrants to Preſs for the Sea; who, under pretence of Preſſing for the Navy, took up great Numbers of Young Men, whom they Shipp'd off for Holland, and there forc'd them into Land-Service: Among the reſt, a Servant belonging to One of the Members of the Houſe of Commons happen'd to be thus ſpirited away. Upon which the Houſe Order'd this Grievance to be repreſented to the King by Sir Edward Seymour: And on February the 9*th*. His Majeſty by the ſame Meſſenger re- turn'd a Gracious Anſwer to the Houſe, to let them know, How much He reſented it, that His Subjects ſhould meet with ſuch Hard Uſage; and that He would take all Care poſſible for the future to Puniſh the Authors of it. And that in the firſt place His Majeſty had call'd before Him the Officers of the Ar- my, and given them a ſtrict Charge, that they ſhould receive no Men that were impreſſed. And that He had given Orders to the Admiralty, to Examine the Preſs- Maſters that had committed thoſe Abuſes; and that there ſhould be ſuch Exemplary Puniſhment inflicted on 'em, that others ſhould be deterr'd from doing the like. And on the ſame day, His Majeſty, to that Ef- fect, publiſhed the following Order.

Redreſs'd by the King.

"WHereas We are informed of Abuſes "committed by Preſs-Maſters, in the "Impreſſing of Land-Men, whom they have "delivered over to ſome Officers of Our Army, "to Serve as Soldiers in Flanders: And for pre- "venting the ſame for the future, We do here- "by ſtrictly Charge and Require all Colonels, "Commanders of Battalions, and all other Offi- "cers whom it may concern, not to Liſt, Re- "ceive into, or Detain in their Companies, any "Man whatſoever that ſhall have been impreſſed; "upon pain to any Commiſſion-Officer Liſting, "Receiving into, or Detaining ſuch impreſſed "Men, of being immediately Caſhier'd; and "to the Non-Commiſſion Officers, of the ſeve- "reſt Puniſhment that may be inflicted on 'em. "We have likewiſe given Orders, that the Preſs- "Maſters offending herein, be puniſhed with the "utmoſt Rigor, according to their Demerits. "Given at Our Court at Whitehall, this 9*th*. day "of February, 1692.

1692. The good Correſpondence which had hitherto appear'd between the King and Parliament, was likely to be diſturb'd, by the Informations given to the Commons, of the ill State of Ireland. Upon which, the Houſe Order'd an Addreſs to be drawn up; which was preſented to His Majeſty on March 10. in this Form.

Addreſs of the Commons upon the State of Ireland.

" We Your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal Subjects the Commons in Parliament Aſſembled, having taken into our Serious Conſideration, the State of Your Majeſty's Kingdom of Ireland, find our Selves Obliged by our Duty to Your Majeſty, with all Faithfulneſs and Zeal to Your Service, to lay before Your Majeſty the great Abuſes and Miſmanagements of the Affairs of that Kingdom.

" By expoſing Your Proteſtant Subjects to the Miſery of free Quarter, and the Licentiouſneſs of the Soldiers, to the great Oppreſſion of the People; which we conceive hath been occaſion'd chiefly by the Want of that Pay, which we did hope we had fully provided for.

" By Recruting Your Majeſty's Troops with Iriſh Papiſts, and ſuch Perſons who were in open Rebellion againſt You, to the great endangering and diſcouraging of Your Majeſty's Good and Loyal Proteſtant Subjects in that Kingdom.

" By Granting Protections to the Iriſh Papiſts, whereby Proteſtants are hindred from their Legal Remedies; and the Courſe of Law ſtopt.

" By Reverſing Outlawries for High Treaſon againſt ſeveral Rebels in that Kingdom, (not within the Articles of Limerick), to the great Diſcontent of Your Proteſtant Subjects there.

" By letting the Forfeited Eſtates at under Rates, to the Prejudice of Your Majeſty's Revenue.

" By the great Embezlement of Your Majeſty's Stores, in the Towns and Gariſons of that Kingdom, left by the late King James.

" And by the great Embezlements which have been made in the Forfeited Eſtates and Goods, which might have been employ'd for the Safety and better Preſervation of Your Majeſty's Kingdom.

" We crave leave alſo to repreſent to Your Majeſty, that the Addition to the Articles of Limerick, after the ſame were finally Agreed to and Signed, and the Town thereupon Surrendred, hath been a very great Encouragement to the Iriſh Papiſts, and a weakening to the Engliſh Intereſt there.

" Having thus, moſt Gracious Sovereign, out of our Affectionate Zeal to Your Majeſty's Service, with all Humble Submiſſion to Your Great Wiſdom, laid before You theſe Abuſes and Miſmanagements in Your Kingdom of Ireland, we moſt Humbly Beſeech Your Majeſty for Redreſs thereof,

" That the Soldiers may be paid their Arrears, and the Country what is due to them for Quarters; and that no Iriſh Papiſt may ſerve in Your Army there.

" And foraſmuch as the Reducing of Ireland hath been of great Expence to this Kingdom, we do alſo Humbly Beſeech Your Majeſty, that (according to the Aſſuranee Your Majeſty has been pleaſed to give us) no Grant may be made of the Forfeited Eſtates in Ireland, till there be an opportunity of ſettling that Matter in Parliament, in ſuch manner as ſhall be thought moſt Expedient.

" That a true Account of the Eſcheats and Forfeited Eſtates, both Real and Perſonal, and Stores left by the late King James, may be laid before the Commons in Parliament; to the end, that the ſaid Eſcheats, Forfeitures, and Stores, and the Embezlements thereof, may be Enquired into. 1692.

" That no Outlawries of any Rebels in Ireland may be Reverſed, or Pardons granted to them, but by the Advice of Your Parliament; and that no Protection may be Granted to any Iriſh Papiſt, to ſtop the Courſe of Juſtice.

" And as to the Additional Article which opens ſo wide a Paſſage to the Iriſh Papiſts, to come and Repoſſeſs themſelves of the Eſtates which they had Forfeited by their Rebellion; we moſt Humbly Beſeech Your Majeſty, that the Articles of Limerick, with the ſaid Addition, may be laid before you Commons in Parliament, that the manner of obtaining the ſame may be Enquired into; to the end it may appear by what means the ſaid Articles were ſo engaged; and to what Value the Eſtates thereby obtained do amount to.

" Thus, may it pleaſe Your Majeſty, we Your moſt Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, do lay theſe Matters in all Humility before You; and as Your Majeſty hath been pleaſed to give us ſuch Gracious Aſſurances of Your readineſs to Comply with us, in any thing that may tend to the Peace and Security of this Kingdom, we doubt not of Your Majeſty's like Grace and Favour to that of Ireland; in the Safety and Preſervation whereof, this Your Majeſty's Kingdom is ſo much concerned.

To which Addreſs His Majeſty returned this Prudent Anſwer; Gentlemen, I ſhall always have great Conſideration of what comes from the Houſe of Commons; and I ſhall take great Care that what is Amiſs ſhall be Remedied. The Houſe ſeem'd to be well Satisfied with this Anſwer; and proceeded Vigorouſly in the remaining Part of the Supplies; being Senſible that His Majeſty was deſirous to go early into Holland.

And to ſhew the greater Expedition, ſome Bills were to be left unfiniſh'd: The Commons had paſſed One, To enable Their Majeſties to make Grants, Leaſes, and Copies of Offices, Lands and Hereditaments, Parcel of Their Dutchy of Cornwall, or annexed to the ſame; and for Confirmation of Leaſes and Grants already made. To which the Lords made ſome Amendments, that were diſagreed to by the Commons. As for the Bill for Prohibiting the Uſe of all Lotteries; which had alſo Paſs'd the Lower Houſe, the Patentees of the Royal Oak Lottery found means to have it ſtopt in the Upper. The Bill for preventing the Prophanation of the Lord's-day, lay neglected after the firſt Reading; As alſo the Bill for removing Doubts, and preventing Controverſies, concerning Royal Mines; after it had been Ingroſſed. Neither was any Progreſs made in the Bill for preventing the Exportation of Gold and Silver, and the Melting down of the Coin of this Realm. Bills left unfiniſh'd

On Tueſday March 14. His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to, 1. An Act for Granting to Their Majeſties certain Additional Impoſitions upon ſeveral Goods and Merchandizes, for the Proſecuting the preſent War againſt France. 2. An Act for Review of the Quarterly Poll, Granted to Their Majeſties in the laſt Seſſions of this Preſent Parliament. 3. An Act for continuing certain Acts therein mentioned, and for Charging ſeveral Joint Stocks. 4. An Act for preventing Suits againſt ſuch as acted for Their Majeſties Service, in Defence of this Kingdom. 5. An Act for Reviving Two former Acts of Parliament, for the Repairing the Highways in the County of Hertford. 6. An Act for encouraging the Apprehending of Highwaymen. 7. An Act to prevent Abuſes committed by the Tra- Bills paſſed.

After which, His Majesty made this most Gracious Speech to Both Houses of Parliament.

King's Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"THE large Supplies which you have given "Me this Session, are so great Testimonies "of your good Affections, that I take this Occasion with great willingness to return My "Hearty Thanks to You: And I assure You, it "shall be My Care, to see that that Money You "have given, may be effectually applied to such "Services as may be most for the Honour and "Interest of England.

"I must recommend to Your Care the Peace "and Quiet of the several Counties to which "You are now returning, and doubt not but by "Your Care, the Supply which You have so freely given, will not only be effectually levied, "but with the greatest Equality too, and the "least Uneasiness to the People that is possible.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"The Posture of Affairs does necessarily require My Presence Abroad; but I shall take "Care to leave such a Number of Troops here, "as may be sufficient for the Security of the "Kingdom against any Attempts of our Enemies.

"I shall add no more, but that as I shall continue to expose My own Person upon all Occasions, for the Good and Advantage of these "Kingdoms, so I do likewise assure You, that "my hearty and sincere Endeavours shall never "be wanting in any other kind, to make this a "Great and Flourishing Nation.

And then the Parliament was by His Majesty's Command Prorogued to the Second Day of May next.

Honours and Preferments.

As to the Honours and Preferments that were this Year the Marks of Royal Favour, About the middle of April His Majesty was pleas'd to create the Right Honourable Sir Henry Capell Baron Capell of Tewkesbury, in the County of Glocester. On April 27. Sir George Treby, Knight, Samuel Eyre, Francis Purley, William Coward, George Pricket, Tho. Gooding, Henry Gould, Roger Moor, Reginald Bretland, John Darnel, Joseph Girdler, Littleton Powys, Nathan Wright, and Charles Bonython, Esq; were called by Their Majesties Writ to the State and Degree of Serjeants at Law. About the middle of June Their Majesties were pleased to appoint Nicholas Horne, Esq; to be their Consul at Alicant: The Lord Sidney was again appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and arrived at Dublin August 5th, where the Lords Justices resigned the Sword to him, and the Lord Chancellor made a short Speech to this effect.

"That it being usual upon such Occasions as "this was, to give his Excellency an exact Account of the Condition and Affairs of the "Kingdom, They now thought it wholly unnecessary, being sensible his Lordship was thoroughly acquainted therewith. That their Majesties could not have fix'd upon a Person more "to the Mind and general Satisfaction of the "Kingdom, than his Excellency; and that they "were in hopes the Work which was so successfully begun, in bringing this Nation out of the "Ruin it was involved in, into an entire Peace, "(to which his Excellency has been the greatest "Contributor) would now be fully perfected". On Septemb. 28. Sir John Macklain, Chief of the Macklains, and Proprietor of the Island of Mull, in the West Highlands of Scotland, having submitted himself to their Majesties Government, and delivered up his Castles to be governed by their Majesties Forces, came to Whitehall, and had the Honour to kiss the Queen's Hand, and went thence to Holland, to throw himself at His Majesty's Feet. In the beginning of October, their Majesties were pleased by Letters Patents to constitute and appoint William Broderick, Esq; Their Attorney-General of the Island of Jamaica, in the Place of Simon Musgrave, Esq; lately deceas'd. And on October 30. His Majesty was pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Col. William Beeston, Lieutenant Governor and Commander in Chief of Jamaica, who kissed His Majesty's Hand in order to his going to that Government.

About the end of December His Majesty granted to Sir John Trevor, Speaker of the House of Commons, and First Lord Commissioner of the Great Seal, the Office of Master of the Rolls, in the Place of Henry Powle, Esq; lately deceased. On Jan. 12. William Bridgman, Esq; was sworn one of the Clerks of the Privy Council, in the Place of John Dyve, Esq; deceased. On Sunday Jan. 22. Colonel Edwin Stede, late Lieutenant Governor of Barbadoes, presenting an Address to His Majesty, from the Grand Jury of that Island, received the Honour of Knighthood. On Jan. 26. His Majesty conferred the Honour of Knighthood upon Christopher Greenvil of Preston in Lancashire. His Majesty being now intent upon preparing His Fleet for the next Summer's Expedition, thought fit to lay aside Admiral Russel, and put the Chief Command of the Fleet into the Hands of Henry Killegrew, Esq; Sir Ralph Delaval, and Sir Cloudesly Shovel, and constituted them to be Admiral by a Joint Commission; and on Feb. 8. His Majesty was pleased to appoint George Rook, Esq; to be Vice Admiral of the Red; John Lord Barclay, Vice-Admiral of the Blue; Colonel Matthew Aylmer, Rear-Admiral of the Red; and Captain David Mitchel, Rear-Admiral of the Blue. On Feb. 16. the King came to Portsmouth to see the Men of War at Spithead, and went on Board Vice-Admiral Rook, upon whom His Majesty conferred the Honour of Knighthood. When His Majesty was setting Things in order for his Journey to Holland, to leave the Administration of Affairs upon a surer Bottom in His Absence, He was pleased on March 23*d.* (the 1692. Civil Officers. Day before his departure) to Commit the Custody of the Great Seal to Sir John Somers, Attorney General, who was accordingly Sworn Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, and one of their Majesties most Honourable Privy Council. The same Day Sir John Trenchard Knt. was Sworn one of their Majesties Principal Secretaries of State, and of the Privy Council. His Majesty ordered a new Commission to pass under the Great Seal, constituting Sir John Lowther of Whitehaven Bar^t. Henry Priestman Esq; Anthony Lord Viscount Falkland, Robert Austin Esq; Sir Robert Rich Bar^t. Henry Killegrew Esq; and Sir Ralph Delaval Knt. to be Commissioners for executing the Office of Lord High Admiral of England. And at the same time His Majesty was pleased to grant to the Honourable Edward Russil Esq; the Office of Treasurer of Their Majesties Chamber.

On the Death of Dr. Thomas Wood Bishop of Litchfield and Coventry, Their Majesties were pleased to nominate William Lord Bishop of St. Asaph to be Translated to that See. On Sunday February 19*th*. Dr. John Hartstongue, Chaplain to his Grace the Duke of Ormond, Kiss'd Their Majesties Hands for the Bishoprick of Ossery in the Kingdom of Ireland, void by the Death of Dr. Thomas Otway.

William Mountford the famous Comedian, was set upon in the Street, in a Quarrel on the account of Mrs. Bracegirdle, an Eminent Actress, and was Barbarously Murder'd; the Lord Charles Mohun being unhappily in the Company, was Indicted for this Murder, and brought a Prisoner from the Tower, to his Tryal before the Peers in Parliament, in a Court prepared for that purpose in Westminster Hall, the Marquis of Carmarthen being Constituted Lord High Steward of England, pro hac Vice. The Court was open'd on Jan. 31. and the Tryal began between Twelve and One, and lasted till near Six in the Afternoon, when the Peers Adjourn'd to their own House, and after some Debate Adjourned there till the next Day; when after some further Debate they Adjourn'd to Friday February 3*d*. when in the said Court in Westminster-Hall, several Questions were proposed in Points of Law to the Judges then present, to which they gave their Resolutions. On the next Day their Lordships came into the Hall, and deliver'd their Judgment Seriatim, upon their Honours; and by a very great Majority the Lord Mohun was Acquitted of the said Murder.

Lord Mohun Indicted for the Murder of Mr. Mountford.

Acquitted by his Peers.

On the last Day of the Old Year His Majesty parted from Kensington very early, and came to Harwich that Night, but was not able to Embark by reason of the contrary Winds; so on Monday March 27. His Majesty came back to Colchester, and Dined and Lay that Night at the House of Mr. Isaac Rebow, upon whom His Majesty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood, and return'd to Kensington on March 28*th*. and on the 31*st*. parted from thence again for Gravesend, where He Embarked and set Sail about Five that Afternoon, with a Fair Wind for Holland, being attended by several Yatchts, and a Squadron of Men of War, under the Command of Rear Admiral Mitchell, and was accompanied by the Duke of Ormond, the Earl of Essex, and other Persons of Quality. He arrived safely in the Maese, on April 2*d*. went to the Hague, and from thence to Loo, from whence he went to the Army, and with great Diligence possess'd himself of the Camp at Parke, by which He entirely broke the French King's Designs upon Brabant, who was thereby obliged to send a Strong Detachment under the Command of the Dauphin and the Mareschal de Boufflers into Germany, and Forms a Camp at Parke.

He Himself return'd to Versailles, without attempting any thing. The French under the Duke of Luxemburgh, were all this while Encamped at Meldert, and though their Convoys were very much disturb'd by the Garison of Charleroy, yet it seem'd a Trial of Skill between both Armies, which should continue longest in their Posts; but at length the French July 13*th*. were forced to quit theirs first; Marching to Heilisheim in their way towards the Maese; which gave the King an opportunity to send a strong Detachment under the Command of the Prince of Wirtembergh, to Force the Lines which the French had made to cover their Conquer'd Countries, from the Scheld to the Lys, and so to Ipres, Birg St. Winox, and to the very Sea by Dunkirk. At the same time Count Tilly, General of the Troops of Liege, was marching with a Reinforcement to Joyn the King, of which Luxemburgh being inform'd, he march'd immediately with a good Body of Troops to hinder that Conjunction; which he did effectually, surprizing the Count in the Hollow-Way, through which he was marching, and forcing him to Retreat to Maestricht, leaving near Two Hundred of his Men Killed, and all his Baggage behind him. The Prince of Wirtembergh's Forcing the Lines with good Success July 18. and Raising great Contributions, did not hinder the Duke of Luxemburgh from laying Siege to Huy on the 19*th*. of July which made the King advance nearer the Country of Liege; But when His Majesty came to Tongres, He was Surprized to hear that the Castle of Huy had Capitulated. Upon further Information that Monsieur Luxemburgh was drawn nearer Liege, His Majesty sent Ten Battalions thither, which, with great difficulty got at length into the Place; that now absolutely rejected the Neutrality Luxemburgh offer'd. Thereupon the French General made a Feint of Besieging Liege, though his real Design was to Attack the King, now Encamped at Neerhespen, so much weaken'd by the several Detachments he had made to reinforce the Garisons of Liege and Maestricht, that it was generally computed that the French were at least Thirty Five Thousand Men Stronger. The King to know the certainty of the Enemies Designs, before he went farther off from the Maese, sent out daily some Parties of Horse, one of which returned on the 28*th*. of July, (N. S.) and gave His Majesty an account they could not go beyond Warem, because they met there with a great Party of French Horse; which was indeed the Left Wing of their Army upon the March. As soon as the King had notice of the Enemies Approach, he got on Horseback, with the Elector of Bavaria and Chief Officers of the Army, and finding by the Enemies Countenance, that 'twas the Vanguard of their whole Army that was coming to Attack him in his own Camp, His Majesty immediately order'd to Arms, and to draw in Battel, to expect the Enemy. Most of the General Officers were for repassing the Geet, but His Majesty chose to make the Advantage of the Ground he had, and venture a Battel, notwithstanding the vast disproportion of the Two Armies, rather than expose his Rear to the Enemies Charge. Besides, the French were now near the great and defenceless Towns of Brabant, which must feel the effects of their Fury, unless they had been stopt by venturing an Engagement; and as the Benefits of a Victory were great, so upon the worst supposition of the Event, the King had still Prince Wirtembergh's Victorious Army, ready to make up the Breaches of His own; an Advantage which the Enemy had not so ready on their side. The Right of the Confederates in this Camp was at Heylissem and 1693. and Wangen, upon the River Geet, and reach'd as far as Neerwinden, being covered with a ſmall Brook, ſeveral Hedges and Hollow-Ways. The Elector of Bavaria had his Quarters at Wangen; the Body of Foot, and Left Wing of the Horſe reached from thence as far as Dormal, upon the Brook of Beck, where Lewe remain'd in their Rear.

There are hereabouts Two Rivers, both which have the name of Geet, the greater and the leſs: The greater Geet comes from Judoign to Tillemont; the leſſer, which did run upon the Right part of the Rear of the Confederates Camp at Neerheſpen, has its Spring abont Lens-les-Reguines, and ſo runs to Hannuge, and ſeveral other Villages, to both the Heyliſſems, to Neerheſpen, and ſo to Lewe. The Brook of Beck riſes about Putſay, runs to Landen, and ſo to the Lewe, where it joins with the leſſer Geet, and all theſe Three ſmall Rivers join in one below Lewe. About Six in the Afternoon the Mareſchal de Joyeuſe came up with the Left Wing of Horſe, and about Eight the Body of Foot, which for more Expedition the Prince of Conti had order'd to March, after they had paſſed the Jecker upon Four Columns, with the beſt part of the Artillery; but as 'twas too late then to Engage a Battel, Luxemburgh contented himſelf to diſpoſe his Army, in order to begin early the next Day; and for this end poſſeſs'd himſelf of the Villages of Landen, St. Gertruydenland and Over-winden.

Battel of Landen.

As ſoon as the Enemy drew up by the Confederate Camp, the King order'd Brigadeer Ramſey with his Brigade, then compoſed of Five Battalions, viz. O Farel, Mackay, Lowder, Lowen and Monroe, to the Right of all, to guard ſome Hedges and Hollow-Ways, upon the Right of the Village of Lare. The Brandenburgh Battalions were Poſted to the Left of this Village; and more to the Left, the Infantry of Hannover; Prince Charles of Brandenburgh, as Major General, commanding the Six Battalions of Brandenburgh, and Lieutenant General Dumont the Hannovarians, with whom he went to Defend the Village of Neerwinden, that cover'd part of the Confederate Camp, between the Right Wing of Horſe, and their Main Body. Theſe were afterwards reinforced by the Firſt Battalion of the Firſt Regiment of Guards, and a Second Battalion of Scotch Guards. Upon the Left at Neer-Landen, the King ordered the Firſt Battalion of the Royal Regiment, Churchill's, Selwin's, and Trelawny's, Prince Frederick's Battalion of Danes, and Fagel's, to poſſeſs this Village that covered the Left of the Confederates Body of Foot; which upon the Enemies Approach had Wheel'd from the Left to the Right, to bring up their Left to the Brook of Beck, where 'twas cover'd by the Village of Neer-Landen. The Ground was open betwen the Villages of Neer-Winden and Neer-Landen; whereupon His Majeſty order'd a Retrenchment to be made in the Night, from the one to the other, to cover the Body of Foot; which was indeed but a ſlight Breaſt-work, as may eaſily be judged by the ſhort time they had to make it, and the ſmall number of Men that Work'd about it, to wit, Thirty Men per Battalion. What remain'd of the Body of the Foot was drawn up in one Line, within this Intrenchment, to Defend it. The Dragoons upon the Left were order'd to the Village of Dormal, to guard that Paſs upon the Brook of Beck, and from thence the Left Wing of Horſe reach'd to Neer-Landen, where 'twas cover'd by this Brook; and from thence turned off to the Right behind the Body of Foot.

The King who had been on Horſeback till late in the Evening, not only to give all the neceſſary Commands, but to ſee them executed, order'd His Coach to be brought to the Rear of Stanley's Regiment, where he repoſed himſelf about Two Hours; and early in the Morning ſent for Dr. Menard, one of his Chaplains, into the Coach to Pray with him, ſuitable to the Occaſion: A rare example to all Military Men, who from this may Learn, that the moſt Heroick Valour is that which is grounded on a good Conſcience, and a true Chriſtian Piety. 1693.

The Kings Piety.

By Sun-Riſing the French were drawn up within the reach of the Confederates Cannon, which played upon them with good Succeſs, and which the French ſuſtained with admirable Conſtancy, till about Six a Clock, when they made a Motion to draw nearer the King's Retrenchment. About Eight Luxemburgh order'd a ſtrong Body of Troops to Attack the Villages of Lare and Neer-Winden; which they did with great Fury, and various Succeſs, having gained and loſt theſe Poſts once and again; but at length the Allies maintain'd their Ground; and here the Duke of Berwick was taken Priſoner by Brigadier Churchill. This ill Suceſs did not diſcourage the French from trying their Fortune againſt the Confederates Left Wing at Neer-Landen. Tis true, this Poſt was not Weak, but it was Attack'd with a great diſproportion of Forces, and the Fire was very ſmart on both ſides. The Firſt Battalion of the Royal Regiment was after a ſharp Diſpute forced to Retire, but was ſoon after encouraged by His Majeſty's Preſence (who Rode immediately from the Right to the Left) and ſuſtain'd by Selwin's, who obſerving a Paſſage in this Place, where Horſe could come upon his Rear, order'd Trees to be cut down, and ſtop it it up. The Houſe were Hamilton's Grenadiers had before been Poſted, was likewiſe ſet on Fire, and by this time the Two foremention'd Regiments being ſupported by Prince Frederick's and Fagel's, the Enemy after a ſharp Diſpute of about Two Hours, were entirely beaten off, and purſued quite out of the Defile into the very Plain, ſo that they attempted this Place no more.

Succeſs at firſt on Confederates ſide.

Hitherto the Succeſs of the Day was viſibly on the Confederates ſide, and the French who continued a faint Fire at Neer-winden, ſeem'd by their Countenance as if they deſign'd to draw off: But Luxemburgh having ſtill ſeveral Brigades of freſh Men, reſolved to gain the Village of Neer-Winden, and order'd the Prince of Conti to make the Attack. The Enemy had remain'd Maſters of the outermoſt Hedges of this Village; for though our rally'd Forces had made the French give way conſiderably, yet they could not entirely clear the Village. The Prince of Conti with the beſt Foot in the French Army, charg'd the Confederates ſo vigorouſly, that the latter being already ſpent by the former Encounters, were ſoon obliged to yield to the Enemy the Avenues of Neer-Winden; upon which Succeſs Luxemburgh came to obſerve the Paſſages that led to the Confederates Camp for his Horſe to march in. As the Mareſchal de Villeroy was marching with a ſtrong Body of Horſe this way, Count de Arco, General of the Bavarian Cuiraſſiers, charged them with ſo much Vigour, that notwithſtanding their Brave Reſiſtance, he repuls'd them quite within their Foot; the Count de Chartrees who charg'd with them, narrowly eſcaped being made Priſoner. Thereupon the Confederates endeavour'd to regain once more the Poſt of Neer-Winden; and the Elector of Bavaria order'd Two Battalions to charge the Enemy in Front, whilſt Three others ſhould charge them upon their Left Flank: but the French Rallying, and being conſiderably Reinforced, the Attempt became impoſſible; the Dutch and the Scotch Guards having ſpent all their Ammu-

1693. Ammunition by their continual Fire. The King, who had left Neerlanden upon the Enemies freſh Attempt upon Neerwinden, led Twice the Engliſh Battalions to the Charge, up to the Right of the Retrenchments (which was now Flank'd, and under the Enemies Command) where they Fought with great Bravery. In the mean time Luxemburgh, who had found a more convenient Paſſage for the Horſe, between the Poſts of the King s and Zurbeck's Brigades, came in himſelf with the Prince of Conti and Count de Marſin, into the Plain of the Confederates Camp, with the Carabineers, and ſeveral other Regiments; whilſt the Mareſchal de Joyeuſe paſs'd between Neerwinden and Lare, with Three Brigades. The firſt that had come in with Prince Conti, join'd with the King's Horſe, and fell upon the Hannover Horſe and broke them; whilſt part of the Enemies ſecond Line of Horſe, and the Reſerve, came in upon their Left, along the Hedges of Lare. The Marqueſs of Harcourt, who had been ſent for from Huy, with his Detachment of Twenty two Squadrons, came time enough to have his Share of the Day: He join'd theſe, and made his Dragoons alight to Chaſe our Foot out of the Village of Laire. The Duke of Villeroy came in upon our Right of the Retrenchments, which Place the Engliſh Foot diſputed with undaunted Reſolution, till being over-powered, the French remain'd Maſters of this part of the Retrenchment, which they levelled, to make room for a Body of Horſe to come, after the Hannover Horſe had been broken; the reſt of the Confederates Right Wing of Horſe being cut off from the Body of Foot, was ſoon overthrown by the Enemy, who now had the opportunity to Charge them both Front and Flank. The Elector of Bavaria did what he could to reſiſt the numerous Multitude of the Enemies Horſe that Charged him thus; but finding it impoſſible, with no ſmall difficulty he Retreated over the Bridge, and rally'd on t'other ſide, as many of the ſcatter'd Horſe and Foot as could get over, to favour the Retreat of thoſe who were ready to paſs. The King did what he could to remedy this Diſorder; Riding to the Left, to bring up the Engliſh Horſe, for the Relief of the Right Wing. But the Enemy had now got another Body of Horſe in our Camp, Commanded by the Duke d' Elboeuf. At the ſame time the Duke de Montmorency, Luxemburgh's Son, fell upon the Right Flank of the Dutch Horſe, and put them in Diſorder, before the Engliſh Horſe, which were led on by the King, could come up and form their Squadrons; ſo that they were forced to charge the Enemy in the ſame order they rid up to them; (and moſt of them had rid as faſt as their Horſes could gallop) but that did not hinder them from doing extraordinary Service. The King Himſelf charged at the head of my Lord Galloway's Regiment, which diſtinguiſh'd it ſelf very much on this Occaſion. Colonel Wyndham, at the head of his Regiment, charg'd ſeveral times through and through the Enemies Squadrons. Colonel Langſtone was made Priſoner; and the Duke of Ormond having charged at the head of one of Lumley's Squadrons, received ſeveral Wounds, and had his Horſe ſhot under him, was reſcued by a Gentleman of the French King's Guards, from the hands of a Villain who was offering to ſtab him.

The King Retreats. The King ſeeing the Battel loſt, order'd the Infantry to retreat to Dormal, upon the Brook of Beck, which Poſt had hitherto been kept by the Dragoons of the Left Wing, who had nothing to do this Day; and finding that the Enemies were Surrounding him on all ſides, His Majeſty ordered the Regiments of Wyndham, Lumley, and Galloway, to cover His Retreat over the Bridge at Neerheſpen, which He gain'd with great Difficulty. There was now nothing but Confuſion and Diſorder in the Confederates Camp; all thoſe who could not get the Paſſes for the Retreat, being preſſed by the Enemy, were forc'd to fling themſelves into the River, where abundance were drowned; the Earl of Athlone narrowly eſcaping the ſame Fate. Lieutenant General Talmaſh brought off the Engliſh Foot with great Prudence, Bravery, and Succeſs; but ſome of the Engliſh Live-Guards were ſo ſcar'd with the Fury of a purſuing Enemy, that they did not think themſelves ſecure till they reach'd Breda. Sixty Pieces of Cannon, and Nine Mortars were loſt; but all the Baggage had been ſent to Lewe the over-Night, where it was ſafely brought off in reſpect of the Enemy, but generally plunder'd by our own Soldiers. As for the Loſs of Men, the Confederates owned but Six thouſand killed, wounded, or taken Priſoners; and the French could not deny, but that they had above Two thouſand Officers killed or wounded: Let the Reader gueſs how many private Soldiers they loſt in proportion. 1693.

The King's Courage and Conduct. The King in the day of Battel ſhew'd Himſelf, as he had always done, a Hero and a Commander: And it was by a wonderful Providence, that He eſcap'd Three Muſquet Shots, one through His Peruke; another through the Sleeve of His Coat; and a third, which carried off the Knot of His Scarf, and left a ſmall Contuſion on His Side. In ſhort, His Majeſty gain'd ſo far the Reſpect and Admiration of His very Enemies, that 'twas a common ſaying amongſt them, That they wanted but ſuch a King to make them Maſters of Chriſtendom. And the Prince of Conti, in his Intercepted Letter to the Princeſs his Wife, ſaid; He ſaw the King Expoſing Himſelf to the greateſt Dangers; and that ſurely ſo much Valour very well deſerv'd the peaceable Poſſeſſion of the Crown He wore.

The Confederares gave it out, That the French had loſt 18000 Men in the Battel; which Aſſertion ſeem'd to be confirm'd by Luxemburgh's not purſuing his Victory; and his continuing Fifteen Days together at Waren, without attempting any thing. However, after they had been reinforc'd with ſome Troops from the Sea-Coaſt, and a great Detachment under Bouffler's from the Rhine, they ſat down before Charleroy, Sept. 10. The Place was Attack'd with great Fury, but the Gariſon made ſuch a vigorous Reſiſtance, that tho' they had litt'e or no Proſpect of Relief, yet they held out Six and twenty Days, from the opening of the Trenches; and then made an Honourable Capitulation Octob. 10. The French were not leſs Succeſsful in Catalonia, where ſo early as the 29th of May, they inveſted Roſes both by Sea and Land; and carried the Siege of it on with that Diligence, that they made themſelves Maſters of the Place in Seven Days. The French take Charleroy.

Actions on the Rhine. On the other hand, the Germans were ſo ſlow, and the French ſo forward on the Rhine, that the latter paſt that River about the middle of May at Philipsburg; and, without any Oppoſition, the Marquis of Chamilly inveſted the City of Heidelberg. At the ſame time the Duke de Lorge croſſed the firſt Mountains, to oppoſe the Prince of Baden; who was not yet in a Condition to act but defenſively: So that the Town muſt now ſhift for it ſelf. But beſides its natural Weakneſs, there was at this time ſuch a Diviſion between the Gariſon and the Townſmen, about the Money that was call'd in, and which the former would have go Current again; that when the Regiment of Scomback was ready to enter the Place to reinforce the Gariſon, the Townſmen would not ſuffer them to come in; which gave

Mon-

1693. Monſieur de Melac an opportunity to ſeize a Redoubt which commanded that part of the Town. In ſhort, the French on the 21*ſt* of May made themſelves Maſters of the Suburbs with little Oppoſition; and their Grenadiers drove the Beſieged with ſo much Fury to the Caſtle-Gate, that the latter left above 600 of their Soldiers without, who were all put to the Sword. The Governor of the Caſtle apprehending the ſame Fate, accepted the Conditions which Monſieur de Lorge impos'd upon him, June 2. and was contented to be conducted to Wimpel with the reſt of his Gariſon, conſiſting of 1200 Men, 2 Pieces of Cannon, and 12 Wagons laden with Baggage. The Imperialiſts were no ſooner out of the City, but the French ſet both that and the Caſtle on Fire, and committed ſeveral other Barbarities in the Palatinate, not ſparing ſo much as the ſacred Repoſitories of the Aſhes of the Deceaſed Electors. Fleſh'd with this eaſy Succeſs, the Mareſchal de Lorge advanced towards the Neckar, with a deſign to attack the Prince of Baden, who lay encamp'd with his Army on the other ſide of the River; which the French twice endeavoured to paſs, but were forced to abandon their Enterprize, with the Loſs of near a Thouſand Men. Some time after this, the Dauphin in Perſon join'd the Army, which conſiſted of near 70000 Men; and having croſs'd the Neckar, made a ſhew of Attacking the Prince of Baden; but found his Highneſs ſo well poſted, that he repaſs'd the River without attempting any thing; and having put a Gariſon into Stugard, and ſent a Detachment into Flanders and Piedmont, he returned in the Month of Auguſt to Verſailles.

ffairs of ly. Let's now take a ſhort View of the Affairs of Italy: The Duke of Savoy was no ſooner recover'd of his long Indiſpoſition, but he put himſelf at the Head of the Army; which being conſiderably ſtrong, made the Inhabitants of Dauphinè apprehenſive of a worſe Irruption into their Country than the laſt: But the Confederates ſeem'd now chiefly to aim at the Driving the French out of Italy, by diſpoſſeſſing them of Cazal and Pignerol; neither of which was effected this Year. 'Tis true, Cazal was block'd up for ſome time, and the Fort of St. George carried by Aſſault, which compleated the Blockade of that Place; but Things went no farther: And the Duke of Savoy, with the Main Army, laid Siege to Pignerol, took the Fort of St. Bridget, that cover'd the Place; but paid ſo dear for this Poſt, that after all, it was debated, Whether they ſhould carry on the Siege, or only Bombard the Town? While the Allies were thus deliberating among themſelves, Monſieur Catinat being conſiderably reinfor'd, deſcended into the Plains, and gave the Duke ſuch Umbrage for Turin, that he drew off from about Pignerol, and encamp'd at Marſaglia, having firſt blown up the Fort of St. Bridget. The Army was preſently drawn up in Battalia: The Marquiſs de Leganez commanded the Left Wing, compos'd of the King of Spain's Troops: His Royal Highneſs, and under him the Count of Caprara, commanded the Right Wing; and Prince Eugene the Main Battel, having under him the Marquiſs de la Parelle, and the Count de las Torres: As for the Duke of Schomberg, being denied the Poſt due to him, he reſolved to fight on foot at the Head of his own Regiment, like an ordinary Colonel. The Confederate Army being thus diſpos'd, marched on the 3*d*. of November into the Neighbourhood of Orbaſſon; from whence they perceived the Enemy towards the Hills, between Orbaſſon and Pioſaſque. Early the next Day the French advanced towards the Confederates, making uſe of the Advantage they had in the Ground, which was full of Wood and Vineyards; and ſoon after the Cannon began to play on both ſides. About half an hour after Eight, the French fell upon the Confederate Left Wing with near Twenty Thouſand Men, without Firing a Shot; having their Bayonets at the end of their Fuzees, and their Swords in their Hands. They were received and driven back with great Vigor; but renewing their Attack, they took in Front and Flank the Neapolitan and Milaneze Horſe; who, after having couragiouſly withſtood the Fury of their Enemy, were at laſt overpower'd by their Numbers, and puſh'd upon the German Horſe. Theſe being at the ſame time Charg'd by the Little Gendarmerie, were no longer able to maintain their Ground, but fell upon the Infantry, which was put alſo into Diſorder. The Second Line was brought on to oppoſe the Enemy, while the Firſt Line rallied; but the Horſe giving way, the Foot was quickly routed. 1693.

While Things paſſed thus on this ſide, the French were thrice repulſed with great Loſs by the Confederates Main Battalia, and Right Wing; till their Horſe, which had made the Left Wing give way, attack'd the Confederates Infantry behind and in Flank, who had no longer any Horſe to cover them, and were at the ſame time attack'd by the Enemies Foot. All the Troops fought with great Courage, and the Diſpute was deſperate on both ſides. His Britannick Majeſty's Forces, which were poſted in the Main Battalia, particularly diſtinguiſhed themſelves; and the Duke of Schomberg, their General, was deſired by the Count de las Torres, after the Enemies Third Attack, to take upon him the Command, and cauſe a Retreat to be made by the Body of Foot, and the Right Wing: But his Grace being piqu'd at the Uſage he had met before, told him, that it was neceſſary firſt to have his Royal Highneſs's Order; and until it came, he would bear the Enemies Fire; adding, that he found Things were gone ſo far, that they muſt now either Vanquiſh or Die. The Confederates reſiſted the repeated Efforts of the Enemy with extraordinary Reſolution; but were at laſt forc'd to abandon the Field of Battel, and to retire with the Loſs of the greateſt part of their Cannon, and of Seven or Eight Thouſand Men. The Duke of Schomberg having fought with unparallel'd Valour, received a Wound in the Thigh, of which he died not many days after. With this Action ended the Campaign in Piedmont.

Our Affairs at Sea were as unfortunate as thoſe at Land; the Engliſh and Dutch Fleet was large and ſtrong, and ſet out early. There was alſo a great Fleet of Merchant-men, making in all near 400 Sail of Engliſh, Dutch, Hamburghers, &c. bound for the Streights, under the Convoy of 23 Men of War, commanded by Sir George Rook, with whom the Grand Fleet was to keep company till they came to ſuch a Latitude; or as ſome reported, till they had certain Intelligence where the French Fleet was. Sir George at the appointed time left the Main Fleet, and ſailed on, leaving by the way the Veſſels bound for Bilboa, Liſbon, St. Ubes, and other Ports, under Convoy of Two Men of War, and ſo purſued his Voyage towards the Streights. On June 15. being come within 60 Leagues of Cape St. Vincent, he diſcovered part of the French Fleet, which made him call a Council of War; wherein it was reſolved, That the Wind being freſh Weſtwardly, and giving a fair opportunity to haſten their Paſſage to Cadiz, the Merchants ſhould make the beſt of their way. Upon the diſcovery of the Enemies whole Fleet, commanded by Monſieur de Tourville, and conſiſting of Eighty Sail, Sir George Affairs at Sea.

Rook

1693. Our Fleet of Merchantmen surprized by the French.

Rook brought to, and ſtood off with an eaſie Sail, to give what time he could to the Heavy Sails to work away to the Windward, ſending away the Sheerneſs to order the Small Ships that were under the Shoar to get in the Night into Faro, St. Lucar, and Cadiz. About Six in the Evening, June 16. the French Admiral, and Vice-Admiral of the Blue came up with the Leeward, and ſtern'd moſt of the Confederate Fleet, which were Three Dutch Men of War, who fought firſt Eleven, and then Seven French Men of War, but were at laſt forc'd to yield. This made the Dutch Merchantmen that were there, tack for the Shore, and the Enemy after them, which gave an opportunity for the Ships to Windward, and a-head, to make Sail off, and ſaved a great part of the Fleet: And yet the Loſs was very conſiderable; for beſides four of the greateſt Smyrna Ships, and one Dutch Man of War, which Monſieur Coetlogen burnt or ſunk at Gibraltar, and ſeven which he took, Monſieur de Tourville, and Count de Eſtrees took Two Dutch Men of War, burnt a rich Pinnace, and an Engliſh Man of War, took 29 Merchantmen, and deſtroyed about 50 more. Upon this Diſaſter Sir George Rook with the Men of War, and ſome Merchantmen, made the beſt of his way for Ireland. This Misfortune lay heavy upon the Hearts of the Merchants, and indeed upon the Minds of all the People of England; and therefore at the next meeting of the Parliament, the firſt thing they did, was to enquire into the Miſcarriages of the Fleet the laſt Summer, and to conſider how beſt to preſerve the Trade of the Nation. Some time was ſpent in examining the Inſtructions and Orders given to the Fleet; the Number of Ships for the Line of Battel, and of the Convoys and Cruiſers; the Admirals that commanded both, and the Reſults of the ſeveral Councils of War held by 'em; and then on Nov. 17. the Commons Reſolved, It was the Opinion of that Houſe, That there had been a Notorious and Treacherous Miſmanagement in the Miſcarriage of the Smyrna Fleet. Their next Enquiry was, Why the Streights Fleet was ſtopt till the Main Fleet went out? And then, Why the Main Fleet did not convoy Sir George Rook's Squadron, and the Merchant Ships, out of danger of the French Fleet? And it being alledged, That the Main Fleet was not ſufficiently victualled, the Commons examin'd the State of their Stores at ſailing from Spithead, and thereupon Reſolved, Nov. 27. That there were ſufficient Beer and other Stores on Board the Main Fleet, when Sir George Rook ſeparated, to have convoy'd his Squadron, and the Merchant Ships out of danger of the Breſt Fleet. But though the Miſcarriage was very notorious, they knew not where to fix the particular Blame: For on Nov. 29. the Queſtion being put, That it did appear to that Houſe, that the Admirals that Commanded the Fleet the laſt Summer, had, on the 11*th of* May laſt, Information that part of the Breſt Fleet was going out to Sea; it paſs'd in the Negative: And on the 6th of December, another Queſtion being put, That the Admirals, by not ſending into Breſt for Intelligence, before they left the Streights Squadron, were guilty of a high Breach of the Truſt that was repoſed in them, to the great Loſs and Diſhonour of the Nation; it was likewiſe carried in the Negative. Before this Enquiry in Parliament, the Admirals had been examin'd before the Council-Board; but nothing could be made appear to the prejudice of their Honour, only ſome flying Reports which gave occaſion to this Order of Council, on Oct. 25. Whereas a Report has been raiſed and ſpread by Henry Killegrew, Eſq; Sir Ralph Delaval, and Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, Knt. Admirals of Their Majeſties Fleet, That the Right Honourable the Lord Viſcount Falkland, one of the Lords of Their Majeſties moſt Honourable Privy Council, did upon Reading a Paper at the Board, ſtifle ſomething that was material to their Juſtification: The Lords of the Council having conſidered of, and examined into the Matter, are ſatisfied, and do declare, That the ſaid Report is falſe and ſcandalous: Although upon the ſaid Examination it did alſo appear, that ſomething happened which might miſlead the Admirals into that Error. And it is Ordered in Council, That this be Printed and Publiſhed in the Gazette. But however, His Majeſty to ſhow His Juſt Reſentments of theſe Unhappy Proceedings at Sea, immediately upon His Return declared in Council, That He had appointed Edward Ruſſel, Eſq; to be Admiral of the Fleet.

And yet for all theſe Victories and Triumphs of France, that Monarch ſaw His own Countrey ſo oppreſs'd with Famine, and his Troops abroad ſo intolerable a Burthen on Him, that in the midſt of His Glories, He was glad to make Propoſals of Peace to the Emperor; which being rejected, a Memorial was preſented to K. William by the Miniſter of the K. of Denmark, dated London December 19. 1693. wherein great Offers were made of Reſtitution and Satisfaction to the Empire, Spain, and Holland; concluding thus: Upon the whole Matter the King my Maſter is perſuaded, that no Body has more Reaſon to contribute to this Peace than Your Majeſty, ſince it will confirm to You the Glory and Advantages You have gain'd during the War; and will, beſides, make Europe to be eternally beholden to Your Majeſty for the Peace ſhe groans after. If Your Majeſty thinks that there is any thing defective, in relation to the Security of the Peace, or that wants to be either alter'd or explain'd; the King my Maſter, engages to procure to Your Majeſty all the Satisfaction imaginable. And if You are pleaſed to confide in His Mediation, He will manage it to Your Majeſty's entire Satisfaction. Laſtly, the King my Maſter has commanded me to aſſure Your Majeſty, That being, upon ſeveral Accounts, concern'd in the Proſperity of Your Royal Family, He will, to the utmoſt of His Power, promote its Intereſt and Advantage: And deſires Your Majeſty to be perſuaded, That all the Advances He has made in this Affair, have no other Aim, and are grounded upon no other Principle.

Honours and Preferments

On March 30. Edward Southwell, Eſq; was, by His Majeſty's Command, Sworn Clerk of the Council Extraordinary. On the ſame day, Edward Ward, of the Inner Temple, Eſq; Kiſs'd His Majeſty's Hand for the Place of Attorney-General, in the room of Sir John Somers; And on April 4. He was Sworn before his Predeceſſor then Lord Keeper. About the ſame time, His Majeſty Granted to John Lord Cutts, the Office of Captain and Governor of the Iſle of Wight, in the Place of Sir Robert Holmes deceas'd. On April 13. Thomas Lord Coningsby, was by Her Majeſty's Command, Sworn of the Privy Council, and took his Place at the Board. On May 3. Their Majeſties Granted by Letters Patents to Samuel Travers, Eſq; the Office of Surveyor General, vacant by the Death of Mr. Harbord, Their Majeſties late Ambaſſador in Turkey. In the beginning of July, my Lord Capel, Sir Cyril Wych, and William Duncomb Eſq; were conſtituted Lords Juſtices of Ireland, in the room of the Lord Sidney; who return'd to London on July the 19th, and for a Reward of his good Services, was on July 22. made Maſter-General of the Ordnance. Richard Earl of Bellamont, and James Hamilton Eſq; did in July Petition Her Majeſty, That a ſtop might be put to the paſſing of Pardons to the Lord Coningsby and Sir Charles Porter K^t, late Lords Juſtices of Ireland until the Petitioners, and many other of Their Majeſties Subjects of Ireland, might be permitted to produce their Proofs againſt them. The Lord Coningsby and Sir Charles Porter, upon hearing of ſuch Petition, did likewiſe Requeſt Her Accuſation again Lord Coningsby and Sir Charles Porter.

1693. Her Majesty to put a stop to the said Pardons, till their Accusers might be heard in the most publick manner, before Her Majesty in Council. Thereupon it was order'd in Council, the 27th of July, That the Matters of the said Petition should be heard the next Council Day; at which time the Earl of Bellamont and Mr. Hamilton deliver'd a Paper, excusing their giving in any Charge against the Lord Coningsby and Sir Charles Porter; which being Read, it was order'd that the Matter should be farther Examin'd at the Board that Day Six Weeks; and that in the mean time the Accusers should deliver their Charge against the late Lords Justices in Writing to the Board, on the 17th of August. The Earl of Bellmont and Mr. Hamilton exhibited several Accusations on the appointed Day; but still declining to be heard to make good the same; and on the contrary, the Lord Coningsby and Sir Charles Porter offering to prove their Innocency, the Queen order'd the said Petitions and Charge to be dismiss'd.

The King arrived at the Hague from Loo, on Octob. 1. and perswaded the States of Holland to agree to the raising of Fifteen thousand Men for Augmenting their Land Forces; and likewise to the Addition of a considerable Number of Ships to their Navy. For which His Majesty Thank'd them in their Publick Assembly. The King had waited almost a whole Month for a fair Wind; and at last embark'd on Saturday Octob. 28. on the Mary-Yatch, and Sail'd that Morning out of the Maese, being attended by a Squadron of Men of War, under the Command of Rear Admiral Mitchel. On Sunday about 4 in the Afternoon, His Majesty landed at Harwich, and staid that Night at Sir Isaac Rebow's in Colchester; and about 11 the next Night came to Kensington. On November 2. A Proclamation was publish'd, for a Publick Thanksgiving: Inasmuch as it had pleased Almighty God, to preserve Their Majesties and Their Government against the Designs and Attempts of Their open and secret Enemies; and to protect His Majesty's Person from the many and great Dangers of the War in His late Expedition beyond the Seas; and to bring him back in Safety to this Kingdom. On the same day the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen waited upon His Majesty at Whitehall, humbly to Congratulate His wonderful Preservation and happy Return. His Majesty gave 'em a Gracious Answer; and as a Mark of His Royal Favour, was pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Thomas Abney, Esq; one of the Sheriffs.

The King returns for England.

Publick Thanksgiving.

According to the last Prorogation from Octob. 26. the Parliament met at Westminster on Tuesday Nov. 7. And His Majesty made this Speech to Both Houses.

Parliament meet.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech.

"I Am always glad to meet you here, and I could heartily wish that Our Satisfaction "were not lessened at present, by Reflecting upon the Disadvantages We have received this "Year at Land, and the Miscarriages in our Affairs at Sea. I think it is Evident, that the former was only occasion'd by the great Number "of Our Enemies, which exceeded Ours in all "places: For what relates to the latter, which "has brought so great a Disgrace upon the Nation, I have Resented it extremely; and as I "will take Care that those who have not done "their Duty, shall be Punished, so I am Resolved to use my utmost endeavours, that Our "Power at Sea may be rightly Managed for the "Future. And it will well Deserve Your Consideration, Whether We are not defective both in "the Number of Our Shipping, and in proper "Ports to the Westward, for the better Annoying "Our Enemies, and Protecting Our Trade, which is so Essential to the Welfare of this "Kingdom. 1693.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I am very sensible of the good Affection "wherewith you have always Assisted Me to "Support the Charges of this War, which have "been very Great; and yet I am perswaded that "the Experience of this Summer is sufficient to "convince Us all, that to arrive at a good End "of it, there will be a Necessity of Increasing "Our Forces both by Sea and Land the next "Year. Our Allies have Resolved to add to "theirs; and I will not doubt, but you will have "such Regard to the present Exigency, as that "you will give Me a suitable Supply to Enable "Me to do the like. I must therefore earnestly "Recommend it to you, Gentlemen of the House "of Commons, to take such timely Resolution, "as that your Supplies may be Effectual, and "Our Preparations so forward, as will be necessa-"ry both for the Security and the Honour of the "Nation.

Proceedings of the Commons.

In Answer to this Speech, the Commons unanimously Resolved, That they would Support Their Majesties and their Government, and Grant a sufficient Supply for the Vigorous Prosecution of the War. On Nov. 25. They Agreed that the Sum of 500000 l. be raised towards the Discharging the Wages due to the Seamen; and that a farther Sum of Two millions be granted to Their Majesties in full, for the Maintenance of the Fleet, including the Ordnance; by reason of the Revenue now falling short. As for the Army, the Commons having examin'd the Offensive Treaties and Alliances His Majesty was now under with the Confederates, and the Proportions of Forces that the Confederates were obliged to make, for the carrying on this present War; unanimously Resolv'd on Dec. 20. "That the Number of the Land Forces in Their "Majesties Pay, be increased by the raising Six "new Regiments of English Horse, Four new "Regiments of English Dragoons, and Fifteen "new Regiments of English Foot, to be Com-"manded by Officers that were Their Maje-"sties Natural Born Subjects; That 83121 Men, "including Commission and Non-commission "Officers, were necessary for the Service of the "Year 1694. to be employ'd in England, and be-"yond the Seas; and that the Sum of Two mil-"lions five hundred thirty thousand five hundred "ninety Pounds be Granted, for the Maintenance "of the Land Forces; to wit, 210773 Pounds "for the Office of Ordnance; 31808 Pounds "for the Pay of the General Officers; 11060 "Pounds for Levy Money; 40808 Pounds for "the Transports; 147000 Pounds for Hospitals "and Contingencies; and 1990781 Pounds for "the Pay of the Horse, Dragoons, and Foot.

Resolved to Augment our Forces.

Besides these large Supplies, it was found, that the Sum of One Hundred Eighteen Thousand Pounds was wanting to compleat the Sum of One Million Granted to Their Majesties, by An Act made in the last Session of this present Parliament, for securing Recompences to such Persons as should voluntarily advance the said Million: And likewise that the Sum of Two Hundred Ninety Three Thousand Six Hundred Ninety Two Pounds was wanting, to compleat the Sum of Three Hundred Thousand Pounds, Granted by a late Act for the Review of the Quarterly Poll. The First of which Defective Funds the Commons resolved, on December 9th to make good, by enlarging the Time for Perfecting Pay in the rest of the Sum of One Million. And that towards the raising of Money for the Maintenance of the Fleet, any Persons be at liberty to add a Second Life to the

And give proportionable Supplies.

1693. Life that was or should be nominated upon the Act for securing the Recompences beforementioned, upon paying the sum of Thirty Five Pounds for every One Hundred Pounds paid in, or to be paid in upon the said Act; and for adding a Third Life, the Sum of Twenty Pounds, for every the said One Hundred Pounds, and so for any greater Proportion.

Towards raising the Two Millions Granted for the Fleet, it was Resolved on December 21*st.* That the Sum of One Million be charg'd upon Land; And that a Duty of Three-pence per Gallon be laid upon all Foreign Salt imported; and a Duty of One Peny Half Peny per Gallon, upon all English Salt, except all Salt imploy'd in the curing Fish and Flesh to be exported.

The Commons being very much embarrassed how to Levy the rest of the vast Sums they had already Granted; on December 26*th.* Resolved That a farther Sum of One Million be charged upon Land; And on December 29. That an Aid, not exceeding Four Shillings in the Pound, be Granted to Their Majesties, by charging each respective County with double the Sum return'd, charged by an Act made in the First Year of Their Majesties Reign, for a Grant of Two Shillings in the Pound. But because the Committee of the whole House appointed to draw up the Bill, met with great Difficulties in framing it after that manner; the House gave them Power to alter the same, and to Frame it into a Bill of Four Shillings in the Ponnd.

Bill for frequent Parliaments rejected.

A Bill for the more frequent Elections of Parliaments, having, after the Third Reading, been Rejected by the Commons, on November 28*th.* Another Bill to the same purpose was sent down to 'em by the Lords, which being Read the Third time was likewise rejected.

Acts passed.

On Thursday January 25*th.* His Majesty came to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to, First, An Act for Granting to Their Majesties an Aid of Four Shillings in the Pound for One Year, for carrying on a Vigorous War against France. Second, An Act for Repealing of such parts of several former Acts, as Prevent or Prohibit the Importation of Foreign Brandy, Aqua-vitæ, and other Spirits, and Bacon, except from France. Third, An Act for the Repeal of a Clause in the Statute made in the 34. and 35. Years of K. Henry VIII. by which Justices in Wales are limited to Eight in each County. Fourth, An Act for the Importation of Fine Italian, Sicilian, and Naples Thrown Silk. Fifth, An Act to enable John Vivian Esq; and Thomas Vivian his Son, to Sell some part of their Estate for Payment of Debts, and making Provision for Younger Children, and for settling other part of their Estate in lieu thereof. There was another Bill lay ready for the Royal Assent touching Free and Impartial Proceedings in Parliament, which had been prepar'd the last Year, and was now again brought in and Pass'd by Both Houses; But His Majesty thought fit again to refuse his Assent to it; which the Commons took so ill, that the next Day upon considering the State of the Nation, they Resolved that whoever Advised the King not to give the Royal Assent to that Act, was an Enemy to Their Majesties and the Kingdom; and a Representation was Drawn up by a Committee, and Agreed to by the House, wherein they humbly laid before His Majesty, "That what Bills had been Agreed "by Both Houses for the Redress of Grievances, "or other Publick Good, had, when Tender'd "to the Throne, obtain'd the Royal Assent. "And that there were very few Instances in for- "mer Reign, where such Assent in such Cases had "not been given; and these attended with great "great Inconveniencies to the Crown of Eng- "land; especially where the same had been "withheld by Insinuation of particular Persons, "without the Advice of the Privy Council, "thereby creating great Dissatisfaction and Jea- 1693. "lousies in the Minds of the People. That the "Commons therefore, out of their sincere desire "of the Welfare of His Majesty and His Go- "vernment, could not without Grief of Heart, "reflect, that since His Majesty's Accession to "the Crown, several publick Bills, made by "Advice of Both Houses of Parliament, had "not obtain'd the Royal Assent; and in particu- "lar one Bill, Entituled, An Act touching Free "and Impartial Proceedings in Parliament, which "was to Redress a Grievance, and take off a "Scandal relating to the Proceedings of the "Commons in Parliament, after they had freely "Voted great Supplies for the Publick Occasi- "ons; which they could impute to no other "cause than the Insinuations of particular Per- "sons, who took upon them for their own par- "ticular Ends, to Advise His Majesty contrary "to the Advice of Parliament; and therefore "could not but look on such as Enemies to His "Majesty and his Kingdoms. Upon which "Considerations they humbly Pray'd, That for "the future His Majesty would be pleased to "hearken to the Advice of His Parliament, and "not to the Secret Advices of particular Per- "sons, who might have private Interests of their "own, separate from the true Interest of His "Majesty and His People." To this Represen- tation the King Answer'd January 29. "That "He was very Sensible of the Good Affections "the Commons had expres't towards Him upon "many occasions, and of the Zeal they had "shewn for the common Interest. That no "Prince ever had a higher Esteem for the Con- "stitution of the English Government than Him- "self, and that He should ever have a great Re- "gard to the Advice of Parliaments. That He "was perswaded that nothing could so much "conduce to the Happiness and Welfare of this "Kingdom, as an entire Confidence between "the King and People, and that He should look "upon such Persons to be His Enemies, who "should advise any thing that might lessen "it." Three Days after, the Commons took His Majesty's Answer into Consideration, and the Question being propounded, That an Humble Application be made to His Majesty for a farther Answer, it passed in the Negative.

State of the East-India Company.

The East-India Company having obtain'd a Charter, whereby they were empower'd to raise the Sum of Seven Hundred Forty Four Thousand Pounds to be added to a General Joint Stock, and Subscribed by Their Majesties Natural born Subjects, Naturalized, or Indenized; the Subscriptions of each Person not exceeding Ten Thousand Pounds: Several Merchants and others, in and about the City of London, Petitioned the Commons December 7. for Erecting a New East-India Company. The House did thereupon Examine the Charters of the East-India Company, the Book of New Subscriptions, the State of their present Stock, and the Petition abovementioned; and after mature deliberation, January 19*th.* Resolved, That all the Subjects of England have equal Right to Trade to the East Indies, unless Prohibited by Act of Parliament; and this gave Occasion to the Erecting of a New East-India Company, more to the Division of the Merchants, than to the Benefit of Trade.

Act for impartial Proceedings in Parliament rejected by the King.

Representation of the Commons.

Socinian Pamphlet Burnt.

A Complaint was made to the Commons of a Blasphemous Pamphlet, entitled, A Dialogue concerning the Deity; and a Brief, but Clear Confutation of the Doctrine of the Trinity; which had been dispers'd, and sent enclos'd under Covers, directed to several Members of that House. It was thereupon Resolv'd on December the 16*th.* That the said Pamphlet should be Burnt by the Common 1693. mon Hangman; and an Enquiry made after the Author, Printer, and Publisher.

Case of Lord Bellamont and Sir Charles Porter.

The Earl of Bellamont, who had not succeeded in his Application to the Queen and Council, did now present to the House of Commons, Articles of Impeachment of High Treason, and other Crimes and Misdemeanors, against the Lord Coningsby and Sir Charles Porter, late Lords Justices of Ireland. This Matter was taken into Consideration on December the 29*th*. and the Debates upon it, together with the Examination of Witnesses, having taken up a great deal of time; the House agreed at last to this Resolution, January the 29*th*. That considering the State of Affairs in Ireland at that time, the House did not think fit to ground an Impeachment against the Lord Coningsby and Sir Charles Porter, for the Matters charg'd upon them.

Project of Lotteries.

The Humour of the Nation run much upon Lotteries; and some private Projectors had enriched themselves that way. Some Members therefore of the House of Commons proposed a like Method of Adventures, to raise a Million Sterling for the Government. This Design having been communicated to the House, it was Resolved on February the 6*th*. 1. That a Fund of 140000 l. per Ann. be Raised, and Vested in Their Majesties, for the Term of Sixteen Years, for Recompensing such Persons as shall Advance the Sum of One Million. 2. That the Impositions, lately Resolv'd by the House to be laid upon Salt, be Part of the said Fund. 3. That towards the further Answering of the said Yearly Fund, One Moiety of the Duties of Excise, Granted to Their Majesties by an Act made in the Second Year of Their Majesties Reign, be Granted and Continued to Their Majesties, after the Moneys charg'd upon the said Duties shall be satisfied. And 4. That a Bill be brought in upon the said Resolutions.

Acts passed.

On Thursday February the 8*th*. His Majesty came to the House of Peers, and gave His Royal Assent to, 1. An Act to supply the Deficiency of the Money raised by a former Act, entitled, An Act for Granting to Their Majesties certain Rates and Duties of Excise, upon Beer, Ale, and other Liquors; for securing certain Recompences and Advantages in the said Act mentioned, to such Persons as shall voluntarily Advance the Sum of Ten Hundred Thousand Pounds, towards carrying on the War against France. 2. An Act to prevent Disputes and Controversies concerning Royal Mines. 3. An Act to Indemnify the Trustees of James Clayton, Esq; for joining with him in selling Lands for Payment of his Debts.

While the Commons were Debating of greater Supplies, the Commissioners they had appointed for Taking the Publick Accounts, were Order'd to lay before the House an Account of what Money had been paid for Secret Service, and to Members of Parliament, out of the Publick Revenue. Upon Examination of the whole Matter, it was Resolv'd on February the 17*th*. That the Lord Falkland being a Member of that House, by Begging and Receiving Two Thousand Pounds from His Majesty, contrary to the ordinary Method of Issuing and Bestowing the King's Money; was Guilty of a high Misdemeanour and Breach of Trust; and that he be committed to the Tower of London, during the Pleasure of the House. Accordingly his Lordship was sent to the Tower; from whence on February the 19*th*. he presented a Petition to the House, setting forth, That he was highly sensible of their Displeasure; and that a longer Continuance of his Confinement would be extreamly prejudicial to him. Whereupon it was Order'd, That he should be discharg'd from his Imprisonment in the Tower.

Case of Lord Falkland.

Among other Ways and Means to raise a sufficient Supply, the Commons laid a Duty upon Leather, Soap, Wine, and the Tonnage of all Ships and Vessels. And, because even all these Impositions came short of Answering the Moneys to be Levied within this Year, They Resolv'd to Grant a Poll-Tax to Their Majesties, as also a Duty upon all Hackney and Stage-Coaches; and lastly upon Paper and Parchment.

1693. Ways and Means.

On Friday March the 23*d*. His Majesty came to the House of Peers; and, with usual Solemnity, gave his Royal Assent to, 1. An Act for Granting to their Majesties certain Rates and Duties upon Salt, and upon Beer, Ale, and other Liquors; for securing certain Recompences and Advantages in the said Act mentioned, to such Persons as shall voluntarily Advance the Sum of Ten Hundred Thousand Pounds, towards carrying on the War against France. 2. An Act for Relief of the Orphans, and other Creditors of the City of London. 3. An Act for Repeal of a Clause in the Statute of the Fifth Year of Queen Elizabeth, (containing divers Orders for Artificers and others); which relates to Weavers of Cloth. 4. An Act to take away the Process for the Capiatur Time, in the several Courts at Westminster. 5. An Act to Repeal the Statute made in the Tenth Year of King Edward the Third, for finding Sureties for the good Abearing by him or her that hath a Pardon for Felony. 6. An Act to prevent Delays of Proceedings at the Quarter Sessions of the Peace. 7. An Act for the Explaining, and for the more Effectual Execution of a former Act, for Relief of Poor Prisoners. 8. An Act to Enable Roger Whitley the Elder, Esq; and Thomas Whitley, Esq; to exchange certain Lands of equal Value within the County of Chester. 9. An Act for Payment of the Debts of George Turner, Esq; deceas'd. 10. An Act to Enable Sir Charles Barrington, *Bar*t. to Settle a Jointure on Dame Bridget his Wife, and to make Provision for their Younger Children. 11. An Act for Settling the Inheritance of some Parts of the Estate of Charles Turner, Esq; (which lie dispersed) in him and his Heirs; and Settling an Entire Estate of greater Value in Lieu thereof, to the Uses that the said other Parts of his Estate were settled. 12. An Act to Enable John Whitehall to Charge certain Lands with the Sum of Fifteen Hundred Pounds, towards Portions for his Younger Children. 13. An Act to Enable Thomas Earl of Thannet, and the Honourable Sackville Tufton, Esq; his Brother, to make a Lease of Sixty Years of Thannet-House, in the Parish of St. Botolph's Aldersgate; to Commence after the Remainder of a Term of One and Thirty Years now in being. 14. An Act for Sale of Part of the Estate of Henry Frere an Infant, to raise Moneys for Inning and Recovering other Parts thereof, now under Water; and for Payment of Debts Charged thereon. 15. An Act for making a Bridge over the River Axe, in the County of Somerset. 16. An Act for Sale of the Estate of Susan Chaplin, and Dorothy Chaplin her Daughter; for Payment of Debts, and making Provision for the said Susan and Dorothy. 17. An Act to Enable the Trustees of Alice Turner, Widow, and her Children, to make Sale of certain Houses or Ground, in or near Lincolns-Inn-Fields, in the County of Middlesex, during the Minority of the Younger Children. 18. An Act to Enable Thomas Edwards to Sell Part of his Estate, for Payment of Debts; and to Restrain and Disable him to commit Waste upon the Residue of the said Estate. 19. An Act for Sale of the Estate of William Stevens, deceas'd, for Payment of the Mortgage thereupon, and Applying the Overplus for the Benefit of his Sons, who are Infants. 20. An Act to Vest the Estate of Mary, Elizabeth, and Jane Mildmay, and Edward Dixy, and Arabella his Wife, and Lucy and Anne 1693. Mildmay, in Truſtees; to be Sold for Satisfaction of Mortgages and Debts thereupon, and Preſerving the Overplus for their Benefit. And afterwards, His Majeſty made a moſt Gracious Speech to Both Houſes; as follows.

Acts passed.

King's Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"WHen I conſider how far the Year is advanced, what Preparations our Enemies make to be early in the Field, and how neceſſary it is that We ſhould be ready to meet them both by Sea and Land, I muſt earneſtly recommend to You the Diſpatch of thoſe Important Affairs which You have under Your Deliberation.

"I am very ſenſible of the Good Affection which You have ſhewn in this, as well as former Seſſions, by enabling Me to carry on the War We are engaged in for our Common Safety: There is nothing I have ſo much at My Heart, as the Eaſe and Happineſs of My People; and it is with great Reluctance that I am forced to ask ſuch large Supplies: But ſince Our Preſent Circumſtances make this unavoidable, it ſhall be my Endeavour, that the Sums which are given ſhall be laid out in the beſt manner to the Uſes for which they are deſigned.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

"I take this Occaſion to mention to You the Debt for the Tranſport Ships which were uſed in the Reducing of Ireland: It grieves Me exceedingly to ſee ſuch a number of Perſons, who came ſo freely in for ſo good a Service, brought to the laſt Extremities for want of what is due to them. It is not poſſible for Me to diſcharge this Debt without Your help; and as I doubt not but You have a juſt Commiſeration of their Caſe, ſo I hope you will find out ſome Way for their Relief.

Cauſe of the Duke of Norfolk.

During this Seſſion the Town was entertained with the Tryal of an Indecent Cauſe in Weſtminſter-Hall. The Duke of Norfolk bearing with impatience the ſuſpected Commerce which Mr. Germaine had maintained with his Dutcheſs; had the laſt Winter lodged a Bill of Divorce in the Houſe of Peers; but their Lordſhips being unwilling to proceed in that Affair before there were ſome Proofs of the Fact made in the Courſe of the Common-Law, his Grace did thereupon bring an Action of Adultery againſt Mr. Germaine, before the Court of King's-Bench: This Notorious Cauſe was tried on the 24th of November, and upon a full hearing of many Obſcene Evidences, the Jury found for the Plaintiff, and allowed his Grace One hundred Marks Damages, with Coſts of Court: Where the ſlightneſs of Satisfaction was almoſt as great a Reproach as the Crime it ſelf.

Affairs at Sea.

Towards the middle of November Capt. Bembow with a Squadron of Men of War, bombarded St. Malo four days together, though without any great ſucceſs, having only deſtroyed ſome few Houſes, and thrown down part of the Town-Wall. Towards the end of the Month we had much worſe News from Sea; a Fleet of Merchant Ships under a Convoy of Men of War commanded by Sir Francis Wheeler, having ſailed on the 17th of February from Gibraltar up the Streights, met the next day with a moſt violent Storm, which continued all that Day, and the following Night; ſo that on the 19th about 5 in the Morning, Sir Francis Wheeler's own Ship the Suſſex was founder'd, and himſelf, with all his Men, except two Moors, drowned; the Cambridge and Lumley-Caſtle Men of War, the Serpent Bomb Ketch, and the Mary Ketch, together with the Italian Merchant, the Aleppo Factor, the Great George, and the Barkſhire, bound for Turkey, the William for Venice, and the Golden Merchant for Leghorn, all Engliſh, were driven aſhore on the Eaſt ſide of Gibraltar, and moſt of the Men loſt. The ſame Fate attended three Dutch Ships richly laden; but Rear-Admiral Nevill, with two Dutch Men of War, had the good Fortune to be blown out of the Streights, and put ſafe into Cadiz, as did the reſt of the Fleet, on the 19th, into Gibraltar. This Loſs, how great ſoever, was ſoon after repaired, His Majeſty having cauſed the Men of War on the Stocks to be finiſhed with extraordinary Diligence.

Violent Storm.

Great Loſs.

Prince Lewis of Baden comes into England

On Sunday, Decemb. 31. Prince Lewis of Baden arriv'd at Graveſend, and on Tueſday he came up the River in the King's Barge, and was conducted to the Apartment prepared for him at Whitehall; he was ſplendidly entertained and diverted not only by His Majeſty, but by ſeveral Peers of the Realm, and eſpecially by the Generous Duke of Ormond, who treated him with a Magnificent Banquet, and a very ſplendid Ball.

Honours and Preferments.

On Nov. 22. His Majeſty was pleaſed to grant to the Earl of Abington the Office of Chief Juſtice in Eyre, on this ſide Trent, vacant by the Death of the Lord Lovelace; and was alſo pleaſed to appoint the Right Honourable the Lord Viſcount Sidney Maſter General of the Ordnance. to be Colonel of Their Majeſties Firſt Regiment of Foot Guards, in the Place of the late Duke of Scombergh. On Nov. 24. His Majeſty conferred the Honour of Knighthood upon Charles Lloyd, Eſq; one of the Deputy-Lieutenants of the County of Cardigan. On Decemb. 2. His Majeſty did the like Honour to John Buckworth, Eſq;. On Nov. 30. The Duke of St. Albans was ſworn Captain of Their Majeſties Band of Penſioners, in the Place of the Lord Lovelace, deceaſed. Upon the Death of the Duke of Schombergh, His Majeſty appointed the Lord Viſcount Galloway to command His Forces in Piedmont, in the Quality of Lieutenant-General, and to give him likewiſe the Character of Envoy Extraordinary to the Duke of Savoy. His Lordſhip ſet out on Decemb. 6. in order to embark for Holland, and thence to continue his Journey by Land to Piedmont. Toward the end of the Month His Majeſty was pleaſed to nominate Colonel Francis Nicholſon to be Governor in Chief of the Province of Maryland, in the Place of Colonel Copley, lately deceaſed. About the middle of January, His Majeſty was pleaſed to create the Honourable Mr. Charles Butler, Brother to His Grace the Duke of Ormond, a Baron of England by the Name and Style of Charles Lord Butler, Baron of Weſton, in the County of Huntington; and a Baron, Viſcount, and Earl of Ireland, by the Name and Style of Baron of Cloghgrenan, Viſcount Tullo, and Earl of Arran. On Feb. 19. Peregrine Bertie, Eſq; was ſworn Vice-Chamberlain to His Majeſty, in the Place of Sir John Lowther of Lowther, Bart. who had deſir'd His Majeſty's Leave to reſign the ſame. His Majeſty was pleaſed to appoint Samuel Eyre, Serjeant at Law to be one of the Judges of the King's-Bench, in the room of Mr. Juſtice Dolben deceas'd; and Henry Gould, Eſq; to be one of the King's Serjeants; and on Feb. 22. His Majeſty conferred upon them the Honour of Knighthood. On March 4. His Majeſty was pleaſed to conſtitute Charles Earl of Shrewsbury, Principal Secretary of State in the room of the Earl of Nottingham.

The Oxford Hiſtorian and Antiquary, Mr. Anthony a Wood, had lately publiſhed two uſeful Volumes, entituled, Athenæ Oxonienſes: An Exact Hiſtory of all the Writers and Biſhops who have had their Education in the moſt Ancient and Famous Univerſity of Oxford, from the Year 1500 to 1690. Wherein he gave Characters of Men with great Freedom, though to the beſt of his own Opinion, 1693. on, and often with great Truth and Impartiality. Among other Things, in the Life of Judge Glynne, he takes notice, That after the Reſtoration of King Charles II. he was made his Eldeſt Serjeant at Law, by the corrupt Dealing of the then Lord Chancellor; meaning, Edward Earl of Clarendon. It was chiefly for this Expreſſion, that the preſent Earl, as Eldeſt Son and Heir of the ſaid Chancellor, preſerr'd an Action in the Vice-Chancellor's Court againſt the Author, for Defamation of his Deceaſed Father. The Iſſue of the Proceſs was a hard Judgment given againſt the Defendant; which to be made the more publick, was put in the Gazette in theſe words: Oxford, July 31. 1693. On the 29th. Inſtant, Anthony a Wood was Condemn'd in the Vice Chancellor's Court of the Univerſity of Oxford, for having Written and Publiſhed, in the Second Volume of his Book, Entituled, Athenæ Oxonienſes, divers Infamous Libels againſt the Right Honourable Edward late Earl of Clarendon, Lord High Chancellor of England, and Chancellor of the ſaid Univerſity; and was therefore Baniſhed the ſaid Univerſity, until ſuch time as he ſhall ſubſcribe ſuch a Publick Recantation, as the Judge of the Court ſhall approve of, and give Security not to Offend in the like Nature for the future; and his ſaid Book was therefore alſo Decreed to be Burnt before the Publick Theatre: And on this Day it was Burnt accordingly, and publick Programma's of his Expulſion are already affixed in the Three uſual Places.

This Cenſure was the more grievous to the Blunt Author, becauſe it ſeem'd to come from a Party of Men, whom he had the leaſt diſobliged. His Bitterneſs had been againſt the Diſſenters; but of all the Zealous Church-Men, he had given Characters with a ſingular Turn of Eſteem and Affection: Nay, of the Jacobites, and even of the Papiſts themſelves, he had always ſpoke the moſt favourable Things; and therefore it was really the greater Mortification to him, to feel the Storm coming from a Quarter where he thought he leaſt deſerv'd, and might leaſt expect it. For the ſame Reaſon, this Correction was ſome Pleaſure to the Presbyterians, who believ'd there was a Rebuke due to him, which they themſelves were not able to pay.

Death of A.Bp. Sancroft. On Nov. 24. Died Dr. William Sancroft, the depriv'd Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who had retir'd to the Place of his Birth and Eſtate, Fretchingfield in Suffolk, where by his own Order he was Buried in the Church-Yard, with this Inſcription on his Tomb.

William Sancroft, Born in this Pariſh; afterwards by the Providence of God, Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and at laſt depriv'd of all that he could not keep with a good Conſcience, return'd hither to end his Life, where he begun it; and profeſſeth here at the Foot of his Tomb, That as he Naked came forth, ſo he Naked muſt return; The Lord giveth, and the Lord hath taken away; As the Lord pleaſeth, ſo Things come to paſs; Bleſſed be the Name of the Lord.—— And over his Effigies was wrote this Text, St. Matth. 24. v. 27. As the Lightning cometh out of the Eaſt, and ſhineth even unto the Weſt, ſo ſhall alſo the coming of the Son of Man be.

We left the Parliament Sitting, but the King was impatient for their Diſpatch of Buſineſs, that he might have Liberty to begin an Early Campaign: So on April 14. the Second Troop of Guards Commanded by the Duke of Ormond, and the Regiment of Horſe-Guards Commanded by the Earl of Portland, with a great Number of Recruit-Horſes, were Shipp'd in the River, and Sail'd that Day, together with the Train of Artillery, for Flanders. On April 16. His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and with the uſual Solemnity, gave the Royal Aſſent to, 1. An Act for Raiſing Money by a Poll payable Quarterly for One Year, for carrying on a Vigorous War againſt France. 2. An Act for continuing the Act for Puniſhing Officers and Soldiers, who ſhall Mutiny or Deſert Their Majeſties Service; and for Puniſhing of Falſe Muſters, and for the Payment of Quarters for one Year longer. 3. An Act for the Exportation of Iron, Copper, and Mundick Metal. 4. An Act for the Importation of Salt-Petre for one Year; and to ſeveral Private Acts. Acts Paſſed.

1694. The King in haſt to open the Campaign.

Some Bills were depending that were left Unfiniſh'd: Such as, A Bill to Regulate Tryals in Caſes of High Treaſon, which the Commons had ſent to the Lords for their Concurrence. A Bill for Naturalizing of all ſuch Proteſtants as ſhould take the Oaths to Their Majeſties, and Proteſt againſt Popery. A Bill concerning the Forfeitures, both in England and Ireland. A Bill for Regiſtring of Wills: Another againſt Stock-Jobbers, and another for the Encouragement of Privateers. But all other Bills being now ready for the Royal Aſſent, His Majeſty came on Wedneſday, April 25. to the Houſe of Peers, and paſs'd the following Acts. 1. An Act for Granting to Their Majeſties ſeveral Rates and Duties upon Tonnage of Ships and Veſſels, and upon Beer, Ale, and other Liquors, for ſecuring certain Recompences and Advantages in the ſaid Act mentioned, to ſuch Perſons as ſhall voluntarily advance the Sum of Fifteen Hundred Thouſand Pounds towards carrying on the War againſt France. 2. An Act for Granting to Their Majeſties ſeveral Duties upon Vellum, Parchment, and Paper, for Four Years, towards carrying on the War againſt France. 3. An Act for Licenſing and Regulating Hackney-Coaches, and Stage-Coaches. 4. An Act for Enabling Their Majeſties to make Grants, Leaſes, and Copies of Offices, Lands, and Hereditaments, part of their Dutchy of Cornwall, or annexed to the ſame, and for Confirmation of Leaſes and Grants already made. 5. An Act for raiſing the Militia of this Kingdom, for the Year 1694. although the Months Pay formerly advanced be not Paid. 6. An Act for Appointing and Enabling Commiſſioners to Examine, Take, and State the Publick Accompts of the Kingdom. 7. An Act for Building Good and Defenſible Ships. 8. An Act for the better Diſcipline of Their Majeſties Navy Royal; and to Two Private Acts. After which, His Majeſty made a Gracious Speech to both Houſes, as follows. Bills left unfiniſh'd. Acts Paſſed.

My Lords and Gentlemen, King's Speech.

" THE Proofs you have given of your Affection to Me, and the Zeal you have " expreſſed for the Support of the Government, " oblige me to return you Thanks before I put " an End to this Seſſion; and in particular, to " Thank You, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, " for the Large Supplies you have provided to " carry on the War.

" I will endeavour to do My Part; and it is " from the Bleſſing of God that We muſt all ex- " pect ſuch Succeſs as may anſwer our Deſires.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" The Poſture of Affairs making it neceſſary " for Me to be abſent for ſome time out of this " Kingdom, I Recommend it to you, That in " your ſeveral Stations you be careful to preſerve " the Publick Peace.

Then

1694. Then the Lord Keeper by His Majesty's Command Prorogued the Parliament to Tuesday the 18th Day of September next.

The King goes for Holland. Is forc'd to return. The same Day about Four in the Afternoon His Majesty went for Gravesend, in order to Embark for Holland; but finding the Wind contrary, He return'd to Kensington the next day. To leave Things in the better Order, and the People in greater Content and Satisfaction, His Majesty gave the Garter, vacant by the Death of William Duke of Hamilton, to the Right Honourable Charles Earl of Shrewsbury, lately made Principal Secretary of State; who in a Chapter held at Whitehall April 25. was Elected, Invested, and Knighted with the usual Ceremony; and on the same day was Created a Marquess and Duke of this Kingdom, by the Name and Stile of Marquess of Alton, and Duke of Shrewsbury. His Majesty was likewise pleased to Create the Right Honourable John Earl of Mulgrave, Marquess of Normanby; and Henry Herbert of Ribisford in the County of Worcester, Esq; a Baron of this Kingdom, by the Name and Title of Baron Herbert of Cherbury in the County of Salop. At the same time His Majesty was pleased to appoint the Right Honourable Edward Russell, Esq; Sir John Lowther of Whitehaven, Bar^t. Henry Priestman, Esq; Robert Austin, Esq; Sir Robert Rich, Bar^t. Sir George Rook, and Sir John Houblon, Knts. Commissioners for Executing the Office of Lord High Admiral of England and Ireland, and the Dominions thereunto belonging. On April the 26*th*. His Majesty was pleased, upon the Death of Sir Thomas Duppa, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, to confer that Place upon Fleetwood Shepherd, Esq; Gentleman Usher Daily Waiter to His Majesty; and conferr'd upon him the Honour of Knighthood. On April the 30*th*. His Majesty was pleased to Create Thomas Lord Marquess of Carmarthen, President of the Council, Duke of Leeds; William Earl of Bedford, Marquess of Tavistock, and Duke of Bedford; William Earl of Devonshire, Lord Steward of Their Majesties Household, Marquess of Hartington, and Duke of Devonshire; John Earl of Clare, Marquess of Clare, and Duke of Newcastle; Francis Lord Viscount Newport, Treasurer of Their Majesties Household, Earl of Bradford in the County of Salop: And soon after, Henry Lord Viscount Sidney, Lord Warden of the Cinque-Ports, was Created Earl of Romney in the County of Kent. On May the 2*d*. His Majesty was pleased to Constitute Sidney Lord Godolphin, Sir Stephen Fox, Knight, Charles Mountague, Esq; Sir William Trumbal, Knight, and John Smith, Esq; Lords Commissioners of the Treasury: And, for a Reward of Eminent Services done in the House of Commons with great Dexterity and Industry; His Majesty granted to Charles Mountague, Esq; one of the said Commissioners of the Treasury, the Offices of Chancellor and Under-Treasurer of the Exchequer. On May the 3*d*. John Lord Marquess of Normanby, and Charles Lord Viscount Dursley, were, by His Majesty's Command, Sworn of the Privy Council; and took their Places at the Board.

Honours and Preferments.

When Persons were thus wisely softened; On Thursday in the Evening, May the 3*d*. the King and Queen went down to Gravesend, where His Majesty embarked about Five the next Morning, the Wind being then fair; but it changing soon after, His Majesty came ashoar again at Gravesend about Ten; and for better Expedition, went the same day with the Queen to Canterbury, and on May the 6*th*. went early from thence to Margate; where he embarked on the Fubs Yatch, and set Sail about Eleven with a fair Wind for Holland; being attended by Eight Dutch Men of War who came about from the Downs. His Majesty Landed the next Day at the Hoek of Holland, over against the Brill, at Six in the Evening; and having Supp'd with Monsieur Reningburgh, He came about Midnight to the Hague; and next Morning He went first into the Assembly of the States of Holland, and afterwards that of the States-General, and made a short Speech in each of them; and receiv'd their Compliments on His safe Arrival: And after a few days, His Majesty went to Loo, for some Diversions of that Place.

Here leaving His Majesty, we shall first observe the Motions of the Confederate Fleet; which was out early this Year, but yet were not able to Block up the French Fleet in Brest, nor to meet 'em for a Fight at Sea: For the French industriously avoided an Engagement; and were no sooner out of Harbour, but they made all the Sail they could toward the Mediterranean; having form'd great Designs against Spain this Campaign. In order to break their Measures, and to prevent the Loss of Catalonia, K. William thought fit to order His Fleet into those Seas. But before Admiral Russel left the Coast of France, being inform'd that there was a Fleet of Merchant-Men in Bertram Bay, bound to the Eastward; he sent Captain Pickard, and the Roebuck Fireship, either to Take, or Destroy 'em. These Orders the Captain executed with so good Success, that of Fifty Five Sail of them, he burnt or sunk Thirty Five, besides the Man of War that was their Convoy, the which run among the Rocks, and soon after blew up with her Two Sloops, of between Ten and Fifteen Guns.

The Confederate Fleet.

The French Fleet destroy'd in Bertram Bay.

The same good Fortune did not attend the Design of destroying the Harbour of Brest; the Execution of which desperate Attempt was committed to Lieutenant General Talmash, who fell a Sacrifice in it; and therefore, as some pretend, was destin'd to that Fall by the Envy of some of his pretended Friends; this is certain, that the French had time to provide themselves against a Design that was become a Town-Talk in London some Months before it was put in Execution. But to give an Account of this unfortunate Attempt; on the 5th of June, The Lord Berckley, Admiral of the Blue Squadron, parted from Admiral Russell with Twenty nine Men of War of the Line of Battel, English and Dutch, besides small Frigates, Fire-ships, Bomb-ketches, and Transport Ships; and upon the 7th he came to an Anchor between Cameret and Bertram Bay, though continually plaid upon by the Enemies Bombs; first from Cameret Western Point, then from a Castle on a high Rock in Bertram Bay, and lastly from two Forts on each side of the Isthmus going into Brest Road. The same day the Lord Cutts, and the Marquis of Carmarthen in his own Gally, stood in a considerable Way into the Bay, and having taken a good view of it amidst the Enemies Fire, they return'd and gave the Lord Berckley an Account of the Posture of the Bay, and the Situation of the Castle; which they found very advantagious to defend the Landing Places. It was at first ordered, That the Monk, a Ship of 60 Guns, and the Diamond of equal force, should go in; but the Marquis represented that those Two Men of War would not be sufficient to cover the Boats at their Landing, because the Enemy were better Prepared and more Numerous than was expected, and ready to be seconded by Fourteen Squadron of Horse. Hereupon on June 8. in a Consultation of the English and Dutch Flags, and the General Officers of the Land Forces, it was Resolved, That Six other Men of War should be added to the Two former; which the Marquis under-

Unsuccessful Attempt on Brest.

1694. undertook to Poſt ſo as to bear upon the Caſtle to the beſt Advantage, and to cover the Deſcent of our Land Forces. This was a work of great Difficulty and Danger, for no ſooner was the Monk come within reach of the Enemies Mortars, but they began to throw at her from Point Des Fillettes, and the Weſtern Point of Cameret Bay; and the reſt of the Ships that followed, were Surpriz'd with Three Batteries more, which they never perceived till they felt their Shot: But under all theſe Difficulties, the brave Marquis made a ſhift to Poſt the Eight Ships in ſuch a manner, as gave great Succour to the Landing Forces, and did the French conſiderable Miſchief; dropping their Anchors, and Firing with ſo much Reſolution, that they forc'd the French to run Twice out of Cameret Fort; but they could eaſily perceive the Enemy very advantagiouſly Intrenched at every place where there was any poſſibility of Landing, and great Numbers of Foot were drawn behind the Trenches.

Amidſt theſe Difficulties, there could be no Proſecution of that regular Landing which was propoſed by my Lord Cutts, and had been Agreed on. However, the undaunted General Talmaſh was reſolute in the Enterprize, though unlikely to Succeed; and therefore with a ſmall Number of Well-boats, and about Nine hundred Men, went Aſhoar in a confuſed manner, under a little Rock on the South-ſide of the ſmall Bay; but immediately a Detachment of French Marines fell in upon 'em with ſo much Fury, that the Engliſh were forc'd to retire to their Boats in great Diſorder; and it happening at the ſame time to be Ebbing Water, moſt of the Boats ſtuck faſt; ſo that the Men on Board 'em were either miſerably Slaughter'd, or forc'd to beg Quarter. The Signal being now given to bring off the Ships who had all their Rigging cut to pieces, and moſt of their Sails and Yards diſabled, the Marquis of Carmarthen, with incredible Labour and Hazard, brought off all the Ships except the Weſep, a ſmall Dutch Man of War of 30 Guns. The brave Talmaſh ſoon after died of his Wounds: Four hundred Men were loſt in the Ships under the Marquis's Command; and of the Land Troops, they reckon'd at leaſt Seven hundred of 'em either Slain, Wounded, or taken Priſoners.

To make ſome Amends for this diſappointment the Lord Berckley Sail'd towards Diepe; and on the 12th of July threw One thouſand one hundred Bombs and Carcaſſes into the Town, which ſet it on Fire in ſeveral Place. The Townſmen deſpairing to quench the Flames, began to run away in great Conſternation; whereupon Two Regiments of the Militia of Britany were ſent to encourage them; but the Diſorder was ſo great, and the Fire ſo dreadful, that the Soldiers themſelves fled with the reſt: Had the Engliſh known what had paſſed, they might in all probability have poſſeſs'd themſelves of the place: However they ſo ruin'd it, that the greateſt part of the Houſes were reduc'd to Aſhes, and ſcarce any left unſhatter'd. From Diepe the Fleet alarming all the Coaſt of France, Sail'd toward Havre-de-Grace; and on the 16th they began to Bombard the Town, under the direction of Captain Bembow; which they continued to do till the next Morning, when the Wind blowing hard, they gave over Shooting. The 18th towards the Evening, the Weather being Calm, the following Night was ſpent in throwing in Two hundred and fifty Bombs more into the Town; but the Wind growing high, the Bomb-ketches ſtood off again; and on the 24*th.* my Lord Berkley ſail'd from Havre-de-Grace, leaving it conſiderably Damag'd.

The Bombing of Diepe,

And of Havre-de-Grace.

But theſe Misfortunes at Breſt were in great meaſure repair'd by the Glory of our Grand Fleet in the Mediterranean, under the Command of Admiral Ruſſell, who rode there in Triumph, and Coop'd up the French Fleet in the Harbour of Thulon; and though Mareſchal de Tourville once adventur'd out to Sea, with a deſign to ſlip by the Engliſh Admiral, yet he quickly found ſo watchful an Eye upon him, that he was forc'd to return to his Port again. Indeed nothing is more Illuſtrious in the whole Courſe of King William's Reign, than his Fleet riding thus Triumphantly in the Mediterranean; for by this means the Engliſh Dominion of the Streights was added to that of the Narrow Seas, a ſtop was put to the Conquering Arms of France in Catalonia; all the French Coaſts were expoſed to the Inſults of the Confederates; and even all the Italian Princes were kept in Awe; and the Venetians began now to think of ſending a Solemn Embaſſy into England, to Court the Friendſhip of His Britanick Majeſty.

1694. Triumphs of the Engliſh Fleet in the Mediterranean.

We muſt now look to the Campaign in Flanders: The Confederate Army under the King's Command, was encamp'd at Mont St. Andre, conſiſting of Thirty one thouſand Horſe and Dragoons and Fifty one thouſand Foot; beſides a Body of Seven thouſand Men, under the Command of Count Thyan near Ghent. The French were not much inferior in Number: But the Dauphin who Commanded them in Perſon, declared, That he had receiv'd Orders from His Father, not to ſtir from his Camp near Huy as long as the Confederates continued in theirs at Mont St. Andre. The King made a ſhow of Attacking them more than once; and the Duke of Luxemburgh being at one time more particularly apprehenſive of it, is ſaid to have gone in great haſte to the Dauphin, and to have Expoſtulated with him, That he ſhould be prepared for Battel in that dangerous Conjuncture; while the Dauphine having Cæſar's Commentaries in his hand, told the Mareſchal, He had been Reading that Book, and conſidering of it; as if he were a Prince fitter for Study than Action.

Campaign in Flanders.

It ſeem'd to be a new Trial of Skill between the Two Armies, who ſhould continue longeſt in their reſpective Camps; But the French being not able to ſubſiſt any longer, had reſolved to Decamp, but thought to have conceal'd their Deſign, by ſending out divers ſmall Bodies of Horſe, under the pretence of Foraging, to reinforce the Marqueſs of Harcourt's Body, on the other ſide the Meuze, who was to ſeize the Advantageous Poſt of Pieton, and by that means to get before the Confederates: yet the King who was apprehenſive of it, prevented their Deſign, and Decamping on the 8*th.* of Auguſt, He ſoon gained the Poſt of Pieton, where there was not Forage for above Four Days. So that being inform'd of the Enemies March, His Majeſty moved on the 10*th.* from Sombref to Nivelle, on the 11*th.* to Soignes, on the 12*th.* to Chevre, and on the 13*th.* to Grames near Aeth. On the 14*th.* the Elector of Bavaria was detach'd with a conſiderable Body of Horſe and Foot, and ſome Pieces of Cannon, to poſſeſs himſelf of a Poſt upon the Scheld, and the Army follow'd with an Intention to have paſſed that River at Pont-Eſpieries; but though the Confederates made great diligence to get thither, yet the French made more to prevent them; for on the 15*th.* the Elector having advanced towards Pont d'Eſchouffe, in order to force the Paſſage of the River, he found the French, to the Number of Thirty Thouſand, ſo well Intrench'd on the other ſide, that he did not think it Prudence to purſue his Enterprize. This haſty March coſt the French abundance of Men and Horſes, but that Loſs was inconſiderable in compariſon of the Advantage they

The French forc'd to Decamp.

1694. they gain'd by hindring the Allies from Penetrating into French Flanders, where, conſidering their Strength, they would, in all probability have made ſome important Conqueſt, or, at leaſt ſecured Winter-Quarters. The King of France was ſo ſenſible of it, that He writ a Letter, which he order'd to be Read at the Head of the Army, wherein he return'd Thanks, in the firſt place, to the Princes of the Blood, next to the Mareſchal de Luxemburgh, as having a principal ſhare in the Conduct; then to the reſt of the Mareſchals of France, and all the General Officers; and laſtly to all the French and Swiſs Infantry, Regiment by Regiment, acknowledging how much he was beholding to their Zeal and incredible Diligence.

Whilſt the French were deeply Intrench'd near Courtray, from whence they had ſent ſtrong Detachments to Cover Ipreſs, Menin, Berg St. Winox, Furnes and Dunkirk; the King finding it impoſſible to attempt any thing on that ſide, reſolved to lay hold on this Occaſion, to diſpoſſeſs the Enemy of the Town and Caſtle of Huy. In purſuance of this Deſign, the Prince Tſerclaes de Tilly paſs'd the Meuſe, and inveſted the Place with all the Horſe and Dragoons of the Biſhoprick of Liege, a Party of Brandenburgh Horſe, and ſome Battalions of Foot. The next Day arriv'd Sixteen Regiments of Foot, with the Duke of Holſtein Ploen, who was appointed to command the Siege, and at whoſe approach the Town immediately Surrendred. By the 19*th.* of September, N. S. the Batteries were raiſed againſt the Caſtle; the 21*ſt.* the Trenches were open'd; and the following Days the Attacks carried on with ſo much Vigour, that all things being ready for an Aſſault by the 27*th.* the French Governor beat a Parley, and ſurrendred that Fortreſs the next Day. By this Conqueſt the French were totally expell'd out of the Biſhoprick of Liege: Dinant at the ſame time being a part of France: And thus ended the Campaign in Flanders.

Siege of Huy.

During the Kings Abſence there was little remarkable in England, but the eminent Prudence of the Queen, in preſerving the Peace of the Nation. On May 10. Thomas Earl of Stamford, and Charles Mountague Eſq; were by Her Majeſty's Command Sworn of the Privy Council, and took their Places at the Board. On June 5*th.* his Electoral Highneſs Frederick the Third, Marqueſs of Brandenburg, Prince Elector, and Great Chamberlain of the Sacred Roman Empire; His Serene Highneſs George William Duke of Brunſwick and Lunenburgh, Prince of the ſaid Empire; and his Grace Charles Duke of Shrewsbury, being Knights Elect of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter, were Inſtalled in St. George's Chappel at Windſor; the two former by their Proxies, and the latter in Perſon. The Atchievements of the late Elector of Saxony and of Duke Hamilton, Two Defunct Knights of the Order, having been firſt offer'd at the Altar. The Jacobites were induſtrious and implacable in their Plots againſt the Government, though the Vigilance of the Queen, and the Hearts of the People, prevented the Succeſs of their Hopes and Projects. Colonel John Parker had been committed to the Tower for High Treaſon, and a Bill of Indictment was found againſt him in Trinity Term, but on Saturday Auguſt 11*th.* by a ſingular Stratagem he made his Eſcape in the Night, and fled from Juſtice; and though there was a Proclamation for the Diſcovering and Apprehending of him, with a Reward of Four Hundred Pounds for ſo doing, yet he ſafely got to France, where his Treaſonable Deſigns were firſt laid and undertaken.

The Queen's great Prudence.

Jacobite Plots.

On Thurſday November 8*th.* the King Embark'd on the William and Mary Yatch in the Maeſe, being attended by a Squadron of Men of War, under the Command of the Lord Marqueſs of Carmarthen, and the next Day about Twelve a Clock His Majeſty Landed at Margate, and lay that Night at Canterbury; the Queen met him next Day at Rocheſter, and between Eleven and Twelve at Night Their Majeſties came to Kenſington. As they went through the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, Illuminations, Bonfires, Ringing of Bells, and the continual Acclamations of vaſt Numbers of People ſhew'd a univerſal Joy for His Majeſty's ſafe Return. 1694.

The King returns to England.

On Monday November 12*th.* the Parliament met at Weſtminſter, and with uſual Solemnity the King made this Speech to Both Houſes.

Parliament meets.

King's Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I Am glad to meet you here, when I can "ſay Our Affairs are in a better Poſture "both by Sea and Land than when we parted "laſt.

"The Enemy has not been in a Condition to "Oppoſe Our Fleet in theſe Seas, and Our "ſending ſo great a Force into the Mediterra-"nean, has diſappointed their Deſigns, and "leaves Us a Proſpect of further Succeſs.

"With Reſpect to the War by Land, I think "I may ſay, That this Year a ſtop has been put "to the Progreſs of the French Arms.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

"I have had ſo much Experience of your "good Affection to Me, and of your Zeal for "the Publick, that I cannot doubt of your Aſ-"ſiſtance at this time; I do therefore earneſtly "Recommend to you, to Provide ſuch Supplies, "as may Enable Me to proſecute the War with "Vigor; which is the only means to procure "Peace to Chriſtendom, with the Safety and Ho-"nour of England.

"I muſt likewiſe put you in Mind that the "Act of Tonnage and Poundage Expires at "Chriſtmas; and I hope you will think fit to "continue that Revenue to the Crown; which "is the more Neceſſary at this time, in regard "the ſeveral Branches of the Revenue are under "great Anticipations, for extraordinary Ex-"pences of the War, and ſubject to many De-"mands upon other Accounts.

"I cannot but Mention to you again, the "Debt for the Tranſport Ships employed in the "Reducing of Ireland, which is a Caſe of "Compaſſion, and deſerves Relief.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I ſhould be Glad you would take into your "Conſideration the Preparing ſome good Bill "for the Encouragement of our Seamen: You "cannot but be ſenſible, how much a Law of "this Nature, would tend to the Advancement "of Trade, and of the Naval Strength of the "Kingdom, which is Our great Intereſt, and "ought to be Our principal Care."

The Commons Adjourn'd to the 19*th.* of November, when the firſt thing they did was to order Mr. Harley to prepare and bring in a Bill for the frequent Meeting and Calling of Parliaments, which they had been ſo Earneſt for in former Seſſions, and were reſolved to inſiſt upon in this. The Bill was eaſily Drawn up, and preſented November the 22*d.* and Read with Diſpatch the Third time, and Paſt December the 13*th.* and ſent up to the Lords, who on December the 18*th.* gave it their Concurrence, without any Amendments.

Proceedings of the Commons.

Novem-

1694. November 21. the Commons unanimouſly Voted a Supply to Their Majeſties, and examin'd the Eſtimate for the next Year's Service for the War; the Accounts of the Moneys paid to the Fleet, to the Army, to the Allies, and for Forage: and enquir'd into the Quota's that the Confederates were ſeverally to Furniſh. After this Review, they Reſolved on November 30*th*. That the Sum of Two Millions Three Hundred Eighty Two Thouſand Seven Hundred and Twelve Pounds be Granted for the Maintenance of the Navy; and that of Two Millions Three Hundred Eighty Two Thouſand Pounds, for the ſupport of the Land Forces, for the Service of the Year 1695.

Supply granted.

To raiſe theſe immenſe Sums, it was Reſolved on December 4*th*. to take theſe Ways and Means. Firſt, That an Aid of Four Shillings in the Pound be Granted to Their Majeſties, to be Laid and Levied in the ſame manner as formerly. Secondly, That the Subſidies of Tonnage and Poundage be continued for the term of Five Years Longer, beginning on the 26*th*. of this Inſtant December.

Ways and Means.

To loſe no time, His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers on December 22*d*. and with the uſual Solemnity gave the Royal Aſſent to, 1. An Act for Granting to their Majeſties a Subſidy of Tonnage and Poundage, and other Sums of Money, payable upon Merchandizes Exported and Imported. 2. An Act for the frequent Meeting and Calling of Parliaments. The ſame Day one Dyer a very Impudent Writer of News-Letters, was juſtly Reprimanded by the Speaker, for preſuming to miſrepreſent the Proceedings of that Houſe. But ſuch a gentle Rebuke could not reform a Fellow, who Wrote for Two very neceſſitous Cauſes, for the Jac. Party, and for Bread.

Acts paſſed.

On Friday December 21. the Queen was taken Ill at Kenſington, and Her Diſtemper proved to be the Small-Pox, with incurable Symptoms; So that in Spight of the moſt exquiſite Care and Conſult of Phyſicians, Her Majeſty departed this Life on Friday 28. Decemb. about one in the Morning; leaving the King under an unexpreſſible Grief and Affliction; and the whole Kingdom under the deepeſt and moſt ſenſible Sorrow for the loſs of a Princeſs of ſo much Piety, Clemency, Goodneſs, and other great and exemplary Virtues.

Death of the Queen.

The manner of Her dying is thus delivered by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury in Her Funeral Sermon. "Some few Days before the Feaſt of our "Lord's Nativity She found Her ſelf indiſpos'd. I "will not ſay, that of this Affliction She had any "Formal Preſage, but yet there was ſomething "that look'd like an immediate Preparation for it; "I mean, Her chuſing to hear read more than "once a little before it, the laſt Sermon of a "Good and Learned Man (now with God) up-"on this Subject; What, ſhall we receive good from "the hand of God, and ſhall we not receive evil? "This Indiſpoſition ſpeedily grew up into a dan-"gerous Diſtemper: As ſoon as that was under-"ſtood, the earlieſt Care of this Charitable Mi-"ſtreſs was for the removing of ſuch immediate "Servants as might by diſtance be preſerved in "health. Soon after this She fix'd the Times "of Prayers in that Chamber to which Her Sick-"neſs had confined Her.

"On that very day, She ſhew'd how ſenſible "She was of Death, and how little She fear'd it. "She required him who officiated there, to add "that Collect in the Communion of the Sick, in "which are theſe Words, —That whenſoever the "Soul ſhall depart from the Body, it may be without "ſpot preſented unto thee. I will, ſaid She, have "this Collect read twice every day. All have "need to be put in mind of Death, and Princes "as much as any body elſe.

"On Monday the Flattering Diſeaſe occaſion-1694. "ed ſome Hopes, though they were but faint "ones. On the next day, the Feſtival of Chriſt's "Birth, thoſe Hopes were raiſed into a kind of "Aſſurance; and there was Joy, a great Joy "ſeen in the Countenances of all Good People: "That Joy endured but for a Day, and that Day "was clos'd with a very diſmal Night: The Diſ-"eaſe ſhew'd it ſelf in various Forms, and ſmall "Hopes of Life were now left. Then it was "that he who performed the Holy Offices, be-"lieved himſelf obliged to acquaint the Good "Queen with the Apprehenſions all had of an "unlikelihood at leaſt of her Recovery. She re-"ceiv'd the Tidings with a Courage agreeable "to the Strength of Her Faith: Loth She was "to terrifie thoſe about Her; but for her ſelf, She "ſeem'd neither to fear Death, nor to covet Life. "It was, you may imagine, high Satisfaction "to hear Her ſay a great many moſt Chriſtian "things, and this among them: I believe I ſhall "now ſoon die, and I thank God I have from my "Youth learned a true Doctrine, that Repentance is "not to be put off to a Death-Bed. That Day She "call'd for Prayers a third time, fearing She had "ſlept a little when they were the ſecond time "read; for She thought a Duty was not per-"form'd, if it was not minded.

"On Thurſday She prepared Her ſelf for the "Bleſſed Communion, to which She had been no "Stranger from the 15th Year of Her Age. She "was much concerned that She found Her ſelf in "ſo dozing a Condition; ſo She expreſſed it. To "that, She added, Others had need Pray for Me, ſee-"ing I am ſo little able to pray for my Self. How-"ever, She ſtirred up Her Attention, and prayed "to God for his Aſſiſtance: And God heard Her, for "from thenceforth, to the end of the Office, She "had the perfect Command of Her Underſtand-"ing, and was intent upon the great Work She "was going about; and ſo intent, that when a "ſecond Portion of a certain Draught was offer'd "Her, She refus'd it, ſaying, I have but a lit-"tle time to live, and I would ſpend it a better "way.

"The Holy Elements being ready, and ſeve-"ral Biſhops coming to be Communicants, She "repeated piouſly and diſtinctly, but with a low "Voice, (for ſuch Her Weakneſs had then made "it) all the Parts of the Holy Office, which were "proper for Her, and received with all the Signs "of a Strong Faith, and Fervent Devotion, the "Bleſſed Pledges of God's Favour, and thanked "him with a Joyful Heart, that She was not de-"prived of the Opportunity. She own'd alſo "that God had been good to Her beyond Her "Expectation, tho' in a Circumſtance of ſmaller "importance; She having without any Indecen-"cy or Difficulty taken down that Bread, when "it had not been ſo eaſie for Her, for ſome time, "to ſwallow any other.

"That Afternoon She call'd for Prayers ſome-"what earlier than the appointed Time, becauſe "She fear'd, (that was Her Reaſon) that She "ſhould not long be ſo well compos'd. And ſo "it came to paſs; for every Minute after this, "'twas plain, Death made nearer and nearer Ap-"proaches: However, this true Chriſtian kept "Her Mind as fix'd as poſſibly She could upon the "beſt things; and there were read by Her Dire-"ctions, ſeveral Pſalms of David, and alſo a "Chapter of a Pious Book concerning Truſt in "God. Toward the latter end of it, Her Appre-"henſion began to fail, yet not ſo much, but that "She could ſay a Devout Amen to that Prayer in "which Her Pious Soul was recommended to that "God who gave it.

1694. "During all this Time, there appear'd nothing "of Impatience, nothing of Frowardneſs, nothing "of Anger; there was heard nothing of Murmu- "ring, nothing of Impertinence, nothing of Ill "Sound, and ſcarce a Number of Disjointed "Words.

"In all theſe Afflictions the King was greatly "afflicted; how ſenſibly, and yet how becoming- "ly, many ſaw, but few have skill enough to de- "ſcribe it; I am ſure I have not. At laſt the Helps "of Art, and Prayers and Tears not prevailing, "a quarter before One, on Friday Morning, af- "ter two or three ſmall Strugglings of Nature, and "without ſuch Agonies, as in ſuch Caſes are com- "mon, She fell on ſleep.

On Monday, Decemb. 31. the Houſe of Peers went in a Body to Kenſington, and preſented His Majeſty the following Addreſs on this ſad Occa- ſion.

"We Your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal "Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in "Parliament Aſſembled, do with inexpreſſible "Grief, humbly aſſure Your Majeſty of the deep "Senſe we have of the Loſs Your Majeſty and "the whole Kingdom doth ſuſtain by the Death "of that Excellent Princeſs, Our Sovereign La- "dy the Queen: Moſt humbly beſeeching Your "Majeſty, that You would not indulge Your "Grief upon this Sad Occaſion, to the prejudice "of the Health of Your Royal Perſon, in whoſe "Preſervation not only the Welfare of Your own "Subjects, but of all Chriſtendom is ſo much con- "cerned. We farther beg leave upon this ſad Oc- "caſion, humbly to renew to Your Majeſty, the "Hearty and Sincere Aſſurances of Our utmoſt "Aſſiſtance againſt all Your Enemies, both at "Home and Abroad, and of all other Demon- "ſtrations of the greateſt Duty and Affection that "can poſſibly be paid by the moſt Faithful Sub- "jects.

To this Addreſs His Majeſty gave this Decent Anſwer; I heartily thank You for Your Kindneſs to Me, but much more for the Senſe You ſhow of Our Great Loſs, which is above what I can expreſs.

On the ſame Day His Majeſty was attended by the Houſe of Commons, who preſented this Ad- dreſs of Condolence.

Moſt Gracious and Dread Sovereign,

"We Your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal "Subjects, the Commons in Parliament Aſſem- "bled, being deeply ſenſible of the great Misfor- "tune which hath befallen Your Majeſty and this "Kingdom, by the Death of Our moſt Gracious "Queen, do with unſpeakable Grief of Heart, "humbly beg leave to condole the irreparable "Loſs of that Moſt Excellent Princeſs, the beſt "of Women; to enumerate whoſe Virtues, were "to aggravate our Sorrow.

"We cannot, at the ſame time, but bleſs God "for the Preſervation of Your Majeſty to Us, on "whoſe Life the Welfare and Happineſs of this "Kingdom, and the Liberties of Europe, do in ſo "great a meaſure depend; humbly beſeeching "Your Majeſty ſo to moderate Your Grief under "this Affliction, as not to prejudice or endanger "Your Health: And that Your Majeſty would "pleaſe to take ſuch further Care of Your Roy- "al Perſon, that We may All enjoy the Bleſſing "of Your Majeſty's Long Life, and Happy "Reign.

"We do alſo look upon it as a Duty We owe "to Your Majeſty, to Our Selves, and to thoſe "We Repreſent, to take this Occaſion of aſſu- "ring Your Majeſty, that We Your Faithful "Commons will always, to the utmoſt of Our "Power, ſtand by, ſupport and defend Your Ma- 1694. "jeſty and Your Govenment againſt all Your E- "nemies both at Home and Abroad.

To which His Majeſty was pleaſed to Anſwer, Gentlemen, I take very kindly Your Care of Me, eſpe- cially at this time, when I am able to think of nothing but our Great Loſs.

The City of London, and moſt of the Corpo- rations in England, preſented the like Addreſſes upon this ſad Occaſion. But next to the King himſelf, the Death of the Queen was moſt Af- fectionately Lamented by Her Royal Siſter the Princeſs Anne of Denmark; who at this lamen- table Juncture, was willing to forget the Reaſons that had oblig'd Her to leave the Court, and to live in an obſcure Retirement, more like a Pri- vate Perſon in Diſgrace, than like the next Heir to the Crown.

Under the deepeſt Impreſſions of Grief, She wrote a moſt Kind and Reſpectful Letter to the King; wherein "She begg'd His Majeſty's "favourable Acceptance of Her Sincere and Hear- "ty Sorrow for His great Affliction in the Loſs "of the Queen: And did aſſure His Majeſty, "She was as ſenſibly troubled with His Misfor- "tune, as if She had never been ſo Unhappy, "as to fall under Her Diſpleaſure. She did ear- "neſtly deſire His Majeſty to give Her Leave to "wait upon Him, as ſoon as it could be, with "no Inconveniency to Him, and without dan- "ger of increaſing His Affliction; That She "might have an opportunity in Perſon, not on- "ly of Repeating this, but of Aſſuring His Ma- "jeſty of Her Real Intention to omit no Occa- "ſion of giving Him conſtant Proofs of Her "Sincere Reſpect, and Concern for His Perſon- "al Intereſt and Safety." This Generous Affe- ction of Her Royal Highneſs, was ſuitably re- ceived by the King: And His Grace the New Archbiſhop of Canterbury, laying hold on this fa- vourable opportunity to Reconcile the Royal Fa- mily, Repreſented to His Majeſty the Prudent and Loyal Conduct of Her Royal Highneſs and the Prince of Denmark, during their Receſs from Court. That they had been ſo far from giving any Obſtruction to His Majeſty's Affairs, that they were alway in the ſame Publick Meaſures with Him; and thoſe Members of either Houſe of Parliament, who had Places under their High- neſſes, had always appeared forward in promo- ting His Majeſty's Intereſt. Theſe Reaſons be- ing offer'd as a Comment on the Letter of the Princeſs, work'd ſo effectually on the Heart of the King, that as a Mark of His Favour and Af- fection, He did immediately Preſent Her Royal Highneſs with moſt of the late Queen's Jewels; and His Sorrow for the Loſs of ſo Good a Wife, was in ſome Meaſure Alleviated by the Recon- cilement of ſo Kind a Siſter.

Towards the beginning of this Seſſion of Par- liament, the Popiſh Lancaſhire Gentlemen, inſtead of Bleſſing God for their late Deliverance, and acknowledging the Lenity and Mercy of the pre- ſent Government, Endeavour'd to repreſent their Legal Proſecution, as a Trick of the State, and the Court's Plot againſt them, rather than their Plot againſt the Government. They thought they had an Intereſt ſufficient to ſubmit this Mat- ter to the Examination of the Houſe of Com- mons; who, after the Reading of ſeveral Pa- pers, diſappointed the Petitioners, and juſtly Re- ſolved on February 6. Firſt, That there does ap- pear to this Houſe, that there was ſufficient Grounds for the Proſecution and Trials of the Gentlemen at Mancheſter. Secondly, That upon the Informations and Examinations before This Houſe, it does appear, that there was a dange-

1694. rous Plot carried on againſt the King and Government. The Houſe farther Ordered, That Mr. Standiſh of Standiſh-Hall in Lancaſhire, ſhould be taken into Cuſtody: And their Meſſenger reporting, he was not to be found, they Addreſs'd the King to Iſſue out His Royal Proclamation for the Apprehending of him. This Repulſe in the Houſe of Commons, did not diſcourage that bold Party from laying their Complaint alſo before the Houſe of Peers; where, after Examining ſome Witneſſes, and entring into proper Debates, the Queſtion being put, Whether the Government had ſufficient Cauſe to Proſecute the late Perſons accuſed of a Plot in Lancaſhire and Cheſhire? It was carried in the Affirmative.

Lancaſhire Plot.

The Commons had proceeded on the Ways and Means of raiſing Money, to anſwer the great Occaſions of the War: And had agreed on a Land-Tax, with appropriating ſome part of the Cuſtoms to the ſame Publick Uſes. So on Monday, February 11. His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to,

Acts Paſſed.

1. An Act for granting to His Majeſty an Aid of Four Shillings in the Pound, for One Year; and for applying the Yearly Sum of Three Hundred Thouſand Pounds, for Five Years, out of the Duties of Tonnage and Poundage, and other Sums of Money, payable upon Merchandize, Exported and Imported, for carrying on the War againſt France with Vigour. 2. An Act for Exempting Apothecaries from ſerving the Offices of Conſtable, Scavinger, and other Pariſh and Ward Offices, and from ſerving upon Juries. 3. An Act for Rebuilding the Town of Warwick, and for Determining Differences touching Houſes Burnt or Demoliſhed, by reaſon of the late Dreadful Fire there. There ſeem'd to be a particular Providence that directed the King to the Wiſdom of Paſſing the Popular Bill, for the frequent Meeting of Parliaments, before the Death of the Queen; for if it had been deferr'd to this time, ſome People would not have fail'd to ſay, that he had been forc'd to it by the Neceſſity of his Affairs.

While the Commons were raiſing Money for the future, they wiſely enquired into the Diſpoſal of former Taxes; and diſcovered ſo much Corruption, as was high time to puniſh and prevent. The occaſion of looking back, was given by a Petition of the Inhabitants of Royſton, complaining of the great Abuſes committed by Officers and Soldiers, in Exacting Subſiſtence-Money. This Petition was Read in the Houſe on Jan. 12. and after Examining Mr. Tracy Pauncefort, Agent of Colonel Haſtings's Regiment, and the Officers complained of; it was Reſolved, That the Officers and Soldiers of the Army Demanding and Exacting Subſiſtence-Money in their Quarters, or upon their March, is Arbitrary and Illegal, and a great Violation of the Rights and Liberties of the Subject. And it was thereupon Ordered, That the Commiſſioners for Taking and Stating the Publick Accounts, do upon Friday Morning next, lay before this Houſe their Obſervations of the Abuſes and Ill Practices committed by the ſeveral Agents of the Regiments of the Army. And that the Commiſſioners ſhould lay before them the Names of ſuch Agents as have neglected to attend them upon Summons. And that Agent Pauncefort lay before the Houſe a particular Account of all the Moneys received from the Earl of Ranelagh, and how he has paid or diſpoſed of the ſaid Money.

The Commons look back into Abuſes and Corruptions.

Offenders Puniſh'd.

Purſuant to this Order, on Jan. 25. Mr. Harley, from the Commiſſioners for Taking and Stating the Publick Accounts, preſented to the Houſe their Obſervations of the Abuſes and Ill Practices committed by the ſeveral Agents. On Jan. 28. Mr. Tracy Pauncefort preſented his Accounts, and was Examin'd to the Truth of them. Agent Roberts, Agent Wallis, Lieutenant Turner, Colonel Haſtings, and Major Montall, were likewiſe Examined; the two latter were Diſcharged, the others were taken into Cuſtody. Mr. Pauncefort was brought in Cuſtody to the Houſe on Feb 12. where refuſing to anſwer to ſeveral Queſtions demanded by the Houſe, it was Reſolved, That by obſtinately refuſing to anſwer to a Matter of Fact, demanded of him by this Houſe, he had thereby violated the Privilege, and contemned the Authority of this Houſe, and the Fundamental Conſtitution thereof. For which he was brought to the Bar, and upon his Knees received the Judgment, of being committed Priſoner to the Tower of London. On February 15. upon his Petition, acknowledging his Offence, and expreſſing his Sorrow, he was again brought to the Bar of the Houſe; but not giving ſatisfactory Anſwers, he was Remanded back to the Tower.

1694.

His Brother Mr. Edward Pauncefort was likewiſe called in and Examined; and on February 16. it was Reſolved, That Mr. Edward Pauncefort, for contriving to Cheat Colonel Haſtings's Regiment of Five Hundred Guineas, and for giving a Bribe to obtain the King's Bounty, be taken into Cuſtody. And that Mr. Henry Guy, a Member of the Houſe, for taking a Bribe of Two Hundred Guineas, be committed Priſoner to the Tower of London. And the Houſe at the ſame time Agreed, That a Committee be Appointed, to prepare an Humble Repreſentation to be made to His Majeſty, laying before Him the ſeveral Abuſes, Ill Practices, and Intolerable Exactions of the Agents of the Regiments of the Army, upon the Inferior Officers and Common-Soldiers, whereby they have been forced to raiſe their Subſiſtence on the People.

Repreſentation of the Commons.

This Humble Repreſentation of the Houſe of Commons to His Majeſty, was Preſented on Monday, March 4.

" We Your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal " Subjects, the Commons in this preſent Parliament Aſſembled, do from a true and unfeigned Zeal for Your Majeſty's Perſon and Government, (which God long preſerve) and " from the Obligation that lieth upon Us in behalf of thoſe whom We Repreſent, moſt Humbly lay before Your Majeſty the Grievance " We lie under, by ſome of the Officers and Soldiers of the Army, in Raiſing Money upon the " Country, under pretence of Subſiſtence; which " is ſuch a Violation of the Liberty and Property of Your Subjects, that it needeth no Aggravation.

" This is, in great Meaſure, occaſioned by " the undue Practices of ſome of the Agents and " Officers; the Particulars of which, We beg " leave to lay before Your Majeſty, in order to " the more effectual Preventing the like Miſcarriages for the Future.

" I. Some of the Agents, amongſt other their " Ill Practices, have Detained the Money due " to the Soldiers, in their Hands; and made uſe " of it for their own Advantage, inſtead of immediately applying it to the Subſiſtence of the " Officers and Soldiers, for whom they were " Intruſted.

" II. Their intolerable Exactions and great Extortions upon the Officers and Soldiers, for Paying Money by way of Advance; Their charging more for the Diſcounts of Tallies, than " they actually Paid: By which fraudulent Impoſing upon thoſe who ſerve in Your Majeſty's Armies, it appeareth, That notwithſtanding they have a greater Pay than is given in " any other Part of the World, they are yet reduced to Inconveniences and Extremities, " which ought not to be put upon thoſe who 1694. "venture their Lives for the Honour and Safety "of the Nation.

"III. In Particular, Colonel Haſtings hath "Compell'd ſome Officers of his Regiment to "take their Cloaths from him at Extravagant "Rates, by Confining and Threatning thoſe that "would not comply therewith: By which, the "Authority that may be neceſſary to be lodged "in the Colonel over the Inferior Officers in "ſome Caſes, is Miſapplied, and Extended ſo as "to promote a Private Advantage of his own, "without any Regard to Your Majeſty's Ser-"vice, or to the Diſcipline of the Army.

"IV. Colonel Haſtings's Agent hath preſumed "fraudulently to Detain Five Hundred Gunieas, "out of a Bounty given by Your Majeſty to the "Officers of that Regiment, under Pretence of "giving them as a Bribe to obtain the ſame, to "the Diſhonour of Your Majeſty, and Injury "to the Officers thereof. And hath taken Two-"pence per Pound out of the Money due to the "Officers and Soldiers; for which Deduction, "there being no Warrant, the Colonel, whoſe "Servant the Agent is, is Anſwerable.

"V. Colonel Haſtings's Agent hath Refuſed or "Neglected to give an Account of the Pay due to "the Captains of his Regiment, and their Com-"panies; which tends apparently to the De-"frauding the Officers and Soldiers.

"VI. Some of the Agents aſſume to them-"ſelves the Liberty of making great Deducti-"ons; which, ſince they know not how to juſti-"fy, they endeavour to cover, by putting them "under the Shelter of the uncertain Head of "Contingencies; which giveth them the better "opportunity of hiding the Frauds and Abuſes, "that would otherwiſe be more liable to be De-"tected.

"VII. Colonel Haſtings hath Diſcharged an "Enſign, by putting another in his Room, con-"trary to the true Diſcipline of an Army; from "which the Colonels have no Right to Exempt "themſelves, to enlarge their own Authority, "to the Prejudice of Your Majeſty's Service, "and of the Officers who ſerve under them.

"VIII. Colonel Haſtings hath taken Money "for the Recommending to Commands in his "Regiment, to the great Diſcouragement of the "Officers who are to ſerve in Your Majeſty's "Armies; who ought to be ſuch as deſerve their "Commands, and not ſuch as Pay for them.

"Theſe Things We moſt Humbly Repreſent "to Your Majeſty, in Confidence of having "them Redreſs'd by Your Majeſty's Juſtice and "Wiſdom.

"Your Loyal Commons, as they have been "always ready to Supply Your Majeſty, cannot "but be ſenſible of ſuch Miſcarriages, as may "either Diminiſh the Strength of Your Armies, "or the Affections of Your People: And it is "from a Principle of the higheſt Duty, That "We take this Way of Applying Our Selves to "Your Majeſty for Redreſs; having an entire "Aſſurance, That this Our moſt Humble Re-"preſentation will not only be Graciouſly Ac-"cepted, but that Our Expectations from it will "be fully Anſwered.

His Majeſty was pleaſed to give this ſoft and prudent Anſwer: Gentlemen, I will Conſider Your Repreſentation, and take all Care poſſible to have the Grievances Redreſs'd. Accordingly Colonel Haſtings was immediately Caſhier'd, and his Regiment given to Sir John Jacob, his Lieutenant Colonel. And while the Complaint was depending, the King in Council was pleaſed to Order, February 19. That the Chief Officers of the Army ſhould Meet twice a Week in the Great Chamber at the Horſe-Guards, to Receive and Examine all Informations and Complaints that ſhould be brought before them, of any Wrong or Injury done by any Officer or Soldier of His Majeſty's Land-Forces, in order to redreſs the ſame: And on March 11*th.* His Majeſty Iſſued out a Declaration for the ſtrict Diſcipline of the Army, and due Payment of Quarters; ſtrictly forbidding to Exact or Demand any Subſiſtence-Money, or to commit any Spoil or Diſorder, or to uſe any Violence or Threatning Words, or otherwiſe to miſbehave themſelves, under Pain of Caſhiering, and Loſs of their Pay.

The King Regulates the Abuſes.

To Proſecute the Diſcovery of Ill Practices, Mr. James Craggs, one of the Contractors for Cloathing the Army, was Summoned to Attend the Houſe: And after he had given in his Anſwer to the Commiſſioners for Taking and Stating the Publick Accounts, it was demanded of him, March 7*th.* Whether he would produce his Books, and be Examined before the ſaid Commiſſioners upon Oath: He excuſed himſelf, and refuſed to produce his Books. Upon which it was Reſolved, That for ſo Refuſing, and thereby obſtructing the Enquiry of the Houſe into the Diſpoſal of the Publick Moneys, he be committed Priſoner to the Tower of London. Soon after, Mr. Harley reported the further Examination of Mr. Edward Pauncefort, and acquainted the Houſe, That Mr. Richard Harnage, another of the Contractors for Cloathing of the Army, had refuſed to be Examin'd upon Oath, before the Commiſſioners: Whereupon it was Ordered, That a Bill be brought in to oblige Mr. Edward Pauncefort to diſcover how he diſpoſed the Moneys paid into his Hands, relating to the Army, and for Puniſhing him in caſe he ſhould not make ſuch Diſcovery; and that Mr. Tracy Pauncefort, Mr. James Craggs, and Mr. Richard Harnage, be included in the ſaid Bill.

Farther Enquiry into Abuſes.

Amidſt the Noiſe of Bribery and Corruption, there was a Petition to the Houſe of Commons, of Thomas Kemp and others, on behalf of themſelves and others, the ancient Four Hundred Licenſed Hackney-Coach-Men; which being referred to a Committee, it was their Opinion, That the Petitioners the Hackney-Coach-Men, had proved the Subſtance of their Complaint, and were worthy the Conſideration and Relief of the Houſe: And that ſeveral of the Commiſſioners for Licenſing and Regulating Hackney-Coaches, and Stage-Coaches, had, by receiving Bribes, and by other undue Means, acted Corruptly and Arbitrarily, contrary to the Authority and Truſt repoſed in them by Act of Parliament. Thereupon the Houſe ordered the Committee to diſtinguiſh the Commiſſioners, which they accordingly did; and by their Report on March 20. Henry Aſhurſt and Walter Overbury Eſquires, were Honourably Clear'd, and the others were declar'd Guilty; and an Humble Addreſs was made to His Majeſty, that He would remove Henry Killegrew, Henry Villers, and Richard Gea, Eſquires, from the Commiſſion for Licenſing Hackney-Coaches: And they were accordingly Removed.

Commiſſioners for Hackney-Coaches.

From theſe Diſcoveries a common Murmur aroſe, that an Univerſal Corruption had overſpread the Nation; that Court, Camp, City, nay, and the Parliament it ſelf were Infected. Hereupon, to wipe off the Suſpicion from the Honourable Members, and to expoſe the Guilty, On March 7. the Houſe Appointed Paul Foley Eſquire, Sir Richard Onſlow, John Pollexfen Eſq; Sir John Tompſon, Foot Onſlow Eſq; Thomas Tekham Eſq; Sir Samuel Bernardiſton, Thomas Wharton Eſq; and Francis Gwinne Eſq; as a Committe to Inſpect 1694. ſpect the Books of the Eaſt-India Company, and alſo the Books of the Chamberlain of London.

Eaſt-India Company. On March 17. Mr. Foley Reported from the ſaid Committee, That as ſoon as they came to the Eaſt-India Houſe, they called for an Account of all Moneys Paid for the ſpecial Service of the Company; upon Peruſal of which, obſerving, That the greateſt Payment was in the Year 1693. they ſearch'd for the Orders for the Iſſuing of that Money; the chief of which were, One Dated the 13*th.* of April, 1693. Another Dated the 24*th.* of November, 1693; and another the 22*d.* of January, 169¾. In Purſuance of which, the Sums of 22275 l. 24983 l. and 30000 l. were ſeverally Paid out of the Caſh, amounting in all to 77258 l. beſides ſeveral ſmaller Sums, amounting in the whole to 10144 l. which with the former Sum, makes 87402 l. All Iſſued in the Year 1693. while Sir Thomas Cooke was Governor, and Francis Tyſſen Eſq; Deputy-Governor, for the ſpecial Service of the Houſe, and obtaining a New Charter. That they found by Examination of moſt of the Perſons preſent at the Committees of the Eaſt-India Company, where the ſaid Orders were made, That the Governor in the ſaid Committees, did only in general Inform what Sums he hath Diſburſt, without naming the Particulars to whom, or to what Service; which ſeveral of them ſaid was a New Courſe, ſince Sir Thomas Cooke came to be Deputy-Governor, or Governor. That in a State of the Company's Caſh, Dated at the Eaſt-India Houſe the 7*th.* of March, 169¾. and drawn up by ſeveral Members of the Company, empower'd for that purpoſe, near all the aforeſaid Sums were obſerved to be Paid, and placed to the Company's Account of Charges General, paid out of Caſh, viz. In 1688, and 1689. Sir Benjamin Bathurſt Governor, and Sir Joſiah Child Deputy-Governor, 2230 l. 14 s. In 1690, and 1691. Sir Joſeph Herne Governor, and Sir Thomas Cooke Deputy-Governor, 13532 l. 9 s. In 1692, and 1693. Sir Thomas Cooke Governor, and Mr. Tyſſen Deputy-Governor, 87402 l. 12 s. in the whole 103165 l. 15 s. That upon Examination of the Company's Caſh-Book, having found the Balance of the 31*ſt.* of October, 1694. was 124249 l. they demanded of Mr. Portmans the Caſhier, if he had the ſame in Caſh? That he replied, he had not; but inſtead thereof, laid before them in Writing that 90000 l. was Lent upon Sir Thomas Cooke's Notes, (which he produced) with other Particulars, which made up the above-mention'd Balance. That in his Note, Sir Thomas Cooke own'd the Receipt of 90000 l. which he had Diſburſt and Paid for 99197 Pounds Stock in the Eaſt-India Company for their Account; tho' they did not find any Warrant for the ſaid Sum, or any of that Stock transferr'd in the Company's Books for their Account, exceeding 18300 l. Stock, the 16*th.* of January, 169¾. The Committee of the Houſe of Commons further Reported, That they found a Contract Dated the 26*th.* of February, 1693. for 200 Tun of Salt-Petre, to be brought Home in the Ship Seymour from India, to Pay 12000 l. for the ſame, and 25 l. Freight per Tun, beſides all Charges here. That 2000 l. which was the Sum ſent out to Purchaſe the ſaid Salt-Petre, was actually Paid out of the Company's Caſh, and that a Bond for the remaining 10000 l. was given under the Seal of the Company, payable the 31*ſt.* of March, 1695. whether the Ship arrived in Safety or not: With this Limitation only, That if Two Hundred Tun of Salt-Petre be not Laden upon the ſaid Ship, then to Repay in proportion to the want thereof. So that the Reſult of this Contract was, That the Company ran the Adventure of 12000 l. for that which Coſt only 2000 l. and muſt conſequently loſe 12200 l. if the Ship Miſcarried: And on the contrary, the Seller on the other hand, got Ten Thouſand Pound clear, without diſburſing, or running the hazard of one Penny; and what is yet more, a certain Loſs of 9 or 10000 l. would attend it, if the Ship arriv'd in ſafety. That the Committee having Examin'd the Members of the Company, concerning this Contract, they own'd it to be true, That the 2000 l. was Paid, and the 10000 l. Bond given to Mr. Tho. Colſton. That about the ſame time this Contract was made, ſo many of the Interlopers as would Sell their Shares in the Interlopers to the Eaſt India Company, were allow'd their firſt Coſt, and 25 l. per Cent Advance; which was done by giving them Credit for ſo much in the Eaſt-India Books. That the Committee found Sir Samuel Daſhwood, Sir John Fleet, John Perrey Eſq; Sir Joſeph Herne, and Sir Thomas Cooke, were preſent at the Court of Committees, when the Orders above-mention'd were made; but they being all Members of the Houſe of Commons, the Committee did not think fit to Examine them. That the reſt of the Committees, who were preſent at making thoſe Orders, and moſt of whom had been Examin'd, could give no Account of the Diſpoſal of the Money Iſſued out, during the time of Sir Joſeph Herne, and Sir Thomas Cooke's Government; but only that the ſame was Paid for ſpecial Service, and that a great part thereof was put into the Hands of Sir Baſil Firebraſs. That one of them, viz. Sir Benjamin Bathurſt ſaid, Sir Joſeph Herne had the greateſt part of the 13932 l. 9 s. to diſpoſe of; and Sir Benjamin Bathurſt would have call'd for an Account thereof, but Sir Thomas Cooke deſir'd he would not. That the Company's Committee of Nine, had often call'd upon Sir Thomas Cooke to give an Account to whom he had diſtributed the Money he received, which he had ſome time promis'd, and afterwards declined to do: So that the Secret of that Service, and the placing of that Money, lay principally with Sir Thomas Cooke, and Sir Joſeph Herne. That Sir Benjamin Bathurſt finding ſo great a Sum as 30000 l. charg'd for Secret Services, he had ſome warm Diſcourſe with Sir Thomas Cooke about it, to know how it was Disburs'd: But Sir Thomas refus'd to give him any Particulars; and told him, he ſhould remember he was bound by his Oath to the Company, to keep their Secrets. To which Sir Benjamin replied, He was under the ſame Obligation, to be true to the Intereſt of the Company. Sir Benjamin Bathurſt further ſaid, That about April, 1694. underſtanding that they were in want of Money, he look'd into the Caſh-Book, which Caſting up, he found a conſiderable Sum in Caſh; and taking ſome Perſons with him, diſcourſed Sir Thomas Cooke about it, who ſaid: The 90000 l. he had received, was to gratify ſome Perſons in caſe the Bill ſhould paſs. As for the Contract about Salt-Petre, Sir Benjamin Bathurſt ſaid, that it was made by Sir Thomas Cooke, and Sir Baſil Firebraſs; but he knew nothing of it, till it came into Court.

1694. The Committee likewiſe reported, that Sir Baſil Firebraſs being examin'd, own'd he had receiv'd upwards of 16000 l. which was for buying Shares of Stocks, and of which the Company had allow'd: But ſaid he knew no ground the Committee of Nine had to ſay, that a great Part of the other Sums were put into his Hands. He confeſſed he invited ſeveral Perſons to come into the Company; and offer'd to lay down Money for ſeveral; and that if they liked it not at the Years end, he would then take it off their Hands; which Offer he made to Members of the Houſe of Commons, among others, and gave an

Account

1694. Account to the Company of his doing so, who promised to indemnify him. That concerning the Accommodation with the Interlopers, the Company had a Letter from the Lord Nottingham, That it was the King's Pleasure, that they should come to an Agreement with the Interlopers: That the Proposal to them was 25 per Cent. for bringing in their Stock to the Company, and one half of the Profit besides; which one half of the Interlopers accepted; but Mr. Godfry and some others, standing upon 30 per Cent. Mr. Colston went off with them, and did not come into the Company. That Mr. Ward said it was agreed by the Interlopers that only 2000 l. should be employ'd in buying of Salt Petre; That Mr. Colston was to have the Advantage of it, which he believed was not for Mr. Colston himself, but for some other Gentleman; and lastly, that the original inducement to the leave of the Interlopers going out, was that Agreement with Mr. Colston.

The same Committee of the House of Commons reported, That having Inspected the Chamberlain of London's Books; they found an Order made by a Committee of the Common Council for the City of London, (appointed to consider of Ways and Means for satisfying the Debts due to the Orphans of the said City) and dated the 12*th.* of February, 169¾. by which Mr. Chamberlain was directed to pay to Sir John Trevor, Speaker of the House of Commons, the Sum of 1000 Guineas, so soon as a Bill were passed into an Act of Parliament, for satisfying the Debts of the Orphans, and other Creditors of the said City; which Sum was Paid and Deliver'd to Sir John Trevor, on the 22*d.* of June, 1694, in the Presence of Sir Robert Clayton and Sir James Houblon. That they observed, that the Order of the Committee of the Common Council, which now stood Dated the 12*th.* of February, was at first Dated the 13*th.* of February, and that the Person named therein, was put in a different Hand: That examining who first Writ the Warrant, Mr. Borret the City-Sollicitor, own'd it was his Hand-Writing; and at first said, that he believed the Blank at first left therein, was fill'd up with the Speaker's Name, before the Committee Sign'd it, because he believed they would not set their Hands to a Blank. But all the Committee who Sign'd it, and who appear'd upon Summons, declared most of them positively, that there was a Blank for the Person's Name, when they sign'd it; and the rest being doubtful, Mr. Borret then said the Blank might be filled up afterwards, though he could not tell the time; however, he own'd he fill'd it up with another Pen. That they found another Order of the said Committee, Dated the 26*th.* of April, 1693. directing the Chamberlain to Pay to Paul Jodrell Esq; the Sum of 100 Guineas, for his Pains and Service in Assisting the Orphans Bill to Pass in Parliament; which Sum was paid him the 22*d.* of June, 1694. That in the Chamberlain's Books were entered several Sums paid to Mr. Borret, to defray the Charge of Drawing the Bill, making Copies thereof, and of the Petitions and Orders relating to the same; amongst which Payments they found 5 Guineas paid to Mr. Sollicitor General, for his Advice therein, 5 Guineas to Mr. Harecourt, 20 Guineas to Mr. Hungerford, Chairman of the Grand Committee, for his Pains and Service, and 60 l. 9*s.* to Mr. Jodrell. That they understood, that the Orphans, for the procuring of this Bill, had given Bond to Mr. Smith and Mr. Charles Nois to allow them 12*d.* in the Pound, when the Bill was Pass'd, for their Pains and Charges in that matter; which Contract being made Void in that Bill, the Court of Aldermen were impower'd to satisfy them their real Expences. That upon this Smith and Nois applied themselves to the Court of Aldermen, and got a Petition to be Sign'd by many of the Orphans, that they were willing, notwithstanding the Act of Parliament, they should be allow'd 12*d.* in the Pound. That the said Nois and Smith brought in a Bill to the Committee of the Common Council, of their Charges, amounting to 3457 l. 16*s.* but as was alledg'd they pretended to be more than 10000 l. out of Purse; by which Argument they got Subscriptions to the said Petition; in which Bill there was charg'd 1650 l. paid to Mr. George Finch, for carrying on the Act. That Mr. Nois and Mr. Smith being examin'd, they did utterly deny that they had given any Money to any Member of Parliament, on the Account of the said Bill, or knew of any to be given; but they were willing to get what they could, having taken a great deal of Pains in long Solliciting the same; and that they did say, that notwithstanding they did charge 1650 l. to be paid Mr. George Finch, yet they had not paid him any Money; but having deliver'd up his Bond for the 12*d.* in the Pound, they valued his Share of the Orphans Debt to amount to that Sum. That Mr. George Finch being Examin'd, did deny to have receiv'd any thing from Mr. Nois and Mr. Smith, or his paying any Money to any Member of Parliament: But wavering in his Discourse, and being again asked if he ever did distribute, or know of any Money distributed on Account of the Orphans Bill? he said, it was a hard thing to be asked such Questions; That however he own'd, that upon Suggestion that there were Obstructions to the Bill, which must be removed by Money, he apply'd himself to several of the Orphans, and did receive 100 l. from Mr. John Chadwick, 100 l. from Mr. Harvey, 100 l. from Mr. Scott, 50 l. of Mr. Herne, and had a Promise of 100 l. from Sir John Smith, which was not yet paid. And Lastly, they reported that Mr. Chadwick and Mr. Herne proved the payment of the Money to Mr. George Finch, but could give no Account what he had done with it.

The Commons having Debated and weigh'd these Reports, came to this Resolution on March 12. That Sir John Trevor Speaker of this House receiving a Gratuity of a Thousand Guineas from the City of London, after Passing of the Orphans Bill, is guilty of a High Crime and Misdemeanor. Upon this Sentence, Sir John did not think fit to Justifie himself, but sent the Mace to the House, and wisely absented himself. So on March 14. the Commons resolved to proceed to the Election of a New Speaker; Sir Thomas Littleton and Paul Foley Esq; were proposed; the Majority inclined to chuse the former; but Mr. Wharton Comptroller of the King's Houshold, speaking up for him with more than ordinary Zeal, the Majority did from thence presume that Sir Thomas Littleton was too much in the Court Interest, and upon that prejudice only they Elected Mr. Foley; who on the next Day, Friday March 15. was approved by His Majesty on the Throne, who then gave His Royal Assent to these Two Bills, 1. An Act for Supplying certain Defects in the Directions made in and by a Deed of Trust, and the Last Will of George Pitt Esq; Deceased, for settling his Estate. 2. An Act for Naturalizing of Bernard Cosserat alias Mourte, and Alexander Ringly, and Others.

The Speaker charg'd with Corruption.

Leaves the House.

Mr. Foley chosen Speaker.

Acts Passed.

On March 16. the Commons proceeded upon the Report from their Committee, and Resolv'd, That Sir John Trevor late Speaker of this House, being Guilty of a High Crime and Misdemeanor, by receiving a Gratuity of a Thousand Guineas from the City of London, after Passing the Orphans

Bill

1694. Sir John Trevor Expell'd.

Bill, be Expell'd this Houſe; And ſo he retired to enjoy his other Beneficial Place, the Maſterſhip of the Rolls. On March 18. Mr. Bird made his Excuſe for offering of Money to a Member of the Houſe, to preſent a Petition againſt a Bill depending in the Houſe, and upon his Knees had a Reprimand from Mr. Speaker. And it was then Reſolved, that Whoſoever ſhall diſcover any Money or other Gratuity given to any Member of the Houſe, for matters Tranſacted in the Houſe relating to the Orphans Bill, or the Eaſt-India Company, ſhould have the Indemnity of the Houſe for ſuch Guilt. And to carry on the needful Inquiſition, they order'd, that Mr. Charles Nois, Mr. James Smith, Mr. George Finch, Mr. Dowſe, Mr. Hern, Mr. Chiſwell, and Mr. Chadwick, ſhould attend the next Morning. They did ſo, and it was then Reſolved, That Mr. Charles Nois having to ſeveral Perſons pretended he was out of Purſe, or engaged to give great Sums of Money to ſeveral Members of this Houſe, in order to paſs the Orphans Bill; which on his Examination he denied to have given or promiſed, has been an Occaſion of Scandal to this Houſe and the Members thereof; for which he was taken into the Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms. And the Houſe proceeding to clear and purge themſelves, did ſoon after Reſolve, That Mr. Hungerford a Member of the Houſe, having received Twenty Guineas for his Pains and Service, as Chair-Man of the Committee of this Houſe, to whom the Orphans Bill was committed, is Guilty of a high Crime and Miſdemeanour; for which he was Expelled the Houſe.

This Humour of Complaining and Accuſing was likely to have been carried too far; for now ſeveral Perſons betrayed a mighty Diſſatisfaction that our Fleet was ſent into the Streights; and pretended a Jealouſy, that they were there to be Sold, or Sacrificed to the French. This ill-natur'd Rumour got into the Houſe of Lords; and ſome of the Peers began to argue for the recalling of our Fleet, for fear of the many Inconveniences that might attend that Voyage. But upon debating this Matter, the Majority of the Lords were of very different Sentiments; and inſtead of a Remonſtrance, they thought it proper to make this Addreſs of Thanks to His Majeſty, for ſending His Fleet thither.

Addreſs of the Lords.

" We the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in " Parliament Aſſembled, having Reſolved, by " the Unanimous Vote of this Houſe, That the " ſending ſo great a Fleet into the Mediterranean, " and continuing it in thoſe Parts, has been to " the Honour and Advantage of Your Majeſty " and Your Kingdoms; and having ſpent ſome " time upon Conſideration of the Condition of " the Fleet both at Home and Abroad, and of " the great Increaſe of the Naval Force and " Strength of our Neighbours, conceive it to be " our Duty to Your Majeſty and the Kingdom, " Humbly to Repreſent, That the Honour and " Safety of this Nation, under the Providence " of God, chiefly depends upon Your Strength " at Sea. And whereas by the long continuance " of this War, the Number of Your Ships muſt " have been Diminiſhed, and thoſe remaining " greatly Impaired; we think it of the higheſt " Importance to Your Majeſty's Service, and the " Security and Intereſt of Your People, That " You would be pleaſed to give ſuch ſpeedy and " effectual Directions for the Repair and Increaſe " of Your Royal Navy, as may Enable Your " Majeſty, not only to continue a Strength in " the Mediterranean during this War, which may " be Superiour to that of our Enemies, but like-" wiſe to Maintain ſuch a Force here at Home, " and in the Weſt-Indies, as ſhall be a Security for " our Coaſts and Plantations, and a Protection " of our Trade; and ſufficient both for the An-" noying of our Enemies, and for the Protect-" ing and Convoying all ſuch Stores and Provi-" ſions as muſt be ſent to the Fleet in thoſe Parts; " upon the effectual and timely Providing where-" of, the Safety of that Part of Your Majeſty's " Navy does ſo much depend.

To which His Majeſty was pleaſed to Return a moſt Gracious Anſwer to the Effect following:

I am very Senſible how much Our Safety depends upon Our Strength at Sea; and therefore cannot but Deſire the Increaſe of it.

And I ſhall not be wanting to do what is in My Power, as to the Matters mentioned in your Addreſs.

Honours and Preferments.

As to the Honours and Preferments during this Seſſion of Parliament: On the firſt day of their Meeting, Nov. 12. His Majeſty, as a Mark of His Royal Favour to the City of London, conferred the Honour of Knighthood on Sir John Sweetapple and Sir William Cole, the preſent Sheriffs; And on Nov. 28. He conferr'd the like Honour upon Thomas Day, Eſq; Mayor, and William Danes, Eſq; Sheriff of Briſtol. On Dec. 20. Captain Elliot, Commander of a Ship belonging to Jamaica, having made his Eſcape from the French, and giving timely Intelligence of the Deſign of the French upon that Iſland, received from His Majeſty a Medal and Chain of One hundred Pounds Value, and Five hundred Pounds in Money, as a Reward of his Service; and His Majeſty was pleaſed to order, that he ſhould be recommended to the Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty for an Employment in His Majeſty's Service.

State of Religion.

The Church this Year loſt the great Ornament of it, Archbiſhop Tillotſon, who died at Lambeth on Friday Novemb. 22. His Sickneſs and Death are thus delivered in his Funeral Sermon.

Death of Archbiſhop Tillotſon.

" He kept nothing in Reſerve for his laſt Hours; " he was ſtill ready waiting for them, ſo he could " not be Surprized, though every Body elſe was. " The firſt Attacks came upon him while he was " in that Employment in which he delighted " moſt, at Church, and in the Worſhip of God: " He bore them with the uſual Neglect of him-" ſelf; and though his Countenance ſhew'd he " was Ill, he would neither interrupt nor break " off from thoſe Sacred Exerciſes, nor make " haſte to look after his Health. Ah, the unhap-" py neglect of a Life that deſerv'd ſo well to be " carefully preſerved! The Fit came on ſlowly; " but ſeemed to be Fatal: All Symptoms were " Melancholy: It ſoon turned to a Dead Palſey. " The Oppreſſion was ſo great, that it became " very uneaſy for him to Speak; but it appeared " that his Underſtanding was ſtill clear, though " others could not have the Advantage of it: " He only ſaid, That He had no Burden on his Con-" ſcience. All Remedies proved ineffectual: He " expreſſed no Concern to Live, nor Fear to Die, " but patiently bore his Burden, till it ſunk him " on the Fifth day, and in the Sixty fifth Year of " his Age.

Account of his Sickneſs.

His Body was interred at his own Deſire, in the Church of St. Lawrence Jury, in London, where he had been the Tueſday Lecturer for many Years: The Funeral Sermon was preach'd by the Right Reverend Gilbert Lord Biſhop of Sarum, whoſe Account and Character of him deſerve to be remembred. " His firſt Education and Im-" preſſions were among thoſe who were then " called Puritans, but of the beſt ſort. Yet even " before his Mind was opened to clearer thoughts,

His Character given by the Lord Biſhop of Sarum.

" he

1694. " he felt ſomewhat within him, that diſpoſed him " to larger Notions and a better Temper. The " Books which were put in the hands of the " Youth of that time were generally heavy; he " could ſcarce bear them, even before he knew " better things: He happily fell on Chillingworth's " Book; which gave his Mind the Ply that it " held ever after, and put him on a true Scent. " He was ſoon freed from his firſt Prejudices, or " rather he was never Maſtered by them; yet " he ſtill ſtuck to the Strictneſs of Life to which " he was bred, and retained a juſt Value, and " a due Tenderneſs for the Men of that Perſua- " ſion; and by the Strength of his Reaſon, to- " gether with the Clearneſs of his Principles, he " brought over more ſerious Perſons from their " Scruples, to the Communion of the Church, " and fix'd more in it, than any Man I ever " knew. —— That which gave him his laſt Fi- " niſhing, was his cloſe and long Friendſhip " with Biſhop Wilkins. He went into all the beſt " Things that were in that Great Man; but ſo, " that he perfected every one of them: For " though Biſhop Wilkins was the more Univerſal " Man, yet He was the Greater Divine: If the " one had more Flame, the other was more Cor- " rect. Both acted with great Plainneſs, and " were raiſed above regarding Vulgar Cen- " ſures. ——

" Having dedicated himſelf to the Service of " the Church, and being ſenſible of the great " Good that might be done by a Plain and Edi- " fying Way of Preaching; he was very little " diſpoſed to follow the Patterns then ſet him, " or indeed thoſe of former times: And ſo he " ſet a Pattern to himſelf; and ſuch a one it " was, that 'tis to be hoped it will be long and " much followed. He begun with a deep and " cloſe Study of the Scriptures, upon which he " ſpent Four or Five Years, till he had arrived " at a true Underſtanding of them. He ſtudied " next all the Ancient Philoſophers and Books of " Morality: Among the Fathers, St. Baſil and " St. Chryſoſtom were thoſe he chiefly read. Up- " on theſe Preparations, he ſet himſelf to com- " poſe the greateſt Variety of Sermons, and on " the beſt Subjects, that perhaps any one Man " has ever yet done. His joining with Biſhop " Wilkins in purſuing the Scheme of an univer- " ſal Character, led him to conſider exactly the " Truth of Language and Stile; in which no " Man was happier, and knew better the Art of " preſerving the Majeſty of Things under a " Simplicity of Words; tempering theſe ſo e- " qually together, that neither did his Thoughts " ſink, nor his Stile ſwell; keeping always the " due Mean between a low Flatneſs, and the " Dreſſes of falſe Rhetorick. —— He read his " Sermons with ſo due a Pronunciation, in ſo " ſedate and ſolemn a manner, that they were " not the feebler, but rather the perfecter, even " by that way which often leſſens the Grace, as " much as it adds to the Exactneſs of ſuch Diſ- " courſes.

" He look'd on the whole Complex of Pope- " ry, as ſuch a Corruption of the whole Deſign " of Chriſtianity, that he thought it was incum- " bent on him to ſet himſelf againſt it with the " Zeal and Courage which became that Cauſe, " and was neceſſary for thoſe Times. He thought " the Idolatry and Superſtition of the Church of " Rome did enervate true Piety and Morality; " and that their Cruelty was ſuch a Contradi- " ction to the Meekneſs of Chriſt, and to that " Love and Charity which he made the Chara- " cter and Diſtinction of his Diſciples and Fol- " lowers; that he reſolved to ſacrifice every " Thing, except a good Conſcience, in a Cauſe " for which he had reſolved, if it ſhould come 1694. " to Extremities, to become a Sacrifice him- " ſelf.

" His Enemies were not wanting in the Arts " of Calumny. —— His endeavouring to make " out every thing in Religion from Clear and " Plain Principles, and with a Fulneſs of De- " monſtrative Proof, was laid hold on to make " him paſs for One that could Believe Nothing " that lay beyond the Compaſs of Human Rea- " ſon. And his tender Method of Treating " with Diſſenters; his Endeavours to extinguiſh " that Fire, and to unite us among our ſelves, a- " gainſt thoſe who underſtood their own Inte- " reſt well, and purſued it cloſely, enflaming " our Differences, and engaging us into violent " Animoſities, while they ſhifted Sides, and ſtill " gained Ground, whether in the Methods of " Toleration, or of a ſtrict Execution of Penal " Laws, as it might ſerve their Ends; thoſe " calm and wiſe Deſigns of his, I ſay, were re- " preſented as a Want of Zeal in the Cauſe of " the Church, and an Inclination towards thoſe " who departed from it. But how unhappily " ſucceſsful ſoever they might be, in infuſing thoſe " Jealouſies of him into ſome warm and unwa- " ry Men, he ſtill went on in his own way: " He would neither depart from his Moderati- " on, nor take pains to cover himſelf from ſo " falſe an Imputation. ——

" After the Reſtoration of the Church, An- " ger upon thoſe Heads was both more in faſhi- " on, and ſeemed more excuſable: Men coming " then out of the Injuſtice and Violence by " which they had been ſo long ill uſed, and were " ſo much provoked; yet neither that, nor the " Narrowneſs of his Fortune, while he needed " Supports, and ſaw what was the ſhorteſt Way " to arrive at them, could make him change his " Strain. A Benefice being offered him in the " Country, he once intended to have left this " great Scene, and gone to that Retirement; " where he ſpent almoſt a Year: But he was " happily recalled by that Honourable Society, " for whom he always retained juſt Impreſſions " of Gratitude. And though in the Intervals of " Terms, he could have given a large Part of " the Year to his Pariſh; yet ſo ſtrict he was to " the Paſtoral Care in the Point of Reſidence, " that he parted with it even when his Incomes " here could ſcarce ſupport him.

" I need not tell you for how many Years, " and with what Labour and Succeſs, he divided " himſelf between that Society and this Place. " —— The Numerous Aſſembly that this Le- " cture brought together, even from the remo- " teſt Parts of this wide City, the great Con- " courſe of Clergymen, who came hither to " form their Minds; the Happy Union that " thereby the Clergy of this great Body grew " into, and the Bleſſed Effects this had; are " Things which it is to be hoped an Age will " not wear out of Men's Minds. Some great " Charity, ſome Publick Service, or good De- " ſign, was the Work of moſt of thoſe Days. ——

" Thoſe great Preferments, to which his ex- " traordinary Worth ſeemed to have forced ſome " who had no kindneſs to him, to advance him " afterwards, had no other effect on him, but " to enlarge his Capacity of doing Good: He " neither ſlackned his Labours, nor advanced his " Fortunes by them: He did not content himſelf " with ſuch a Reſidence as anſwer'd the Statute; " conſidering his Obligations to attend at Court: " but gave as much of his Time and Labours to " his Cathedral, as could agree with his Obliga- " tions here. He neither aſpired nor hearken'd " to the Motions of a further Advancement;

" and

694. " and all that he desired upon this Happy Revo-
" lution, was such a Change as did considerably
" lessen his Income, but deliver'd him from the " invidious Load of having Two Dignities. He " bore this in the former Reigns, because the " Practice was common; and he was enabled by
" it to go far in his Charities: But as he intend-
" ed to put a Stop to that Abuse, so he resolved
" to set an Example to others in it.——

" He did truly rejoice in the Happy Delive-
" rance of these Nations: He could not but ob-
" serve those amazing Steps of Providence that
" accompanied it; and hoped it was a Begin-
" ning to great Blessings that were to follow it.
" Many of those who had longed for it, and
" wish'd well to it, did of a sudden start back:
" And some in high Stations of the Church,
" would neither openly declare for it, nor act a" gainst it, according to the Authority of their " Characters; one of which they certainly
" ought to have done. If they did then judge
" it so unlawful as they would now represent it,
" they ought to have Thundred, both with their
" Sermons and Censures, against it.——

" Our Sovereigns, after a long Forbearance,
" beyond the Term prefixed by Law, resolved at
" last to Fill the Vacant Sees: And that great
" Judgment which They have shewed upon other
" Occasions, made them soon settle on Him as
" the fittest Person to Steer this Church. It is " well known how long, and how earnestly he
" withstood this.—— That which went the deep-
" est in his own Mind, and which he laid out
" the most earnestly before Their Majesties, was,
" That those Groundless Prejudices with which
" his Enemies had loaded him, had been so indu-
" striously propagated, while they were neglect-
" ed by himself; that he believed, that He,
" who (as his Humility made him think)
" could at no time do any great Service, was " less capable of it now than ever. But
" Their Majesties persisting in Their Intentions,
" he thought it was the Voice and Call of God
" to him, and so he submitted.—— But he form-
" ed Two settled Resolutions, from which he " never departed. The One was, That when-
" soever the State of Their Majesties Affairs
" was such, that he could hope to be dismiss'd
" from that Post; he would become a most im-
" portunate Suitor to be delivered from it. The " other was, That if the Infirmities of Age
" should have so overtaken him, that he could
" not go through the Fatigue and Labours of it;
" then he would humbly offer it up to Their Ma-
" jesties.

" —— He had one great Encouragement in
" that High but Invidious Station; which was,
" not only the constant Favour of Their Maje-
" sties, but that which gave him a Support of a-
" nother Nature, since the other was only Perso-
" nal, and so was less regarded by One that con-
" sidered himself very little; was, That he per-
" ceived in Them such Serious Designs, so True
" a Zeal, and so Right a Judgment in all the " Concerns of Religion and of this Church;
" that he often said, He did not think that any Age
" had produced Princes who understood the True Inte-
" rests of Our Church so well, and were so much set
" on Promoting them, as Their Majesties were. A
" Zeal he observed in Them, that was so Ten-
" der, and yet so well Guided, that he did in" deed expect greater Blessings from it, than so
" corrupt an Age is either capable of, or can
" well deserve and hope for.——

" But as this was the greatest, so it was almost
" the single Satisfaction that he enjoyed in his E" levation; while he was from other Hands as" saulted with the most Boisterous, the most In-
" jurious, as well as the Falsest Calumnies that 1695.
" Malice could invent. And yet how false so-
" ever these were generally known to be, the " Confidence with which they were averred,
" joined with the Envy that accompanies a High
" Station, had a greater Operation than could " have been imagined; considering how long
" he had lived on so publick a Scene, and how " well he was known. It seemed a new and un-
" usual Thing, That a Man who in a Course of
" above Thirty Years had done so much Good,
" so many Services to so many Persons; with-
" out ever once doing an Ill Office, or a Hard
" Thing to any One Person: Who had a Sweet-
" ness and Gentleness in him, that seemed rather
" to lean to Excess, should yet meet with so
" much Unkindness and Injustice.—— Nor had
" this any other Effect on him, either to change
" his Temper or his Maxims; though perhaps it
" might sink too much into him, with relation to
" his Health. He was so exactly true in all the Re-
" presentations of Things, or Persons, that he " laid before Their Majesties; that he neither
" raised the Characters of his Friends, nor sunk
" that of those that deserved not so well of him;
" (I love not to say, Enemies;) but offered e-
" very thing to Them with that Sincerity that did
" so well become him, that Truth and Candor
" was almost perceptible in every Thing he said
" or did: His Looks and whole Manner seem'd
" to take away all Suspicion concerning him;
" for he thought Nothing in this World was worth
" much Art, or great Management. With all " these Things he struggled, till at last they over-
" came him, or rather he overcame them, and
" escaped from them.

" His Life was not only free from Blemishes, which " is but a Low Size of Commendation, it shined
" in all the Parts of it. In his Domestick Relati-
" ons, in his Friendships, in the whole Com-
" merce of Business; he was always a Pattern,
" easy and humble, frank and open, tender-
" hearted and bountiful, kind and obliging, in
" the greatest, as well as in the smallest Matters.
" A Decent but Grave Chearfulness made his " Conversation as Lively and Agreeable, as it
" was Useful and Instructing. He was ever in " good Humour; always the same, both acces-
" sible and affable: He heard every thing pati-
" ently; was neither apt to mistake, nor to su-
" spect: His own great Candor disposing him
" to put the best Constructions, and to judge the " most favourably of all Persons and Things.
" He past over many Injuries, and was ever rea" dy to forgive the greatest, and to do all good
" Offices, even to those who had used him very " ill. He was never Imperious, nor Assuming:
" And tho' he had a superior Judgment to most " Men, yet he never dictated to others. Few
" Men had observed Human Nature more care-
" fully, could judge better, and make larger Al-
" lowances for the Frailties of Mankind, than
" he did. He lived in a due Neglect of his Per" son, and Contempt of Pleasure; but never
" affected Pompous Severities. He despised
" Wealth, but as it furnished him for Charity;
" in which he was both Liberal, and Judici-
" ous.

" Thus his Course in the private Virtues and " Capacities of a Christian, was of a Sublime
" Pitch: His Temper had made him incapable
" of the Practices, either of Craft, or Vio" lence.

" In his Function, he was a constant Preacher;
" and diligent in all the other Parts of his Duty:
" For tho' he had no Care of Souls upon him,
" yet few that had, laboured so painfully as he
" did, in Visiting the Sick, in Comforting the 1694. "Afflicted, and in ſettling ſuch as were either "ſhaking in their Opinions, or troubled in Mind. "He had a great Compaſs in Learning, what he "knew, he had ſo perfectly digeſted, that he was "truly the Maſter of it. But the largeneſs of "his Genius, and the correctneſs of his Judg-"ment, carried him much further than the "leiſure he had enjoyed for Study, ſeem'd to "furniſh him; for he could go a great way upon "general Hints."

There needs nothing to be added to this Character, but that a greater was given to him by King William, who underſtood Mankind, and could not Flatter. His Majeſty after the Archbiſhop's Death, never mention'd him but with ſome Teſtimony of His ſingular Eſteem for his Memory: He uſed often to tell his Son-in-Law Mr. Chadwick, I Loved your Father; I never knew an Honeſter Man, and I never had a Better Friend. The Queen was ſenſibly afflicted with the Loſs of him, and though She did not Survive him above a Month, She found a way to Reverence his Memory, by ſettling an Honourable Penſion on his Relict, who by her Lord's generoſity and Charity had the leſs Proviſion made for her.

Care to fill up the See of Canterbury

It was the Sollicitous Care of the Court to fill up the See of Canterbury; the firſt Perſon that ſeem'd to be offer'd to the Eye of the World, was Dr. Stillingfleet Biſhop of Worceſter; but his great Abilities had raiſed ſome Envy and ſome Jealouſies of him; and indeed his Body would not have bore the Fatigues of ſuch a Station. Even the Biſhop of Briſtol was recommended by a great Party of Men, who had an Opinion of his Piety and Moderation. But the Perſon moſt eſteem'd by Their Majeſties, and moſt univerſally approved by the Miniſtry, and the Clergy, and the People, was Dr. Teniſon Biſhop of Lincolm, who had been Exemplary in every Station of his Life, had reſtored a neglected large Dioceſe to ſome diſcipline and good Order; and had before in the Office of a Parochial Miniſter done as much Good, as perhaps was poſſible for any one Man to do. It was with great importunity, and after the rejecting of better Offers, that he was prevailed with to take the Biſhoprick of Lincoln; and it was with greater Reluctancy, that he now received Their Majeſties Deſire and Command, for his Tranſlation to Canterbury; to which he was Nominated December 8. ſoon after Elected by the Dean and Chapter, and that Election Confirm'd in the Church of St. Mary-le-Bow in London, on January the 16*th*. He obtain'd the favour of recommending his Succeſſor in the See of Lincoln, the Wiſe and Good Dr. James Gardiner, Sub-Dean of the Cathedral Church of Lincoln, who was Nominated by His Majeſty on January the 18*th*. and Conſecrated on the 10*th*. of March following.

with Dr. Teniſon Biſhop of Lincoln.

The New Archbiſhop of Canterbury Preaches the Queen's Funeral Sermon.

The firſt diſtinguiſhing Duty which was laid upon the new Archbiſhop, was to Preach a Solemn Sermon at the Funeral of the Queen. The Parliament had taken into conſideration the Reſpect due to this ſad Occaſion; and on February 19. an Order of Council was Publiſh'd, that Tueſday the 5*th*. of March being appointed for the Funeral of Her late moſt Gracious Majeſty of Bleſſed Memory, the biggeſt Bell in every Cathedral, Collegiate, and Parochial Church of England and Wales, ſhould be Tolled from the Hour of Nine till Ten in the Forenoon, and from Two of the Clock till Three, and from Five till Six in the Afternoon of the ſaid Day.

The Funeral Proceſſion begun from the Royal Palace of Whitehall, to the Collegiate Church of St. Peter Weſtminſter, all the way being boarded, rail'd in, and cover'd with Black Bays. The Proceeding, was Firſt the Knight Marſhals Men and Deputy, Three Hundred Poor Women in Mourning Gowns and Hoods; after whom follow'd the Banner of Union, ſeveral Claſſes of Their Majeſties Servants, the Children and Gentlemen of the Chappel Royal, more of Their Majeſties Servants, Chaplains to Their Majeſties, Aldermen of London, other of Their Majeſties Servants, the Lord Mayor of London, the Houſe of Commons in long Cloaks, with their Speaker and the Mace born before him, and his Train carried up; and the Houſe of Peers in their Robes, with their Speaker the Lord Keeper, having the Mace and Purſe carried before him, and his Train carried up; the Banners of Cheſter, Cornwall and Wales, born by the Lord Spencer, the Lord Willoughby of Eresby, and the Lord Viſcount Longueville; the Banners of Ireland and Scotland by the Earls of Montrath and Selkirke; the Banners of England and France, quarterly, of England, and the great Banner born by the Earl of Denbigh, the Earl of Stamford, and the Earls of Bridgwater and Suffolk; then followed the Mourning Horſe led by the Lord Viſcount Villers, Maſter of the Horſe to Her late Majeſty, attended by two Equeries; the Helmet and Creſt, Target and Sword, and Surcoat of Arms, born by Officers at Arms, followed by the Lord Marquis of Wincheſter, Lord Chamberlain to Her late Majeſty; then the Queen's Body in a Purple Velvet Coffin, with a rich Cloth of Gold Pall, and thereon the Crown, Orb, and Scepters on a Cuſhion, one of the Queen's Bed-Chamber Women ſitting at the Feet, and another at the Head, in an open Chariot, richly Adorn'd, drawn by Eight Horſes cloſe covered with Purple Velvet, and adorn'd with Eſcutcheons and Feathers, Six Bannerolls on each ſide born by Baronets, the Pall being ſupported by the Earls of Derby and Kent, Lord Marqueſs of Normanby, Dukes of Northumberland, Somerſet and Norfolk; the Dutcheſs of Somerſet chief Mourner, ſupported by the Lord Privy Seal, and the Lord Preſident of His Majeſty's Council; the Dutcheſſes of St. Albans and Southampton Supporters to the Trains, aſſiſted by the Queen's Vice-Chamberlain; Aſſiſtants of the Chief Mourner were Two Dutcheſſes, Twelve Counteſſes, and Four Baroneſſes; then the Ladies of the Bed-Chamber, then the Maids of Honour, then the Bedchamber-Women all in the deepeſt Mourning. The ſeveral parts of the Proceeding were attended by the Kings and other Officers of Arms, with Drums and Trumpets; and the whole cloſed with the Band of Gentlemen Penſioners, and Yeomen of the Guard; and when the Body was taken out of the Chariot at the Door of the Church, a Canopy of Purple Velvet was carried over it by the Gentlemen of the Privy Chamber, and the Crown, Orb and Scepters on the Cuſhion, carried by Clarenceaux King of Arms. The Dean and Prebendaries with the Choir of Weſtminſter, attended at the entrance of the Church, which was Illuminated with a great Number of Lights, and proceeded before the Body, which was depoſited under a magnificent Mauſoleum, erected in the middle of the Croſs of the ſaid Church, and there remain'd during the Service and Sermon Preach'd by the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury: the Chief Mourner and the reſt of the Ladies that went in the Proceeding, were placed about the Body; and the Houſe of Peers and Houſe of Commons were Seated on each ſide. After Sermon, the late Queen's Secretary and Treaſurer, Maſter of the Horſe, and Lord Chamberlain, the Dean and Prebendaries of Weſtminſter, and both Choirs, with the Officers of Arms, 1694. Arms, and those that bare the Atchievements and Regalia, proceeded before the Body to King Henry VII. Chappel, which was attended by the Supporters of the Pall, and follow'd by the Chief Mourner. The Dean of Westminster perform'd the Office of Burial; which ended, Garter proclaimed the Royal Styles, and the Body was Interr'd in a Vault on the South side of the said Chappel.

Character of the Queen given by the ABp.

The Archbishop in a Grave and Pathetical way, gave these agreeable Characters. "This "Incomparable Princess was endow'd with more "than common Accomplishments of Mind, "whether we have respect either to Her Knowledge or Her Wisdom.

"Towards Her Knowledge Nature had done a "great deal; Education and Conversation of "the best kind, more still; and most of all the "Grace of God. Her Understanding was clear "and steddy, and there was a great Compass "and Comprehension in it. It reached both to "the greater things of Religion, and the lesser "of Oeconomy. It was perpetually fed and improved by Reading, by Hearing Books Read, "by Discoursing, by Meditation.

"Her Books were many, and well chosen; "much delighted in, and therefore well studied, "and well remembred: For Her Majesty's Memory was great, and it was properly Exercised "by Books of History. One I may name, which "She much valued, and often took into Her "Hands, Father Paul's Celebrated History of the Council of Trent.

"But the Holy Scriptures were the Oracles "which She chiefly Consulted. In them, if any "thing occurr'd which was not at first so well "understood, it was by Her noted down, as a "Subject for After-Thoughts, and to be clear'd "by them, or by some Comment, or some Person of Especial Ability.

"Neither was Her Wisdom and Prudence inferior to Her Knowledge: And of these there are "many Instances, and of which I shall select a few.

"1. Her Wisdom shew'd it self in the Governing of Her Knowledge: She troubled not Her "Self or others, with such Curious Questions, "which the Prudent neither Ask, nor think "themselves concern'd to Answer. Neither was "She wrought up to any Bigottry in unnecessary "Opinions: She was most Conversant in Books "of Practical Divinity; of which some of the "latest used by Her, were certain Sermons, and "some Discourses concerning Happiness, Death, "and Judgment. She knew Good Things, in "order to the doing of them. It is true, She "Read many Volumes of Controversies betwixt "the Reformed, and those of the Church of "Rome; but it was for the sake of Necessary "Defence, not of Vexatious Dispute.

"2. Her Wisdom was made known by the "wonderful Art She had attained to, for the Governing of Time; upon which all Managements "do much depend. Her Hours were so adjusted "to the several Affairs of Her own, and others, "that notwithstanding the Multiplicity of them, "She found a season for every Thing; and frequently, a time for dispatching many Things "together. Dressing did not wholly prevent "Reading, or Hearing, or Working; and nothing prevented the Service of that God, who "gives all Time, and expects an Account of it. "It was well understood by this Wise Princess, "that in the Current of Time, Affairs meet at "last with a stop, if by dispatch some of them "are not taken out of the way, but all are suffer'd to float down together.

"3. Her Wisdom shin'd very gloriously in Her "Administration of Publick Affairs; for which "She has received deservedly the Publick "Thanks, having conducted them with Wisdom and Temper, and unwearied Application; Application which was made a Jest in a late Age, and the want of which is a Lamentation in this. It was an Observation of some, "who were in Circumstances to make it, That "when Secret Difficulties occur'd, this Wise "Princess had a due sense of them; and together with that, such a command of Her Passions, that there appear'd few Signs of Trouble, "none of Dejectedness in Her Countenance; "lest either the Friends of the Government "should be Disheartned, or its Enemies Encourag'd. "Add to all this, That the Wisdom of this Princess, "was that true Wisdom which chuseth the best "Things, in the first Place; the Honour of God, "before the Pomp of Life; the Salvation of the "Soul, before the Gaining of the World.

"She was a Princess Eminent for Piety: Her "Private Devotions were Extraordinary; and "tho' She shut out the World, yet in Her high "Circumstances, Her very Retirements could "not pass wholly unobserv'd: And it has at last "been understood, that Her Exercises of Devotion which were known, were not the half of "those which were then not known. If all "were as diligent in Examining, and Noting "down the Condition of their Souls, and comparing the former and the present Estate of them, "Heaven would in some Measure be upon Earth.

"In Publick, how Pious an Observer of the "Lord's-Day, was this Religious Princess! How "constant at Prayers, at the Blessed Communion, at Sermons! And at all of them, how Reverent, how Attentive! Insomuch, that those "who gave themselves any Diversion from their "own Duties, to observe the manner in which "She perform'd Hers, found Her Intent upon "them; and no further drawn off, than by a "solemn Look to check any Interruption which "might sometimes happen. So Judicious and "Devout a Saint, the Degenerate Church of "Rome can by no means shew us; the Zeal of "their most Pious Recluses being from the very "Rules of their several Orders, Embased with "Superstition; whilst in Hers, appear'd no Allay of it.

"The Genuine Fruit of the True Devotion of "this Princess, was Christian Charity. Her Charity was as great as Her Power, and as Discreet "as it was Great: The Distressed French, and "Scotch, and Irish, and the Needy at Home, "were daily Refreshed by it. It extended to "Persons of Condition, who were fallen into "Decay, and to a very great Number of meaner "People, and especially (as I am well assur'd) "to the Wives and Widows of Inferior Soldiers and Seamen. Her Charity was Generous and Unconstrain'd. When it was ready, nothing was "denied which was fit to be asked: It could "not be Extorted by the Unworthy, and by the "Worthy it needed not.

"In granting Charities, there appear'd in Her "Countenance an Air of Satisfaction; and when "Supplies were not at hand, it was a Grief to "deny, but the manner of it was Obliging; "whilst many others, almost as often as they "give a Denial, create an Enemy. If God had "thought us worthy of Her Life, She had done "more publick and lasting Charities; and particularly in an Hospital for Seamen at Greenwich, "in which the Wisdom and Goodness of the "King concurr'd with Hers, whilst She was Alive; and which at this time His Majesty is going on with, for the Encouragement of Navigation, the English Nerve of War and Peace.

"To all these Graces, She gave Ornament by "Humility. In this Princess, Authority, Majesty

1694. " and Humility met together; that dwelt in Her " to ſuch a degree, that in Her Preſence, or " within Her Hearing, the ſpeaking of this which " I have ſaid, or any thing like this, would have " been exceedingly Offenſive. But the Juſtice " of Nations gives thoſe Praiſes to the Merit of " Good Princes, which their own Modeſty would " not bear. An ordinary Inſtance may ſuffice, " for the ſhewing Her Averſeneſs not only to " Flattery, but to Praiſe: Of a Book Addreſs'd " to Her, She ſaid She had Read it, and lik'd it " well; but much the better, becauſe the Epiſtle " was a bare Dedication. This Grace of Humility " did eminently diſcover it ſelf, when at any " time Her Publick Adminiſtration was to ceaſe: " It was laid down with the like Unconcerned- " neſs, as one uſes when he puts off his Gar- " ments, and goes to Reſt.

" It is true, this Grace was accompanied with " a remarkable ſmoothneſs of Demeanor; but it was " not ſuch as the Artificial uſe; It was the Effect " of an Excellent Spirit, and not of Worldly " Craft: It was alſo attended with Familiarity; " but with ſuch a good ſort of it, as bred rather " Veneration than Contempt; and increas'd the " Love and Duty even of Her Servants, tho' She " treated them as Her Children. It procur'd that " Regularity, and good Order, and Diligence in " Her greater Family, which in private Ones is " ſo much to be deſired.

" Such Accompliſhments as theſe are uſually " increas'd by Fame, but diminiſh'd by Preſence; " which diſcovers thoſe Imperfections that at a " diſtance are not diſcerned. But here, the more " this Queen was underſtood, the more She was " admir'd; and thoſe who knew Her beſt, could " not but moſt Eſteem Her.

" After this Excellent Princeſs had been very " well known for ſeveral Years in a Neighbouring " Country, She was ſo extremely valued, that Her " Removal from it was Lamented as a Death, and " occaſioned a deep and univerſal Sorrow.

" Theſe Graces and Virtues were not blemiſh- " ed by Vanity or Affectation. Had that been ſo, " She would ſcarce have made ſuch a Profeſſion " as this a little before Her Death: I know, ſaid " She, what Looſe People think of thoſe who pretend " to Religion; They think it is all Hypocriſy: Let " them think what they will, I may now ſay, and I " thank God I can ſay it, I have not Affected to appear " what I was not.

" She was a Wife and Good Queen, an Incom- " parable Wife, and One who (I am well aſſur'd) " had all the Duty in the World for other Rela- " tions, which after long and laborious Conſide- " ration, She judg'd conſiſtent with Her Obliga- " tions to God and Her Country. She was like- " wiſe one of the great Supports of God's Church " Eſtabliſhed among us; and not without due " Temper towards the Scrupulous: A Patroneſs of " Religion and Learning; A Miſtreſs whoſe " Service was a Pleaſure; A True and Certain " Friend; and a Chriſtian Mild and Merciful to " Her Enemies: Marvel not that She had ſome, " the Son of God himſelf was not without them.

" In fine, there was in Her Life a perpetual " Courſe of Chriſtian Practice. She was not di- " ſtemper'd with Fits of unſubſtantial Piety, " which are ſuddenly raiſed, and as ſuddenly va- " niſh. The Spring was in the Judgment and " the Heart; and from thence the Exerciſes of " Holy Living were regular and conſtant. O, " how good how happy a Life was this! &c.

Aſſoon as the Archbiſhop was ſettled in his great Charge, he wiſely ſuggeſted to the King the great Neceſſity of preſerving and reſtoring the Diſcipline of the Church: And prevailed with His Majeſty to Iſſue out theſe Injunctions, given by the King's Majeſty to the Archbiſhops of this Realm, to be Communicated by them to the Biſhops and the reſt of the Clergy. 1694.

William Rex,

" MOſt Reverend Father in God, Our Right " Truſty and Right entirely beloved Coun- " ſellor, and moſt Reverend Father in God, We " Greet you well. We being very Senſible, that " nothing can more effectually conduce to the " Honour and Glory of God, and the Support " of the Proteſtant Religion, than the Protect- " ing and Maintaining of the Church of England " as it is by Law Eſtabliſhed; which We are re- " ſolved to do to the utmoſt of Our Power; " have therefore, upon mature Deliberation with " you and other Our Biſhops, by Virtue of Our " Royal and Supreme Authority, thought fit, " with the Advice of Our Privy Council, to Or- " dain and Publiſh the following Injunctions. King's Injunctions.

" I. That the 34th and 35th Canons concern- " ing Ordinations, be ſtrictly obſerved. Anno Dom. 1603.

" II. That every Perſon to be admitted to Ho- " ly Orders, do ſignify his Name and the place " of his Abode to the Biſhop Fourteen Days be- " fore he is Ordained, to the end that Enquiry " may be made into his Life and Converſation. " And that he appear at the furtheſt on Thurſday " in Ember-Week, that ſo ſuch, who upon Exami- " nation ſhall be found fit, may have time to pre- " pare themſelves by Faſting and Prayer, before " the Day of Ordination.

" III. That every Biſhop ſhall be well ſatisfied, " that all Perſons that are to be Ordained have a " real Title with a ſufficient Maintenance, ac- Anno Dom. " cording to the 33th Canon; in which Matter 1603. " We Require the Biſhops to uſe an eſpecial " Care.

" IV. That a Certificate of the Age of the " Perſon to be Ordained, be brought, if it can " be, out of the Pariſh-Regiſter, or at leaſt, a " Certificate very well Atteſted.

" V. That the Part of the 34th Canon, which " relates to the giving Certificates, concerning " the Lives and Manners of thoſe who are to be " Ordained, be ſtrictly looked to. And that the " Biſhops lay it on the Conſciences of the Cler- " gy, That they Sign no Certificates, unleſs, up- " on their own Knowledge, they judge the Per- " ſons to be duly Qualified.

" V. That every Biſhop ſhall tranſmit, between " Michaelmas and Chriſtmas to the Archbiſhop of " the Province, a Liſt of all ſuch Perſons as have " been Ordained by him during that Year, ac- " cording to the Conſtitutions in the Year 1584. Articuli " in order to be put in a Publick Regiſter, which pro Clero. " ſhall be prepared by you for that uſe.

" VII. That the Biſhops ſhall reſide in their " Dioceſes; and ſhall take care to oblige their " Clergy to ſuch Reſidence as the Laws of the " Land and the Canons do require, particularly Anno Dom. " the 41ſt Canon. 1603.

" VIII. That they who keep Curates, have " none but ſuch as are Licenſed by the Biſhop of " the Dioceſe, or in exempt Juriſdictions, by the " Ordinary of the Place, having Epiſcopal Juriſ- " diction, as is required both by the Act of U- " niformity, and the 48th Canon; that ſo when " the Incumbent does not Reſide, the Biſhop or Anno Dom. " ſuch Ordinary, may know how the Cure is 1603. " ſupplied: And that no Perſon ſhall preſume to " ſerve any Cure without Licenſe from the Bi- " ſhop or ſuch Ordinary, upon pain of Suſpen- " ſion.

" IX. That you uſe the moſt Effectual Endea- " vours to ſuppreſs the great Abuſes occaſioned " by Pluralities, and reſtrain them as much as " you

1694. "you can, except where the Parishes lie near one "another, and the Livings are small: That all "Qualifications be carefully examined: We be- "ing determined to have no Chaplains to be "Qualified by Us, but such as are admitted to "attend upon Us. And that due Caution be ta- "ken before any Faculty is Granted. And that "such Persons as are legally Qualified, shall re- "side at least Two Months in the Year in each "of their Livings; and provide a Curate to "serve where they are not in Person; with a "due Maintenance, to be determin'd by the Bi- "shop of the Diocese; unless the Two Parishes "lie so near, that the Incumbent can constantly "serve both Cures.

Anno Dom. 1603. "X. That the Bishops shall look to the Lives "and Manners of their Clergy, that they may "be in all things Regular and Exemplary, ac- "cording to the 75th Canon.

"XI. That the Bishops do use their utmost "Endeavours to oblige their Clergy to have Pub- "lick Prayers in the Church, not only on Holi- "days, but as often as may be; and to celebrate "the Holy Sacrament frequently.

"XII. That the Bishops shall require the Cler- "gy to use their utmost Endeavours, That the "Lord's-day be religiously Observed. That they "set a good Example to their People, and Ex- "hort them frequently to their Duty herein.

Anno Dom. 1603. "XIII. That the Bishops remind their Clergy "to visit the Sick frequently; and require them "to perform that Duty with great Care and Di- "ligence, according to the 67th Canon.

Anno Dom. 1603. "XIV. That Catechizing be duly performed, "according to the 59th Canon.

"XV. That the Bishops be careful to Confirm, "not only in their Triennial Visitations, but at "other convenient Seasons.

"XVI. That care be taken, that the Arch- "deacons make their Visitations personally; and "that as much as may be, they live within the "Bounds of their Jurisdiction, and do their Du- "ty according to the Canons.

"XVII. That no Commutation of Penance "shall be made, but by the express Order and "Directions of the Bishop himself, which shall "be declared in open Court. And that the Com- "mutation-Money shall be applied only to Pious "and Charitable Uses, according to the Articuli "pro Clero, made in the Year 1584. and the Con- "stitutions made in the Year 1597.

Anno Dom. 1603. "XVIII. That no License for Marriage with- "out Banes shall be granted by any Ecclesiasti- "cal Judge, without first taking the Oaths of "Two sufficient Witnesses; and also sufficient "Security for performing of the Conditions of "the Licence, according to the 102d and 103d "Canons.

"These Injunctions We do require you to trans- "mit to the Bishops of your respective Provin- "ces, to be by them communicated to their Cler- "gy, and to be strictly observed, and often en- "quired after, both by you and them. For as "We Esteem it the chief Part of Our Princely "Care to Promote true Religion, as it is Esta- "blished in this Church; and in order thereun- "to, We have determin'd not to dispose of any "Church Preferments in Our Gift, but to such "of Our Clergy as We shall have reason to be- "lieve do live most Exemplary, and Preach and "Watch most faithfully over the People Com- "mitted to their Charge: So We assure Our "Selves, that these Our Pious Intentions will be "effectually Seconded by you and the rest of Our "Bishops; And that you will without Favour or "Partial Affections, study to Suppress Impiety "and Vice, and to reform all Disorders as far as "in you lies; well knowing that nothing will "so much advance the great Ends of Religion, 1694. "and so certainly Secure and Establish this "Church, as the Exemplary Lives and Faithful "Labours of those who Minister in it. And so "We commend Our Self to your Prayers, and "bid you very heartily Farewel.

Given at Our Court at Kensington the Fifteenth day of February 169⅔. In the seventh Year of Our Reign.

By His Majesty's Command.

SHREWSBURY.

We left the Parliament Sitting, and enquiring into the Bribery and Corruption of their own Members.

Proceedings of the Commons.

On March the 26*th.* the Commons proceeding on the Report relating to the Members of This House taking Money;

Resolved, That Mr. Hungerford a Member being Guilty of a High Crime and Misdemeanor, by receiving Twenty Guineas for his Pains and Service, as Chairman of the Committee to whom the Orphans Bill was Committed, be Expelled the House. And Order'd, that Sir Thomas Cook a Member, having refused to give an Account of the Money of the East-India Company by him distributed, be committed Prisoner to the Tower; and a Bill be brought in to oblige him to give such Account. This Bill was presented by Mr. Bridges on March the 28*th.* and Received and Read the First time: the next Day it was Read a Second time, and the Cashier to the East-India Company, according to Order, produced the Warrants for the Sums Paid for Special Service or Charges General.

About Bribery and Corruption.

Bill against Sir Tho. Cook.

On March the 30*th.* Sir Basil Firebrass delivered in an Account of Moneys by him Paid for the Service of the East-India Company; and Sir Thomas Cook Petition'd the House, that he might be heard by Council before the Bill do Pass, which was Granted.

On April the 2*d.* the Commons in a Grand Committee went through the Bill, and made Amendments, which were reported the next Day.

On April the 6*th.* Sir Thomas Cook's Council were Heard, and the Bill was Read a Third time and Pass'd, and sent to the Lords for their Concurrence.

Oppos'd by the D. of Leeds.

At the First Reading of this Bill in the House of Peers, the Duke of Leeds, President of the Council, made a serious Speech against it, and introduced his Discourse with a solemn Protestation of his own Innocence and Disinterest in the Matter.

On April the 13*th.* their Lordships sent a Message to the Commons, desiring that Sir Thomas Cook might be permitted and order'd to appear at their Bar; and the Commons did accordingly order by Warrant from the Speaker, that Sir Thomas should attend the Lords at their Bar. He declared himself Ready and very Willing to make full Discovery, and said, he would have done it before in the House of Commons, if he could have obtain'd there an indemnifying Vote. It was demanded of him, what he would be indemnified from? he Answered from Scandalum Magnatum, and all Actions and Suits, except from the East-India Company, whom if he had Injur'd, he would be bound to Satisfie in the utmost rigour.

Sir Thomas Cook being withdrawn, the Duke of Leeds stood up and declared, "He was very "glad that Gentleman was come to such a tem- "per, as to be willing to discover, and thereby "to prevent a Bill, which he thought to be of "a pernicious Nature." Then his Grace minded their Lordships, how the Commons took care

1695. care of the Reputation of their Houſe, in asking Sir Thomas Cook, Whether he had diſtributed any Money among any of their Members? who Purged them by a Solemn Proteſtation, that he had not. His Grace therefore thought it ſeaſonable, that the Lords ſhould have ſome Regard to their own Honour, and that Sir Thomas might be called in and asked whether he were willing upon Oath to Purge all that Sat there? This Motion was rejected, and the Lords Reſolved, that the Bill ſent up from the Commons againſt Sir Thomas Cook ſhould not be proceeded upon: but that a Committee ſhould be appointed to draw up a Bill to Indemnify him upon due Diſcovery. This Committee being withdrawn, and having made ſome Progreſs, notice came from Sir Thomas Cook, that he was afraid he might be Miſapprehended as to what he had ſaid concerning a Diſcovery, by having Expreſt himſelf that he was Ready and Willing, for by Ready he only meant the more Willing; and that he ſhould need at leaſt four Months to make the Diſcovery he promiſed. This was highly reſented by ſome of the Lords of the Committee, who immediately mov'd, that the Committee might riſe and report to the Houſe this freſh matter, and the trifling of Sir Thomas Cook, that ſo the Bill deſign'd to oblige him to give an Account, might now proceed; But ſome other of the Lords Mollified the Meaning of Sir Thomas Cook, and prevailed with him to beg a favourable Treatment, and engage to diſcover within Seven Days; upon which the Committee went on with the ſofter Bill, to Indemnity him from any Actions he might be liable to, by reaſon of his Diſcovery, &c. And Sir Thomas had leave to go abroad in Cuſtody to inſpect his Papers, that he might the better prepare for ſuch Diſcovery. This Bill of Indemnifying had ſome Amendments made to it by the Commons, to which the Lords Agreed on April the 19*th*.

Excuſes of Sir Thomas Cook.

After which, His Majeſty made this Speech to Both Houſes.

King's Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I Take this Occaſion to tell You, That the "Seaſon of the Year is ſo far Advanced, and "the Circumſtances of Affairs are ſo Preſſing, "that I very earneſtly Recommend to You, the "ſpeedy Diſpatching ſuch Buſineſs as You think "of moſt Importance for the Publick Good, be"cauſe I muſt put an End to this Seſſion in a "few Days.

On April 23. Sir Henry Goodrick Acquainted the Houſe, That according to Order, their Addreſs had been Preſented to His Majeſty; "That He "would pleaſe to give ſuch Effectual Directions, "that the Colonels and other Officers of the Ar"my employed for the Reduction of Ireland, "might ſpeedily Account with, and Satisfie their "Inferior Officers and Soldiers, as far as they "have Received Money from His Majeſty." And that His Majeſty was pleaſed to ſay, That He had already given Orders, as well in Flanders, as in England, for the doing what is mentioned in the Addreſs; and that ſome Officers who neglected to comply with the Directions, have been Caſhier'd: However, that He will Repeat thoſe Orders under the ſeveral Penalties, to ſuch as ſhall diſobey them.

Addreſs of the Commons.

And Anſwer of the King relating to the Accounts.

Of Officers

On the ſame Day, Mr. Comptroller Acquainted the Houſe, That according to Order, their Addreſs had been Preſented to His Majeſty; "Praying that His Majeſty, in His Great Wiſ"dom, would pleaſe to take care for the future, "that this Kingdom be put upon an Equal Foot "and Proportion with the Allies, in bearing the "Charge of the preſent War." And that His Majeſty was pleaſed to Anſwer in theſe words; In this, as in every thing elſe, I ſhall always endeavour to have a due Regard to the Intereſt, and to the Honour of this Nation.

Addreſs and Anſwer about our Allies.

In purſuance of the Act to Indemnify Sir Thomas Cooke, a Committee of Both Houſes was Appointed to Receive the Diſcovery to be made by him. He appear'd before them on April 23. and being Sworn, he deliver'd in Writing an Account of the Diſpoſal and Application of ſeveral large Sums: As of 10000 l. deliver'd to Francis Tyſſen, Eſq;

The Original being Read by Sir Thomas Cooke, the Committee conceived it was Imperfect, and not such as the Act required; and therefore they acquainted Sir Thomas, that they expected a more particular Account from him. Upon this, Sir Thomas began to be more plain, and said; "That "as to the first Sum of 10000 l. paid to Mr. Tyssen, he gave him no Directions how it should "be Disposed, but it was in Expectation to have "the Charter of the East-India Company Confirmed; that it was intended for the Service of "the King, tho' he could not say the King had "it; but he believed, that Mr. Tyssen told him, "that he deliver'd it to Sir Josiah Child, who Presented it to His Majesty, as a Customary Present; "for the like had been done in former Reigns, as "by the Books of the Company might appear. "That as to the 12000 l. next mentioned, it was "paid to Mr. Richard Acton, who declared, He "had several Friends capable of doing great Service "to the Company's Affairs, and several of them would "speak with Parliament-Men; That he could not "particularize who they were, but the End aimed at, was to get an Act of Parliament. That "Mr. Acton did again say, He could tell some Persons employ'd in that Affair; That he did understand "that this Money was to be laid out for promoting "their Affairs in Parliament: That he could not say "to whom it was given, but understood it went no "further than the House of Commons; and that he "found no good Fruit by such Distribution. As to the "338 l. paid to Mr. Molineux, Sir Thomas said, "that Mr. Molineux told him, this Money was to "be dispos'd of to the Lord Rivers; but since his "Confinement, Molineux had told him, that my "Lord never had it, but he had made use of it "himself. As to the 1000 Guineas paid to Mr. "Fitz-Patrick Deceas'd, Fitz-Patrick told him, he "had a great Interest with the Lord Nottingham, "that he would try what he could do, and he did "not doubt but he might do great Services, provided he had such a Sum of Money: Yet he "believed, Fitz-Patrick kept the Money himself; "and that there was a Promise of a further Sum, "if the Act for a New Company did not pass. "That the 545 l. was to be paid to Mr. Charles "Bates when the Charter was settled, and was "paid accordingly in October 1693. That he had "no Acquaintance with Mr. Bates: But Sir Basil "Firebrass told him, that Bates had Acquaintance "with several Lords, and named the Marquis of "Carmarthen, now Duke of Leeds. That as to "the first 10000 l. paid to Sir Basil Firebrass in "November, 1693. it was always his Apprehension, that Sir Basil kept it for himself, to recompence his Losses in the Interloping-Trade: "And as to the several other Sums, compleating "the Sum of Thirty Thousand Pounds paid to "Sr Basil, he presumed he had occasion to distribute it to several Persons. As to the Sums paid "to Sir John Chardin and Mr. Dominicque, he believ'd they were expended in the Company's "Service. As to the 382 l. to Captain Germain, "it was paid to bring him off from the Interlopers, and engage him in the Company's In- 1695. "tereſt.

On April the 24*th*. Mr. Comptroller reported this Examination to the House of Commons; upon which the Debates were very warm. One Member said, No man is Innocent, if every Man be Guilty: We cannot be Innocent, if we do not lay our hands upon these Men that have betray'd Us, and the Company, and, I hope, Themselves. Let Us go as far as we can, and then the Fault will not lie at our doors. In the middle of these Debates, a Message came from the Lords, desiring a present Conference in the Painted Chamber; which was immediately had. Their Lordships proposed, That all future Examinations of any of the Persons mentioned in the Report of Sir Thomas Cook, be had before a Committee of Both Houses. To which the Commons Agreed. Conference of Both Houses.

This Committee met the same Day; and Sir Basil Firebrass there deposed, That the first Ten Thousand Pounds were given to him, as a Gratuity for his Losses, some time before the Charter for the East-India Company passed: That Ten Thousand more was received by him, by Virtue of a Contract with Sir Thomas Cook; for Favours and Services done. That the Stock at the Time of the Contract valued at 150 l. per Cent. falling afterwards to 100 per Cent. the Difference was Thirty Thousand Pounds; which they made up to him. He was positive, the 10000 l. and 30000 l. were for himself, and for the Use of no other Person; except 500 l. paid to Mr. Powell, because he had good Interest amongst the Interlopers. —— The Committee ask'd Sir Basil, What particular Service he did, or was to do, for Procuring a New Charter? To which he answered, That he was unwilling to take too much upon himself; That he thought he did great Service to the Company, in soliciting their Cause; but wish'd he might be excused to another time, being now much indispos'd. Examination in a Committee of Both Houses.

The next day Sir Basil Firebrass being again Examined, further deposed, "That having had "a Treaty with Mr. Bates, whom he thought a- "ble to do Service in Passing the Charter, and "to have Acquaintance with several Persons of "Honour; He gave Two Notes for 5500 Gui- "neas to Mr. Atwell, payable to Mr. Bates or "Bearer; One Note for 3000 Pounds, the other "for 2500 Guineas, intended for the doing Bu- "siness. That he had these Notes from Sir Tho- "mas Cook, and was accountable to him for the "same. That he believed, Sir Thomas did not "know how these Notes were to be dispos'd of; "but that he had told Sir Thomas, that Mr. Bates "had acquaintance with several Lords; naming "the Lord President, and others. That the Depo- "nent could not tell who this Money was de- "signed for, or what Bates did with it; for that "Bates would not deal on such Terms of Telling "Names. That Bates did introduce him several "times to the Lord President; who made some "Scruples in point of Law, which were remov'd "by the Attorney-General. That one day last "Week, the Five Thousand Guineas were of- "fered by Bates back again to him; Bates saying, "that this might make a Noise. That on Tuesday "last, 4400 Guineas were brought to this Depo- "nent; and that the other 400 Guineas were "still in Bates's hands.—— That they found "great Stops in the Charters, which they appre- "hended proceeded sometimes from my Lord "Nottingham, and sometimes from others. That "Colonel Fitz-Patrick received a Thousand Gui- "neas on the same Terms as was with others; "if the Charter pass'd. That he pretended great "Interest with the Lord Nottingham; and that "he could get Information from the Lady *Der- Foul Practices discovered.

by,

1695. "by, how the Queen's Pleasure was. That Colonel Fitz-Patrick said, he would try to prevail "with the Lord Nottingham, for Five Thousand "Guineas upon Passing the Charter, and Five "Thousand Pound on the Act of Parliament: "But that the Earl of Nottingham absolutely refused to take it. That the Deponent heard, a "Note Sign'd by Sir Josiah Child and Sir Thomas "Cook, for Fifty Thousand Pounds, was lodged "in Tyssen's hands for about a Year, to be paid "in case the Act passed; and that it was refus'd, as he understood, by my Lord Portland "to whom he had offer'd it.

Deposition of Mr. Action. "Mr. Richard Action being Examined before the "same Committee, deposed, That he received "the Sums of Ten Thousand, and Two Thousand Pounds of Sir Thomas Cook: That he told "Sir Thomas, he had Friends who would take "pains to do the Company Service; but they "would have Ten Thousand Pound. That he "had Two Thousand Pound for his Trouble in "attending Two Sessions; and that if the Bill "for a New Company had passed, he was to "have had Nothing. That he did not distribute "the Ten Thousand Pounds to Members, but to "those who had Interest with Members. That "some of them to whom he gave Money to be "distributed, were Mr. Craggs, with whom this "Deponent was concern'd in Clothing the Army, Mr. Wallis, Mr. Ridley, Mr. Dominicque, &c.

Deposition of Mr. Bates. "and that Colonel Goldwell, and Colonel Dean, "(who were since dead) were the only Persons "which he himself gave Money to.

The next day, April 26th, the Committee of Both Houses proceeded upon the Examination of the rest of the Persons mentioned in their Report; and Mr. Bates being Sworn, Depos'd, "That Sir Basil Firebrass did apply himself to "him, to use his Interest for obtaining a Charter for the East-India Company, the old Charter being Forfeited; and told him, they would "be Grateful: That the Deponent did use his "Interest with the Lord President; who said, "He would do what Service he could. That the "Lord President had deliver'd his Opinion publickly, for confirming the Charter; and thought "the Forfeiture an hardship. That having received Notes for Five thousand five hundred "Guineas, he told the Lord President what Sum "he had; and would have passed it upon my "Lord, but he refus'd it. That thereupon in regard he could not very well tell Money himself, he did ask leave of my Lord, that his Servant might tell the Money; to which my Lord "Answered, He gave leave; and accordingly "Monsieur Robart did receive the Money. That "after Monsieur Robart had received it, he brought "the same to the Deponent, in whose Possession "it remain'd, till he paid 4400 Guineas thereof "back again to Sir Basil. That as to the 600 "Guineas remaining of the 5000, he said he "had spent some of them: That the Reason he "paid back the 4400 Guineas, was the Noise "that it made; and that People might think "that he did not deserve them; and that the "whole 5500 Guineas were for his own private "use." However being soon after Re-examin'd he own'd, That the 4400 Guineas which he paid back, were brought to him by Monsieur Robart.

Sir Basil Firebrass being once more Examin'd, Depos'd, "That Sir Thomas Cook, and others, "observing him active, and to have Interest "among Noblemen, applied themselves to him "to endeavour the procuring a new Charter. "That Sir Thomas Cook was apprehensive, That "it stuck with the Duke of Leeds; and told the "Deponent, That some way must be found out "to the Duke. That he thereupon applied himself to Mr. Bates, who would not pretend to talk with the Duke; but said, the Deponent "must tell him what the Company would do. "That he told Mr. Bates, he thought a Present "might be made of 2, or 3000 l. That Mr. "Bates told him, he went to St. James's, and "said, he had spoke with his Friend; and that "more had been offer'd him by the other side: And "that at another time Bates said, That 5000 l. "had been offer'd him by another Hand on the "same side. That it was at last agreed, That "if the Duke did act in Favour of the Company, "he should have 2, or 3000 Guineas, and Bates "500 Guineas to himself. That from the time "the Notes for the 5500 Guineas were given to "Bates, they had free Access to my Lord President; and found him easy and willing to give "the Company his Assistance. That Mr. Bates "was shy, and call'd it, His Friend at St. James's. "That the Condition of one Draught of a "Counter-Note, which Mr. Bates brought, was "worded, In case the Lord President did not "assist the Company in passing the Charter; to which "this Deponent made an alteration, by putting "out my Lord's Name, and making it not "payable, in case the Charter should not Pass. "That about a Week before the Money was "brought back again, this Deponent went to "Bates about it, who then told him, it was all "for himself. That the Deponent did inrend a "Distribution of the abovementioned Sum of "Thirty Thousand Pound, in manner Following: To Sir Edward Seymour, Sir John Trevor, "and Mr. Guy, Ten Thousand Pound, in case "the Charter and Act of Parliament Passed; to "the Merchants Interlopers Ten Thousand Pound, "and to himself Ten Thousand Pound. That as "to Five Thousand Pound, part of the said Thirty "Thousand Pound, he did design one third "thereof to Sir Edward Seymour, one third "to Sir John Trevor, and one third to Mr. Guy. "That Mr. Guy, to whom he made the Proposal "told him, they did not desire to meddle with "the Stock, but would do any service they "could to promote getting the Charter. "That Sir Edward Seymour afterwards meeting "this Deponent, Chid him for making that "Proposal; and told him, he would never have "any thing to do with him, if he ever made any "such Offers. That the Deponent thought himself obliged in Honour, to pay two thirds of "the Five Thousand Pound, when received, to "Sir John Trevor and Mr. Guy; and intended to "keep the other third, (which Sir Edward Seymour refused) for himself. And that Sir John "Trevor did some time afterwards give him some "hints of his Expectation.

Sir Josiah Child being Examin'd, said, "He "never disposed of Ten Pounds of the East-"India Company's: That he did recommend "it, that a Present of Fifty Thousand Pounds "should be made to the King, if His Majesty "would so far wave His Prerogative, that "an Act of Parliament might be passed for "settling the Company; that Mr. Tyssen had "told him, the King would not meddle in that "matter, as he had been inform'd from my Lord "Portland.

Debates of the Commons. These Examinations being reported to the House of Commons, April 27. one of the Members stood up and urg'd the necessity of searching this Matter to the bottom; and to provide Laws for the future to prevent the Members of the House taking Money. That Ten Thousand Pound had been pretended to be given to the King; and Fifty Thousand Pound offer'd to buy an Act of Parliament or gain their Charrer. That the Facts prov'd themselves, and that

Mr.

1695. Mr. Bates appear'd an unfortunate Perſon, whom the Care of his Friend (the Duke of Leeds) and the ſenſe of his Oath, had cauſed to make ſuch Contradictions. Another Member ſaid, That there were never greater, and more general Inſtances of Corruption: He inſiſted on the neceſſity of a ſpeedy Remedy, and that it was very fit the Houſe ſhould let the World ſee that they were in Earneſt. He put them in mind of the Practices and Arts that had been uſed to ſtop their Diſcovery; ſo that what they had, was got as it were, by the utmoſt Force and Conſtraint; at which they could not wonder, when they found ſo great a Man at the Bottom. But there is, added he, no Perſon in a Poſt ſo high that this Houſe cannot reach; no Man's Practice or Art ſo deep, that this Houſe cannot diſcover. Here have been all imaginable Endeavours us'd to obſtruct the Enquiry. Firſt, His Majeſty's Name was made uſe of at the Committees, with hopes, perhaps, that that might ſtop any further ſearch; and if it were made uſe of there, you may reaſonably expect it was made uſe of elſewhere. But that appear'd to be ſo far from being a Reflection on the King, that Sir Joſiah Child often complain'd of it as a Rudeneſs to His Majeſty, that what other Kings had yearly as a Preſent, they had not offer'd to His Majeſty in Three Years: It was indeed, if not a Matter of Right, a Matter of Cuſtom. As for the Earl of Portland, who may be nam'd for his Honour upon this Occaſion, when the great Sum of Fifty Thouſand Pound was preſs'd upon him, he did abſolutely refuſe it, and told them, He would for ever be their Enemy and Oppoſer, if they offer'd any ſuch thing to him. Having thus mention'd the Innocent, I muſt, continued he, ſay ſomewhat of the Guilty. A ſtop having been put, the Duke of Leeds muſt be applied to. Certainly there never was a more Notorious Bribery; and that in a Perſon, whom we might have expected to have been free from ſuch a Crime, if you reſpect either the greatneſs of his Place, or of his former Obligation. It is fit to ſpeak plainly on ſuch Occaſions; the Houſe ought to endeavour to remove ſuch a Perſon from the King's Council and Preſence: What Security can the Nation have, when we are bought and ſold to one another? We have ſeen our Deſigns defeated, our Attempts betrayed; and what Wonder is it? Can any Man think it more ſtrange, that our Counſels ſhould be Sold abroad, than that Charters ſhould be Sold at home? Certainly a Man may reaſonably believe, that he who will Sell the Subjects, will Sell the Kingdom, if he can have a ſufficient Bribe. What Prince can be ſafe in ſuch Counſels which are given for Private Advantage? Several Propoſals, ſaid he, in the Concluſion, may here be offer'd for Remedy. One, That this Houſe ſhould Addreſs His Majeſty to remove the Duke of Leeds; but, with Submiſſion, an Addreſs is too mean, too low a thing for this Houſe to do at this Time, and upon ſuch an Occaſion; I therefore move we may lodge an Impeachment.

Tho' this Speech was approved in the main, yet ſome Expreſſions in it were thought too reflecting; and another Member ſtood up and ſaid, He wondred the Gentleman who ſpoke laſt, ſhould ſay that, which he hop'd he did not believe, That that Lord ſhould have Sold our Counſels to France. Thereupon the other roſe again, and ſaid, It was with ſome uneaſineſs he ſtood up, for he did not take Pleaſure to rake in a Dunghill: That he was far from ſaying the Duke had betrayed our Counſels, but argued only from Poſſibility, that it was as reaſonable to believe one as the other; and that when Honour and Juſtice were not the Rule of Men's Actions, there was nothing incredible that might be for their Diſadvantage.

Several Members ſeconded the Motion for an Impeachment; adding, That ſuch Actions as theſe were a Blemiſh, if not a Scandal to the Revolution it ſelf. And it being demanded, By what Law it was a Crime to take Money at Court? It was anſwer'd, That if there was not a Law, it was time there ſhould be a Law to prevent it; that the Law of God was againſt the Duke, and that there were Parliaments to puniſh ſuch Crimes. It was again ſuggeſted, That it ſeem'd doubtful whether there was Matter in this Report for an Impeachment; and therefore, before the Houſe went to an Impeachment, they ought to put the Queſtion upon the Report, and ſee whether it be a Crime. Thereupon, ſome of the Duke's Friends objected, That there was no Law, and ſo no Tranſgreſſion, and mov'd for Excuſing him. But the Queſtion being put, that there did appear, that there was in the Report made from the Committee of both Houſes, ſufficient Matter to Impeach Thomas Duke of Leeds of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, it was carried in the Affirmative; and Mr. Comptroller was order'd to go up to the Lords, and at their Bar, in the Name of the Houſe, and of all the Commons of England, to lodge the ſaid Impeachment, which in due time they would make good.

Reſolution to Impeach the Duke of Leeds.

About the ſame time that Mr. Comptroller made the Report to the Commons from the Committee of both Houſes, the Lord Privy-Seal made the Report to the Lords; after the Hearing of which, the Duke of Leeds ſaid, "That as he "had formerly proteſted himſelf to be clear in "this Matter, ſo he ſtill denied upon his Faith "and Honour, that he was Guilty of any ſuch "Corruptions as were ſuggeſted againſt him; "and that if the whole Truth were laid open, "it would tend to his Honour and Advantage. "That he would be very free in telling their "Lordſhips now before-hand all that paſſed, in "which he was any ways concerned. That "Mr. Bates introduc'd Sir Baſil Firebraſs to him, "and that he had Conferences with Sir Baſil up"on the Subject of the Eaſt-India Company, "which Firebraſs was concern'd for. That ſome "time after, Mr. Bates informed him, that he "was to have a Sum of Money of Sir Baſil Fire"braſs, and deſired his Lordſhip to lend him one "of his Servants, (Mr. Bates keeping but a Foot"man) to receive the Money; and ſo he lent "him Monſieur Robart. That he knew nothing "of the Sum; but afterwards Mr. Bates came "to him and told him, he had Received 5000 "Guineas, and that in Acknowledgment of the "many Favours he had received from his Lord"ſhip's Hands, he humbly deſir'd him to accept "the ſame; which he refuſing, Mr. Bates preſ"ſed him earneſtly to take one half, or a quar"ter; which he ſtill refuſed, declaring he would "not touch a Penny of them: That however he "told him, ſince he had taken them, he thought "there was no need of returning them; that "they were his own, and wiſh'd him good Luck "with them. And thus, concluded his Grace, "I was but a Shadow to Mr. Bates.

Defence of the Duke in the Houſe of Lords.

The Duke of Leeds had ſcarce ended his Speech, when private Notice came to the Houſe of Lords, that the Commons were proceeding to an Impeachment againſt him; whereupon he left the Houſe in great haſte, and going to the Door of the Houſe of Commons, deſir'd to be admitted to be Heard. This being granted, and a Chair placed for him within the Bar, his Grace ſat down, put on his Hat; then roſe, uncover'd himſelf, and made a Speech to the Houſe; wherein in the firſt place, "He thank'd them "heartily for this Favour of Hearing him, and "then proceeded, declaring his Innocence, and "that he had attended ſooner, if he had had the "leaſt Intimation what the Houſe was upon. "That the occaſion of his coming, was from the "Two Votes upon the Report from the Committee.

The Duke's Plea in the Houſe of Commons.

1695. " of Both Houſes; That he had done all he " could to be inform'd of the Particulars, but " could not. That hearing of a Report, a mon- " ſtrous long Report, and finding himſelf con- " cern'd, he was earneſt to be heard, to the end " he might not lie under the Diſpleaſure of ei- " ther, or Both Houſes. He ſaid, It is a bold " Word, but 'tis a Truth, This Houſe had not now been " ſitting but for me. He added, That he was " formerly purſued by this Houſe in two Points: " For being for the French Intereſt, and for Po- " pery; that he had then, if he might have been " heard, juſtified himſelf, and hoped he had " ſince, and would by all the Actions of his Life. " That one Firebraſs, by the means of Mr. Bates, " was introduced to him: That he had long " known Mr. Bates, and if he was not much de- " ceived in him, he could not believe that Gen- " tleman would have tranſacted ſuch a Matter, if " put upon it. That the Evidence was but a " Hear-ſay, and he hoped they would not con- " demn on Hear-ſay. That as well as a Money- " Part, there was alſo a Treaty-Part. That as " to the Money-part, much of it was falſe; and " what was true, he made no Secret: That he " could, and did ſay, Upon his Faith and Ho- " nour, that neither directly nor indirectly, He " never touched one Penny of the Money. That he " obſerved a great deal of Pains had been taken " to hook in this Matter by a Side-Wind: That " this Firebraſs thought his Merit would deſerve " 10000 l. and 30000 l. That this 5500 Guineas " was no part of the 40000 l. That the Witneſ- " ſes were called in by the Committee; but that " Firebraſs, after his firſt Hearing, deſired to be " called in again himſelf, contrary to all Rules; " which ſhew'd him at leaſt a very willing Witneſs. " That he had a Thread which he hoped to ſpin " finer, and make it appear, that this was a De- " ſign laid againſt him long before the naming of " this Committee; that warning was given him " ſome time ſince, That this Matter would be im- " proved againſt him; and that Firebraſs had been " told, He ſhould be excus'd if he ſhould charge the " Duke." His Grace in the Concluſion ſaid, " He " asked no Favour, but their Favourable Juſtice; " and that no Severe Senſe might be put on what " would bear a Candid one. That if it might be, " the Houſe would reconſider what was done, or " at leaſt, preſerve him from Cruelty, and not " let him lie on the Rack, and be blaſted until a " Parliament ſhould ſit again; and that if they " would not reconſider, that then he might have " ſpeedy Juſtice; for he had rather want Coun- " ſel, want Time, or want any Thing, than lie " under their or the Nation's Diſpleaſure.

This Speech being ended, and the Duke withdrawn, Mr. Comptroller, attended by many Members, went up to the Lords with the Impeachment, and at the ſame time it was propoſed in the Houſe, that the Articles ſhould be forthwith drawn up; and thereupon the Committee which were joined with the Lords, were order'd to withdraw, and prepare the ſame.

The Duke's Speech conſider'd

Afterwards the Houſe of Commons took the Duke's Speech into conſideration, and one of the Members ſtood up and ſaid, " That by this Noble " Lord's Speech, the Point was now, Whether " the Houſe would arraign the Committee of " Both Houſes, or go on with their Impeach- " ment? That the Duke when he came to the " Matter, would not enter into Particulars, but " paſs'd it over with Excuſe of wanting Time: " That he made no Excuſe as to the Facts; That " His Arguments of a Contrivance was, that the " 5000 Guineas charged on him, was no part of " the 40000 l. Firebraſs was to account for: That " this was rather an Aggravation of the Crime; " for Sir Tho. Cooke had a double Account, one 1695. " with, and another without the 5000 Guineas; " which was an Indication, that if there was a " Contrivance, it was not by the Committee, " but with Sir Thomas Cooke, to ſtifle the Enquiry, " and conceal the Corruption. That the ſpeedy " Juſtice of the Houſe was to be wiſh'd and de- " ſir'd; and that if there was ſuch a Contrivance, " ſuch a Thread as was mention'd by that Noble " Lord, 'twas not to be doubted, but that Houſe, " where he was impeached, would clear him. " Another Member moved, That a Committee " might be appointed to withdraw, to conſider " what was to be done in order to gratifie that " Noble Lord by ſpeedy Juſtice; and obſerved " that his Friend Mr. Bates contradicting him- " ſelf, was more than the Evidence of Firebraſs. " That Monſieur Robart was a Servant of my " Lord Preſident's, and was Fled; that Mr. Bates " ſaid he kept the Money in his Houſe; that ſome- " times he had ſpent it, that ſometimes it was in his " Cloſet: That he did own the Money was not " in his Houſe on Sunday, but on Tueſday Mor- " ning Monſieur Robart brought it to him, but " he would never declare from whom he brought " it.

In the middle of theſe Debates a Meſſage was ſent from the Lords, to aquaint the Houſe of Commons, that it was the Opinion of their Lordſhips, that the Diſcovery made by Sir Thomas Cooke was not Satisfactory, nor ſo full as to entitle him to the Benefit of the Act to Indemnify him, and that their Lordſhips deſired the Concurrence of the Commons. They thereupon paſt a Vote, as the Lords had done, and ſent it up by the Lord Coningsby.

Bill for Impriſoning Sir Thomas Cooke, &c.

On Monday April 29. the Lords acquainted the Commons that they had Paſſed a Bill entitled, An Act for Impriſoning Sir Thomas Cook, Sir Baſil Firebraſs, Charles Bates Eſq; and James Craggs, and for reſtraining them from Alienating their Eſtates, to which they deſired the concurrence of the Commons. After the Reading of this Bill, Mr. Comptroller repeated the Articles of Impeachment againſt the Duke of Leeds, for Contracting and Agreeing with the Merchants Trading to the Eaſt-Indies, or their Agents, for 5500 Guineas, to procure them a Charter of Confirmation, and a Charter of Regulation; or by his Agents and Servants, with his Privity and Conſent. Theſe Articles were agreed to by the Commons, and by their Order ſent up to the Houſe of Peers, where upon Reading of them the Duke of Leeds made another Vindication of himſelf much to the ſame purpoſe; adding, " That this Storm " which was now fallen upon him, was ſome " time a gathering; and it was promoted by a " Faction and a Party who had a Pique againſt " him, and an intention to delay the King's Bu- " ſineſs; that he had an Original Letter which " gave him an account of this ſome time before " it brake out, and it appeard only levell'd a- " gainſt him, becauſe none elſe were Proſe- " cuted; that there appear'd a Joy they could " catch at this Pretenſion; and that Sir Baſil Fire- " braſs was treated with to diſcover only this " Part, and ſo he ſhould be excuſed from any " further Diſcovery." His Grace concluded with praying a Copy of the Articles of Impeachment, and of the Report of the Committee of Both Houſes, which was readily Granted.

Duke of Leeds Anſwers the Articles.

April 30. the Commons were acquainted by a Meſſage from the Lords, that the Duke of Leeds had put in his Anſwer to the Articles Exhibited againſt him, of which their Lordſhips had ſent a Copy to them. Whereupon the Commons Ordered, " That the Committee who were ap-1695. "pointed to prepare the Articles againſt the "Duke, ſhould draw up a Replication to his "Anſwer.

" pointed

On May 1. The Ingroſſed Bill from the Lords for Impriſoning Sir Thomas Cooke, &c. was Read the Third time by the Commons, and ſent up to the Lords by Sir Herbert Crofts, with ſome Amendments. At the ſame time, a Meſſage was brought from the Lords, That their Lordſhips conceiving the Seſſion may not continue much longer, they think themſelves obliged in Juſtice to put the Houſe of Commons in mind of the Impeachment brought up againſt the Duke of Leeds; to which the Anſwer of the Duke of Leeds having been tranſmitted to the Commons, the Lords deſire they may be acquainted when this Houſe can be ready to make good the Articles of the ſaid Impeachment, to the end a certain Day may be appointed by the Lords for that purpoſe. The Commons Reſolved to ſend an Anſwer by Meſſengers of their own, and to proceed according to the Courſe of Parliaments.

The Lords deſire the Commons to make good their Articles.

On May 2. The Duke Complained in the Houſe of Peers, of the Delay of the Commons in not Replying to his Anſwer; alledging, "That the Impeachment was only to load him "with Diſgrace, and that they never intended "to Try him: That a Set of Men uſed great "Partiality towards him, and did not intend to "enquire after Others; and that they ſhew'd "their Partiality and Spleen in their Amend-"ment to the Bill for Impriſoning Sir Tho. Cooke, "Sir Baſil Firebraſs, and the Others; whereby "Sir Baſil was to be Bailed, becauſe he was the "Witneſs againſt him." The ſame Day the Commons Reſolved, That the Offer of any Money, or other Advantage to any Member of Parliament, for the promoting any Matter whatſoever depending, or to be Tranſacted in Parliament, was a High Crime and Miſdemeanor, and tended to the Subverſion of the Engliſh Conſtitution. Then Mr. Comptroller Reported from the Committee, That Monſieur Robart, who was a Material Witneſs for making good the Articles againſt the Duke of Leeds, had been Summon'd to Attend the Committee, but could not be found; and it not being yet known where he was, they were of Opinion not to make any further Progreſs in the Matter to them referred, until they had the further Direction of the Houſe. Upon this Reſolution agreed to by the Houſe, it was Ordered, That Monſieur Robart ſhould Attend the Houſe to be Examined, and ſhould be Summon'd by the Serjeant at Arms.

Duke of Leeds complains of the Delay of the Commons.

On Friday, May 3. A Motion being made in the Houſe of Lords, to Read the Bill for Granting to the King a Duty upon Glaſs, &c. the Duke of Leeds roſe up and ſpoke to this Effect, "That it grieved him to think, that he who was "as much as any Man for the Diſpatch of the "Money-Bills, and never oppoſed any, ſhould "be now Conſtrain'd to do it: Bnt he hoped "their Lordſhips would conſider his Caſe, not "only as His, but the Caſe of any of their Lord-"ſhips; for it was in the power of a Tinker to "Accuſe at the End of a Seſſion, and one might "lie under it without Remedy. But ſince the "Commons by Miſmanagement, had delay'd this "Money-Bill for Six Weeks, it would not be of "mighty ill Conſequence, if it ſhould lye a Day "or two longer. In the mean time, he muſt "earneſtly preſs, that if the Commons did not "Reply, the Impeachment might be Diſcharg'd; "for if it were not, he might lie under the Re-"proach of it all his Life. He had reaſon to be-"lieve the Commons would do nothing in it; "for tho' they had Appointed a Committee to "Meet, they had met but once, and that for "Form ſake.

On the ſame Day, Mr. Speaker of the Houſe of Commons acquainted them, That the Serjeant at Arms had informed him, that his Meſſenger had been at the Duke of Leeds's, and ſpoke to his Porter, and enquired for Monſieur Robart, to Summon him to Attend this Houſe: And that the Porter ſaid, he was not within, nor could tell when he would be; and that he had not ſeen him for three Days paſt; and that he believed he was in the Country, but could not tell where. Upon this, the Commons deſired a Conference with the Lords, to which they agreed immediately in the Painted Chamber; where the Managers delivered a Paper to their Lordſhips, importing, That the Commons will make good the Charge againſt the Duke of Leeds, in manner and form as in the Articles mentioned; that the Committee appointed to draw the ſaid Articles, had been daily employed in looking into the Evidences againſt the ſaid Duke, but had met with an Obſtruction, in that Monſieur Robart, a Material Witneſs, was withdrawn ſince the Impeachment carried up, which hath been the Reaſon the Commons have not yet acquainted their Lordſhips when they can be ready to make good the ſaid Impeachment, the Commons being deſirous that Juſtice be done without any manner of delay. This Paper being Read in the Houſe of Lords, it was moved and agreed to without any Objection made by the Duke of Leeds, That an Addreſs ſhould be made to the King, to Iſſue a Proclamation for Stopping the Ports, and Seizing Monſieur Robart; which was accordingly done. Then the Duke roſe up, and blamed the Commons for doing an Unprecedented Thing, "To charge a Man with Crimes before they had "all the Evidences to make it good: That it "was ſtrange they ſhould ſay they wanted a Ma-"terial Witneſs, and lay it upon him to produce "this Witneſs. As if a Perſon were obliged to "produce Evidence to accuſe himſelf. He would "be very Ingenuous and tell their Lordſhips, that "in truth he had ſent Monſieur Robart to ſee his "Daughter Lempſter, and ordered him to call at "Minns to ſee his Daughter Plimouth; where the "Meſſenger of the Houſe of Commons might "have known he was gone, if he had asked. "That he had ſent a Meſſenger on purpoſe for "Robart; that Robart return'd about Two of the "Clock on Sunday Morning; but being inform'd "that his Lord was Impeach'd, and Mr. Bates "in Priſon, he was frighted, and went towards "Harwich, deſigning for his own Country, Swit-"zerland, through Holland. That his Grace knew "by the Temper of the Man, and by a parti-"cular knowledge he had of him, that he would "not be ſeen here again in haſte. So that my "Lords, ſaid his Grace, if this Man be inſiſted "upon as a Material Evidence, and that my Tryal is "to be delay'd till this Perſon is forth-coming, When "am I likely to be Tryed? I humbly move your Lord-"ſhips that you will come to ſome Reſolution, that "if this Matter be not immediately proceeded upon, "ſo that I may be Tryed before the Ending of this "Seſſion, the Impeachment may be Diſcharged." To which ſome Lords Cried, Well Moved; but the King's coming to the Houſe, prevented any farther Reſolution.

1695. Monſieur Robart not to be found.

The Duke's Vindication of Himſelf.

On the ſame Day, the Houſe of Commons having Read a Report of the Committee of Both Houſes, proceeded towards the Impeaching other Perſons therein mentioned, and in particular, Sir John Trevor: But they were Interrupted by the Black Rod, and commanded to attend the King in the Houſe of Peers; where His Majeſty was come to Reconcile the Fatal Differences, by the only Method, that of putting an End to the Seſſion.

Impeachments Interrupted

1695. We muſt firſt obſerve, that amidſt all theſe Diſputes, a Great Thing was done for the Honour and Intereſt of the Nation, by Redreſſing the bad State of the common Coin of the Kingdom. This Difficulty lay ſo heavy upon the Government, that a ſtop was almoſt put to Trade and Taxes: The Current Silver Coin had for many Years began to be Clipp'd and Adulterated, and the Miſchief of late had been ſo ſecretly carried on by a Combination of all People concerned in the Receipt of Money, and ſo induſtriouſly promoted by the Enemies of the Government, that all Pieces were ſo far diminiſh'd and debaſed, as that Five Pounds in Silver Specie was ſcarce worth Forty Shillings, according to the Standard; beſides an infinite deal of Iron, Braſs, or Copper waſh'd over, or Plated. The Nation had ſuffer'd moſt grievouſly by this Evil, and the Cure of it could be no longer delay'd, without apparent and inevitable Ruin to the Publick, and an Obſtruction to all Private Commerce. Under this Neceſſity, the Houſe of Commons on Jan. 8. Appointed a Committee to receive Propoſals, How to prevent Clipping of the Coin of this Kingdom for the future, and the Exportation of Silver. This Committee having Sat ſeveral times, Mr. Scobel at laſt reported their Opinion: 1. That the beſt way to prevent Clipping the Silver Coin, was to New-Coin the ſame into Mill'd Money. 2. That 1000000 l. was a ſufficient Sum to make good the Deficiency of the preſent Clipped Coin of this Kingdom. 3. That the Money hereafter to be Coined, ſhould be of the preſent Weight and Fineneſs. 4. That the Crown-Piece ſhould go for 5 s. and 6 d. and the Half-Crown for 2 s. and 9 d. 5. That all Money to be Coined under the Denomination of the Half-Crown, ſhould have a Remedy of Sixpence in the Ounce. 6. That for as much of the preſent Coin as any Perſon brought into the Mint, he ſhould have Weight for Weight, and the Overplus by a Bill or Ticket at — per Cent, on a Fund to be appropriated for that purpoſe. 7. That the preſent Laws againſt Clipping be Enforced by ſome Additions. 8. That all Perſons whoſe Profeſſions require ſuch-like Tools or Engines, as may be made uſe of for Coining or Clipping, be obliged to Regiſter their Names and Places of Abode, and that it ſhould be Penal on ſuch as ſhould neglect to do the ſame. 9. That it be Penal on all ſuch Perſons as give more for any Silver Coin than it ought to go for by Law. 10. That it be Penal on all ſuch Perſons on whom Clippings are found. 11. That no Preſſes, ſuch as are uſed for Coining, be in any other Place than His Majeſty's Mint. 12. That it be Penal in all ſuch Perſons as ſhall Import any Clipt or Counterfeit Money. 13. That it be Penal in any Perſon to Export Engliſh Bullion, and the Proof to lie upon the Exporter. 14. That it be Penal in any Perſon to Counterfeit any Foreign Mark upon Bullion.

Ill State of the Coin.

This Report lay ſome time neglected in the Houſe of Commons, till the Lords having paſs'd an Act to prevent the Counterfeiting and Clipping the Current Coin of this Kingdom; and on March the 19*th.* ſent it down to the Commons for their Concurrence. Then the former Reſolutions of the Committee were taken into Conſideration, and out of them ſeveral Amendments were Inſerted in the Lords Bill; to which Amendments the Lords Agreed, and ſo made the moſt Expedient Act ready for the Royal Aſſent.

Several Bills were left Unfiniſh'd in this Seſſion; ſuch as, 1. A Bill touching free and impartial Proceedings in Parliament, which was begun in the Houſe of Commons, and there Rejected after the Third Reading. 2. A Bill for Regulating Trials in Caſes of High Treaſon; which having paſs'd the Lower Houſe, was Amended by the Lords, and occaſion'd ſeveral further Conferences and Debates between Both Houſes. 3. A Bill for Regiſtring Memorials of Deeds, Conveyances, and Wills; which was Obſtructed by the Lawyers in the Houſe of Commons, as tending to Abridge Law-Suits, and ſo to prejudice their Profeſſion. 4. A Bill for the Encouragement of Privateers. 5. A Bill for the better Encouragement of Seamen. 6. A Bill to Diſable Perſons from Voting in Elections of Members to ſerve in Parliament, who ſhould refuſe to take the Oaths to the Government; which never came to a Second Reading. 7. A Bill for the better Diſcovery of Bankrupt Eſtates; which was only Read Twice. 8. A Bill to Veſt the Forfeited Eſtates in Ireland in His Majeſty; wherein as little Progreſs was made. 9. A Bill to Regulate Printing-Preſſes. 10. A Bill requiring certain Perſons to take the Oaths to His Majeſty; which having paſs'd the Lords, and coming down to the Commons, was by them Rejected after the Second Reading. 11. A Bill for Naturalizing Foreign Seamen; which being ſent from the Lords, was likewiſe Rejected by the Commons. 12. A Bill to Aſcertain the Aſſize of Bread. 13. A Bill to oblige James Craggs and Richard Harnage, to Diſcover how ſome of the Moneys for Cloathing the Army had been diſpoſed of. And Laſtly, A Bill for Puniſhing Tracy Pauncefort, and his Brother Edward Pauncefort, for Corrupt Practices; which having been Read Three times by the Commons, was order'd to lie upon the Table.

In the midſt of the Debates in Both Houſes, upon the ſame Subject of Impeachments, as before obſerv'd, on Friday, May 3. the King came to the Houſe of Peers, attended with the uſual Solemnity, and gave the Royal Aſſent to,

Acts Paſſed.

1. An Act for Granting to His Majeſty certain Duties upon Glaſs Wares, Stone and Earthen Bottles, Coals and Culm, for carrying on the War againſt France.

2. An Act for the King's moſt Gracious General and Free Pardon.

3. An Act to prevent Counterfeiting and Clipping the Coin of this Kingdom.

4. An Act for Impriſoning Sir Thomas Cooke, Sir Baſil Firebraſs, Charles Bates, Eſq; and James Craggs, and Reſtraining them from Alienating their Eſtates.

5. An Act for Reverſing the Attainder of Jacob Leiſler, and Others.

After which, His Majeſty made this Speech to the Two Houſes.

King's Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I Am come to give You Thanks for the Sup-
"plies provided for carrying on the War in "which We are Engaged; and at the ſame time
"to conclude this Seſſion, which cannot be con-
"tinued longer, without manifeſt Prejudice to
"the Ends for which theſe Supplies are given:
"The Seaſon of the Year making it ſo neceſſary
"for Me to be Abroad, that it were to be wiſh'd
"Our Buſineſs at Home, would have Allowed
"Me to have been there ſooner.

"I will take Care to Place the Adminiſtration
"of Affairs, during my Abſence, in ſuch Per-
"ſons on whoſe Care and Fidelity I can entire"ly Depend: And I doubt not, My Lords and
"Gentlemen, but every one of You, in Your ſe-
"veral Stations, will be Aſſiſting to them. This "is what I Require of You, and that You be "more than ordinarily Vigilant in Preſerving
"the Publick Peace.

Then the Lord Keeper, by His Majeſty's Command, ſaid,

My

1695. Parliament Prorogued.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

It is His Majesty's Royal Will and Pleasure, That this Parliament should be Prorogued to Tuesday the Eighteenth Day of June next, and this Parliament is accordingly Prorogued to Tuesday the Eighteenth Day of June next.

Lords Justices in His Majesty's Absence.

On the same Day the Parliament was Prorogued, His Majesty was pleased to declare in Council, That He had appointed Thomas Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, Sir John Sommers Kt. Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, Thomas Earl of Pembroke, Lord Privy-Seal, William Duke of Devonshire, Lord Steward of His Majesty's Houshold, Charles Duke of Shrewsbury, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, Charles Earl of Dorset, Lord Chamberlain of His Majesty's Houshold, and Sidney Lord Godolphin First Commissioner of His Majesty's Treasury, to be LORDS JUSTICES of England, for the Administration of the Government, during the King's Absence: And at the same time His Majesty was pleased to constitute Sir William Trumball one of the Principal Secretaries of State, in the room of Sir John Trenchard lately Deceased; the next Day His Majesty was pleased to declare, that He had thought fit to appoint Henry Lord Capel to be Lord Deputy of Ireland. And within Four Days after, William de Nassaw Signeur de Zulestein, was created a Baron, Viscount, and Earl of this Kingdom, by the Name and Style of Baron of Enfield, Viscount Tunbridge, and Earl of Rochford; and Ford Lord Grey of Werke was created Viscount Glendale and Earl of Tankerville. On the next Day May 9th. the Duke of Schomberg, the Earl of Tankerville, and Peregrine Bertie Esq; Vice-Chamberlain to His Majesty, were Sworn and Admitted of the Privy Council.

Honours and Preferments.

King goes to Holland.

On May 12th. the King went in the Morning from Kensington to Gravesend, and went Aboard the William and Mary Yatch about Six that Evening, attended by the Duke of Ormond, the Earls of Essex and Portland, and too few other Persons of Quality. On Monday about Four in the Morning His Majesty Sailed from the Buoy in the Nore, with a Fair Wind, Convoy'd by Sir George Rook, who lay at the Gunfleet with a Squadron of Eighteen Men of War; and by Nine the next Morning His Majesty Landed at Orange Polder, Dined with Monsieur Regnenburg, and came that Evening to the Hague, being there received with great Acclamations of Joy. On the Morrow being Wednesday May 17th. His Majesty was Complimented upon his Safe Arrival, by the States General, the States of Holland, and the Council of State, and by all Foreign Ministers; after which His Majesty went into the several Assemblies, and having concerted the proper Measures of the Campaign, He Diverted Himself some Days at Loo, and then appear'd at the Head of the Army.

King opens the Campaign.

The King was resolved to form some considerable Enterprize either in Flanders or on the Maese, according as the best opportunity should offer to put it in Execution on either side. In order to this, before His Majesty left Holland, he had given Directions for the setting up and storing of great Magazines in several Places, and for the making all other necessary Preparations; and order'd Two Armies in the Field, to keep the French in Awe on both sides, and draw their whole Strength on that for which their Jealousie should be the greatest, and afterwards fall on the other with more probability of Success. A Siege in Flanders seem'd to be attended with less difficulty than on the Maese, where the only Place that could be Attempted was Namur, the strongest of all the Low-Countries; and therefore as most People looked upon such an Undertaking to be impossible, so the French themselves did least suspect it, and turned their greatest Precautions towards Flanders, where they drew a new Line from the Lys to the Scheld, before the Allies could form a Body of Troops to oppose them. By this Act of Security, it seem'd probable, that the French would content themselves to act defensively this Summer; to which they might be the more dispos'd by the loss of their best General, the Duke of Luxemburgh, whose Place was unequally supplied by the Mareschal de Villeroy. 1695.

The Confederates Superior to the French.

While the French were perfecting their Lines, the Confederates who were grown superior to them by near Two thousand Men, formed two great Armies in Flanders and Brabant; the first consisted of Seventy Battalions of Foot, and 82 Squadrons of Horse and Dragoons, most English and Scotch, and the rest Dutch, encamped between Shields and Deynse, to be commanded by the King in Person, and under Him, by the Old Prince of Vaudemont; to be reinforc'd upon occasion by Twenty Battalions, and Ten Squadrons that lay near Dixmuyde, under the Command of Major General Ellemberg: The other Army consisted of Thirty six Battalions of Foot, and 130 Squadrons of Horse, of Spain, Holland and Bavaria, encamped on the Road from Brussels to Dendermond, to be headed by the Elector of Bavaria, and under him by the Duke of Holstein Ploen. There was another little Army, which was called the Body of the Maese, incamped on the Mehaigne, consisting of Eighteen Battalions of Brandenburghers, and Seven Dutch, and of 17 Squadrons of Brandenburgh, and 15 of Liege, commanded by the Baron de Heyden, Lieutenant General of Brandenburgh, and Count de Barlo, General of the Liege Cavalry. On the other hand the Mareschal de Villeroy, who commanded the French Forces in chief, had drawn his Army together at Leuze, between Conde, Tournay, and Aeth. Mareschal de Boufflers, and Count Guiscard, with a Body of 12000 Horse and Foot, lay encamped about the Sambre, and Monsieur Montal, with another small Body, lay near Ipres, to observe Major General Ellemberg.

Opening of the Campaign.

This was the Posture both Parties were in, when the King arrived at Ghant, on June 5. N. S. where the Elector of Bavaria, and the Duke of Holstein Ploen waited on him, and the Governor and Burghers received His Majesty with the like Respects that are usually paid to a King of Spain. His Majesty went that Evening to His Army at Arseele, and upon a Review of His Forces, finding 'em in a very good Condition, He detach'd on June 11. Three Brigades of Horse, to reinforce the Elector of Bavaria in his Camp at Nieuve, from whence the Earl of Athlone had by the King's Order, marched with Forty Squadrons, to observe Boufflers, who had Pass'd the Sambre, and was now advanced to Flerus. On June 12. the King decamp'd from Arseele, and march'd His Army to Bourselaer, having sent all the heavy Baggage to Bruges. On the 13th. he incamp'd at Berelaer, from whence a Party was sent out that Routed two Parties of the Enemy, and pursued them to the very Walls of Ipres. Mareshal de Villeroy march'd at the same time from Esquelmes, and retired behind the Lines between Menin and Ipres, having detach'd Ten Thousand Men to Reinforce Boufflers, who was advanced to Pont-Espierre. The same Day in the Evening, the King went to View the Enemies Lines, and found the main Body of their Army Encamped within them, standing to their Arms, as expecting to be Attack'd; but tho' there was little Probability of Success in attempting to force their Lines, yet it was highly convenient for His Majesty's Project, to give the 1695. French ſuch Umbrage, as to oblige them to bring all their Forces to defend them. Therefore the Body of the Meſe advanced towards Namur, and the Elector of Bavaria marched the 12th from Nimove, paſs'd the Scheld on the 16th, poſted himſelf at Herkhoven near Hanterine, facing the new Lines, and forced Marſchal Boufflers to retreat within them.

French

The King ſent the Duke of Wirtemburg to make an Attempt upon the Fort Kenoque to encreaſe the Enemies Jealouſie for Flanders, and draw their Force the more on that ſide, ſending Orders at the ſame time to the Baron de Haden to advance towards Flanders, with the Troops under his Command, but directed him ſoon after to make a Counter-March. By this and ſeveral other Stratagems, the King brought on his Deſign of beſieging Namur, and directed the Earl of Athlone, and the Baron de Haden to inveſt it, and by an Expreſs communicated the whole Scheme of the Siege to the Duke of Bavaria, who highly approved it: The Earl of Athlone being join'd by the Brandenburg Troops on June 28, marched toward Charleroy, and the King Himſelf leaving His Army at Rouſelaer, under Command of Prince Vaudemont, advanced with a ſtrong Guard towards the Meaſe. Theſe Motions put the French in ſuſpence whether the Confederates deſigned to attack Namur or Charleroy; the latter was moſt feared by the Marqueſs d' Harcourt, who therefore reinforced that Gariſon with a good Body of Dragoons. But the Earl of Athlone having paſſed the Sambre at Caſſelet below Charleroy, marched again down that River, towards Namur; ſo that his Lordſhip being by this time reinforced by a Body of Horſe and Dragoons from the Elector of Bavaria's Army, took all the Poſts from the Sambre to the Meaſe, whilſt the Baron de Haden, with the Brandenburgh and Dutch Forces, inveſted the Place between the Meaſe and the Sambre. Another Detachment was order'd to ſurround Namur on the Condroz ſide, but their not coming in time, by the reaſon of the difficulty of the Ground, and the vaſt extent of the Circumvalation, gave Marſhal Boufflers an Opportunity to throw himſelf into the Place, with ſeveral Regiments of Dragoons, and many Engineers; ſo that with this Reinforcement, the Gariſon conſiſted of near Fifteen Thouſand Men, and moſt of them the beſt Troops of France.

Siege of Namur.

Boufflers throws himſelf into Namur.

The King came to the Caſtle of Faliſe on July 2. and the next day the Elector of Bavaria having brought up the reſt of his Army with great expedition, the Town and Caſtle of Namur were entirely inveſted, and His Majeſty diſpoſed the Troops into three General Quarters. The French prepared themſelves for a Vigorous Reſiſtance, and depended on the Strength of the Place, which had always been accounted impregnable, and by the advantage of its Situation, as well as the Nature of its Fortifications, was the beſt Bulwark of Brabant. And the Strength of the Place was very much improved ſince it fell into the Hands of a Monarch who never ſpared Charges to put his Frontiers and Conquered Cities into the beſt defence they are capable to receive from Art and Nature; and the Caſtle was ſo ſituate upon a Hill, in an Angle formed by the Confluence of the Sambre and the Meaſe, that it was hardly poſſible to make ſo much as an Attack upon it: Beſides, the Place was provided with all Neceſſaries for many Months, ſo that the King's Enterprize of this Siege was look'd upon by the French as a Raſh Project, that muſt needs be fatal in breaking the Confederate Army. But all theſe Obſtacles, however to appearance invincible, were not able to ſhake the Reſolution of King William, they ſerved only to keep up His Fortitude, Prudence and Vigilance, and to make Him concert Effectual Meaſures to ſurmount all Difficulties; which He did to His own Immortal Glory, the Aſtoniſhment of His Enemies, and the Admiration of all Europe. 1695.

Condition of the Town.

To raiſe this Siege, the Marſhal de Villeroy marched toward the Prince of Vaudemont, to attack him in his Camp at Aerſeele: The Prince had Fifty Battalions of Foot, and Fifty one Squadrons of Horſe and Dragoons; Villeroy with double the number came up to him on July 14. but found the Prince's Camp ſo ſtrongly fortified, that he would not hazard a Battel till Montal had taken his Poſt in the Rear of the Prince's Right, ſo to inviron him, as to fall on all ſides the next Morning. The Prince found it neceſſary to provide for a Retreat, which he manag'd with ſo much Conduct and Bravery, that the Honour of it was equal to a Victory; and this Senſe the King expreſs'd in a Letter to him in theſe Words: Attempt to raiſe the Siege. Retreat of Prince Vaudemont.

Couſin,

"You cannot believe how much your Letter "of yeſterday Noon, which I received this Morn- "ing by break of Day, diſturbed Me: On the "other ſide, how joyful I was upon the Receipt "of the other Letter, Dated from Mary-kirk, near "Ghent, this Day at Three in the Morning. I am "much obliged to you, for in this Retreat you "have given greater Marks of a General conſum- "mate in the Art of War, than if you had gain- "ed a Victory. I abſolutely approve of your Con- "duct upon this Occaſion, and I hope it will hin- "der the Enemy from undertaking any more of "the ſame nature: Nevertheleſs, I ſhall be impa- "tient till I know which way they bend their "March, ſince this Blow has failed them.

I remain always, &c. Letter of K. William.

The Siege of Namur was carried on with great Application; the Beſieged had made two or three ſmall Sallies with no ſucceſs, and made another more conſiderable on July 18, with Twelve hundred Horſe, and Four Squadrons of Dragoons, but after a ſharp Encounter were beaten back, with the loſs of 200 Men. On the ſame Day the King reſolved to ſtorm the advanced Works and Traverſes of the Enemy; and accordingly Major General Ramſey, and the Lord Cutts, at the head of Five Battalions of the Foot Guards, Engliſh, Scotch and Dutch, began the Onſet on the Right, while Major General Saliſch, with Eight Regiments, and Nine thouſand Pioneers, inſulted the Enemy on the Left. To defend themſelves from this Attack, the Beſieged brought out Eight Battalions, a great Detachment of Dragoons, and all their Grenadiers to defend their Retrenchments; the Diſpute was obſtinate for two Hours, but at laſt the French were beaten back, and purſued to the very Gates of the Town. The King, who according to His Cuſtom remain'd upon the Place during the whole Action, was ſo well pleas d with the Bravery and Excellent Order of His Men, that laying His Hand over the Duke of Bavaria's Shoulder, He told him ſeveral times, in a way of Tranſport, See my Brave Engliſh, See my brave Engliſh. The progreſs of the Siege. Bravery of the Engliſh.

The great Rains that fell about this time very much incommoded the Beſiegers, and interrupted their Approaches: However, on the 25*th*. they plyed their Batteries with Succeſs, rais'd new ones, ſet on Miners to the Redoubt of Balart, near St. Nicholas Gate, and the next day forc'd the Captain that Commanded in it, to Surrender at diſcretion. On the 24*th*. the King went into the Trenches, and perceiving the Batteries had made great Breaches in St. Nicholas Baſtion, the Demi-Baſtion of St. Roche, and at the end of the Counterſcarp of the Town; His Majeſty 1695. General Attack.

Majeſty diſpos'd all things for the general Attack of the firſt Counterſcarp, which was perform'd towards Five a Clock that Afternoon, in this manner: The Engliſh and Scotch, commanded by Major-General Ramſey, and Brigadier George Hamilton, came out of the Trenches to the Right, and attack'd the Point of the foremoſt Counterſcarp, which encloſed the Sluys, or Water-ſtop: The Enemy receiv'd them with a furious Diſcharge; which however did not hinder them to go on briskly; and maugre the diſmal Eruption of Three or Four Fougades of Bombs, that lay buried in the Glacis, which put them at firſt into ſome Diſorder, they return'd more animated to the Charge, and drove the Enemy from that Counterſcarp. But it unluckily fell out, that whilſt the Workmen were making a Lodgment, ſome Sacks of Wool took fire, whereby Part of the Lodgment was conſum'd, and the Engliſh expos'd to the Shot of the Counter-guard, and Demi-Baſtion of St. Roche: Which they ſuſtain'd and anſwer'd with incredible Reſolution, till the Fire was extinguiſh'd, and ſome Traverſes caſt up. On the other hand, the Hollanders ſeeing the Engliſh in ſo hot a Place, immediately went up along the Maeſe, towards the Breach of the Counter-guard, and ſo vigorouſly Attack'd the Enemy with their Hand-Granado's, that the latter thought it ſafer to Retreat than to Defend themſelves; which very much eas'd the Engliſh. Thereupon the Dutch lodged themſelves upon the Counter-guard; and thus both they and the Engliſh preſerved the foremoſt Covered Way, before St. Nicholas Gate, from the Maeſe to the Water-ſtop, with part of the Counter-guard. The Valour and Firmneſs of the Confederates Infantry in this Action, is ſcarce to be parallel'd: And it muſt alſo be acknowledg'd, that the French Officers behaved themſelves like Men of true Courage, expoſing themſelves on the Glacis of the Counterſcarp, and on the Breach of the Counter-guard, with their Swords in their hands, in order to encourage their Soldiers. The Enemy did not throw many Bombs, but they fir'd inceſſantly into the Trenches, with Five or Six Pieces of Cannon; which kill'd ſeveral Perſons about His Majeſty; particularly Mr. Godfrey, Deputy-Governor of the Bank of England; who being come into the Camp to wait on the King, about Money for the Payment of the Army, had the Curioſity to ſee this Attack; and fought his Death, where he ſhould have only minded his Profit.

Death of Mr. Godfrey.

In the mean time, the Elector of Bavaria, Poſted between the Sambre and the Maeſe, commanded an Attack to be made toward the Abby of Salſines; which was performed with ſo much Vigor, that he not only forc'd the Retrenchments next the Sambre, but made himſelf Maſter of the Fort of La Balance, repuls'd Four Squadrons of Horſe that came out of the Caſtle, laid a Bridge over the Sambre, paſſed that River amidſt the Enemies continual Fire, and poſſeſſed himſelf of the ſaid Abby; a Poſt of great Importance, and which favour'd the Attack of Vauban's Line, that ſurrounded the Works of the Caſtle. This Line the Elector reſolv'd to ſtorm, and order'd General Coehorn to diſpoſe all things for that purpoſe towards Salſines, and General Fleming to do the ſame on the other ſide of the Maeſe. On the 30*th* of July, by break of Day, his Electoral Highneſs, with the Spaniſh and Bavarian Generals, and General Coehorn, began the Attack towards Salſines; and aſſaulted the Retrenchment in Flank with about 3000 Foot, ſuſtain'd by ſome Battalions, and 1000 Spaniſh and Bavarian Horſe. Major-General Sworin attacked the Line in Front, with 500 Granadiers, as many Muſqueteers, and 1000 Pioneers; and the Brandenburgh Generals, with 500 Granadiers, ſupported by 2000 Foot, and their Grand Muſqueteers, Gens d' arms and Horſe-Granadiers, inſulted the Enemies Flank on the Maeſe ſide. The Beſieged at firſt made ſome Reſiſtance, by the favour of a Line of Communication, of one Redoubt and two Trenches; but being aſſailed on all ſides, and that too with extraordinary Bravery, they were driven to the Counterſcarp of Coehorn Fort. Animated with this Succeſs, the Beſiegers purſued the Runaways as far as the Devil's Houſe; where the French had ſeveral Cannon laden with Cartouches, and about 900 Men laid flat upon their Bellies; who now ſtanding up on the ſudden, pour'd in Vollies of Shot upon the Aſſailants. The latter receiv'd the Fire with incredible Undauntedneſs, forc'd the French to quit the Counterſcarp of the Fort, and made themſelves Maſters of it; however, it being impoſſible for them to lodge themſelves there, they retired in pretty good Order. By this brave Action, at the Expence of about 200 Men kill'd or wounded, the Beſiegers gain'd a Lined Redoubt, ſome Advanc'd Batteries, and Vauban's Retrenchments from the Sambre to the Maeſe; which, with immenſe Labour, the French had cut through the Rock, and which they boaſted would coſt the Allies 5000 Men, before they ſhould take it. This Attack on the Caſtle-ſide, where the King was preſent, being over, His Majeſty went to view the Trenches of the Town-ſide; and finding that a Mine had been ſprung, which had overturn'd a good part of the Water-ſtop into the Ditch, whereby the Water was lower by two Foot; He order'd the Miners to work on, in order to drain the Moat, and all things to be ready to make a Lodgment on the Demi-Baſtion. The two following Days, the Beſiegers batter'd the Works before St. Nichlas Gate with great Fury, and threw many Bombs, which did conſiderable Execution; and particularly one fir'd by Lieutenant-Colonel Brown, which ſet on fire the Enemies Magazine in the Demi-Baſtion. On the 2*d*. of Auguſt, towards Evening, my Lord Cutts with 200 Engliſh Granadiers, and Brigadier Dedem with a like Number of Dutch, both which were to be ſuſtain'd by the Battalions in the Trenches, were order'd to attack the Saillant Angle, and the other the Demi-Baſtion; which they perform'd with great Bravery, and after ſome reſiſtance lodg'd themſelves on the Second Counterſcarp. The Cannon having by this time widen'd the Breaches, and all things being ready for a General Aſſault, Count Guiſcard, the Governor, demanded to Capitulate for the Town: Which being readily granted, the Articles were agreed upon, and Sign'd on the 4*th*. of Auguſt, by the Elector of Bavaria for the Allies, and by Count Guiſcard for the Beſieged. The ſame day the Iron Gate was deliver'd to the Beſiegers; and on the 6*th*. the French Evacuated the Town, and retired into the Caſtle.

1695.

Freſh Attacks.

The Town Capitulates.

To wait a while upon the Mareſchal d' Villeroy after he fail'd in his Deſign upon Prince Vaudemont, and left his opportunity of Surprizing Newport, he march'd towards Dixmude, and order'd Montal to lay Siege to it. The Town was indeed but weak; yet conſidering the Strength of the Gariſon, it might have held out a Fortnight, or at leaſt have Surrendred with leſs Ignominy; but Major General Ellenburgh the Governor, being a Soldier of Fortune, was ſo far diſpirited, that after a ſlight Reſiſtance of 36 Hours, he yielded himſelf and his whole Gariſon Priſoners of War. Deynſe followed the Example of Dixmude, which Colonel O' Farrell ſurrendred to the French at Diſcretion;

Motions of M. Villeroy

He takes Dixmude & Deynſe

1695. cretion, without Firing a Gun. Villeroy order'd the Fortifications of theſe Two Places to be raz'd, and then paſs'd the River Lys at Warker, and March'd up the Lines to the Scheld, which he croſs'd at Eskanaff, in order to continue his March to Ninove; giving out, That he was going to the Relief of Namur. Upon Advice of this Motion, the Prince of Vaudemont decamp'd on Aug. 4th from Ghent, and paſſing the Canal at Vilvoerd and the Burnt-Bridge, pitch'd his Camp at Dighem, having his own Quarters at the Caſtle of Beaulieu. His Highneſs ſent to the French to demand the Gariſons of Dixmude and Deynſe, according to the Agreement about the Exchange of Priſoners; but the Mareſchal of Villeroy, upon frivolous pretences, refus'd to ſend them back: And contrary to the Cartel, moſt of the Soldiers were forced to Liſt themſelves in the French Service, or were ſent to Catalonia, and other remote Parts.

Engliſh Fleet. The Engliſh Fleet this Summer, Commanded by the Lord Berckley, was ſpreading Terror and Conſternation all along the Coaſts of France. On July 4. They Bombarded St. Malo, that Neſt of Privateers, which of all others, had moſt infeſted the Channel, and moleſted our Merchants, and now felt a Retaliation ſevere enough. Colonel Richards, and Captain Bembo, who had the direction of the Bomb Ketches, on July 6. came before Granville, a little Town on the Sea-ſhore, which they ſet on Fire in ſeveral Places: But we fail'd in our Attempts upon Dunkirk, and were able only to Burn ſome few Houſes at Calais. Theſe repeated Inſults could not but be Reſented by the King of France, who thereupon ſent Orders to Mareſchal Villeroy to Bombard Bruſſels. Upon the French marching to Enghein, with a great number of Waggons Laden with Bombs and Fireworks, Prince Vaudemont immediately gueſs'd their Deſign; which could not be prevented, unleſs the Confederate Army, which might be reinforc'd by the Detachments under the Command of the Earl of Athlone and Count Naſſaw, ſhould advance and encamp in the Plain of Gigot and St. Anne Pee; but becauſe this could not be done neither, without giving Villeroy an opportunity to poſt himſelf between the Prince's Army and Namur, whereby he might have been able to raiſe that Important Siege: His Highneſs did prudently leave the Earl of Athlone and Count Naſſau with the Forces under their Command, between Water-Loo and Genap, and maintain'd a Communication with 'em, by paſſing his Infantry on the Eminences about Bruſſels, between Fort Montera and the Counterſcarp of Ikſel, extending his Horſe and Dragoons along the Canal to hinder the Enemy from paſſing it.

Villeroy Bombards Bruſſells. After ſeveral Marches and Counter-marches Villeroy appear'd before Bruſſels on Auguſt 13. and taking his Quarters at Anderleck, he wrote a Letter to the Prince of Bergin the Governor, to acquaint him, "That the King his Maſter ſeeing the "Prince of Orange had ſent his Fleet upon the "Coaſts of France to Bombard His Sea-port "Towns, and endeavour to ruin them, without "getting any other Advantage by it; had thought "that He could not put a ſtop to ſuch Diſorders, "but by uſing Repriſals; which was the Reaſon "that his Maſter had ſent him an Order to Bom-"bard Bruſſels; and at the ſame time to declare, "That 'twas with Reluctancy his Majeſty had "put himſelf upon it; and that as ſoon as He "ſhould be aſſur'd, that the Sea-Ports of France "ſhould be no more Bombarded, the King his "Maſter would not Bombard any Places belong-"ing to the Princes againſt whom he was at "War; reſerving nevertheleſs the Liberty on "both ſides, to do it in ſuch Places as ſhould be "Beſieged. That His Majeſty had reſolv'd upon "the Bombarding of Bruſſels, with ſo much the 1695. "more Pain that the Electoreſs of Bavaria was "there. That if the Governor would let him "know in what part of the Town ſhe was, the "King his Maſter had commanded him not to "Fire there: Concluding that he ſhould ſtay for "his Anſwer till Five of the Clock in the Even-"ing; after which time he ſhould obey His Or-"ders without delay." The Prince of Berghen after having communicated this Letter to the Elector of Bavaria, who was come in great haſte to Bruſſels upon this Occaſion, ſent an Anſwer to Monſieur Villeroy; "That the Reaſon the King "of France aſſigned for His Orders to the Ma-"reſchal to Bombard Bruſſels, did ſolely regard "the King of Great Britain, who was before the "Caſtle of Namur; That his Electoral High-"neſs would acquaint the King with it, to have "an Anſwer in 24 Hours, if Monſieur Villeroy "would agree to it. And that as for the Conſi-"deration His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty had for "the Electoreſs, that ſhe was at the Royal Pa-"lace." It ſoon after appeared that Villeroy's Meſſage was but an inſignificant Compliment; for inſtead of allowing the Governor time to get his Britannick Majeſty's Anſwer to the French King's Propoſal, he began that very Evening to Fire upon the City with 25 Mortar Pieces, and 18 Pieces of Cannon, that ſhot red hot Bullets. It was not long before the Fire broke out in ſeveral Places, eſpecially about the Town-Houſe. The Enemy continued Firing without intermiſſion all that Night, the Day following, and the next Night after that; during which aroſe a high Wind, which would have ſpread the Conflagration throughout the whole City, if the Inhabitants had not wiſely blown up ſeveral Houſes on the 15th of Auguſt; The ſame day about Noon the French gave over Firing, and ſoon after drew off towards Enghien. The Lower-Town ſuffer'd the moſt by the Enemies Bombs; and ſeveral Houſes near the Market-place were quite laid in Rubbiſh: And as for the Electoreſs of Bavaria, though ſhe was remov'd to the Suburbs, beyond the reach of the Cannon, yet ſhe was ſo Frighted with its continual Roaring, that ſhe Miſcarried upon it.

Siege of the Caſtle of Namur. In the mean time the Siege of the Caſtle of Namur was carried on with ſteddy Reſolution; the Beſiegers broke Ground on Auguſt 12. and carried on their Trenches about an 150 Paces before the Coehorne Fort towards the Sambre, and made a good Lodgment. Beſides the Batteries already erected between the Sambre and the Maeſe, ſome others were order'd to be rais'd, both of Cannon and Mortars, as well in the Ramparts as in the Gardens of the City, in order to Batter Terra Nova and Fort Coehorne, both at once. On the 13. the Beſiegers began to play from no leſs than Twelve Batteries; and one of their Bombs falling upon the Magazine of the Devil's-Houſe, blew up above 1000 Granadoes charg'd, ruin'd a great quantity of Arms, and killed and wounded ſeveral Perſons. Boufflers himſelf being unuſed to this unequal way of Fighting, began to wiſh himſelf in the open Field, and form'd a Deſign to break through the Confederates Camp with his Cavalry; but the King having notice of it, ordered ſtrong Guards to be placed at all the Paſſes of the Sambre, and the ſame was done along the Maeſe by General Fleming; ſo as Boufflers was forced to ſhare the Fate of his Gariſon: However on the 18th towards Midnight, they made a Sally with 200 Dragoons mounted, and 500 Grana-deers: Of the latter 150 made the Attack on the Right Hand, but were repulſed by the Count de Rivera; and the reſt on the Left, where my Lord Cutts had juſt poſted the Advanced Guards, to ſe-

1695. cure the Workmen: The Dragoons fell upon Lieutenant Colonel Sutton, who being poſted in the Plain of Salſine, with about Forty Fuſileers, let them come on till they were very near him, then gave them a round Volley, and retreated to his Body; but the Dragoons preſſing upon him, he commanded his Men to fire upon them: The French being little daunted at it, advanced boldly on, and had their Granadeers charged at the ſame time, they would undoubtedly have cauſed a great Confuſion in the Trenches; but the Spaniſh and Bavarian Horſe, who were near at hand, fell upon the Enemy with ſo much Vigor, that they drove them to the very Paliſadoes of the Caſtle, killing ſome, and making others Priſoners.

Villeroy pretends to raiſe the Siege.

After the Bombardment of Bruſſels, the Mareſchal de Villeroy being conſiderably reinforced with all the Troops that could be ſpared out of the Gariſons and the Forces from the Sea-Coaſts, marched directly towards Namur with an Army of Ninety thouſand Men, with which they confidently boaſted to raiſe the Siege of the Caſtle; when they were come as far as Flerus, they gave the Beſieged a Signal of their Approach, by the diſcharge of 90 Pieces of Canon, which was anſwer'd by a great Light ſet upon the higheſt part of the Caſtle. This obliged the King to leave the Care of the Siege to the Elector of Bavaria, and the Duke of Holſtein Ploen, and on Aug. 26. to repair to the Army ſtrongly encamped at Mazy, within Five Engliſh Miles of Namur. On Aug. 29. the Mareſchal de Villeroy advanced towards the Confederates Camp, but found them ſo well poſted, that he thought fit to retire in the Night without Noiſe: The next Day he moved along the Mehaigne, extending his Right to Perwys, and his Left to the Abby of Boneffe; whereupon His Britannick Majeſty cauſed His Army to move towards Oſtin and Longchamp, to obſerve the Enemy, who durſt not make any nearer Approaches to raiſe the Siege.

General Aſſault appointed.

Aug. 30. was appointed for a General Aſſault of the Caſtle, when the Beſiegers began early to batter the Breaches of Coehorn Fort, and Terra Nova, and continued till 11. of the Clock, when His Electoral Highneſs ſent Count de Horn, accompanied by the Earl of Portland, to ſummon the Beſieged. The Batteries having given over firing, Count de Horn called to the Enemy, and told Count de Lanmont, Commander of the French Foot, who anſwer'd him from the next Baſtion, attended by the Marqueſs of Grammont, and St. Hermine, That the Mareſchal de Villeroy after having been three Days in ſight of the Confederate Army, had thought fit to retire towards the Mehaigne without fighting: That the Gariſon could not expect now to be relieved; and that his Electoral Highneſs being willing to ſpare the Lives of ſo many Brave Men on both ſides, had charg'd him to offer Honourable Terms to Count Guiſcard, if he would ſurrender; but that he gave him but a quarter of an Hour to deliberate upon the Propoſals. Thereupon Count Lanmont took upon him to acquaint Count Guiſcard, and Mareſchal de Boufflers, with Count de Horn's Meſſage, and promiſed to bring back a ſpeedy Anſwer; but not returning in half an Hour, Count de Horn grew impatient, and told the Marqueſs de Grammont that he had already outſtay'd his Time, and therefore deſir'd him to ſend ſome body to the Governor for an immediate Anſwer: A Second Meſſenger was thereupon diſpatch'd away, but he tarrying alſo above a quarter of an Hour, and ſeveral Officers of the Gariſon being come to view the Breach of Terra Nova, the Earl of Portland did not think it convenient to wait any longer. Thus the Parley was broke, and the Batteries play'd inceſſantly againſt the Breaches till between One and Two, when the General Aſſault began in the following manner. 1695.

Parley.

General Aſſault made.

As ſoon as the Signal was given, my Lord Cuts at the head of Three hundred Granadiers, ruſhed out of the Trenches of the Second Line, which were 7 or 800 Paces diſtant from the Breach of Terra Nova, where he was commanded to lodge himſelf; and Colonel Marſigly marched on his Right, to poſſeſs himſelf of the Line of Communication next Coborn Fort; Count de Rivera, Major General of the Bavarians, with 3000 Men march'd out of the Trenches of the firſt Line, in order to attack the Breaches of Coborn Fort; Major General le Cave advanced to attempt the ſame Fort at the Point, and Major General Swerin march'd againſt the Caſotte with 2000 Brandenburghers. The Engliſh Granadiers under my Lord Cuts, born away by their own Native Ardor, and animated by the Example of their Brave Leader, and of Colonel Windſor, Colonel Stanhope, Mr. Thompſon, and ſeveral other Engliſh Gentlemen, who expoſed themſelves as Volunteers, ran faſter toward the Enemy than they could be followed by the Battalions of Couthorp, Buchan, Hamilton, and Mackay, who mov'd from Salſine to ſupport them. The Granadiers mounted the Breach without oppoſition, the Enemy not expecting to be attack'd on that ſide, by reaſon of the great diſtance of the Trenches; but as ſoon as the French ſaw that theſe Bold Adventurers were not ſuſtained, they brought down 2000 of their beſt Foot and Dragoons, into the Space between the Coehorn and the Terra Nova, to fall on the Engliſh in Flank and in Rear, which obliged the latter to make a ſpeedy Retreat. The Beſieged made a ſhew of purſuing them, but by this time three of the forementioned Regiments being come up to their aſſiſtance, the French retired through the Breach of Terra Nova, after having ſurpriz'd and defeated the 500 Men under Colonel Marſigly. The Colonel himſelf being wounded, was made Priſoner, and ſoon after kill'd by a Canon Ball from the Beſiegers Batteries, with the French Officer that carried him into the Caſtle. The Engliſh having born ſix ſeveral Diſcharges, had ſeveral kill'd and wounded; and among the latter was my Lord Cuts himſelf, who received a Shot in his Head, which diſabled him for ſome time.

Whilſt this paſſed on the ſide of Terra Nova, Count de Rivera, with the Bavarians, inſtead of marching to the left of the Platform, went a little too much to the Right, towards the Cover'd Way, which was well Paliſado'd, and thick ſet with Muſqueteers, who made a terrible Fire. Through this Miſtake, inſtead of ſtorming the two ſmall Breaches of the Angle of the Platform, according to the Scheme made for this Attack, the Bavarians attempted to force the Cover'd Way before the great Breach, whereby they remain'd expoſed for two Hours to the Enemies Double Fire, which killed them abundance of Men, and amongſt them Count Rivera himſelf, with moſt of the Officers of the Bavarian Guards.

Hard Service.

The Lord Cuts was ſcarce dreſs'd of his Wounds, when growing impatient to be idle, while others were ſtill engaged, he put himſelf again at the head of his Brave Countrymen; but finding the Aſſault of the Terra Nova not poſſible to be retrieved, and obſerving that the Bavarians notwithſtanding the loſs of their Leader, had fix'd themſelves upon the uttermoſt Retrenchment of the Point of Coborn, next to the Sambre, and maintain'd that Poſt with a great deal of obſtinacy, but could not gain any more Ground; he thereupon reſolved to make good their Attack. To effect this, he order'd that a Detachment of 200 Men ſhould be made out of ſuch as were moſt forward to ſignalize themſelves, whom he ſtill encouraged 1695. raged by Promiſes of diſtinguiſhing Rewards: That thoſe ſhould be ſuſtain'd by the Regiment of Mackay; and that the other Engliſh Forces ſhould rally, and follow as ſoon as poſſible. Being come to the Place of Action, his Lordſhip detach'd a Party of the forementioned choſen Men, headed by Lieutenant Cockle of Mackay's Regiment; whom he order'd to attack the Face of the Saillant Angle next to the Breach, Sword in Hand, without Firing a Gun; to paſs the Palliſado's, and enter the Cover'd Way; and there to make a Lodgment, if they found any Place capable of it. And at the ſame time, his Lordſhip commanded the Enſigns of Mackay's Regiment to march ſtrait to the Palliſado's, and place their Colours upon them. All this was ſo well executed, that Lieutenant Cockle breaking thro' the Palliſado's, beat the Enemy from the Cover'd Way, lodg'd himſelf in one of their Batteries, and then turn'd their own Cannon againſt themſelves. On the other hand, whilſt Mackay's Enſigns advanc'd to the Palliſado's, the Bavarians renew'd their Attack with undaunted Vigour, and ſo this Poſt was made good. The Troops were already ſo fatigu'd by an Aſſault that had laſted ſeveral Hours, that the Beſiegers contented themſelves to have gain'd the Cover'd Way before the Breach of Coehorn, and the Saillant Angle towards the Sambre, and to make a Lodgment there, without any further Attempt upon the Breach. However, this ſeaſonable Reinforcement which the Lord Cutts brought to the Bavarians, had this further good effect, that it kept the Enemy employ'd in the Defence of this moſt important Poſt; which very much facilitated Major-General La Cave's Enterprize upon the Cover'd Way before the Ravelin, and upper Point of the Cohorne, and ſo up towards the Caſotte; where he lodg'd himſelf without any conſiderable Loſs. On the other hand, Major-General Swerin, who commanded the Right Attack of all before the Caſotte, made up boldly towards the Cover'd Way and Retrenchment between the Caſotte and the Maeſe; overcame the Enemies Reſiſtance, drove them from their Poſts, ſecur'd all the Avenues, and made a very good Lodgment all along this Cover'd Way and Retrenchment, of about 300 Paces; which he extended to the Left, turning in towards the Coehorne about 140 Paces more, to join it to that of Major-General La Cave, that reach'd to the Ravelin of the Coehorne. Thus, altho' for want of a due Correſpondence among the ſeveral Attacks, either by the Failure or Miſtake of the Signals, the Beſiegers miſcarried in the great Deſign of this general Storm; which was to have taken the Caſtle, with all its prodigious Outworks, all at once; yet they were now Maſters of one of the greateſt Lodgments that ever was made in one Aſſault, being near an Engliſh Mile in extent. Such a vaſt Lodgment could not be done in a moment; neither could the Aſſault, which laſted till Evening, be maintain'd, without conſiderable Loſs on both Sides. The Beſiegers, by their own Confeſſion, had Two Thouſand Men kill'd or wounded; and among them many Perſons of Note. Count de Rivera, Major-General; the Colonels Couthorp, Marſigly, Lindroot; the Baron de Herkeren; Lieutenant-Colonel Fabricius, of DuTheil's Regiment; and Captain Mitchel, of the Engliſh Guards; were counted among the Slain: And among the Wounded were reckon'd, the Prince of Holſtein Norburgh, and the Lord Cutts, Brigadier-Generals; the Prince of Heſſe Homburgh, Eppingen, Zinzenburgh, Caunits, Horne, Count Dona, Luzelburgh, Mehn, Count de Denhoff, and Hamilton; all Ten Colonels. Several Officers of His Majeſty's Engliſh Guards; particularly Colonel Windſor, Colonel Stanhope, Colonel Evans, and Mr. Thompſon; beſides a great many Lieutenant-Colonels, Majors, Captains, and Subaltern Officers of other Regiments. The Loſs of the Beſieged in this Action did not exceed 600 Men, either kill'd or wounded. The Elector of Bavaria expos'd himſelf to a Degree not to be imagin'd; riding from Place to Place, and giving his Orders where the Diſpute was moſt obſtinate; inſomuch that ſeveral Perſons were killed and wounded about him. Neither was his Electoral Highneſs contented to encourage the Officers and Soldiers by his own Example, but animated the Firſt by extolling their Valour; and the latter, by the more powerful Incentives of immediate Rewards; diſtributing Handfuls of Gold amongſt them. All the Troops of the ſeveral Nations behaved themſelves with equal Intrepidity: However, it may be ſaid, that the Engliſh were the moſt bold and puſhing, the Bavarians the moſt firm, and the Brandenburghers the moſt ſucceſsful. In Acknowledgment of which Service, His Majeſty writ with His own Hand the following Letter to the Elector, of Brandenburgh, now King of Pruſſia.

Great Loſs.

K. William's Letter to the Elector of Brandenburgh.

"You Intereſs your ſelf ſo far in the Publick "Good, that you muſt needs receive a particu- "lar Satisfaction in hearing of the Surrender of "the Caſtle of Namur, eſpecially conſidering "what ſhare you had in that Enterprize; which "could not poſſibly have ſucceeded without the "Aſſiſtance of your Troops, whom I cannot "enough commend; nor can be leſs pleas'd "with the admirable Conduct of your Generals. "They have gain'd to themſelves the greateſt "Glory and Reputation by this Action: And I "aſſure you, 'tis impoſſible for any one to be "more ſenſible of an Obligation, than I am of "that you have laid on Me, by Aſſiſting Me in "an Undertaking of ſuch Conſequence, which "God has vouchſafed to bleſs; and which, I "hope, will be a conſiderable Advantage to all "the Allies. And you may aſſure your ſelf, "I ſhall omit no Occaſion of giving you effe- "ctual Proofs of my Gratitude.

The 31*ſt*. of Auguſt (N. S.) was wholly ſpent by the Beſiegers in perfecting the Lodgments they had made the Day before, and in preparing all things for a Second General Aſſault: But the next day, the Beſieged having demanded a Ceſſation of Arms to Bury their Dead, which was readily granted; the Count de Guiſcard came upon the Breach a little before the Truce was over, and deſired to ſpeak with the Elector of Bavaria. His Electoral Highneſs having mounted the Breach, the Count offer'd to Surrender the Coehorne Fort: But the Elector anſwering, That if he would Capitulate, it muſt be for the whole: Count Guiſcard replied, That the Mareſchal de Boufflers Commanded in the Caſtle, and that he would let him know; and deſired, that in the mean while, the Ceſſation of Arms might be continued: To which, his Electoral Highneſs having agreed, Mareſchal de Boufflers conſented to Treat for the whole. Thereupon an Adjutant was immediately diſpatch'd to give the King an Account of it at Oſtin: Which Expreſs met His Majeſty, with the Prince of Vaudemont, then coming to the Siege in His Coach, to give Directions concerning a further Attack. Upon His Majeſty's Arrival, Hoſtages were exchang'd, and Propoſitions brought from the Caſtle; the chief of which was, That they might have Ten Days to expect Succours. This being abſolutely denied, the French, after ſome Debates amongſt them-

The Capitulation was agreed on that very Night, and ſign'd the next Morning; and part of the Outworks were given up preſently after to the Allies; the Beſieged having three days more allow'd them to evacuate the Caſtle. 'Tis remarkable, that the Count de Guiſcard oblig'd the Mareſchal de Boufflers to Sign the Articles, becauſe he had commanded in the Caſtle during the Siege; whereas the Count had only Commanded in the Cochorne, and the Outworks; and that perhaps this was the firſt Capitulation that was ever Sign'd by a Mareſchal of France; which was ſo much the more to the Honour of the Confederate Arms, that they took this almoſt impregnable Place in Sight of another Mareſchal of France, who was advanc'd to relieve it with 100000 Men, but was only a Spectator of the Bravery in the former, and of a conſummate Prudence in the King of Great Britain, under whoſe Conduct and Direction all was happily Atchieved; it being univerſally acknowledged, that no Siege was ever carried on with more Regularity.

Capitulation Signed.

Motion of the Two Armies.

The 1ſt of September the Two Armies obſerved one another, but the next day the Mareſchal de Villeroy being informed of the Surrender of the Caſtle of Namur by a triple Diſcharge of all the Artillery, and three Salvoes in a running Fire along the Lines of the Confederate Army, he retired from his Camp at Gemblours, and paſſed the Sambre near Charleroy with great Precipitation. Upon Advice of this Motion, the King order'd ſeveral Brigades towards Salſines, and a Bridge to be laid over the Sambre, to oppoſe the Enemy in Caſe they ſhould make any Attempt between the Sambre and the Maeſe, whilſt the French Gariſon was ſtill in Poſſeſſion of the Terra Nova. But it ſeems, Monſieur de Villeroy had quite laid aſide all thoughts of Fighting; for having ſent 2000 Men to reinforce the Gariſon of Dinant, he marched with the reſt of his Army towards the Lines near Mons.

The French retire.

Surrendry of the Caſtle of Namur.

On the 5th of September, the day prefixed for the French to evacuate the Caſtle, the Horſe and Foot that were encamp'd between the Sambre and the Maeſe were commanded to make a Lane on both ſides, from the Breach of Terra Nova, thro' which the Garriſon was to march out up the Hill, and ſo down again to the Maeſe, to the way that leads to Givet, whither it was agreed they ſhould be ſafely conducted. About Ten of the Clock in the Morning, the Gariſon, which from 14000 was reduced to 5538 Men, began their March. The Mareſchal de Boufflers's Guard de Corps went out firſt; then his Domeſticks, and next himſelf, with Mr. de Guiſcard the Governor, at the head of the King's and Alfeld's Dragoons, as many as were mounted, that is, between 80 and 90 in all. The King was Incognito in a Coach, and the Elector of Bavaria, the Landtgrave of Heſſe, and the Chief Officers of the Army on Horſe-back, to ſee them paſs, within 200 Paces of the Breach, and were ſaluted by the French Mareſchal and Count with their Swords. This Civility was hardly over, when Monſieur Dyckvelt Accoſted Boufflers with a Meſſage which ſomewhat diſcompos'd his Countenance; and as they were Riding up to the top of the Hill, Monſieur de l'Etang, Brigadier General of the Brigade of the Life-Guards, made up boldly to the Mareſchal, with about Twelve of the Gentlemen of the Life Guard, and Arreſted him, in his Britanick Majeſty's Name, by way of Repriſal for the Gariſons of Dixmuyde and Deynſe, which were detain'd and ill treated by the French, contrary to the Cartel. The Mareſchal ſeem'd at firſt very much Incens'd; alledging in a broken Speech, That the Laws and Cuſtoms of War were violated, and particularly the Capitulation lately ſign'd by the Duke of Bavaria, wherein he was expreſly mentioned. That the King of France his Maſter would reſent this Treatment of a Man of his Character, and revenge it to the utmoſt of His Power; and that for his part he had defended the Place like a Man of Honour, and did not deſerve it. To this Monſieur Dyckvelt reply'd, "That the French King his Maſter, by "detaining the Gariſons of Dixmuyde and Deynſe, "contrary to their Capitulation (by which they "were made Priſoners of War, and conſequent-"ly ſhould have been diſcharged within the li-"mited time, paying their Ranſom, which was "offer'd) had forced his Britannick Majeſty to "that way of demanding Satisfaction for that "infraction: That the Mareſchal's being Ar-"reſted, was not out of any Diſreſpect to his "Perſon, but rather the contrary; for when it "was propoſed to the King of Great Britain to "detain the whole Gariſon by way of Repriſal, "His Majeſty had expreſt ſo much value of his "Perſon, that he look'd upon him as a ſufficient "Caution to anſwer for 6000 Men, the number "of the Two Gariſons of Dixmuyde and Deynſe; "But that at the ſame time, he had his Majeſty's "Order, to offer him his Liberty, if he would "paſs his Word for ſending back the ſaid Gari-"ſons, or return himſelf a Priſoner, within a "Fortnight." To which Boufflers anſwer'd, That he could not paſs his Word of Honour in a Matter which he could not execute himſelf; That if he were at the head of 50000 Men, he would not ſuffer himſelf to be Arreſted, but now he muſt ſubmit: Thereupon he put up his Sword, and went back with his Domeſticks to Namur, where the Earl of Portland gave him a Viſit, and told him as from himſelf, That he made no doubt of his Releaſement upon his Parole of Honour: But the Mareſchal anſwer'd, That in regard he knew not the Reaſons why his Maſter detain'd thoſe Gariſons, he could not engage for any thing. From Namur he was conducted to Maeſtricht, and treated in both Places with all the Civility and Reſpect due to his Quality. His Confinement was not long; for upon the Return of the Captain of his Guard, whom he ſent to give the King of France an Account of what had happen'd; and the Mareſchal engaging his Word that the Gariſons of Dixmuyde and Deynſe ſhould be ſent back, as ſoon as he himſelf ſhould be ſet at Liberty; His Britannick Majeſty ordered the Governor of Maeſtricht to releaſe him, and give him a Guard to conduct him ſafe to Dinant.

Mareſchal Boufflers Arreſted.

The Mareſchal releaſed.

The News of the Surrender of the Caſtle of Namur no ſooner reach'd England, but it filled the Hearts of all the Well-affected to the preſent Government with an unſpeakable Joy; and K. William's expreſſing his juſt Reſentment for the Affront lately put upon His Majeſty, by the detaining the Gariſons of Dixmuyde and Deynſe, was highly Applauded by a Nation, which of all others, is impatient of Injuries, and jealous of the Honour of their Sovereign. The Lords Juſtices having appointed a Day of Publick Thankſgiving for the Glorious Succeſs of his Majeſty's Arms, the ſame was religiouſly obſerved at London, and throughout all England. On this occaſion, on Sep. 9. the Earl of Rumney, Maſter General of the Ordnance, order'd a Firework to be prepared in St. James's Square, which being fired to the general Satisfaction, his Lordſhip gave a great Entertainment to ſeveral Perſons of Quality: The Night ending with Bonfires, Illuminations, and Ringing of Bells. Amidſt theſe Publick Rejoycings the Diſaffected, remain'd as it

1695. were Thunder-ſtruck: And indeed their Diſappointment ſeemed to allow their Concern; for not only their Hopes of ſeeing the Confederates Attempt upon Namur baffled, were fruſtrated, but a great many of them were totally ruin'd by the loſs of conſiderable Wagers they had laid upon it.

The King leaves the Campaign. In the mean time the King having left the Command of the Army to the Elector of Bavaria, His Majeſty went to Dieren, and from thence to Loo, His uſual Receſs for Diverſion and Buſineſs, whilſt both Armies continued in the Field till the 25th of September, and then began to ſeparate. The French King's Houſhold return'd into their Quarters, and moſt of the reſt of His Troops retir'd within the Lines. As for the Allies, their Forces were diſtributed into ſeveral Neighbouring Gariſons, except ſome Detachments which marched towards Newport, under the command of the Prince of Wirtemberg, for the ſecurity of that Place. And thus the Campaign in Flanders ended on both ſides, much about the cloſe of the Month of September.

Affairs in Ireland. To caſt an Eye upon Ireland, we muſt obſerve, That on Aug. 27, the Parliament was opened in Dublin Caſtle, and the Lord Capel, Lord Deputy, being attended with all the uſual Ceremonies, made this Speech to Both Houſes.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"MAny and great are the Obligations You owe "to His Majeſty; I ſhall mention but a few "of them. His Majeſty has appear'd Himſelf in "your Cauſe; He has fought your Battels, and "at His own Perſonal Hazard, has reſtored you "to your Religion and Eſtates: And that every "thing may concur to make you happy, His "Majeſty has now called you together in Parliament, that by reaſonable and neceſſary Laws "you may prevent the like Dangers for the time "to come, and ſecure your ſelves and your Poſterity upon the beſt and ſureſt Foundati-"ons.

"I ſhall not, I am ſure I ought not to doubt, "but you will make Returns of Loyalty and "Affection ſuitable to the extraordinary Bene-"fits you have received; which cannot be better "expreſſed, than by a Dutiful and Grateful Com-"portment towards His Majeſty, and by ſhewing "a perfect and forward Zeal in ſuch things as "tend to His Honour, and your own Advan-"tage.

"I muſt acquaint you, that His Majeſty's Re-"venue has fallen ſhort of the Eſtabliſhment, "which has occaſion'd great Debts to the Civil "and Military Liſts: That it is with difficulty, "and ſtopping of all manner of Payments, but "what are abſolutely neceſſary, that the Army "hath hitherto been ſubſiſted. There are alſo "ſeveral other Debts due from the Crown; a "State whereof I have ordered to be laid before "you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons; "by which you will ſee that Supplies are neceſ-"ſary for diſcharge of thoſe Debts, and for the "ſupport of the Government.

"For raiſing ſome part of this Money, His "Majeſty has ſent you a Bill for an Additional "Duty of Exciſe, and he expects from you, Gen-"tlemen of the Houſe of Commons, that you "will conſider of Ways and Means for raiſing "ſuch other Sums as are requiſite for His Service, "and prepare Heads of Bills to be paſſed into "Laws in due form. And you will be the more "cheerfull in giving, when I aſſure you, that what "Money you give ſhall be applied to the Uſes "for which it is given.

"One thing I muſt recommend to you; That "you will take ſome Care for the rebuilding and "repairing of Churches in the ſeveral Parts of "your Countrey; that the People having De-"cent Publick Places of Worſhip, may be better "inſtructed in their Duty to their God, and O-"bedience to their King. It is a Tribute due to "Almighty God for Our late Preſervation and "Deliverance, and will, I am verily perſuaded, "be one of the beſt Means you can think of, to "preſerve the true Eſtabliſhed Religion, and to "provide againſt future Rebellions. 1695.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I muſt inform you, that the Lords Juſtices of "England have with great application and diſpatch "conſidered and retranſmitted all the Bills ſent "to them. That ſome of theſe Bills have more "effectually provided for your future Security, "than hath ever heretofore been done; and in "my Opinion, the want of ſuch Laws has been "one of the great Cauſes of your paſt Miſeries: "And it will be your Fault, as well as Misfor-"tune, if you neglect to lay hold of the Oppor-"tunity now put into your hands, by our Great "and Gracious King, of a making ſuch a laſting "Settlement, that it may never more be in the "Power of your Enemies to bring the like Ca-"lamities again upon you, or to put England again "to that vaſt Expence of Blood and Treaſure it "hath ſo often been at for ſecuring this Kingdom "to the Crown of England.

"His Majeſty has been pleaſed to appoint Me "His Deputy in this Government: I am truly "ſenſible of my Unfitneſs for this great Station, "and the Difficulties which attend it; yet I aſ-"ſure you, I have, and will diſcharge the Truſt "repoſed in me, with a ſtedfaſt Loyalty and "Truth to His Majeſty's Intereſt and Service; "and with a perfect Sincerity to yours; and "that I have no other End or Ambition than to "ſee you ſettled under His Majeſty's moſt "Happy Government in Peace and Proſpe-"rity.

The Lords and Commons return'd their Thanks in Addreſſes to his Excellency for his Speech; and paſs'd this Vote, That they would to the utmoſt of their Power, ſtand by, and aſſiſt His Majeſty and His Government againſt all His Enemies, Foreign and Domeſtick. After this Both Houſes proceeded with great Unanimity and Diſpatch to the Conſideration of the Matters before them; ſo that on the 6th of September the Lord Deputy gave the Royal Aſſent to an Act for an Additional Duty of Exciſe upon Beer, Ale, and other Liquors. Another, For taking away the Writ de Heretico Comburendo. A Third, Declaring all Attainders, and all other Acts made in the late Pretended Parliament to be void. A Fourth, To reſtrain Foreign Education; which was principally deſign'd to hinder the Growth of Popery. A Fifth, For the better ſecuring the Government, by diſarming Papiſts: And a Sixth, For the better ſettling of Inteſtates Eſtates. Three days after the Houſe of Commons, by unanimous Conſent, granted to His Majeſty a Supply of 163325 l. to be rais'd partly by a Poll-Tax; and on the 18th of the ſame Month having conſider'd the State of the Nation, they reſolved, That the great Intereſt and Countenance the Iriſh had in the Court of England, during the two laſt Reigns, had been the chief Cauſe of all the Miſeries and Calamities that had ſince befallen this Kingdom. On the 12th of October the Commons proceeded upon the farther Conſideration of Ways and Means to raiſe the Supply, and having agreed upon a Computation of what the Exciſe and Poll-Tax might amount to, they paſs'd a Vote, That the Exciſe ſhould be continued two Years longer, after expiration of the preſent Act: And afterward reſolved to lay a Duty upon Tobacco, Old and New Drapery, Muſlins, Calicoes, and 1695. all sorts of Linnen; and on Wine; to compleat the Supply granted. Which done, both Houses Adjourn'd themselves for some time.

State of Scotland. As to the State of Scotland, A Parliament met there according to Summons, on May 9. when the Marquess of Tweedale, His Majesty's Commissioner, went thither, attended in the usual manner; and His Majesty's Letter to the Lords Temporal, and Shires, and Burghs, was to this Effect.

King's Letter. "That the Continuation of the War still hindred Him from pursuing His Resolution of being amongst them in Person, and so obliged Him to call them together once more in His Absence. That therefore He had appointed the Marquess of Tweedale to be His Commissioner, and to Represent His Person and Authority among them. That the Marquess had given Proofs of his Capacity and Experience in Business, as well as of his Fidelity and Zeal, by his many and long Services to the Crown and Nation, particularly since his being Lord Chancellor; which would render him very acceptable to them. That His Majesty had fully entrusted him with His Mind, and given him Powers to pass all such Laws for the good of that His Majesty's ancient Kingdom, as had been Proposed to His Majesty at this time. That the Marquess was to Ask nothing of them in His Majesty's Name, but that which the Interest of the Country made necessary to be done: That therefore His Majesty need not mention to them, that the Subsidies for Paying the Forces were now Expired, and that their Peace and Safety required the Renewing of them during the War. That His Majesty was glad of any Appearances of a Disposition to Moderation and Union about Church-Matters; and He hop'd they would Encourage it, and Promote it, by removing the Subjects of Differences as much as they could. That He was not unmindful of the Letter to Him in the Close of the last Session. That the known Interruptions He had had in Business this Winter, had been a great hindrance to Him; but He was resolv'd to do whatsoever might be for the Security of the Government, and the Satisfaction of His good Subjects. In the Conclusion, His Majesty recommended to them Calmness and Unanimity in their Proceedings; not doubting but they would Act suitably to the Confidence He had put in them, in calling them again in His Absence.

This Letter was back'd by the High Commissioner's Speech, who told that Great Assembly, "That His Majesty's tender Care and Concern for their Safety and Welfare did evidently appear, in minding every thing that might contribute thereto: Particularly as to the Church, That all Differences might be Compos'd; it being His Majesty's Purpose to Maintain Presbyterian Government in the Church of Scotland; and that the Peace and Security of the Kingdom against Foreign Invasion, and Intestine Commotion, be provided for. That if they found it would tend to the Advancement of Trade, that an Act be passed for the Encouragement of such as should Acquire and Establish a Plantation in Africa or America, or any other part of the World, where Plantations might be lawfully acquired, His Majesty was willing to declare, That He would grant to the Subjects of this Kingdom, in favour of these Plantations, such Rights and Privileges, as he granted in like Cases to the Subjects of His other Dominions: And that the Judicatories, higher and Subaltern, be so Regulated in their Proceedings, as that Justice might be Administred with the greatest Dispatch, and least Charge to the People. That these things had taken up some part of His Majesty's Time and Thoughts these Months past, and had been frequently Discours'd by Him; and then put in the Method of Instructions, and Directions for his Grace's Behaviour. That therefore it only remain'd for them to take these Weighty Affairs into Consideration, and to consult of the best Ways and Means to enable His Majesty to perfect so good Designs, by Granting him Supplies for Maintaining the present Land-Forces, and for Providing and Entertaining a Competent Naval Force, for the Defence of the Coast, and Securing of Trade: In order to which, His Majesty had Granted a Commission of Admiralty for Managing the Affairs thereof; not omitting to take Care for the other unavoidable Contingencies of the Government, wherein the Civil List came short; concluding that the Dispatch of these Great Affairs with Chearfulness and Alacrity, would perfect a good Understanding, and perpetuate a Confidence between the King and them." The Earl of Annandale, Lord President of the Parliament, made likewise a Speech to them on this Occasion. He acknowledged His Majesty's Gracious Letter, wherein He asked nothing for Himself, but only prevented their necessary Cares for the Peace, Welfare, and Advantage of this Kingdom. He took notice of the fresh Assurances they had of His Majesty's firm Resolutions to Maintain the "Presbyterian Government of this Church; and said, He hop'd the Moderation and Calmness that should at this time appear in all their Proceedings in Church-Matters, would satisfie the World, That this is the Government most agreeable to the Temper and Inclination of this People, and most suitable for the Interest and Support of their King, the Civil Government, and Peace of this Kingdom." And in the Conclusion, he Enforced all that had been said, "by one thing which did justly challenge a more than ordinary Zeal and Vigour in their Duty at this time, which was the sad and irreparable Loss they had sustained of the Best of Queens; wishing they might all of them make this use of it, that as now the whole Sovereignty was lodg'd in His Majesty, it might appear by their Actings, that they had doubled their Forwardness and Endeavours to serve Him; which was the only way now left them to shew their just Sense of their inexpressible Loss, and to make it in some Measure more supportable by His Majesty.

These Speeches had the desir'd Effect; the Parliament ordered an Answer to His Majesty's Letter, and an Address of Condolence for the Death of the Queen, to be drawn up and sent to His Majesty; and appointed a Committee for the Security of the Kingdom, and another for Trade. The first of these Committees having made their Report concerning the Supplies to be given to the King, it was unanimously Resolv'd, That the Sum of 1440000 Pounds Scots, be Granted for Maintenance of the Land-Forces, and for Providing and Maintaining Cruisers and Convoys for Defence of the Coasts and Trade; towards the Raising of which Sum, they made an Act for a General Poll, another for a Supply of Six Months Cess out of the Lands Rents, and a third for an Additional Excise; and a fourth for Three Months Cess more. The other Committee, after several Sittings, prepared an Act for settling a Trade in the Western Plantations; which was Approved and Passed. Several other good Laws were made by this Parliament; As an Act against Popish Parents making Deeds, or Dispositions

1695. ons, in prejudice of their Heirs who turn Proteſtants. An Act in favour of the Linnen Manufactory. An Act for Obviating the Frauds of Apparent Heirs. An Act for a Manufactory of Paper. An Act for Settling the Poſt-Stages within the Kingdom of Scotland. An Act for Sale of Bankrupts Eſtates, for the uſe of their Creditors. An Act for the Regulation of the Mint. An Act againſt Intruders into Churches, without a Legal Call and Admiſſion. An Act againſt Blaſphemy: Another againſt Prophaneneſs: Another againſt Irregular Baptiſms and Marriages; and another concerning the Church. An Act to Raiſe 1000 Men Yearly, to Recruit the Scotch Regiments now Abroad. An Act for Burying in Scotch Linnen. And Laſtly, An Act for Erecting a Publick Bank in this Kingdom.

But this Seſſion of the Scotch Parliament is chiefly remarkable in this piece of Hiſtory, for their ſtrict Enquiry into a Paſſage that made a great noiſe in the World. In January 1692. the King ſent Inſtructions to the Commanders of his Forces in Scotland, touching the Highland Rebels, who did not in due time accept of the Benefits of His Majeſty's Indemnity; and which contain'd a Warrant of Mercy to all, without exception, who ſhould offer to take the Oath of Allegiance, and come in upon Mercy, tho', the firſt day of January, 1693. prefix'd by the Proclamation of Indemnity was paſt. Contrary to His Majeſties Intention, 38 of the Inhabitants of Glencoe, a Town in the North of Scotland, after they had laid down their Arms, were Inhumanely Butcher'd in their Beds, their Houſes Plunder'd and their Cattle carried away in February 169⅔. Which piece of Barbarity having given the King's Enemies a ſeemingly juſt occaſion of Reflecting on His Government, the Committee for Security of the Kingdom, made a Motion for enquiring into that Matter. Thereupon His Majeſty's Commiſſioner acquainted the Parliament, that the King had given Commiſſion to ſeveral Perſons to make enquiry into that Affair; which Commiſſion being produced, Read, and agreed to, it was unanimouſly Voted, that the High Commiſſioner ſhould be deſired to tranſmit their humble Thanks to His Majeſty, for his Care to Vindicate the Honour of the Government, and the Juſtice of the Nation, by granting ſuch a Commiſſion.

Caſe of Glencoe.

The Commiſſioners appointed by the King to enquire into the Slaughter of the Glencoe Men, having ſpent ſome Weeks in that Affair; on June 10. preſented to the Parliament the private Articles agreed in July 1691. between the Earl of Brodalbine, and Major-General Buchan, with ſeveral of the Highland Clans; as alſo the Depoſitions of the Laird of Glengarie and Colonel Hill, containing Informations of High Treaſon againſt the ſaid Earl of Brodalbine; which being Read, after ſome Debate, an Order was made for his Proſecution before the Parliament, and for his Commitment to the Caſtle of Edinburgh. A Fortnight after, the Report of the Commiſſioners was communicated to the Houſe, and the ſame being Read, with the Depoſitions of Witneſſes, the King's Inſtructions, and ſeveral Letters from the Maſter of Staires, Secretary of State, it was Voted by unanimous Conſent, That His Majeſty's Inſtructions to Sir Thomas Levingſtone, and Colonel Hill, contained no Warrant for the Execution of the Glencoe Men; that the ſaid Execution was a Murder; that the Maſter of Staires Letters did exceed the King's Inſtructions, and that Sir Thomas Levingſton had reaſon to give the Orders he had given. On the Second of July the Parliament went upon the ſame Affair, and Colonel Hill and Lieutenant Hamilton were call'd: the firſt Appear'd, was Examin'd and Clear'd; but the Latter not appearing, was order'd to be Apprehended, and afterwards on July the 8*th.* Voted Guilty of the Murder of the Glencoe-Men. Then the Houſe Proceeded againſt the other Perſons that were Actors therein; and agreed upon an Addreſs to His Majeſty that He would ſend them home to be Proſecuted, or not, as His Majeſty ſhould think fit; and that he would take into His Princely Conſideration the Caſe of the Glencoe Men. This Addreſs was on July the 10*th.* recommended to the King's Commiſſioner to be Tranſmitted to His Majeſty, with Duplicates of His Majeſty's Inſtructions, and the Maſter of Staires Letters. At the ſame time His Majeſty's Commiſſioners received the unanimous Thanks of the Parliament, for laying the Diſcovery of the matter of Glencoe before them, and for their careful procedure in their Commiſſion; and a new Protection was Granted to the Glencoe Men.

Vindication of the King's Honour.

On the Firſt of July, the Earl of Brodalbine being brought to the Bar of the Parliament in order to his Tryal, delivered in a Petition, Praying he might be allowed ſome competent time for bringing of Witneſſes from remote Places, and for recovery of ſuch Documents, as he was to make uſe of for his Vindication, both from the Secretaries Office at London, and his Houſe in the Country. The Advocates on both ſides, having been heard upon this Petition, it was put to the Vote, whether the Day for his Lordſhip to give in his Defence, ſhould be the 8*th.* or 15*th.* of the Current Month; and it was carried the 15*th.* and that in the mean time he might raiſe Letters of Exculpation. Then the Indictment againſt him was Read, and he remanded to Priſon. The ſame day the Proceſs of Treaſon, at the Inſtance of the King's Advocate, againſt the Earl of Melfort, and others in France, being call'd, the King's Advocate produced his Warrant from the Privy Council, for raiſing this Proceſs againſt them, and deſired that it might be Recorded. Afterwards the Indictment was Read, and the King's Advocate declared he inſiſted at that time only againſt the Earls of Middleton and Melfort, and Sir Adam Blair, and on that part of the Indictment which recited, that by the Act of Parliament 1693. it was declared Treaſon to be in France after the 1*ſt.* of Auguſt 1693. and therefore craved the Indictment might be found to be Good in Law; which being put to the Vote, it was carried in the Affirmative. The next day the Houſe Paſſed Sentence againſt the Earls of Middleton and Melfort, and Sir Adam Blair, to Forfeit Life and Fortune; and Order'd the reſt who adhered to His Majeſty's Enemies, and were then in France, to be Proſecuted before the Lords of the Juſticiary. On the 15*th.* of July, the Earl of Brodalbine, being again brought to the Bar, begg'd more time to make his Defence, which was granted him till the 25*th.* of the ſame Month; but all the Publick Affairs being happily concluded by the 17*th.* it was moved and agreed to, that the Proceſs of Treaſon againſt him ſhould be continued till the next Seſſion of Parliament: After which His Majeſty's Commiſſioner gave the Parliament Thanks for their Real and Hearty Compliance with His Majeſty's Demands; Recommended to them the Preſervation of the Publick Peace in their ſeveral Countries, and Adjourn'd them till the Seventh of November next.

Whilſt the Parliament of Scotland was Sitting, Mr. Craven, Mr. Burnet, and Mr. Thompſon, Three of the Miniſters in the Synod of Aberdeen, who proteſted againſt the Commiſſion of the late General Aſſembly, were call'd before

After ſome Debate, the Churches of the ſaid Miniſters, were on July the 1ſt. declared to be Vacant; and they debarred from the Exerciſe of their Miniſterial Function, until they had qualified themſelves by taking the Oath of Allegiance to His Majeſty, and Subſcribing the Aſſurance; and Impriſon'd till they gave caution not to go on the North ſide of the River Forth, under the Penalty of 100 l. Sterling. However the ſaid Miniſters were Four Days after ſet at Liberty, upon their ſingle Promiſe not to go beyond that River.

The King returns to England. We now return to England with His Majeſty, who on October the 9th. Embark'd in the Maeſe, on Board the William and Mary Yatch, and the next Day Landed ſafely at Margate, Convoy'd by a Squadron under Command of Sir Cloudeſly Shovel. That Night His Majeſty lay at Canterbury, and on the 11th. came to Kenſington, the People expreſſing a ſingular Joy for His Safe and Glorious Return.

Places and Honours. From the time of his Majeſty's Abſence, theſe Honours and Preferments were well beſtowed. On May 23. John Smith, Eſq; one of the Lords Commiſſioners of the Treaſury, was Sworn of the Privy-Council, and Chriſtopher Muſgrave, Eſq; was Sworn Clerk of the Council in Extraordinary. On June 8*th.* Sir Edward Ward, His Majeſty's Attorney-General, was made Serjeant at Law, and in the Evening was Sworn Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer, and receiv'd his Patent. In his room, Sir Thomas Trevor, on June 11. was Sworn His Majeſty's Attorney-General; and on July 13. John Hawles, Eſq; of Lincolns-Inn, was Sworn His Majeſty's Sollicitor-General. The Parliament Diſſolved. ſame Evening His Majeſty came to Kenſington; He held a Council, and therein Ordered a Proclamation to be Iſſued for Diſſolving the preſent Parliament, and Iſſuing out of Writs for the calling of a New Parliament, to begin at Weſtminſter on Friday, Nov. 22. In the mean time, His Majeſty took a Progreſs, and went firſt to Newmarket on Thurſday, October 17. where He receiv'd

The King's Progreſs. the Compliments of the Univerſity of Cambridge. He went thence to Althrop in Northamptonſhire, the Seat of the Earl of Sunderland, whoſe Counſels and Converſation began to be more and more acceptable to His Majeſty. While He lay here, He made a Viſit to the Earl of Northampton at Caſtle-Aſhby, and to the Earl of Mountague at Boughton; and was Entertain'd at both theſe Places with a Splendid Dinner. From Althrop the King went to Stamford, October 28. and in His way took a View of Burleigh-Houſe, without ſeeing the Owner of it. On October 30. His Majeſty went to Lincoln, and having heard Prayers at the Cathedral, purſued His Journey to Welbeck, the Duke of Newcaſtle's Seat in Nottinghamſhire. Here the Archbiſhop of York, with his Clergy, waited upon His Majeſty on November 2. to Congratulate His happy Succeſs and ſafe Return, expreſſing their Gratitude for His Majeſty's Care of the Church, and for ſhewing Himſelf truly a Defender of the Faith. On November 3. the King left Welbeck, and came that Evening to the Earl of Stamford's Houſe at Broadgate. On November 4. He went to the Lord Brook's at Warwick Caſtle: Next Day He Dined with the Duke of Shrewsbury at Eyeford, and came that Evening to Burford, and three Days after to Woodſtock; from whence, on November 10. His Majeſty came to Oxford, being met by the Duke of Ormond, Chancellor of the Univerſity, Dr. Adams, Vice-Chancellor, with other Doctors and Maſters in their Academical Habits. The King alighted at the Eaſt Gate of the Schools, and paſſed directly to the Theatre, where a Noble Banquet was provided, with great Variety of Muſick. Mr. Codrington, Fellow of All-Souls, Expreſſed the Publick Thanks of the Univerſity, in an Elegant Oration. The Chancellor on his Knees Preſented His Majeſty with a Large Engliſh Bible and Common-Prayer-Book, the Cuts of the Univerſity, and a Pair of Gold-Fring'd Gloves. It was expected that His Majeſty ſhould have ſat down to the Banquet; but whether He was indiſpoſed to eat, or whether diſcouraged by an idle Letter dropt in the Street, and intimating the Deſigns of Poiſon, His Majeſty roſe up, and immediately took Coach for Windſor; declaring as a Reaſon of His ſhort Stay, and His not going to ſee the Colledges, That this was a Viſit of Kindneſs, not of Curioſity, He having ſeen the Univerſity before. 1695.

Meeting of the New Parliament. On Friday, Nov. 22. The Parliament met according to the Writs of Summons, and the King being ſeated on the Throne, the Commons were ſent for up, to whom my Lord Keeper ſignified His Majeſty's Pleaſure, That they ſhould forthwith proceed to the Choice of a Speaker. After which, the Commons return'd to their Houſe, and unanimouſly made Choice of Paul Foley, Eſq; who being Preſented the next Day, His Majeſty did Graciouſly Approve of him, and then made this Speech to Both Houſes.

Paul Foley, Eſq; Speaker.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech. "IT is with great Satisfaction that I Meet you "here this Day, being aſſured of a Good "Diſpoſition in my Parliament, when I have "had ſuch full Proofs of the Affection of my "People, by their Behaviour during my Abſence, and at my Return.

"I was Engaged in this preſent War by the "Advice of My Firſt Parliament; who thought "it Neceſſary for the Defence of Our Religion, "and the Preſervation of the Liberties of Europe. The Laſt Parliament with great Chearfulneſs did Aſſiſt Me to carry it on; and I "cannot doubt but that your Concern for the "Common Safety will oblige you to be unanimouſly zealous in the proſecution of it: And "I am glad that the Advantages which We have "had this Year, give Us a Reaſonable Ground "of hoping for further Succeſs hereafter.

"Upon this Occaſion I cannot but take notice "of the Courage and Bravery which the Engliſh "Troops have ſhewn this laſt Summer; which I "may ſay, has anſwer'd their higheſt Character "in any Age: And it will not be denied, that "without the concurrence of the Valour and "Power of England, it were impoſſible to "put a Stop to the Ambition and Greatneſs of "France.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

"I think it a great Misfortune, that from the "beginning of my Reign, I have been forced to "ask ſo many, and ſuch large Aids of My Peo"ple; and yet I am confident you will agree "with Me in Opinion, That there will be at leaſt "as great Supplies requiſite for carrying on the "War by Sea and Land this Year, as was grant"ed in the laſt Seſſion; the rather, becauſe Our "Enemies are augmenting their Troops, and the "Neceſſity of increaſing Our Shipping does plain"ly appear.

"The Funds which have been given, have pro"ved very deficient.

"The Condition of the Civil Liſt is ſuch, that "it will not be poſſible for Me to ſubſiſt, unleſs "that Matter be taken into your Care.

"And Compaſſion obliges Me to mention the "Miſerable Circumſtances of the French Proteſtants, who ſuffer for their Religion.

"And therefore, Gentlemen, I moſt earneſtly "recommend to you to provide a Supply ſuitable "to theſe ſeveral Occaſions. "I 1695. "I must likewise take notice of a great Difficulty We lie under at this time, by reason of "the ill State of the Coin, the Redress of which "may perhaps prove a further Charge to the Nation; but this is a Matter of such general Concern, and of so very great Importance, that I "have thought fit to leave it entirely to the Consideration of My Parliament.

"I did recommend to the last Parliament the "Forming some good Bill for the Encouragement and Increase of Seamen; I hope you will "not let this Session pass without doing somewhat "in it; and that you will consider of such Laws "as may be proper for the advancement of "Trade, and will have a particular regard to "that of the East-Indies, lest it should be lost to "the Nation. And while the War makes it necessary to have an Army Abroad, I could wish "some Way might be thought of to raise the necessary Recruits, without giving occasion of "Complaint.

"My desire to meet My People in a New Parliament, has made the Opening of this Session "very late; which I hope you will have such "regard to, as to make all possible dispatch of "the great Business before you; and will call "to mind, That by the long Continuance of the "last Session, We did not only lose Advantages "which We might have had at the beginning of "the Campaign, but gave the Enemy such an "Opportunity as might have proved very fatal to "Us. And I am the more concern'd to press this, "because of the great Preparations which the "French make to be early in the Field this "Year.

My Lords,

"I have had such Experience of your Good "Affections; and I have such an entire Satisfaction in the Choice which My People have "made of You, Gentlemen of the House of Commons, "that I promise my self a Happy Conclusion "of this Session, unless you suffer your selves to "be mis-led into Heats and Divisions; which being the only Hope Our Enemies have now left, "I make no doubt but you will entirely disappoint by your Prudence and Love to your Country.

Addresses of the Two Houses.

Both Houses in their respective Addresses, with great Zeal and Unanimity, congratulated the Glorious Success of His Majesty's Arms Abroad, and His Safe Return Home; and likewise return'd His Majesty Thanks for the Trust and Confidence He reposed in their Affections; assuring Him, That they would support His Majesty and His Government against all His Enemies Foreign and Domestick, and effectually assist Him in the prosecution of the present War in which He was engaged for the Safety of England, and Liberty of Europe. The Commons Address being presented by the whole House, His Majesty gave them this Answer.

Gentlemen,

I heartily thank You for the Marks You give Me of Your Affection: Our Interests are inseparable, and there is nothing I wish so much as the Happiness of this Country where God has placed Me.

The next Business of the Commons was to address the King, That He would please to appoint a Day of Fasting and Humiliation for imploring the Blessing of Almighty God upon the Consultations of this present Parliament; and His Majesty was pleased to appoint Wednesday, Dec. 11. to be strictly kept and observed within the Bills of Mortality; and Wednesday 18, in all other Places. Dr. Haley being appointed to preach before the Commons in the Morning; and Dr. Williams in the Afternoon. 1695.

Order for no Written Protections.

The many Protections given to the Servants of Parliament Men, and the taking Men into Custody upon Complaints of the Breach of those Protections, was really become a Grievance to the Subject; and therefore on Nov. 30, it was Ordered, "That all Protections and Written Certificates of the Members of this House be declared void in Law, and be forthwith withdrawn, "and called in, and that none be granted for the "future; and that if any shall be granted by any "Member, such Member shall be liable to the "Censure of this House; and that the Privileges "of their Menial Servants be observed according "to Law: And that if any Menial Servant shall "be arrested and detain'd contrary to Privilege, "He shall (upon Complaint thereof made to the "Speaker) be discharged by Order from him. "And that no Person shall be taken into Custody upon complaint of any Breach of Privileges "of this House, before the Matter be first examined; which Order was not to extend to any "Breach of Privilege upon the Person of any "Member of this House.

Resolutions for Supply.

The next thing considered, was a Supply to be granted to His Majesty, which was referred to a Committee; from which Sir Thomas Littleton reported these Resolutions, which were agreed to by the House. They granted the Sum of Two Millions, Five hundred thousand Pounds Sterling for the Navy: Sixteen thousand, Nine hundred, Seventy and Two Pounds for the Officers of the Two Marine Regiments. Two Millions, Seven Thousand, Eight Hundred Eighty Two Pounds for the Pay of 87440 Men, including Commission and Non-Commission Officers, making up the Horse, Dragoons and Foot, which according to the List of the Land Forces, deliver'd into the House, they had voted necessary for the Service of the Year 1696. And lastly, 500000 l. for the Office of Ordnance, the Pay of the Great Officers, Transports, Hospitals, Contingencies, and other extraordinary Charge of the War: In all, Five Millions, Twenty Four Thousand Eight Hundred Fifty Three Pounds.

Bill for regulating Tryals in Cases of Treason.

The Bill for regulating Tryals in Cases of Treason, and Misprision of Treason, which had been several times lost in the former Parliaments, was again brought into the House of Commons, Nov. 26. and in a short time read three times there, and sent up to the Lords for their Concurrence, by which many Hardships upon the Liberty of the Subject were removed, or mitigated: For it was hereby Enacted, "That all Persons indicted "for High-Treason, or Misprision of it, shall "have a Copy of the Indictment five Days before their Tryal, and shall be admitted to make "their Defence by Counsel learned in the Law, "not exceeding two. That no Person shall be "indicted or attainted, but by the Oaths of two "Lawful Witnesses. That no Person shall be "prosecuted, unless the Indictment be found "within three Years after the Offence committed. "That all Persons indicted shall have Copies of "the Jury two Days before their Tryal; and "shall have like Process to compel their Witnesses to appear for them, as is usually granted to "Witnesses against them. To this Bill the Lords added the Clause they had always insisted upon; "That upon the Tryal of any Peer or Peeress "for Treason or Misprision, all the Peers who "have a Right to sit and vote in Parliament, "shall be duly summoned twenty Days at least "before such Tryal, and shall not vote without "first taking the Oaths appointed by the Act "1° Will. and Mary, and subscribing and repeating 1695. "the Declaration mentioned in the Act made "30 Car. II. which Clauſe was agreed to by the "Commons. It is remarkable, that whilſt this Bill was depending in the Houſe of Commons, the Lord Shaftsbury roſe up in order to ſpeak for it; and having begun his Speech, he ſeemed to be ſo ſurpriz'd, that for a while he could not go on; but having recover'd himſelf, he took occaſion from his very Surprize, to Enforce the Neceſſity of allowing Counſel to Priſoners who were to appear before their Judges, ſince he who was not only innocent and unaccuſed, but one of Their own Members, was ſo daſht when he was to ſpeak before that Auguſt Aſſembly. This Turn of Wit did Service in promoting that Expedient Bill.

"the

Ill State of the Coin.

The Lords were conſidering that part of the King's Speech that related to the ill State of the Coin, and had drawn up an Addreſs, to which in a Conference they deſir'd the Concurrence of the Commons; who choſe rather to proceed in their own Way, by appointing a Committee, who ſhould have Power to conſider of a Fund to make good the Deficiency of the Clipt Money. And here the great Queſtion was, Whether it was neceſſary or expedient to recoin the Silver Money? The Countrey Party held the Negative; the Court Party the Affirmative; and the Arguments were weighty on both ſides. The Reaſons againſt calling in, and recoining the Money were; "That "this was no fit Juncture for it, while the Nati- "on was engaged in a burthenſome and doubt- "ful War, by which the Kingdom had already "greatly ſuffer'd, and of which it grew every Day "more ſenſible. That therefore the People, on "whoſe Good Affection the Government ſo "much depended, ſhould not be provoked by "freſh Grievances, greater than any they had "yet felt, as thoſe would certainly be, that "muſt ariſe from the calling in the Silver Coin. "That if this was done, however Things might "be managed and accommodated at home, it "were impoſſible to maintain either the Com- "merce or the War abroad; for neither the "Merchant could be paid his Bills of Exchange, "nor the Soldier receive his Subſiſtence. That "this was to lay the Ax to the Root, and to dig "up the Foundation of the Government. That "if this Deſign was proſecuted, Trade muſt "ſtand ſtill for want of mutual Payments; whence "ſuch Diſorder and Confuſion would certainly "follow, as would diſcourage and diſhearten the "People in the higheſt meaſure, if not drive "them to a perfect Deſpair, as Deſpair would "to the moſt terrible Extremities. That there- "fore the recoining the Money at this time was "by no means to be attempted without hazard- "ing All.

Arguments for recoining the Silver Money.

'Twas alledged by thoſe of the contrary Opinion, at the Head of whom appear'd Mr. Charles Mountague, Chancellor of the Exchequer, "That "the Miſchief would be fatal, if a preſent Reme- "dy was not found out and apply'd. That by "Reaſon of the ill State of the Coin, the "Change abroad was infinitely to the Nation's "Prejudice. That the Supplies that were rais'd "to maintain the Army would never attain their "End, being ſo much diminiſh'd and devour'd "by the unequal Change, and exorbitant Premi- "ums before they reach'd the Camp. That this "was the unhappy Cauſe that the Guineas ad- "vanc'd to Thirty Shillings, and Foreign Gold "in proportion: That therefore to the Nation's "great loſs, not only the Dutch, but indeed all "Europe ſent that Commodity to this Market, "and would continue to do ſo, till the Nation "ſhould be impoveriſh'd and undone by plenty "of Gold. That we muſt exchange for their "Gold our Goods, or our Silver, till at laſt we 1695. "ſhould have only Guineas to trade withal; "which no body could think our Neighbours "would be ſo kind to receive back at the value "they were at here. That therefore this Diſeaſe "would every Day take deeper root, infect the "very Vitals of the Nation, and if not remedied, "would ſoon become incurable. That our E- "nemies muſt be mightily intimidated by ſo "great an Action, and would ſooner be induc'd "to agree to Honourable Terms of Peace, in "caſe they ſaw us able to ſurmount this Difficul- "ty, by the retrieving the ill State of the Coin, "on which their Hopes of the Nation's ſpeedy "Ruin ſo much depended; and that it would "juſtly create a mighty Eſteem abroad, of the "Greatneſs and Wiſdom of the Parliament of "England, which was able to conquer ſuch an "obſtinate and almoſt inſuperable Evil in ſuch "a Juncture of Affairs.

Theſe Matters being fully debated, the Parliament reſolved to call in, and recoin the Silver-Money, chuſing rather to run the hazard of ſome great Inconveniencies, than by a longer Neglect to expoſe the Kingdom to apparent Ruin. The next Step was to conſider, Whether the ſeveral Denominations of the New Money ſhould have the ſame Weight and Fineneſs as the Old; or, Whether the Eſtabliſh'd Standard ſhould be rais'd? This Queſtion produced many Debates: Thoſe who were for raiſing the Standard, did Argue, "That the "Price of an Ounce of Silver Bullion was ad- "vanced to Six Shillings and Three Pence, and "therefore the Standard ought to be rais'd to an "Equality. That the raiſing the Standard would "prevent the Exportation of our Coin, and the "melting of it down, which of late Years has "been much practiſed, to the great prejudice of "this Kingdom; and that it would encourage "People to bring in their Plate and Bullion into "the Mint." The Court Party, who were for preſerving the Old Standard, urged, "That "as to the Price of Bullion, now rais'd to Six "Shillings and Threepence, it was impoſſible "the Price of Silver could riſe and fall in reſpect "of its ſelf, but the alteration of the Value of "Bullion was merely in relation to Diminiſh'd "Money; for it was ſtill Matter of Fact, That "with Five Shillings and Twopence of New "Mill'd Money, they could buy an Ounce of "Bullion; whilſt thoſe who bought it with Clipt "Pieces, paid Six Shillings Threepence.

Queſtion, Whether the Standard ſhould continue?

As to the Argument of preventing the Exportation of Money by raiſing the Standard, it was anſwer'd, "There was no way poſſible to keep "our Money at home, but by out-trading our "Neighbours; that is, by ſending them more "Commodities, or of greater value than thoſe "we received from them, &c.

Reſolutions about the Coin.

After theſe Debates, the Commons reſolv'd on Dec. 10. "That all Clipt Money be recoined "according to the Eſtabliſh'd Standard of the "Mint, both as to the Weight and Fineneſs. "That the Loſs of ſuch Clipt Money ſhall be "born by the Publick. That a Day be appoint- "ed, after which no Crowns or Half-Crowns be "allowed in any Payment. That another Day "be appointed for all Perſons to bring in their "Clipt Money to be recoined into Mill'd Mo- "ney: And that a Fund be ſettled for ſupplying "the Deficiencies." After this Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer reported the Form of an Addreſs, to deſire His Majeſty to regulate the Currency of Clipt Money, according to the foregoing Reſolutions; which Addreſs being preſented to the King, He cauſed His Royal Proclamation to be iſſued out for that purpoſe. And 1695. the Lords had already Addreſs'd His Majeſty to the ſame Effect.

Some time before, the Commons having conſidered, that the maintaining an Army Abroad occaſioned the Exportation of the Coin, which could not be prevented, but by ſupplying the ſaid Army with Neceſſaries out of this Kingdom; on Dec. 13. Ordered an Addreſs to be preſented to His Majeſty, That He would pleaſe to procure, that all Commodities and Proviſions, that ſhould be Tranſported from England for the Uſe of the Forces in His Majeſty's Pay abroad, might be exempted from any Duty or Exciſe, throughout the Spaniſh and United Netherlands. To which the King Anſwer'd, That what was deſired by the Commons, had been done in a good Meaſure for ſeveral Years; and that he would ſee what could be further done in it.

Bill for regulating Coinage.

The Commons having conſidered the Bill for Regulating the Coinage of the Silver Money, which the Chancellor of the Exchequer had prepared, and preſented to the Houſe on Dec. 17. ordered on Dec. 23. a Clauſe of Loan to be inſerted in it, in favour of ſuch as would advance Money on Credit of the Exchequer in general, transferrable to ſuch Funds as ſhould be ſettled by Parliament, towards making good the Deficiencies of the Clipp'd Money; and likewiſe order'd the ſame Committee to take care, that all Perſons who ſhould bring in Clipp'd Money (above what was for Taxes) ſhould have a Recompence for the ſame. This Bill was amended accordingly, and four days after paſs'd, and ſent up to the Lords for their Concurrence.

On the 31*ſt* of December the Commons reſolv'd to raiſe the 1200000 l. for ſupplying the Deficiency of the Clipp'd Money, by a Duty laid upon all Dwelling-Houſes, except Cottages; to wit, Two Shillings Yearly upon each Houſe; Four Shillings upon every Houſe having Ten Windows; and Eight Shillings upon ſuch Houſes as have Twenty Windows, over and above the ſaid Two Shillings; which Duty was to be paid by the Inhabitants of the ſaid Houſes, and to be continued for the ſpace of Seven Years, and no longer.

The days appointed by the King's Proclamation for putting a Stop to the Currency of Clipp'd Money, were ſo ſhort, that an immediate Stop was thereby put to Trade: So as the Houſe of Commons were obliged in a Grand Committee to conſider the State of the Nation, and how to prevent the Stop of Commerce during the Recoining of the Clipp'd Moneys. After ſome Debates for ſeveral days, the Commons Reſolv'd on Jan. 9. Firſt, That the Recompence for ſupplying the Deficiency of Clipp'd Money, ſhould extend to all Clipp'd Money which was Silver, although of a courſer Allay than the Standard. Secondly, That the Collectors and Receivers of His Majeſty's Aids and Revenues, be enjoined to receive all ſuch Moneys. Thirdly, That a Reward of Five Pounds per Cent. be given to all ſuch Perſons as ſhould bring in either Mill'd or Broad Unclipp'd Money, to be applied in Exchange of the Clipp'd Money throughout the Kingdom. Fourthly, That a Reward alſo of Threepence per Ounce be given to all Perſons who ſhould bring in wrought Plate to the Mint to be recoined. Fifthly, That for the ſooner bringing in the Clipp'd Money to be recoined, any Perſons might pay in their whole next Year's Tax of Four Shillings in the Pound, in the ſaid Clipp'd Money, at one convenient time appointed for that purpoſe. Laſtly, That Commiſſioners be appointed in every County, to pay and diſtribute the Mill'd and Broad Unclipp'd Money, and the New Coin'd Money, and to receive the Clipp'd Money. And at the ſame time appointed a Committee to prepare and bring in a Bill upon the ſaid Reſolutions. This Bill was accordingly preſented, and after a Second Reading on Jan. 21. committed to a Committee of the whole Houſe; who Reſolved, That a further Encouragement be given for bringing in Plate to be Coined, and Broad Money in order to be exchang'd for Clipp'd Money: And that a Clauſe be inſerted in the ſaid Bill, to prevent the Melting down and Exportation of Coin, or any Bullion; and another Clauſe to prohibit the uſe of Plate in Publick Houſes; which at laſt prov'd the beſt Expedient to ſupply the Mints with Bullion. 1695.

The Lords having made ſeveral Amendments to the Bill for Regulating the Coinage of the Silver Money of this Kingdom; moſt of 'em, after ſeveral Debates and Conferences, were diſagreed to by the Commons: Whereupon Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer according to Order preſented to the Houſe another Bill for Remedying the Ill State of the Coin of this Kingdom: Which was receiv'd, and after ſome Amendments, order'd to be Engroſs'd, and ſent up to the Lords, who gave their Concurrence to it.

Addreſs againſt the Scots Eaſt-India Company.

On Dec. 14. the Lords in a Conference communicated to the Commons an Addreſs to His Majeſty, in relation to an injurious Act of Parliament made in Scotland, for Erecting a Company Trading to Africa and the Eaſt-Indies: To which Addreſs the Commons gave their Concurrence; and on the 17*th* they appointed a Committee to examine what Methods were taken for obtaining that Scotch Act; and who were the Subſcribers for Eſtabliſhing that Eaſt-India Company, and who were the Promoters and Adviſers of it. On the ſame Tueſday Afternoon, Both Houſes attended the King with that Addreſs: To which His Majeſty was pleaſed to make this Anſwer; I have been Ill Served in Scotland; but I hope ſome Remedies may be found, to prevent the Inconveniences which may ariſe from this Act.

This Buſineſs purſued in other Reſolutions.

This Buſineſs did not ſtop here: For the Committee appointed by the Commons to examine by what Methods the ſaid Act was obtained, having made their Report, and delivered a Copy of an Oath de Fideli, taken by the Directors of the Scotch Eaſt-India Company, and of the Journal of the Proceedings of the ſaid Directors; and the ſaid Report, Oath, and Journal being Examin'd; as alſo the Petition preſented to the Houſe, by the Engliſh Eaſt-India Company, it was reſolv'd on Jan. 26. "That the Directors of "the Company of Scotland, Trading to Africa "and the Indies, adminiſtring and taking here in "this Kingdom, an Oath de Fideli; and under "colour of a Scoth Act of Parliament, ſtiling "themſelves a Company, and acting as ſuch, "and raiſing Moneys in this Kingdom, for carrying on the ſaid Company, were guilty of a "high Crime and Miſdemeanor; and that the "Lord Bellhaven, William Paterſon, David Nairne, "James Smith, James Cheiſly, William Shepherd, "Robert Blackwood, James Balfour, James Fowlis, Thomas Coutts, Abraham Wilmer, Daniel Van "Mildert, Robert Williamſon, Anthony Merry, Paul "Dominique, Robert Douglas, Thomas Skinner, "Hugh Fraizer, James Bateman, Walter Stewart, "and Joſeph Cohen D' Azevedo, be Impeached of "the ſaid high Crimes and Miſdemeanors." Whilſt a Committee was drawing up the Impeachments, Roderick Mackenzee endeavour'd to ſuppreſs the Evidence he had given againſt the ſaid Perſons, for which he was order'd to be taken into Cuſtody; but he made his Eſcape; nor could he be apprehended, although the King, at the Requeſt of the Commons on Feb. 13. had iſſued out a Proclamation for that purpoſe. However, the worſt of this Affair, was, That the Commons having ſeveral times in a Grand Committee conſider'd the State of the Nation, in relati-

1695. lation to Trade; and Reſolved, Firſt, "That a "Council of Trade be eſtabliſhed by Act of Par- Reſolutions for Trade. "liament, with Powers for the more effectual "Preſervation of the Trade of this Kingdom. "Secondly, That the Commiſſioners conſtituting "the ſaid Council, be Nominated by Parliament. "Thirdly, That none of the Commiſſioners be "of this Houſe. "Fourthly, That the ſaid Com- "miſſioners ſhould take an Oath, acknowledging "that King William was Rightful and Lawful King "of this Realm; and that the late King James "had no Right or Title thereunto; and that no "other Perſon has any Right or Title to the "Crown, otherwiſe than according to the Act "of Settlement, made in the Firſt Year of His "Majeſty's Reign, &c." And theſe and Ten more Reſolutions relating to the ſaid Council, being Reported to the Houſe on Jan. 13. the Firſt and Second, with ſome others, were indeed approv'd, but ſeveral others, and eſpecially the Fourth, whereby King William was to be Acknowledg'd Rightful and Lawful King; and which occaſion'd a warm Debate, were rejected by the Houſe. And a Bill was ordered to be brought in upon the Reſolutions agreed unto.

Ways and Means. Amidſt theſe Important Affairs, the Commons did not forget the Ways and Means of raiſing the Neceſſary Aids for the War. They Tax'd Land Four Shillings in the Pound, and laid the ſame Impoſition upon all Perſonal Eſtates, and upon all Offices and Employments of Profit other than Military Offices in the Army, Navy, and Ordnance. They proceeded to theſe further Reſolutions. 1. "To enlarge the Times for Per- "ſons to come in and purchaſe certain Annui- "ties, mentioned in a former Act. 2. To con- "tinue the Duties formerly charg'd on Low "Wines and Spirits of the Firſt Extraction. 3. "To continue the Duties upon all Wines, Vine- "gar, and Tobacco, from the 24th of June, 1698. "to 29th Sept. 1701. 4. To continue the Du- "ties upon all Eaſt-India Goods and Manufa- "ctures, and upon all Wrought Silks, and ſeve- "ral other Goods, from the 10*th* of Nov. 1697. "to 29*th Sept.* 1701. 5. To ſettle a Fund, by "continuing the Duties upon Salt, for the Pay- "ment of Intereſt, not exceeding 7 l. per Cent. "redeemable by Parliament. And 6. Acts paſſed. On Tueſday Jan. 21. His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to, 1. An Act for Enlarging the Times to come in, and Purchaſe certain Annuities therein mentioned; and for continuing the Duties formerly charg'd on Low Wines, or Spirits of the Firſt Extraction, for carrying on the War againſt France. 2. An Act for Regulating of Tryals in caſes of Treaſon, and Miſpriſion of Treaſon. 3. An Act for Remedying the ill ſtate of the Coin of the Kingdom. 4. An Act for Preventing Charge and Expence in Elections of Members to ſerve in Parliament. 5. An Act for Enabling Sir Thomas Parkins, Bart. to ſell certain Meſſuages, Lands and Hereditaments in Huby and Eaſingwould in the County of York; and for Settling other Lands and Hereditaments of greater Value in lieu thereof. 6. An Act to enable Sir Thomas Pope Blount, Bart. to make a Settlement upon the Marriage of his Eldeſt Son. 7. An Act for Veſting the Manner of Madeley in the County of Salop, in Truſtees, for certain Purpoſes therein mentioned. 8. An Act for Enabling the Lady Katherine Fane to ſell the Reverſion of certain Fee-Farm Rents, given to her by her Grandfather, John Bence, Eſq. 9. An Act for Enabling Thomas Stoner, Eſq; (Son and Heir of John Stoner, Eſq; Deceaſed) to make a Jointure and Settlement of his Eſtate in Marriage, notwithſtanding his Minority. 10. An Act for veſting ſeveral Meſſuages and Lands belonging to Samuel Powell, Eſq; in Truſtees for Payment of his Debts. 1695.

There was another Affair depending in this Seſſion, which very ſenſibly concern'd His Majeſty. The Earl of Portland had begg'd of His Majeſty the Lordſhips of Denbigh, Bromfield, and Yale, and other Lands in the Principality of Wales; which His Majeſty readily Granted to him and his Heirs for ever: The Warrant coming to the Lords of the Treaſury, the Gentlemen of the County upon ſhort Notice were heard on May 10. before their Lordſhips. Sir William Williams then alledg'd, That theſe Lordſhips were the Ancient Demeſnes of the Prince of Wales; That the Welſh were never Subject to any but God and the King. That in the Statute for Granting Fee-Farm Rents, there was an Exception of the Rents belonging to the Principality of Wales; which Imported, That the Parliament took thoſe Revenues to be unalienable; That upon Creation of a Prince of Wales, there were many Acknowledgments payable out of thoſe Lordſhips; and though there were at preſent no Prince of Wales, yet he hop'd to ſee one of the King's own Body, &c. Sir Roger Puleſton alledg'd, That the Revenues of theſe Lordſhips did Support the Government of Wales, by paying the Judges and other Officers their ſtated Salaries; and if given away there would be a Failure of Juſtice. And Mr. Price, a Gentleman of great Parts, (ſince one of the Barons of the Exchequer) did boldly urge, "That the Grant was of a large Extent, "being Five Parts in Six of a whole County, "which was too great a Power for any Foreign "Subject to have; and that the People of the "Country were too great to be Subject to any "Foreigner: "Let it be conſidered, (ſays he) Can it be for His Majeſty's Honour or Intereſt, (when the People hear this and underſtand it,) That He daily gives away the Revenues of His Crown, and what is more, the Perpetuity of them to his Foreign Subjects? Good Kings after a long and chargeable War were wont to tell their People, That they were Sorry for the Hardſhips the Nation underwent by long War and heavy Taxes; and that now they would Live upon their own: But it is to be fear'd, if Grants are made ſo large and ſo frequent, there would be nothing for the King or His Succeſſors to call their own to Live upon. He concluded thus: It is to be hop'd your Lordſhips will conſider, That we had but one Day's Notice of this Attendance, and muſt come therefore very much unprovided; yet we doubt not, theſe Hints and broken Thoughts we have offer'd to your Lordſhips, you will, by your great Judgments, improve, whereby the ill Conſequences of this Grant may truly be repreſented to His Majeſty. The Lord Godolphin, the Firſt Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, ask'd for Satisfaction, Whether the Earl of Leiceſter had not theſe Lordſhips in Grant to him in Queen Elizabeth's time? Sir Robert Cotton anſwered, He believ'd he could give the beſt Account in that Caſe; That the Earl of Leiceſter hae but one of thoſe Lordſhips; and that was Denbigh: That he was ſo Oppreſſive to the Gentry of the Country, that he occaſion'd them to take up Arms, and to oppoſe him; for which, Three or Four of his (Sir Robert Cotton's) Relations were hang'd; but that it ended not there, for the Quarrel was kept ſtill on foot, and the Earl glad to be in Peace, and to Grant it back to the Queen; ſince which time it had ever been in the Crown. Whereupon the Lord Godolphin ſaid, Grants to the Earl of Portland. Offenſive to the Gentry of Wales.

1695. They had offer'd many weighty Reasons, which they should represent to His Majesty. From the Treasury the Gentlemen of Wales attended the Grant to the Privy-Seal, where their Reasons and Complaints against it were heard and receiv'd with all Candor and Goodness. Yet notwithstanding all this, the said Grant being only superseded, but not recalled, Sir Thomas Grosvener, Sir Richard Middleton, Sir John Conway, Sir Robert Cotton, Sir William Williams, Sir Roger Puleston, Edward Vaughan, Edward Brereton, and Robert Price, Esq; address'd themselves by Petition to the Commons. Upon this Occasion the same Mr. Price, a Member of that House, made a Memorable Speech; wherein he said, "That this Petition, though subscribed by a few Hands, had "the approbation of many Thousands who were "not influenced by their own Interest, but acted "for the Honour of the Crown, and Welfare of "the British Nation. That if he could conceive "how the Glory and Grandeur of England was, "or could be upheld by a poor Landless Crown, "and a miserable necessitous People, he could "be then easily persuaded to believe that His Majesty was well advised to grant away all the "Revenues of the Crown; and that His Government thereby would be well secured, and His "People best protected, when they had little or "nothing left; but he was sure they were not "English, but Foreign Politicians, who might "revere the King, and yet hate His People. "That the Kings of England always reigned best "when they had the Affections of their Subjects, "of which they were secure when the People "were sensible the King was entirely in their Interest, and lov'd the English Soil as well as the "People's Money, &c." When he had represented to 'em the Nature of that mighty Grant to this Noble Lord, the Ill Consequences that must attend the Publick, and more particularly the Dominion of Wales, and especially the County of Denbigh, by the passing of it, he concluded thus: "I must needs confess that my Thoughts "are troubled with strange Apprehensions of our "deplorable State: We are in a Confederacy "in War, and some of those Confederates our "Enemies in Trade, though planted amongst "us; some of the King's Council; some in the "Army; and the Common Traders have possess'd themselves of the Out-Skirts of this great "City: We find some or other of them naturaliz'd, and others made Denizens: Every Parliament we find endeavours for a General Naturalization, and that warmly solicited from "Court. We see our Good Coin all gone, and "our Confederates openly coining base Money "of Dutch Alloy for us. We see most Places of "Power and Profit given to Foreigners. We "see our Confederates in Conjunction with the "Scotch, to ruin our English Trade. We see the "Revenues of the Crown daily given away to "one or other, who make sale of them, and "transmit their Estates elsewhere: We do not "find any of them buy Lands or Estates amongst "us; but what they can get from us, they secure "in their own Countrey. How can we hope "for Happy Days in England, when this Great "Lord, and the other Foreigners, (though Naturaliz'd) are in the English, and also in the "Dutch Councils? If these Strangers, though "now Confederates, should be of different Interests, as most plainly they are in point of "Trade, to which Interest is it to be supposed "those Great Foreign Counsellors and Favourites would adhere? So that I foresee that "when we are reduced to extream Poverty, (as "now we are very near it) we are to be supplanted by our Neighbours, and become a Colony to the Dutch.

"I shall make no severe Remarks on this Great "Man, for his Greatness makes us little, and "will make the Crown both Poor and Precarious: And when God shall please to send us a "Prince of Wales, he may have such a Present "of a Crown made him, as a Pope did to King "John, who was firnam'd Sans Terre, and was "by His Father, King Henry the Second, made "Lord of Ireland: Which Grant was confirm'd "by the Pope, who sent Him a Crown of Peacocks Feathers, in derision of His Power, and "the Poverty of His Revenue. I would have us "to consider, that we are Englishmen, and must, "like good Patriots, stand by our Country, and "not suffer it to become tributary to Strangers. "We have rejoiced that we have beat out of this "Kingdom Popery and Slavery; and do now "with as great Joy entertain Socinianism "and Poverty; and yet we see our Properties "daily given away, and our Liberties must soon "follow.

— "I desire Redress rather than Punishment, "therefore I shall neither move for an Impeachment against this Noble Lord, nor for the Banishment of him, but shall only beg that he "may have no Power over us, nor we any Dependance upon him: And so conclude with this "Motion, That an Address be made to His Majesty, to stop the Grant that is passing to the "Earl of Portland, of the Lordships of Denbigh, Bromfield and Yale, and other Lands in the Principality of Wales, and that the same be not "granted but by Consent of Parliament.

This Stout and Eloquent Speech made so great an Impression, that Mr. Price's Motion was carried by an unanimous Consent, and on Jan. 22. this Address was presented to the King by the Speaker, attended by the whole House.

May it please Your Most Excellent Majesty,

"We Your Majesty's Most Dutiful and Loyal "Subjects, the Knights, Citizens and Burgesses "in Parliament assembled, humbly lay before "Your Majesty, That whereas there is a Grant "passing to William Earl of Portland and his Heirs, "of the Manors of Denbigh, Bromfield and Yale, "and divers other Lands in the Principality of "Wales, together with several Estates of Inheritance, enjoyed by many of Your Majesty's "Subjects, by virtue of Ancient Grants from the "Crown. Address of the Commons.

"That the said Manors, with the large and "extensive Regalities, Powers and Jurisdictions "to the same belonging, are of great Concern "to Your Majesty and the Crown of this Realm: "And that the same have been usually annext to "the Principality of Wales, and settled on the "Princes of Wales for their Support: And that a "great number of Your Majesty's Subjects in "those Parts hold their Estates by Royal Tenure, "under great and valuable Compositions, Rents, "Royal Payments and Services to the Crown "and Princes of Wales, and have by such Tenure great Dependance on Your Majesty and "the Crown of England, and have enjoy'd great "Privileges and Advantages with their Estates "under such Tenure.

"We therefore most humbly beseech Your Majesty to put a stop to the passing this Grant to "the Earl of Portland of the said Manors and "Lands; and that the same may not be disposed "from the Crown but by Consent of Parliament. For that such Grant is in diminution of "the Honour and Interest of the Crown, by "placing in a Subject such large and extensive "Royalties, Powers and Jurisdictions, which "ought only to be in the Crown, and will sever that Dependance which so great a num-

"ber

1695. "ber of Your Majesty's Subjects in those Parts "have on Your Majesty and the Crown, by rea- "son of their Tenure, and may be to their great "Oppression in those Rights which they have "purchased and hitherto enjoyed with their E- "states, and also an Occasion of great Vexation "to many of Your Majesty's Subjects, who have "long had the Absolute Inheritance of several "Lands (comprehended in the said Grant to the "Earl of Portland) by Ancient Grants from the "Crown.

His Majesty in Answer was pleased thus to express Himself.

Gentlemen,

I have a Kindness for my Lord Portland, which he has deserved of Me by long and faithful Services; but I should not have given him these Lands, if I had imagined the House of Commons could have been concerned; I will therefore recall the Grant, and find some other way of shewing My Favour to Him.

Acts passed.

On Thursday, Feb. 13, His Majesty went to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to, 1. An Act for granting to His Majesty an Aid of Four Shillings in the Pound for One Year, for carrying on the War against France. 2. An Act to prevent False and Double Returns of Members to serve in Parliament. 3. An Act for the more easie Recovery of Small Tythes. 4. An Act to enable Anthony Earl of Kent, and Henry Gray his Son and Heir apparent, to make a Jointure for Jemima, Wife of the said Henry Gray. 5. An Act to enable the Lord Francis Pawlett to charge his Estate with Provisions for his Younger Children. 6. An Act for Vesting the Estate late of Sir Nicholas Stoughton, and Sir Lawrence Stoughton, Baronets, deceas'd, in Trustees, to be sold for Payment of their Debts, and raising Portions for the Daughters of the said Sir Nicholas Stoughton. 7. An Act to enable Richard Haynes, Esq; to settle a Jointure on his own Wife, and to exchange Lands with the Trustees of Thomas Stevens, Esq; deceas'd. 6. An Act for enabling Trustees to sell part of the Estate of Edward Warner, deceas'd, for Payment of his Debts, and for preserving the rest for the benefit of his Heirs. 9. An Act to enable John Aunger an Infant, and his Mother, to make a Lease of his Estate for the Improvement thereof. 10. An Act to enable Trustees to sell part of the Manor of Barkhamsted, and to pay off the Incumbrances charged upon the same, and to lay out the Overplus in an Estate to be settled, as the said Manor is now vested.

The horrid Assassination Plot.

And now broke out the Horrid Conspiracy of Assassinating the King's Person; a Villany that was first laid beyond the Seas: For Capt. Waugh of Brentford, who in Nov. 1694. was sent over by the Jacobites to concert their Affairs in France, addresses to Col. Parker, Mr. Caryl, and other Confederates of that Party; who telling him, The French were not yet at leisure to furnish them with so many Men as were desir'd for the Invasion, they fell upon what they thought would more speedily accomplish the Restoration of their Master, and that was the taking off King William. These Persons had been long in the Secret, and had agreed upon the Methods, but because many of the Jacobites abhorred such a Black and Detestable Enterprize; and even others refus'd to engage in it, unless they had a Special Order; a Commission must be had from the Abdicated King for the doing of it, under the Phrase of Attacking the Prince of Orange in his Winter Quarters. Now least the Year 1695, should be left without putting this Wicked Design in execution, Mr. Waugh was sent into England from the Court of St. Germains, to give the Jacobites here Assurance, that those who would engage in the Assassination, should have such a Commission sent them as was desired; and those who were for the Invasion only, should have their Spirits kept up with the hopes of a Powerful Assistance from France, as soon as the Blow was given. And Major Crosby came over with assurance, as was deposed by Sir John Fenwick, in a Paper annexed to his Lady's Petition for his Reprieve; That he saw the Commission sign'd, and under Seal in France: That it was sent away before him, and if not already come, he was certain it was upon the Road, and would be here in a few Days. This was privately communicated to the Jacobites, in order to cut off King William before He went to Holland; but Providence convey'd His Majesty safe thither, and home again. 1695.

At His Majesty's Return they carry'd on the Double Plot of Invasion and Assassination; several Meetings were appointed and held by the Ringleaders of the Party; particularly in May 1695, at the Old King's Head Tavern in Leaden-hall-street, London; there met there the Earl of Aylsbury, the Lord Montgomery, Sir John Friend, Sir William Perkins, Sir John Fenwick, Mr. Charnock, Capain Porter, Mr. Cook, and Mr. Goodman: There they consulted on the best way to restore the late King, and all agreed that the most proper Method was, to send a Special Messenger to His Majesty, and desire Him to procure of the French King Ten Thousand Men: Mr. Charnock was the Person they pitch'd upon to manage this Affair; who said, He would not go on a Foolish Errand, and therefore would know what the Company would do, if Foreign Forces could be procured? Whereupon they all unanimously promis'd, That if King James would come over with such a number of Men as was desir'd, they would meet Him at the Head of Two Thousand Horse, where-ever He would appoint them. At the latter end of June they had another Meeting, where, after many Discourses upon that Subject, Mr. Charnock received a further Confirmation of their Resolutions, and thereupon took his Journey into France.

The Invasion being thus promoted, that the Assassination might keep pace with it, some of the Conspirators calling to mind, that nothing of that kind could be attempted, without a Commission from King James to do it, (which Crosby said was coming;) Captain Porter and Mr. Goodman communicated this Scruple to Sir George Barclay, who was then in England, and upon his Departure for France; telling him what Difficulties they laboured under for want of a Commission; and that a longer delay of sending it over, would certainly put a Stop to the Affair. Sir George not only approves, but commends the Design; and that such a hopeful Project might not miscarry, promises to use all his Interest at St. Germains, that the Commission might no longer be wanting. The beginning of August, 1695. brings Mr. Charnock again to London, with the unwelcome News, That the King of France was not in a Condition to spare King James so many Men; which being communicated to the Party, the Design was laid aside till Winter.

But notwithstanding this positive Answer, the French at the same time were taking such Measures as might suit with the Jacobites Request, tho' they durst not trust them with the Secret: Nay, not King James Himself; till a Squadron of Men of War, and near Four Hundred Transport-Ships were fitted out; and the French Army, consisting of Thirty Battalions, were ready to embark: and Money and Directions sent His Majesty, to go on Board, and take Possession of England.

It

1695. In December, 1695. Sir George Barclay, who had formerly been a General Officer, and was then in France an Officer in King James's Guards, came over into England; and brought with him a Commiſſion from the late King, To attack and ſeize the Prince of Orange in his Winter-Quarters; or, as others report, to levy War upon the Prince of Orange, and all his Adherents. Before him, with him, or after him, Two and twenty of King James's Guards and Officers, who had all Inſtructions to obey the Orders of Sir George, came alſo into England.

Sir George Barclay and his Men being arriv'd at London, they endeavour'd to ſtrengthen their Party by the Addition of Major Lowick, Mr. Knightley, Mr. Bertram, Mr. Rookwood, Mr. La Rue, Mr. Goodman, Captain Porter, Chambers, Durant, Cranburn, Kendrick, Grimes, and Waugh; ſome of which were engaged in the Aſſaſſination the Year before. Thoſe that came from France knew not the Particulars of what they were ſent about, being kept in a blind Obedience to Barclay's Orders; but ſome in England were privy to the whole Deſign: And tho' ſome of them ſtartled at its firſt being propos'd to them, yet the Authority of King James's Commiſſion, and their imaginary Proſpects of large Rewards at His Return, made them conſent to hazard their Lives in it. Several Conſultations were held, and ſeveral Ways propos'd to effect what they aim'd at: Some were for Seizing His Majeſty, and carrying Him alive into France; and to that purpoſe a Feint was made, That a Caſtle on the Sea-ſide was ſecur'd, to detain the King, till a Ship was ready to Tranſport Him over: But the more wicked among them, that underſtood what was meant by Seizing the Prince of Orange's Perſon, laughed at this as a meer Chimera. Others propos'd to kill His Majeſty at Kenſington, by attacking His Guards, and forcing His Palace in the Dead of Night: But this, upon weighing the Difficulties, was found wholly impracticable. Others again were for Murdering the King, as He came on Sunday to St. James's Chappel: For which purpoſe, Forty Men well Arm'd were to attack His Majeſty's Guards, (which before the Diſcovery of the Plot did not exceed Twenty Five;) whilſt Six Men on foot ſhould ſhut Hide-Park Gate, and the reſt Aſſaſſinate His Majeſty. It was propoſed alſo, to kill the Coach-Horſes as they were entring into the Park; that the Paſſage being ſtopt, the Guards might not be able to come up till the Aſſaſſines had done their Work. Another Propoſal was to Murder the King as He returned from Hunting, in a narrow Lane by a Wood-ſide near Richmond, leading to the Thames, on the other ſide the Water, about a Hundred and fifty Paces long; in which there is a Gate, that when ſhut hinders Coaches and Horſes from coming that way. One of the Conſpirators was ſent to view this Ground, and another to ſurvey the Lane above-mentioned; but Sir George Barclay, the chief Director of this wicked Enterprize, did not approve that Place; and ſo that Project was alſo laid aſide. At laſt they all fix'd upon a Place between Turnham-Green and Brentford, in a Mooriſh Bottom, where there is a Bridge, and divers Roads that croſs one another: On the North-ſide there is a Road which goes round Brentford, and on the South, a Lane that leads to the River; ſo that Paſſengers may come thither ſeveral Ways. After you have paſs'd the Bridge the Road grows narrow, having on one ſide a Foot-path, and on the other a high thick Hedge; here the barbarous Parricide was to be committed. And indeed, all Circumſtances conſider'd, a fitter Place could hardly have been found, for His Majeſty often return'd late from Hunting, and uſually paſt thro' this Lane after His Landing at Queens-Ferry, with no greater Attendance than Five or Six of His Guards. It was alſo His Majeſty's Cuſtom to enter the Ferry-Boat in His Coach, and as ſoon as He landed on this ſide the Water, the Coach drove on without expecting the reſt of his Guards, who could not croſs the Thames till the Boat return'd to Surrey-ſide to bring them over; and ſo the reſt of his Guards could not have come to His Aſſiſtance. For this purpoſe, the Conſpirators were divided into Three Parties, and were to make their Approaches Three ſeveral Ways: One of which was to Attack the Guards in the Front, the other in the Rear, whilſt Ten or Twelve of the bloodieſt amongſt them were to Aſſaſſinate His Majeſty in His Coach.

Several Projects of Villany.

The 15*th*. of February was the Day appointed to act this barbarous Tragedy; and the Conſpirators having long kept Two Men at Kenſington, to watch the King's going to Hunt, which was commonly every Saturday; one of theſe Orderly Men (for ſo they call'd them) brought them word, that the King did not go abroad that Day. This Diſappointment was ſome Alarm to their Fears of a Diſcovery; and thereupon Plouden, Kendrick, and Sherburn, began to be timorous, declin'd the Action, and withdrew themſelves. But the boldeſt of the Plotters, Sir George Barclay, Sir William Perkins, Captain Porter, and Mr. Goodman, had another Meeting; and there reſolv'd to execute their bloody Project on Saturday, February the 21*ſt*. That Morning was ſpent in an eager Expectation of the News, that the King was gone abroad; but inſtead of that Account, Keys, one of their Orderly Men at Kenſington, brought advice, That the Guards were all come back in a foam, and that there was a Muttering among the People, That a Damnable Plot was diſcover'd. This aſtoniſhing News alarm'd and diſpers'd all the Conſpirators, and drove them to ſhift for themſelves by a ſpeedy Flight.

The Day appointed for Aſſaſſination of the King.

Nor were Keys's Report, and their Apprehenſions Groundleſs: For the Plot, and every ſtep of it from time to time, had been diſcover'd by Richard Fiſher, and ſomething of it by Mr. Grimes, to the Earl of Portland. Fiſher had his knowledge of it from Harriſon the Prieſt, who took him to be one of their Party; and Grimes had ſome dark Hints from another: But both refuſing to give his Lordſhip the Names of the Conſpirators, little Credit was given to their Informations, till they were confirm'd by other Teſtimonies.

The Plot diſcovered.

Mr. Pendergraſs, who was wholly ignorant of the Deſign till he was ſent for to London, being ſtruck with horror at the firſt Propoſal of it, even then took up a Reſolution to ſave His Majeſty's Life; though the better to manage his intended Diſcovery, he ſeem'd willing to engage in the Helliſh Enterprize. This Gentleman on the 14*th* of February at Night went to the Earl of Portland, and being admitted to Privacy with his Lordſhip, though wholly a Stranger, without further Addreſs, accoſted his Lordſhip with this ſurprizing Requeſt; Pray, my Lord, perſuade the King to ſtay at Home To-morrow; for if He goes abroad to Hunt, He will be Murder'd. The ſame Night, though late, he was introduc'd to His Majeſty, and diſcovered the whole Plot; and his whole Deportment ſhewing him to be a Man of Honour, a great Streſs was laid upon his Information.

Chiefly by Mr. Pendergraſs.

The next day after, Mr. De la Rue made the ſame Diſcovery; which he would have done before, but that his Friend Brigadier Lewſon, who deſign'd to introduce him to the King, was gone out of Town. Upon his Return to London, Brigadier

Mr. De la Rue.

1695. gadier Lewſon acquainted the King, That Mr. De la Rue had inform'd him of a Deſign carrying on to Aſſaſſinate His Majeſty; and propos'd a way, if the King thought fit, how all the Conſpirators might be taken in Arms. Though Pendergraſs and De la Rue acted upon a ſeparate Bottom, yet they punctually agreed in all the Circumſtances of the Conſpiracy; which rendred their Diſcovery unqueſtionable: But yet both peremptorily refus'd to Name the Conſpirators; which might have been of fatal Conſequence, if the Earl of Portland had not found the happy Expedient to prevent it, by perſuading his Majeſty to give himſelf the Trouble of examining them ſeparately in His Cloſet. The King having accordingly on Feb. 21. examin'd Mr. Pendergraſs before the Earl of Portland, and the Lord Cuts; and Mr. De la Rue, before the ſame Earl and Brigadeer Lewſon, His Majeſty ſhew'd himſelf extremely well ſatiſfied in the Truth of their Diſcoveries; and in a very obliging manner expreſt His Reſentment for their Generoſity, in the great Care and Zeal they ſhew'd for the Preſervation of His Life, and the Safety of the Kingdom; and at laſt, gave them ſuch unanſwerable Reaſons, why as Men of Honour and Lovers of their Country they ſhould compleat their Duty and Affection, by naming the Conſpirators, as quite overcame their former Unwillingneſs; and prevail'd with them, to tell the Names of the Aſſaſſins, under the Promiſe of not being made uſe of as Evidences. But not many days after, Mr. Pendergraſs hearing that Mr. Porter, who engaged him in the Plot, had, by an allowable Stratagem, been frighted into a Diſcovery, and Accuſed him; he thought himſelf diſcharg'd from any Obligation of Honour in concealing it: and therefore afterwards came in as an Evidence at Charnock's Trial.

Murder of the King to have been ſeconded by an Invaſion.

This execrable Murder of the King was to have been ſeconded by a dreadful Invaſion of the Kingdom: New Levies had been made in France this Winter; and a great Number of Forces were drawn toward Dunkirk and Calais, which gave no ſmall Umbrage to the Confederates, and eſpecially to the Dutch, who feared thoſe Troops were to Inſult their Coaſts with the Shipping prepar'd for them. But the Deſign was quickly unravell'd; for towards the beginning of February, it was a publick Diſcourſe in France, That His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty was now fully reſolved to re-eſtabliſh King James; and had concerted Meaſures ſo well, that nothing remain'd but a fair Wind, and a few Days to compleat the Glorious Work. And indeed the Poſture of Affairs in England ſeem'd favourable enough for ſuch a daring Enterprize: For at this time a very inconſiderable Number of Troops were left in England; the great Ships, that were ſome Months before returned from the Mediterranean with Admiral Ruſſel, were laid up; and ſuch as were fitted out, had Orders to ſail (with a great Fleet of Merchant-Men) to the Streights, in order to enable Sir George Rook to defend that Paſſage againſt the Thoulon Fleet.

K. James at Calais in Expectation of Succeſs.

On February the 18*th*. King James came in a Poſt-Calaſh to Calais; and immediately upon His Arrival, the Troops, Artillery, and Stores, were order'd to be put on Board with the utmoſt Diligence; whilſt the Signal was impatiently expected from the Jacobites in England, to ſet Sail. And ſo confidently ſure they were in France of a ſucceſsful Expedition, that the Duke of Orleans urg'd it as an Argument to the Duke of Savoy, to make his ſeparate Peace, before the total overthrow of the Confederates, which of Neceſſity muſt attend the Reſtoration of King James. Upon the firſt News of King James's coming to Calais, the Duke of Wirtemberg diſpatch'd one of his Aids de Camp to King William, to give His Majeſty Notice of it; and to Acquaint Him, That the Duke had ſtopp'd all the Ships in the Harbour and Canal of Oſtend, as well as of Bruges, in order to Tranſport the Forces under his Command, for His Majeſty's Service: And that in caſe he did not quickly hear from His Majeſty, he would run the hazard of bringing them over; which he accordingly did with great Affection and Honour. This Meſſenger narrowly eſcaping the French at Sea, got to the Engliſh Court on Feb. 22. And immediately after, the King received other Expreſſes from the Duke of Bavaria, and the Prince of Vaudemont, who were then at Bruſſells. 1695.

Proclamation againſt the Traytors.

King William now having a perfect knowledge of the Double Blow from Abroad and at Home, on Febr. 23. Publiſh'd his Proclamation, To Diſcover, Take, and Apprehend James Duke of Berwick, Sir George Barclay, Major Lowick, George Porter, Captain Stow, Captain Walbank, Captain James Courtney, Lieutenant Sherburn, Brice Blair, —— Dinant, —— Chambers, —— Boiſe, George Higgens, and his two Brothers, Sons to Sir Thomas Higgens, —— Davis, Cardell Goodman, —— Crambourne, —— Keys, —— Pendregraſs, —— Bryerly, —— Trevour, Sir George Maxwell, —— Durance a Fleming, Chriſtopher Knightley, Lieutenant King, —— Holmes, Sir William Perkins, and —— Rookwood, as Wicked and Traiterous Perſons, who had entred into a horrid and deteſtable Conſpiracy, to Aſſaſſinate and Murder His Majeſty's Sacred Perſon, &c. With a Promiſe of one Thouſand Pounds Reward for every Offender that ſhould be taken and brought to Juſtice. The Forces in England were ordered to be in a Readineſs to march; a Train of Artillery was prepar'd to attend them. Admiral Ruſſel repair'd immediately to Deal, to take upon him the Command of the Fleet; which by a particular Providence had been detain'd many Weeks in the Downs by contrary Winds, and which was ſoon reinforc'd by other Men of War from the River, and Twelve Dutch Ships from Spithead: So that in Five or Six days time, this induſtrious Admiral had near Sixty Men of War; with which he ſtood over directly for the Coaſts of Calais and Dunkirk, and ſtruck Terror and Amazement on the Enemy, who could now truſt to nothing but their Harbours.

Immediately after the Royal Proclamation was out, Mr. George Hains, one of the Perſons that was ſent out of France, to obey the Orders of Sir George Barclay, and was actually engag'd in the Aſſaſſination-Plot, reſign'd himſelf to Sir William Trumbal; and confeſs'd the Double Deſigns, tho' he was not able to tell the particular Circumſtances that were to attend them. So that every Day producing freſh Evidences of the Jacobite Conſpiracy, the King thought it time to communicate the Diſcovery of it to the Two Houſes. Hence, on Monday, February the 24*th*. the King, with uſual Solemnity, came to the Houſe of Peers; and ſending for the Commons, gave the Royal Aſſent to, 1. An Act for Taking, Examining, and Stating the Publick Accounts. 2. An Act for Repairing the High-Ways, between the City of London and Town of Harwich in the County of Eſſex. 3. An Act for Naturalizing of Henry de Naſſau, and other Children of Henry de Naſſau, Seignior de Overquerque. 4. An Act to enable John Fowne, Eſq; to Sell certain Lands in the County of Devon, which were ſettled on his Marriage; and to Settle other Lands of an equal Value to the ſame Uſes. And afterwards His Majeſty was pleaſed to make this Speech to Both Houſes.

The King communicates his Deliverance to the Two Houſes.

King's Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I Am come hither this Day upon an Extraordinary Occaſion, which might have proved "Fatal, if it had not been diſappointed by the "Singular Mercy and Goodneſs of God; and may "now, by the Continuance of the ſame Providence, and Our own Prudent Endeavours, be "ſo Improved, as to become a ſufficient Warning to Us, to provide for Our Security againſt "the Pernicious Practices and Attempts of Our "Enemies.

"I have received ſeveral concurring Informations of a Deſign to Aſſaſſinate Me, and that "our Enemies at the ſame time are very forward "in their Preparations for a ſudden Invaſion of "this Kingdom; and have therefore thought it "neceſſary to loſe no time in acquainting My "Parliament with thoſe Things in which the "Safety of the Kingdom, and the Publick Welfare are ſo nearly concern'd, that I aſſure My "Self nothing will be omitted on Your Part, "which may be thought proper for Our preſent "or future Security.

"I have not been wanting to give the neceſſary Orders for the Fleet; and I hope We have "ſuch a Strength of Ships, and in ſuch a Readineſs as will be ſufficient to diſappoint the Intentions of Our Enemies.

"I have alſo diſpatch'd Orders for bringing home ſuch a Number of Our Troops "as may ſecure Us from any Attempt.

"Some of the Conſpirators againſt My Perſon are already in Cuſtody, and Care is taken "to apprehend ſo many of the reſt as are diſcovered; and ſuch other Orders are given, as "the preſent Exigency of Affairs does abſolutely require at this time for the Publick "Safety.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"Having now acquainted you with the Danger which hath threatned Us, I cannot doubt "of your Readineſs and Zeal to do every thing "which you ſhall judge proper for Our Common "Safety: And I perſuade My Self We muſt be "All ſenſible how neceſſary it is in our to preſent Circumſtances, that all poſſible Diſpatch ſhould be given to the Buſineſs before "you.

Upon this Excellent Speech the Two Houſes immediately agreed to wait upon the King that very Evening at Kenſington with this Humble Addreſs.

Die Lunæ 24 Feb. 1695.

Addreſs of Both Houſes.

"We Your Majeſty's moſt Loyal and Dutiful "Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, "and Commons, having taken into our Serious "Conſideration what Your Majeſty hath been "pleaſed to communicate to us this Day, think "it our Duty, in the firſt place, to give your Majeſty moſt Humble Thanks for having acquainted Your Parliament with the great Danger "Your Sacred Perſon hath been ſo nearly expoſed to, and the Deſign of an Invaſion from "our Enemies Abroad: We heartily Congratulate "Your Majeſty's Happy Preſervation, and thankfully acknowledge the ſignal Providence of "God in it; and at the ſame time declare our "Deteſtation and Abhorrence of ſo Villanous "and Barbarous a Deſign: And ſince the Safety "and Welfare of Your Majeſty's Dominions do "ſo entirely depend upon Your Life, we moſt "humbly beſeech Your Majeſty to take more "than ordinary Care of Your Royal Perſon. And "we take this Occaſion to aſſure Your Majeſty "of our utmoſt Aſſiſtance to defend Your Perſon, and ſupport Your Government againſt the "late King James, and all other Your Enemies "both at Home and Abroad; hereby declaring "to all the World, That in caſe Your Majeſty "ſhall come to any Violent Death (which God "forbid) we will revenge the ſame upon all "Your Enemies, and their Adherents: And as "an Inſtance of our Zeal for Your Majeſty's "Service, we will give all poſſible Diſpatch to "the Publick Buſineſs: And we make it our Deſire to Your Majeſty, to ſeize and ſecure all "Perſons, Horſes and Arms, that Your Majeſty "may think fit to apprehend upon this Occaſion.

1695.

His Majeſty gave the Two Houſes this agreeable Anſwer.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I thank you heartily for this Kind Addreſs: On My Part you may be aſſured, that I will do all that is within My Power, for the Conſervation of this Kingdom, to which I have ſo many Obligations. I will readily adventure My Life for the Preſervation of it, and recommend My Self to the Continuance of Your Loyalty and Good Affections.

The Houſe of Commons dropt the ſenſe of all former Animoſities, and generouſly fell into the immediate Meaſures of Reſpect and Loyalty to the King; giving a new Proof of this Obſervation, That Plots when diſcover'd ſtrengthen the Government they were deſign'd to ruin. On the ſame Day with the Speech and Addreſs, they Order'd, "That Leave be given to bring in a Bill to impower His Majeſty to ſecure and detain ſuch "Perſons as His Majeſty ſhall ſuſpect are conſpiring againſt His Perſon or Government." They gave ſeveral Inſtructions for the more effectual raiſing the Militia. They Reſolved, "That "Leave be given to bring in a Bill, That whenever it ſhall pleaſe God to afflict theſe Realms "by the Death of His Preſent Majeſty, the "Parliament then in being ſhall not be diſſolved "thereby, but ſhall continue until the next Heir "to the Crown in Succeſſion, according to the "late Act of Settlement, ſhall diſſolve the ſame. "And that an Humble Addreſs be preſented to His "Majeſty, That He will pleaſe to iſſue His Royal Proclamation, to baniſh all Papiſts from the "Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Ten Miles "from the ſame: And give Inſtructions to the "Judges going the Circuits, to put the Laws in "Execution againſt Papiſts and Non-Jurors." And as the greateſt Teſt of Loyalty, they drew up this Form of Aſſociation, to be ſubſcribed by all the Members.

This Plot had a good effect on the Two Houſes.

Form of Aſſociation.

"Whereas there has been a Horrid and Deteſtable Conſpiracy formed and carried on by Papiſts and other Wicked and Traiterous Perſons, "for Aſſaſſinating His Majeſty's Royal Perſon, "in Order to encourage an Invaſion from France, "to ſubvert our Religion, Laws and Liberty; "We whoſe Names are hereunto ſubſcribed, do "heartily, ſincerely and ſolemnly profeſs, teſtifie and declare, That His Preſent Majeſty "King William is Rightful and Lawful King of "theſe Realms. And We do mutually promiſe "to engage to ſtand by and aſſiſt each other to "the utmoſt of our Power, in the Support and "Defence of His Majeſty's moſt Sacred Perſon "and Government, againſt the Late King James "and all His Adherents. And in caſe His Majeſty come to any Violent or Untimely Death "(which God forbid) we do hereby further freely and unanimouſly oblige our ſelves, to unite, "aſſociate, and ſtand by each other, in revenging 1695. "ing the ſame upon His Enemies, and their Adherents; and in ſupporting and defending the "Succeſſion of the Crown, according to an Act "made in the Firſt Year of the Reign of King "William and Queen Mary; Entitled, An "Act declaring the Rights and Liberties of the "Subject, and ſettling the Succeſſion of the "Crown.

To be ſubſcrib'd by all Members.

This Aſſociation was on the three following Days ſign'd by all the Members that came to the Houſe; and becauſe ſome others had abſented themſelves upon pretence of Health or Buſineſs, but in reality to avoid ſetting their Hands to an Acknowledgment of King William being Rightful and Lawful King: It was therefore Ordered on Feb. 27. "That ſuch Members of the Houſe "who had not already ſign'd the Aſſociation, "ſhould do it by Monday Fortnight, or declare "their Refuſal, notwithſtanding their Leave to "be abſent." On the appointed Day, March 16. the Names of ſuch Members were called over as were abſent upon the laſt Call of the Houſe; and ſeveral of 'em being ſtill abſent, in the Country, or ill in Town, ſignifying their Intentions to ſign the Aſſociation, were excuſed their Attendance: And the Speaker was ordered to write to ſuch Members as are in the Country, and have not ſigned the Aſſociation, or declared their Refuſal ſo to do, to know what they will do, and to return their Anſwer by the firſt Opportunity. And at the ſame time the Clerk of the Houſe was to attend ſuch Members as were ill in Town with the ſaid Aſſociation, in order to their ſigning the ſame, or receiving their Anſwer of Refuſal. The Abſent Members ſeeing themſelves ſo preſs'd, and the Nation at this time in ſo great a Ferment againſt the Diſaffected, thought it Prudence to yield to the Times, and either to ſubſcribe the Aſſociation, or to promiſe to do it upon their firſt coming up to Town, though it was againſt the Inclination of ſome, and perhaps againſt the Principles of others.

Honours and Preferments.

As to the Honours or Preferments diſpoſed ſince the King's Return. On Octob. 14, when the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Lieutenancy of London came to congratulate His Majeſty's ſafe and happy Return, and the Glorious Succeſs of His Arms, with Hearty Wiſhes for His Long and Proſperous Reign, His Majeſty was pleaſed to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Edward Wills and Owen Buckingham, the preſent Sheriffs. On Oct. 29. His Majeſty was pleaſed upon the Death of Sir Giles Eyres, one of the Juſtices of the Court of King's-Bench, to appoint Sir Tho. Rokeby one of the Juſtices of the Common-Pleas to ſucceed him; and Sir John Powell, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, was made one of the Juſtices of the Common-Pleas; and Sir Littleton Powys, Serjeant at Law, and one of the Juſtices of Cheſter, came into his Place in the Exchequer. Some few Days before, the King at Althrop conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon John Combs, Eſq; Chief-Juſtice of Cheſter; and on Nov. 8. His Majeſty was pleaſed to grant to Sir Salathiel Lovell, Serjeant at Law, Recorder of London, the Office of Second Juſtice of the Counties of Cheſter, Flint, Denbigh and Montgomery, in the room of Sir Littleton Powys. At Kenſington, Jan. 6. his Highneſs the Duke of Glouceſter, to whom the King paid a particular Affection and Reſpect, was elected into the moſt Noble Society of the Garter, and Knighted and Inveſted with the Enſigns of that Order. On Jan. 10. His Majeſty was pleaſed to create the Lord George Hamilton, Earl of Orkney, in the Kingdom of Scotland, in conſideration of his Services in Ireland and Flanders, upon many Occaſions, during this War. On Jan. 13. His Majeſty was pleaſed to declare John Lord Murray, Eldeſt Son to the Marqueſs of Athol, one of the Principal Secretaries of State for the Kingdom of Scotland, in the Place of the Lord Stairs. On Feb. 6. the King conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Col. Willoughby, Chamberlain of Barbadoes, for his good and faithful Services in that Iſland. On March 22. His Majeſty beſtow'd the like Honour of Knighthood upon Charles Turner, Eſq; one of the Members of Parliament for the Corporation of Lynn Regis.

The laſt thing done in the Parliament this Year, was His Majeſty's coming to the Houſe of Peers on Saturday, March 7. and giving the Royal Aſſent to theſe ſeveral Publick and Private Bils:

Acts paſſed.

1. An Act for continuing ſeveral Duties granted by former Acts upon Wine and Vinegar, and upon Tobacco and East-India Goods, and other Merchandizes imported, for carrying on the War againſt France. 2. An Act for impowering His Majeſty to apprehend and detain ſuch Perſons as He ſhall find cauſe to ſuſpect are conſpiring againſt His Royal Perſon and Government. 3. An Act for taking off the Obligation and Encouragement for coining Guineas for a certain Time therein mentioned. 4. An Act for Relief of Poor Priſoners for Debt or Damages. 5. An Act for making Navigable the Rivers of Wye and Lugg, in the County of Hereford. 6. An Act to Enable Truſtees to Exchange Lands of Sir James Chamberlain, Baronet, an Infant, lying in the Common Hill or Fields of Selford, in the County of Oxford, for like quantities of Lands there, in order to the making an Incloſure. 7. An Act for Naturalizing James Stanhope, Eſq; and others. 8. An Act to Enable the Pariſh of St. James's within the Liberties of the City of Weſtminſter, to raiſe upon themſelves ſo much Money as will diſcharge their Debt for building their Pariſh-Church, Rector's Houſe, Veſtry, and other Publick Works there; 9. An Act to Aſcertain and Settle the Payment of the Impropriate Tithes of St. Lawrence Old Jewry, in London, to the Maſter and Scholars of Baliol College in Oxford, and for confirming an Award made concerning the ſame. 10. An Act to enable Truſtees to make and fill up Leaſes of the reſpective Eſtates of Bluett Wallopp, Eſq; and John Wallopp, Gent. during their Minorities, and to purchaſe other Lands by the Fines thereby to be received, to the ſame Uſes as the Eſtates ſo to be leaſed are already ſetled. 11. An Act for Naturalizing Solomon Eyme, and others. 12. An Act for Enabling Truſtees to ſell the Manor of Peſpoole, in the County of Durham, part of the Eſtate of William Midford, an Infant, for Payment of Debts and Incumbrances charged thereon; and for preſerving the reſt of the ſaid Infant's Eſtate. 13. An Act to Confirm and Eſtabliſh an Exchange made between Thomas Ryder, Eſq; and Chriſtopher Clithero, Eſq; of certain Meſſuages in London, for the Manors of Bilſington, and other Lands in Kent of the like value.

State of Religion.

In the State of Religion, the peſtilent Sect of the Socinians, by the Countenance of the Act of Toleration, and the Looſe Sentiments of ſome of our own Divines, had gotten conſiderable Ground in England ſince the Revolution, and being favour'd by the Licenciouſneſs of the Preſs, they publiſh'd many of their Pamphlets, enough to provoke any Chriſtian Government: To check their Inſolence, Dr. Sherlock, Dean of St. Paul's, undertook the Vindication of the Orthodox Doctrine concerning the Trinity; but becauſe Myſteries of Faith, being above Reaſon, are not to be explain'd by Reaſon, elſe they would ceaſe to be Myſteries; it far'd with the Doctor, that whilſt he endeavour'd to prove Three Diſtinct Perſons, he was charg'd with proving Three Diſtinct Gods; having aſſerted, That there were in the Godhead, Three Minds,

The Socinians very diligent.

Unhappy Diſpute between Dr. Sherlock and Dr. South.

1695. Minds, Three Beings, and Three Intelligences. This New Explication giving the Unitarians occaſion to Triumph, Dr. South, one of the Prebends of Weſtminſter, and a Divine of great Parts, undertook to confute Dr. Sherlock's new Way of Vindicating the Trinity: His Antagoniſt was not ſilent, but by way of Recrimination, attempted to prove that Dr. South's Doctrine favour'd of Sabellianiſm. The Quarrel grew hot, the Two Doctors were Learned and Witty in their ſeveral Anſwers and Replies, and ſome of their Seconds began to come in to each ſide. On the Feaſt of St. Simon and Jude, this Year, at Oxford, a Fellow of Univerſity-Colledge, in a Publick Sermon before the Univerſity, fell in with the Notions of Dr. Sherlock, and aſſerted; That there were Three Infinite Diſtinct Minds and Subſtances in the Trinity; and alſo, That the Three Perſons in the Trinity, are Three Diſtinct Minds or Spirits, and Three Individual Subſtances. The Friends of Dr. South made a Complaint of theſe Words, and procured them to be Cenſur'd by a Solemn Decree in Convocation, November 25. wherein they Judge, Declare, and Determine, the aforeſaid Words lately deliver'd in the ſaid Sermon, to be Falſe, Impious, and Heretical, diſagreeing and contrary to the Doctrine of the Catholick Church, and eſpecially to the Doctrine of the Church of England, publickly received. This Solemn Decree was ſo far from compoſing the Differences, that it ſerv'd rather to irritate the Parties, and to let the Socinians make their Advantage of it. It was now therefore high time for the King to interpoſe His Royal Authority, by giving theſe Excellent Directions to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, for the preſerving Unity in the Church, and the Purity of the Chriſtian Faith concerning the Holy Trinity.

Preacher in Oxford Cenſur'd.

The King's Injunctions for Unity in the Church.

William R.

"MOſt Reverend, and Right Reverend Fathers in God, We Greet you well. "Whereas We are given to underſtand, That "there have of late been ſome Differences a- "mong the Clergy of this Our Realm, about "their Ways of Expreſſing themſelves in their "Sermons and Writings, concerning the Do- "ctrine of the Bleſſed Trinity, which may be "of dangerous Conſequence, if not timely pre- "vented: We therefore, out of Our Princely "Care, and Zeal for the Preſervation of the "Peace and Unity of the Church, together "with the Purity of the Chriſtian Faith, have "thought fit to ſend you theſe following Dire- "ctions, which We ſtraightly Charge and Com- "mand you to Publiſh, and to ſee that they be "Obſerved within your ſeveral Dioceſſes.

"I. That no Preacher whatſoever, in his Ser- "mon or Lecture, do preſume to deliver any "other Doctrine concerning the Bleſſed Trinity, "than what is contain'd in the Holy Scriptures, "and is agreeable to the Three Creeds, and the "Thirty Nine Articles of Religion.

"II. That in the Explication of this Doctrine, "they carefully avoid all new Terms, and con- "fine themſelves to ſuch ways of Explication, "as have been commonly uſed in the Church.

"III. That Care be taken in this Matter, e- "ſpecially to obſerve the Fifty Third Canon of "this Church, which forbids publick Oppoſition "between Preachers; and that above all things, "they abſtain from bitter Invectives, and ſcur- "rilous Language againſt all Perſons whatſo- "ever.

"IV. That the foregoing Directions be alſo "obſerved by thoſe who Write any thing con- "cerning the ſaid Doctrine.

"And whereas We alſo underſtand, That di- "vers Perſons who are not of the Clergy, have "of late preſumed, not only to Talk and Diſ- "pute againſt the Chriſtian Faith, concerning 1695. "the Doctrine of the Bleſſed Trinity, but alſo "to Write and Publiſh Books and Pamphlets a- "gainſt the ſame, and induſtriouſly ſpread them "through the Kingdom, contrary to Our known "Laws Eſtabliſhed in this Realm: We do there- "fore ſtrictly Charge and Command you, to- "gether with all other Means ſuitable to your "Holy Profeſſion, to make uſe of your Autho- "rity according to Law, for the Repreſſing and "Reſtraining of all ſuch Exorbitant Practices. "And for your Aſſiſtance We will give Charge "to Our Judges, and all other Our Civil Offi- "cers, to do their Duty herein, in Executing "the Laws againſt all ſuch Perſons as ſhall by "theſe Means give Occaſion of Scandal, Diſ- "cord, and Diſturbance in Our Church and "Kingdom.

Given at Our Court at Kenſington the Third Day of February, 1695. In the Seventh Year of Our Reign: By His Majeſty's Command.

SHREWSBURY.

Archbiſhop Teniſon, who in all his private Stations had been an Eminent Example of doing Good, was now careful to ſerve the Church in a more publick Manner; and therefore he had not only prevail'd with the King to ſend out thoſe Injunctions, that Reinforced the wholſome Diſcipline of the Church and Clergy, and likewiſe to give thoſe Directions, for the preſerving Unity and Purity of Faith; but his Grace ſent Abroad his own Circular Letter to all the Suffragan Biſhops of his Province, Dated July 16. 1695. to Recommend ſuch Rules and Orders, as (if well obſerved) would mightily tend to the Peace and Honour of the Eſtabliſhed Church. The Letter run thus.

The Archbiſhop's Letter.

My very Good Lord,

"Having well Conſider'd the following Par- "ticulars, together with ſuch of our Brethren, "as were in or near London, and believing them "to be Means very proper for the promoting "the Glory of God, and the Edification of his "Church; I do hereby Recommend them to "you, as I have alſo done to the reſt of the Bi- "ſhops of this Province, deſiring you and them, "to ſee them carefully obſerv'd in your reſpe- "ctive Dioceſſes.

"In the firſt place, It is the King's Pleaſure, "That you take eſpecial Care concerning the "late Act againſt Prophane Curſing and Swear- "ing; not only, that it be publickly Read as "the Law has in that Caſe provided, but that "the Clergy be directed both in their Catechi- "zing and Sermons, to inſiſt often upon thoſe "Points, to the end, that by God's Bleſſing up- "on their Faithful Endeavours, a Stop may be "put to thoſe Execrable Wickedneſſes, which, "if they be ſuffer'd to continue, will bring "down God's heavy Judgments upon this "Church and Nation.

"Secondly, There are alſo other Acts to be 3 Jac. 1. c. 1, &c. "Read publickly in Churches, which yet are See the King's Letter. An. 1689. Sect. 7. "not Read (as I underſtand) in many Places. "I deſire you to remedy that Neglect.

"Thirdly, It ſeems very fit, that you require "your Clergy in their Prayer before Sermon, "to keep to the Effect of the 55*th* Canon: It Canon 55. An. 1603. "being commonly reported, that it is the man- "ner of ſome in every Dioceſs, either to uſe "only the Lord's Prayer (which the Canon "preſcribes as the Concluſion of the Prayer, "and not the whole Prayer) or at leaſt to leave "out the King's Titles, and to forbear to Pray "for the Biſhops as ſuch.

"Fourthly, I commend to your Care the "Preaching of your Clergy in the Afternoons,

"upon

1695. upon Catechetical Heads, both that the People may be the better rooted and grounded in the Faith, and also kept from other Assemblies.

Art. An. 1564. for certifying Orders in Ecclesiastical Polity.

"A Fifth Particular Recommended to you, is, That you be very careful in the giving of Institutions; and particularly, That you use good and diligent Examination and Care to foresee and prevent all Simoniacal Pacts or Covenants with the Patrons, or the Presentors, for the Spoil of their Glebe, Tythes, or Mansion-Houses; and in especial manner, those Artificial Bargains, which are made by Bonds of Resignation.

"A Sixth is, The causing of Stipends of Curates to be proportioned to the Value of the Benefice, and the Greatness of the Duty required of them; especially where the Incumbent is a Pluralist, and cannot constantly reside in Person. That the Service of God may not suffer by the Employing of such Ignorant and Scandalous Men as these Incumbents generally procure, who chuse to have such for their Curates as will serve for the meanest Salaries.

"A Seventh is, The preventing of Dilapidations, especially where Pluralists do not keep constant Residence: Towards which, frequent Views of Chancels, and Parsonage and Vicaridge-House, by your Arch-Deacon or Arch-Deacons, or other Officers, and Reports made to you upon those Views, will much conduce. And as for such, who upon any Pretences whatsoever, desire a Dispensation of Non-Residence, I intreat you not to grant it to any of them, without their giving sufficient Security to keep their Chancels, and Parsonage or Vicaridge-Houses in good Repair, if they be so already; or if not, to put them in good Repair with all convenient speed, and to keep them so for the future.

"The Eighth is, Your causing the Clergy to pursue very carefully the End of the Eighty Seventh Canon, relating to Terriers of Glebe-Lands, and other Possessions belonging to Churches; for want of which, great Controversies daily arise, and the Rights of the Church are often lost.

Can. 128. An. 1603.

"The Ninth is, Your hindring (as much as in you lies) all such from being Surrogates, who are not qualified by the Canon; and to see that none be Instrumental in dispatching Licenses of Marriage, and Solemnization of Matrimony Illegally, or in pronouncing the Sentences of Excommunication and Absolution, without such Solemnity as that great and weighty Affair requires.

"Tenthly, When any Minister removes out of your Diocese into another, to any Cure of Souls, I desire you in a Letter to the Bishop, into whose Diocese he is going, to give a just Character of him. Also when any such Minister comes into your Diocese, not to admit him, but with the like Letter from his former Diocesan; or in a Vacancy, from the Guardian of the Spiritualties.

"Eleventhly, I beseech you to think of, and to use all proper Methods, for the time to come, for the preventing of such from being admitted into Holy Orders, who are not likely to pursue the Sacred Ends of them. Some such Methods I here lay before you, desiring you to take them into your Consideration.

"1st. That you take all possible care, that there be good School-Masters in the several Publick Schools within your Diocese, not Licensing any but such as upon Examination shall be found of sufficient Ability, and do exhibit very satisfactory Testimonials of their Temper and good Life; that so in the Education of Youth, especially such as are design'd for Holy Orders, there may not be an ill Foundation laid. 1695.

"2dly. That you Ordain no Man Deacon or Priest, who hath not taken some Degree in School in one of the Universities of this Realm, unless in some Extraordinary Case. Can. 34. An. 1603.

"3dly. That you accept of no Letters Testimonial brought by Persons to be Ordained, unless there be a Clause Inserted in them by the Testifiers, to this Effect, That they believe them to be Qualified for that Order, into which they desire to be admitted.

"4thly. That as soon as any can apply to you, for Holy Orders, you give timely Notice of this at the place where the Person resides, or lately resided, that so the Exceptions against him, (if any such there be) may come timely to your knowledge. Vid. Art. An. 1564. for certifying Orders in Ecclesiastical Polity.

"5thly. That when any Person comes to you to be Ordained, you lay it upon his Conscience, to observe such Fasting as is prescribed upon Ember Days, and to give himself in most serious manner to Meditation and Prayer. After some compleat time after every Ordination, whether intra or extra Tempora, at least between Michaelmas or Christmas, I desire you to send a Return under your Hand, attested by the Arch-Deacon, and such other Clergymen as assisted at the Ordination, containing the Names and Sir-Names of all the Persons then Ordained; the place of their Birth, their Age, and College where they were Educated; with the Degree they have taken in the University, the Title upon which they were Ordained, and upon whose Letters Dimissory, if they came out of another Diocese: And to subjoin a particular Account of all such as then offer'd themselves to Ordination, and were refused; as also of the Reasons for which they were refused. All which I undertake and promise, to cause to be Entered into a Leiger Book for that purpose. By this means Counterfeit Orders may be detected, Men who come up for Preferment may be the better understood and distinguish'd; and such who have had the Misfortune either to lose their Orders, or to want them here, upon any Emergent Occasion, may be in some Measure helped.

"And that the King may be the better Enabled to give you His further Assistance, in these and other Affairs of the Church, you are desired and required to comply with His Majesty's Command to me signified, in giving me an Account of what has been done in your Diocese, in pursuance of His Injunctions, when you come next to Parliament; as also of the present State of it, in as particular Manner as you well can; that such Accounts may be laid before Him, in order to the Supplying of what is Wanting, and Rectifying of what is Amiss. Not doubting of your Lordships Care and Zeal in these weighty Matters, I Recommend you, and all your Affairs to the Blessing of God Almighty, and Remain

Your very Loving Friend and Brother,
Tho. Cantuar.

We left the Parliament sitting, and the Commons taking the needful Association, the Form whereof with their Subscriptions to it, they presented to His Majesty in a Body, on Friday April 3. and at the same time requested His Majesty, that he would be pleased to Order, "That "the said Association and all other Associations 1696. Parliament Sitting.

1696. "by the Commons of England, might be lodg'd "among the Records of the Tower. Upon which occaſion His Majeſty was pleaſed to ſay, King's Speech on the Aſſociation.

Gentlemen,

"I take this as a moſt Convincing and moſt "Acceptable Evidence of your Affection: And "as you have freely aſſociated your ſelves for "our Common Safety, I do heartily enter into "the ſame Aſſociation, and will be always "Ready with you and the Reſt of my Good "Subjects, to venture My Life againſt all who "ſhall endeavour to ſubvert the Religion, Laws "and Liberties of England. And I will take "care, that this and all other Aſſociations pre-"ſented to Me, be lodged among the Records in "the Tower.

Upon Report of this Gracious Acceptance, the next day the Houſe Reſolved, "That who-"ever ſhall by Word or Writing affirm, That "the Aſſociation entered into by any Member "of this Houſe, or any other Perſon, is Illegal, "ſuch Perſon ſhall be deem'd a Promoter of the "Deſigns of the late King James, and an Ene-"my to the Laws and Liberties of this King-"dom." Soon after, the Houſe of Lords agreed in the ſame Aſſociation, and preſented it to the King; and the Example of Both Houſes of Parliament was followed by all the Corporations of the Three Kingdoms.

A Bill for Security of His Majeſty's Perſon, &c.

On April 2. Upon a Report of the Examination and Confeſſion of Sir William Perkins and Sir John Friend, it was Reſolved, That a Bill be brought in for the better Security of His Majeſty's Perſon and Government; and that the Heads of the Bill ſhould be, 1. That ſuch as ſhall refuſe to take the Oaths to his Majeſtty, ſhall be ſubject to the Forfeitures and Penalties of Popiſh Recuſants Convict. 2. To inflict a Penalty on ſuch as ſhall by Writing, or otherwiſe, Declare, That King William is not Lawful and Rightful King of theſe Realms; Or that the late King James, or the Pretended Prince of Wales, or any other Perſon, than according to the Act of Settlement of the Crown, hath any Right to the Crown of theſe Realms. 3. To Ratify and Confirm the Aſſociation enter'd into by all His Majeſty's good Subjects, for the Preſervation of His Majeſty's Perſon and Government. 4. That no Perſon ſhall be capable of any Office of Profit or Truſt, Civil or Military, that ſhall not Sign the ſaid Aſſociation. 5. That the ſame Penalties be Inflicted on ſuch as come out of France, as upon thoſe that go thither.

Civil Liſt and French Proteſtants.

The Commons had Conſider'd that part of His Majeſty's Speech at the Opening of this Parliament, wherein He recommended to 'em the Civil Liſt, and the Diſtreſſed French Proteſtants. And the Committee of the whole Houſe having ſat ſeveral times on that Affair; it was at laſt Reſolved on March the 17*th*. That the Sum of Five hundred thouſand Pounds be Granted for defraying the Expences of the Firſt, and Fifteen thouſand Pounds for the Relief of the Latter. Which Sums on March the 28*th*. they Reſolved to raiſe by a Duty upon all Low Wines, and Spirits of the Firſt Extraction, and alſo upon all mixt Liquors, commonly call'd Sweets, for the ſpace of Five Years, from the 25*th*. of March, 1696. And the Committee who were to prepare this Bill, were inſtructed to receive a Clauſe for preſerving the Revenue to her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs Anne of Denmark.

The Bill for continuing ſeveral Duties upon Salt, for taking off thoſe of Tonnage upon Ships, and upon Coals, and for Eſtabliſhing a National Land-Bank having been Read a Second time, the Committee of the whole Houſe, to whom it was committed, were Inſtructed on March 18. to Reſtrain the Bank not to lend Money but upon Land-Security, or to the Government into the Exchequer; and to receive a Clauſe, That if the Money did not come in by a certain time, His Majeſty might be enabled to Borrow the ſame. The next Day the Bank of England preſented a Petition againſt this Bill, and were afterwards by Order of the Houſe heard by their Council, but without Succeſs, ſo that the Houſe went on with the Bill, and Reſolved on April 9. Firſt, That towards the Supply to be Granted to His Majeſty for making up the Fund of Intereſt of Seven per Cent. for Two Millions five hundred ſixty four thouſand Pounds, the Capital Stock of the intended National Land-Bank, certain Duties upon Glaſs-Wares, Stone and Earthen Bottles, granted before to the King, for a Term of Years, be granted to His Majeſty, His Heirs and Succeſſors. Secondly, That a Duty be laid upon Tobacco-Pipes; and Thirdly, That a further Duty be laid upon all Stone and Earthen Ware: Which Reſolutions were order'd to be inſerted in the Bill for Settling the National Land-Bank.

1696. Bill for a Land Bank.

Bill for Regulating Elections not paſſed.

There was another Bill that had Paſs'd Both Houſes, for the Regulating Elections of Members to ſerve in Parliament; To which His Majeſty did not give His Royal Aſſent. This Omiſſion was ill reſented by ſome of the Commons, who valued themſelves on the projecting of it; and they hop'd on this occaſion, to make an open Rupture, which muſt have been fatal at this Juncture: Therefore, on Tueſday, April 24. a Motion was made, and the Queſtion was put, That whoſoever Adviſed His Majeſty not to give the Royal Aſſent to the Bill for further Regulating Elections of Members to ſerve in Parliament, (which paſſed Both Houſes) is an Enemy to the King and Kingdom? But the Majority were ſo wiſe as to decline the occaſion of any Difference; and therefore for the Affirmative of the Queſtion, there were but 70 Voices; while for the Negative, there was no leſs than 219. And it was Order'd, That the Speaker do with the Votes Print this Queſtion, together with the Numbers of the Affirmative and Negative.

Other Acts paſſed.

On Monday, April 27. The King came to the House of Lords, and gave the Royal Aſſent to, 1. An Act for laying ſeveral Duties upon Low Wines, or Spirits of the firſt Extraction; and for Preventing the Frauds and Abuſes of Brewers, Diſtillers, and other Perſons chargable with the Duties of Exciſe. 2. An Act for Continuing to His Majeſty certain Duties upon Salt, Glaſs-Wares, Stone and Earthen Bottles; and for Granting ſeveral Duties upon Tobacco-Pipes, and other Earthen Wares, for Carrying on the War againſt France, and for Eſtabliſhing a National Lind-Bank, and for taking off the Duties upon Tonnage of Ships, and upon Coals. 3. An Act for the Enforcing the Laws which Reſtrain Marriages, either without Licenſe or Banns; and for the better Regiſtring Marriages, Births and Burials. 4. An Act for the better Security of His Majeſty's Perſon and Government. 5. An Act for the more Effectual Preventing the Exportation of Wooll, and for Encouraging the Importation thereof from Ireland. 6. An Act for Encouraging the Linnen Manufacture of Ireland, and Bringing Flax and Hemp into, and Making of Sail-Cloth in this Kindom. 7. An Act for Continuing ſeveral Acts of Parliament therein mentioned. 8. An Act for Taking away the Cuſtom of Wales, which hinders Perſons from Diſpoſing their Perſonal Eſtates by their Wills. 9. An Act for the Eaſe of Jurors, and better Regulating of Juries. 10. An Act for the better Repairing and Amending the High-Ways, and Explanation of the Laws relating thereunto. 11. An Act for Encouragement of Charitable Gifts and Diſpoſitions. 12. An Act for the better Encouragement of the Green-Land Trade. 13. An Act that the Solemn Affirmation and Declaration of the People call'd Quakers, ſhall be accepted inſtead of an Oath, in the uſual Form. And Laſtly, An Act for Re-veſting in His Majeſty the Honour of Tutbury, Foreſt of Needwood, ſeveral Manors, Parks, Lanes, and Offices, and other Profits thereunto belonging, and for Vacating certain Letters Patents therein mentioned. Then His Majeſty made this Speech to Both Houſes.

1696.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech.

"YOU have ſhewn ſo great Concern for "My Perſon, and Zeal for My Govern- "ment; and have done ſo much for the Preſer- "vation of the one, and for the Strengthening "of the other, by the Good Laws which have "been made, and by the Supplies you have pro- "vided for the ſeveral Occaſions of this Year, "That the late Deſigns of Our Enemies are, by "the Bleſſing of God, like to have no other Ef- "fect, than to let them ſee how firmly We are "United, and to give Me this Occaſion to ac- "knowledge your Kindneſs, and to aſſure you of "all the Returns which a Prince can make to "His People.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"The Neceſſity of Affairs requiring My Ab- "ſence out of the Kingdom for ſome time, I do "earneſtly Recommend to you, That in your "ſeveral Stations, you will be Aſſiſting to thoſe "whom I ſhall leave to Adminiſter the Govern- "ment, and that you will be careful in pre- "ſerving the Publick Peace of the Kingdom.

Then the Lord Keeper, by His Majeſty's Command, Prorogued the Parliament till Tueſday the 16th. Day of June next.

Beſides the Bills that were paſs'd this Seſſion, ſeveral others were begun, and loſt upon various Accounts: Such as a Bill for Regulating Printing and Printing-Preſſes. Secondly, A Bill for Reverſing a Judgment given againſt Sir William Williams, in 2 Jac. II. for what he did as Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, and for Aſcertaining the Rights and Freedoms of Parliaments. Thirdly, A Bill for Settling and Regulating the Eaſt-India Trade. Fourthly, Another to Regulate the Trade of Africa. Fifthly, A Bill to Confirm the Earl of Torrington's Grant. Sixthly, Two Bills to Veſt in the Crown all Forfeited Eſtates in England and Ireland, and to Vacate all Grants made thereof. Seventhly, A Bill to prevent Stock-Jobbing: And Eighthly, A Bill for preventing Papiſts from Diſinheriting their Proteſtant Heirs.

Other Bills drop't and loſt.

1696. Execution of Conspirators.

We have already given an Account of the Discovery of the Horrid Conspiracy against the King's Life, and for invading the Kingdom; we must now give an Account of the Apprehension and Execution of the Chief Conspirators. Great Diligence was us'd by the Government to apprehend the Conspirators: In this Service none shew'd more Zeal and Activity than the Lord Cutts, Colonel of His Majesty's Foot-Guards; and the Powerful Allurement of a Thousand Pounds Reward, inciting others to imitate his Lordship's Example; most of the Plotters, who had not committed their Safety to a speedy Flight beyond Sea, were in a few Days secur'd. Porter, Harris, Bertram, Boys, Goodman, Pendergrass, and De la Rue, came in voluntarily. The first of the Prisoners that were tryed was Mr. Robert Charnock, a late Popish Fellow of Magdalen College, a Man of Parts and Bigotry, and one who next to Sir George Barclay was the chief Manager and Promoter of the Intended Assassination. He did with a good Presence of Mind, and Competent Knowledge of the Laws, and a Readiness of Speech make a Long, but a Frivolous Defence. With Charnock were try'd Lieutenant King, and Thomas Keys, formerly a Trumpeter, and lately Capt. Porter's Servant, who had little to say for themselves; so that upon a full Hearing of the Evidence, they were all Three found guilty of High-Treason, and Executed at Tyburn upon the 18th of March. Before the Executioner did his Office, the Malefactors delivered each a Paper to the Sheriffs, wherein they confessed the Crime they were accused of, but which they endeavoured to palliate, and at the same time to justifie both King James, the Jacobites, and Roman-Catholicks. Mr. Charnock particularly own'd, That to facilitate King James's Invasion upon England, himself and some others did agree to attack the Prince of Orange and his Guards: That as for any Order or Commission of King James's for Assassinating the Prince of Orange, he neither saw nor heard of any; but had had frequent Assurances of His Majesty's having rejected such Proposals when they had been offer'd: That he did hear that there was a Commission arrived for Levying of War; which was natural to believe, if the King was in such readiness to come over, as was reported, but that he never saw it. And as to what regarded the Body of the Roman-Catholicks, he must do them the Justice, that they had no manner of knowledge of this Design, nor did he believe it was communicated to any other Party of such as were reputed the King's Friends, but carried on meerly by a small number, without the Advice, Consent or Privity of any Parties whatsoever.

Charnock, King and Keys.

Tryal of Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins.

Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins were brought to their Tryal at the Old-Baily on March 23 and 24, and were both brought in guilty of High-Treason, and received Judgment. While they lay under Condemnation, a Committee was appointed by the House of Commons to examine them: And on April 2. the Lord Marquess of Winchester reported to the House, That the Committee had gone Yesterday to Newgate, and had sent for Sir William Perkins, and Sir John Friend severally, and acquainted them with the Order of the House, and according thereunto did examine them; and That Sir William Perkins own'd his being privy to the intended Assassination, and of being in Company when it was discoursed of at two or three Meetings, and thinks it was a Fault that he did approve of it: That he had received Hints several times of King James's Design of coming over, and particularly now; and was resolved to serve Him whenever He came, with himself and Friends, thinking that he had Wrong done Him; and that it was his Duty to help Him whenever he could. That he consulted not with any, but those that he could engage, and he had an Influence upon. That he guessed he could have been able to have brought in to the number of a Troop, but that he would never redeem his own Blood at the Expence of theirs that he had drawn in. That since Christmass he did see a Commission, which he understood to be King James's, directed to His Loving Subjects, to levy War against the Prince of Orange and all his Adherents. He believes it was signed by King James: That it had a Seal to it, and that he saw it in the Hands of a Friend, which he desired not to name, but he believes he is not in England.

1696.

And that Sir John Friend, on his Examination, disowned knowing any thing of the Intended Assassination, but expressed his Abhorrence of it. He confessed he was at the two Meetings mentioned at his Tryal, and that the Persons named to be present were there likewise; and that Charnock was sent to France from one of those Meetings, to acquaint King James, That if He would come over with Eight Thousand Foot, and Two Thousand Horse, that Three or Four Thousand Horse would be ready to join Him here, of which he did engage to furnish about Two hundred.

Their Execution.

On April 3. Sir William Perkins and Sir John Friend were drawn on an Hurdle to Tyburn, and executed, according to the Sentence pronounc'd against them. Sir John Friend, though he had sufficiently own'd his Guilt, yet he now endeavoured to justifie the Merit of his Cause, by saying, "That the Cause he suffer'd for, he did firmly believe to be the Cause of God and True "Religion, and agreeable to the Laws of the "Land, which he had ever heard to require a "firm Duty and Allegiance: That as no Foreign, "so neither any Domestick Power can alienate "our Allegiance; for it was altogether new and "unintelligible to him, that the King's Subjects "can depose and dethrone Him on any Account, "or constitute any that have not an immediate "Right to His Place; and that as they ought "not to do this, so when it was done, to assist "Him in the Recovery of His Right, was justifiable, and their Duty. He profess'd himself a "Member of the Church of England, which he "heartily besought God Almighty to bless and "preserve; to deliver this Sinful Nation from "the Guilt of Rebellion, Blood and Perjury; to "comfort the Distressed King, restore Him to "His Right, and His mis-led Subjects to their Allegiance; and to bless His Royal Consort, and "his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, That "he might grow in Stature, and in Favour with God "and Man." As for Sir William Perkins, he confess'd, "That he was privy to a Design upon the "Prince of Orange, but was not to act in it; and "he was fully satisfied, that very few or none "knew of it but those who undertook to do it. "That he had seen the Commission from King "James, to levy War against the Prince of Orange, "but as for any Commission particularly levell'd "against his Person, he neither saw nor heard "of any such. That he thought it for his Honour to say, That he was entirely in the Interest of King James, being always firmly persuaded of the Justice of His Cause; and look'd upon it as his Duty, both as a Subject, and an "Englishman, to assist Him in the Recovery of "His Throne, which he believed His Majesty to "be deprived of, contrary to all Right and Justice; "in which Opinion he took the Laws and Constitution of his Country for his Guide. And "lastly, That he died in the Communion of the "Church of England, in which he was educated. It's remarkable, that Mr. Jeremy Collier, a Non-juring Divine, who assisted Sir William Perkins at the Place of Execution, pronounced both to him, and to Sir John Friend, the Absolution of the Church,

Absolved at the Gallows.

1696. Church, as it ſtands in the Viſitation of the Sick, and accompanied this Ceremony with a Solemn Impoſition of Hands. The Court, and indeed the Body of the Nation, were very much offended at this Formal Act of Abſolution, which at firſt bluſh ſeem'd to juſtifie the Conſpiracy, and to recommend the Traitors; a Practice more becoming the Church of Rome, where many ſuch Criminals have been reputed Saints.

Declaration of the Archbiſhops and Biſhops againſt this inſolent Act of Abſolution.

And therefore Fourteen of the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, who were all of that Order that were then in Town, publiſh'd a Declaration; Wherein they Cenſured the Performance of this Office of the Church, without a previous Confeſſion made, and Abhorrence expreſs'd by the Priſoners of the Heinous Crime for which they died; as extremely Inſolent and without Precedent in the Manner, and altogether Irregular in the Thing it ſelf: It being a manifeſt Tranſgreſſion of the Church's Order, and prophane Abuſe of the Authority of Chriſt; ſince Mr. Collier, Mr. Snatt, and Mr. Cook, (the Three Nonjurors who attended the dying Malefactors) muſt look on the Perſons abſolv'd as Impenitents, or as Martyrs. An Account whereof was publiſhed in Quarto, printed for John Everingham; and Entitled, A Declaration of the Senſe of the Archbiſhops and Biſhops now in and about London, upon the Occaſion of their Attendance in Parliament; concerning the Irregular and Scandalous Proceedings of certain Clergymen, at the Execution of Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins. On April the 7*th.* the Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's-Bench did likewiſe repreſent to the Grand Jury the ſhameful and pernicious Practices of thoſe Three Abſolving Prieſts. Whereupon the Jury made a Preſentment to the Court;

The Non-juring Abſolvers preſented.

"That Collier, Cook and Snatt, Clerks, did take "upon them to pronounce and give Abſolution "to Sir William Perkins and Sir John Friend, at the "time of their Execution at Tyburn; immediately before they had ſeverally deliver'd a Paper "to the Sheriff of Middleſex; wherein they had "ſeverally endeavour'd to juſtify the Treaſons, "for which they were juſtly Condemn'd and "Executed: And that they, the ſaid Collier, "Cook and Snatt, had thereby Countenanced the "ſame Treaſons, to the great Encouragement of "other Perſons to commit the like Treaſons, and "to the Scandal of the Church of England Eſtabliſhed by Law, and to the Diſturbance of the "Peace of the Kingdom. Upon which, the Court order'd an Indictment to be preferr'd againſt them; and on April the 8*th.* Mr. Cook and Mr. Snatt were committed to Newgate, for Suſpicion of High Treaſon and Treaſonable Practices: But ſuch was the Lenity of the Government, that no manner of Puniſhment was inflicted on 'em; and Mr. Collier, with great Aſſurance, publiſh'd ſeveral Papers to juſtify his Practice.

And indicted.

Trial of other Traitors.

On Tueſday April the 21*ſt.* Brigadier Rookwood, Major Lowick, and Mr. Crambourn, Three other Conſpirators were brought to their Tryal, and were the firſt that had the Benefit of the Statute made this very Seſſion, to Regulate Trials in Caſes of High-Treaſon: But neither the Copy of the Indictment which was deliver'd to them, nor the Advantage of being Defended by Sir Bartholomew Shower, and Two other eminent Lawyers, did avail them much; the Evidence againſt them being ſo plain and poſitive, that they were all Three found guilty, and received Sentence accordingly. Great Interceſſion was made by ſome Noblemen for the Life of Lowick; and Crambourn Petitioned to be Tranſported; but both to no purpoſe. Crambourn died on April the 29*th.* a Proteſtant; read a Paper, and ſpoke much to the Spectators; and ſaid, He ſuffer'd for his Loyalty; pretending what he would have done was his Duty. Rookwood and Lowick died on the ſame Day, Roman Catholicks, and deliver'd each a Paper to the Sheriffs; wherein they partly own'd their Crime, but juſtified King James as to the pretended Commiſſion for Murdering the Prince of Orange. Mr. Cooke and Mr. Knightley were the Two laſt that were Try'd this Year: But tho' they received Sentence of Death; the firſt upon his being convicted, and the other upon his freely confeſſing the Fact; yet upon His Majeſty's Unparallel'd Clemency, Mr. Cooke was only Baniſhed England, and Mr. Knightley was graciouſly Pardoned. 1696.

Cooke and Knightley pardoned.

Joy in Flanders for the King's Safety.

As ſoon as the News came into Flanders, That the Conſpiracy was happily diſcover'd, the King ſafe, and England freed from the Apprehenſions of an Invaſion; the Prince of Vaudemont, and other Generals, bethought themſelves of making an extraordinary Bonefire for Joy at the expence of the French. In order to which, having drawn together a Body of Troops from ſeveral Gariſons, the Earl of Athlone and Lieutenant-General Cohorn marched from Namur on the 13*th* of March, (N. S.) with 40 Squadrons, 30 Battalions, 15 Pieces of Canon, and 6 Mortars: While the Earl, with the greateſt part of theſe Forces inveſted Dinant, and kept in that Gariſon, the Ingineer advanc'd with the reſt of the Troops and all the Artillery to Givet, where the Enemy had laid up a vaſt Magazine; and having got his Batteries in readineſs by the 16*th* in the Morning, he began to fire into the Town with Bombs and red-hot Bullets, which ſet both the Forage and Houſes on fire. At the ſame time a Detachment of Soldiers were commanded to enter the Town with large Flambeaux in their hands; which they performed with great Bravery, firing the Cazerns and Granaries where the Oats and other Proviſions lay, ſo that the whole Town and Magazine were utterly conſumed; and all this executed with the inconſiderable Loſs of Nine or Ten Men. Not long after, Sir Cloudeſly Shovel ſail'd out of the Downs with ſeveral Men of War and Bomb-Veſſels; and being come to Calais, Captain Bembow, notwithſtanding the vigorous Oppoſition from the Enemies Boats and Half-Gallies, threw between 3 and 400 Bombs; moſt of which fell in the Town, and among the Embarkations, and ſet fire in three or four Places, and in ſome of the Veſſels in the Port: Tho the Succeſs of this Bombardment did not anſwer either the Expence or Expectation of the Engliſh; yet the Damage was not ſo inconſiderable as the French gave it out; it being certain, that ſeveral Houſes were burnt and ſpoiled, beſides the Church and Convent, and ſome part of the Cazerns: And 'tis remarkable, that the French have raiſed a Croſs and Oratory near a Shell, which to this day ſticks in the Market-place at Calais; where they often pray againſt the Fury of Engliſh Bombs; and which is no leſs a Monument of their Deliverance than of their Fears.

Honours and Preferments.

Before His Majeſty left England, He beſtowed Marks of His Royal Favour on ſeveral Perſons. On March the 31*ſt.* He conferr'd the Honour and Dignity of a Baronet upon Mr. Richard Blackham, an eminent Turkey-Merchant, in Conſideration of his Loyalty and Services. And upon the Occaſion of preſenting the Aſſociations, His Majeſty beſtow'd the Honour of Knighthood upon the Preſenters of 'em; as on Alexander Rigby, Eſq; who preſented the Aſſociation of Wigan in Lancaſhire: On William Milard, Eſq; High Sheriff of the County of Bedford: On Charles Morley, Eſq; one of the Repreſentatives in Parliament of the Borough of Hindon in the County of Wilts: On George Hanger, Eſq; High Sheriff of the County of Glouceſter; On John Elwill, Eſq; one of 1696. of the Repreſentatives of Beeralſton; On John Robinſon. Eſq; one of the Burgeſſes for Sudbury; And the Dignity of a Baronet upon Thomas Wheat of Glympton, in the County of Oxford, Eſq;. On May 1. His Majeſty was pleaſed to Declare in Council, That He had Appointed the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Lord Keeper, the Lord Pembroke, the Duke of Devonſhire, the Duke of Shrewsbury, the Earl of Dorſet, the Lord Godolphin, to be Lords Juſtices of England, for the Adminiſtration of the Government during His Majeſty's Abſence. At the ſame time His Majeſty created Sir John Lowther of Lowther, Bar^t. Baron Lowther of Lowther, and Viſcount Lonſdale in the County of Weſtmorland. His Majeſty was alſo pleaſed to create Sir John Thompſon, Bar^t. a Baron of this Kingdom, by the Stile and Title of Baron Haverſham of Haverſham, in the County of Bucks; and to conſtitute Sir Thomas Littleton, Bar^t. one of the Lords Commiſſioners of the Treaſury: And to give to Chriſtopher Muſgrave, Eſq; the Office of Clerk of the Ordnance; and to James Lowther, Eſq; that of Clerk of the Delivery of the Ordnance. The ſame Day His Majeſty was pleaſed to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Theodore Janſen, Eſq; for his good Services, and the Zeal he had on all Occaſions expreſs'd for His Majeſty's Government. And the ſame Evening, when the Venetian Ambaſſadors took their Leave of the King at Kenſington, His Majeſty Knighted Seignior Soranzo, the Eldeſt of the Ambaſſadors, (as had been Practiſed by His Royal Predeceſſors) and made him a Preſent of His Sword. Not long after, His Majeſty was pleaſed to conſtitute and appoint the Lord Keeper, the Preſident of the Council, the Lord Privy-Seal, the Firſt Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, the Firſt Commiſſioner of the Admiralty, the Two Principal Secretaries of State, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, for the time being; and the Earls of Bridgwater, and Tankerville, Sir Philip Meadhouſe, William Blathwaite, John Pollexfen, John Lock, Abraham Hill, and John Methuen, Eſquires, to be Commiſſioners for Encouraging, Improving, and Protecting the Trade of this Kingdom, and the Plantations, Manufactures, and Fiſhery of the ſame.

Lords Juſtices.

The King goes for Holland.

On Saturday, May 2. The King went from Kenſington, and Lay at the Houſe of Capt. Ball near Margate. The next Day about 2 in the Afternoon, His Majeſty went on Board His Yacht, the Wind being then at S. S. E. but it veering in the Evening to the Eaſtward, and there being an appearance of foul Weather, His Majeſty came on Shoar again. Two Days after, the Wind being more favourable, and the Weather very fair, He went on Board the Elizabeth, Commanded by Vice-Admiral Aylmer, and on May 7. Landed ſafely at Oranie Polder, and about Midnight arrived at the Hague; and with all poſſible Expedition put Himſelf at the Head of the Confederate Forces in Flanders. Tho' the French took the Field before the Allies, to whom they were at firſt ſuperior in Number, yet the latter being ſoon Reinforced by the coming up of the Germans, and both Armies ſuffering equally for want of Pay; the French by reaſon of the general Poverty of their Kingdom, and the Engliſh on account of the calling in the Money to be Recoined: The Generals on both ſides ſpent the whole Campaign in obſerving one another, and endeavouring to poſſeſs themſelves of the moſt convenient Camps, for the Subſiſtance of their indigent Troops. The Straits to which the Armies were reduc'd, ſeem'd to favour Monſieur Callicre's Negotiation; who before the King arriv'd at the Hague, was come thither from France, with Propoſals towards concluding a General Peace, by ſettling ſuch Preliminaries as might be a ſufficient Baſis to ground a Treaty upon. 'Tis generally believed, that hitherto there was little diſpoſition in the French Court to a General Peace, wherein they foreſaw they muſt Sacrifice the Intereſt of King James, on whoſe account chiefly the War was undertaken and carried on: But the loſs of Namur, Cazal, and other Diſadvantages, without all doubt prevail'd on his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty to make theſe Advances; and nothing could have delay'd them ſo long, but the plauſible hopes of Succeſs in the intended Invaſion of England, and that in ſuch a favourable Conjuncture as the badneſs of our Coin rendred it. Now the former failing, and England having a fair Proſpect of overcoming all Difficulties in relation to the Money, there was no room for a longer delay. The King of France addreſs'd himſelf to the Dutch, becauſe he ſuppos'd that they could not but be weary of a tedious War, that had almoſt ruin'd their Trade, the only Spring of their Riches and Subſiſtance; and would therefore ſooner hearken to Peace, than either the Emperor, or the King of England, whoſe Power and Authority daily encreaſed, at leaſt among their reſpective Subjects, by the continuance of the War. It's true, the Hollanders had an abſolute Dependence upon His Britannick Majeſty; not only becauſe He was their Stadtholder, but alſo becauſe ſince their firſt Settlement they always found it, and eſteem'd it their Intereſt to keep cloſely united to England, in order to maintain a Balance between the Houſes of Bourbon and Auſtria, and preſerve themſelves from being cruſh'd by either: Yet, as the French King was at laſt reſolv'd to acknowledge King William's Title to the Crown of England, ſo he believ'd that what Ties ſoever there might be between His Britannick Majeſty and the Dutch, the latter would never coldly entertain the Propoſals which he deſign'd to make them; ſince by removing this great Obſtacle, the Way ſeem'd to lie fair and open to a General Peace.

1696.

The States of Holland finding by the French King's Propoſals, and his Offers to deliver up ſo many Places, that there was room for an Honourable and laſting Peace, made Monſieur Cailliere a favourable Reception; but yet refuſed either to grant him a Paſſport, but by the concurring Allowance of King William; or to Treat with him without the Conſent of His Britannick Majeſty, and their other Allies. This was no more but what Monſieur Cailliere expected; for tho' at the Treaty of Nimeguen, the French Plenipotentiaries found a way to draw the Dutch to a ſeparate Peace, by making them Jealous of the then Prince of Orange; yet he was perſuaded that the Hollanders were by this time too ſenſible of their former Miſtake, to ſuffer the French to play the ſame Game over again. However, Monſieur Cailliere having poſitive Orders from His Maſter not to acknowledge King William till he had good aſſurances of the Peace, he found out an Expedient; which was, That the States and he ſhould not come to a final Concluſion; but if they found reaſon to agree upon any Point, that the ſame ſhould be Communicated to their Allies. To this Medium the Dutch readily conſented; and amongſt other Particulars, demanded as Preliminaries of this Treaty, the Reſtitution of Lorrain, and of the Towns of Strasburg and Luxemburg. Monſieur Cailliere granted both, in his Maſter's Name; but upon condition, That Lorrain ſhould be reſtor'd to the Duke of that Name, on ſuch Terms only as had been agreed to at Nimeguen. This was oppos'd by the Preſident Canon, who took care of the Duke of Lorrain's Intereſt in Holland, under pretence that when Inclinations toward a General Peace.

1696. when his Maſter enter'd into the Grand Alliance, the Confederates engag'd never to conclude a Peace, till he had full Satisfaction done him; Urging, that if the Duke's Dominions were not reſtor'd to him but upon the Terms of the Peace of Nimeguen, he ſhould rather be a Loſer than a Gainer by the Confederacy; ſince he could have made a better Bargain with the French King, before he enter'd into the War. But as in moſt Alliances great Potentates ſeldom regard the Concerns of thoſe Petty Princes they have engag'd in their Quarrel, when they have no need of them; ſo the Allies, after having ſpoke once or twice in the Duke of Lorrain's behalf, thought it not worth their while to inſiſt any longer upon that Affair: Tho' Preſident Canon gave in ſeveral Memorials, which were ſome time back'd by the Imperial Miniſters; whoſe Maſter was deſirous to prolong the Concluſion of the Treaty, which would leſſen the Dependance of the German Princes upon him. Things being thus far advanc'd on the part of the Dutch, and the Engliſh being rather inclin'd than averſe to a Peace, by reaſon of their great Loſſes at Sea, their heavy Taxes at Home, and the diſheartning Proſpect of getting nothing by the War; It was agreed on all hands, thro' the Mediation of the King of Sweden, and the wiſe Management of the Baron de Lilienroot, his Ambaſſador in Holland, That Plenipotentiaries ſhould be nam'd to bring that to perfection, which as yet was only begun.

To make the Spaniards the more willing to put an end to the War, the Duke de Vendoſme, who this Year commanded the French Forces in Catalonia, reſolv'd to make them feel the power of His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty's Arms, by attacking them in their Camp near Oſtalrick. In order to that, he paſs'd the River Ter; and underſtanding that the Spaniſh Cavalry commanded by the Prince of Heſſe Darmſtadt, had advanc'd out of the Lines to obſerve him, he fell upon them firſt with great Vigor. The Spaniards ſeeing none but Horſe appear againſt them in the beginning, reſolutely ſtood their ground, and forc'd ſome of the French Squadrons to recoil; but when they ſaw the number of the Enemy increaſe, and a ſtrong Body of Infantry come up to ſupport them, they retreated in very good order, under the Cannon planted on their Lines; where the French, greedy of Purſuit, met with ſuch a warm Entertainment, as quickly oblig'd them to retire in their turn. In this Fight, which was the only Action worth remark, that happen'd this Year on this ſide, the Spaniards by their own Confeſſion, loſt near 300 Men, and the French about 200.

The Campaign on the Rhine was ſtill more inconſiderable. Indeed the French in the beginning of the Spring, boaſted their paſſing that River, and forc'd Prince Lewis of Baden to intrench himſelf, to avoid an Engagement: But now towards the end of the Year, the Prince in his turn, croſſes the Rhine near Mentz; and being join'd by the Heſſian Troops, advances to Newſtadt, where the French were ſo ſtrongly intrench'd, that all he could do was to Cannonade them for ſeveral Days. It was at the ſame time ſo contriv'd, that General Thungen ſhould have paſs'd the Rhine, not far from Philipsburg, in order to have attack'd the French in the Rear; but they having notice of that Deſign, detach'd the Marquiſs d' Uxelles to diſappoint it: So that the Germans, after they had got ſome Booty, and divers Hoſtages for Contribution, repaſs'd the Rhine towards the beginning of October, and then march'd into Winter Quarters.

The main Buſineſs of this Year, in relation to the Grand Confederacy, was manag'd on the ſide of Italy. During the Winter, the Court of France renew'd their Intriegues with the Duke of Savoy, to engage him to a ſeparate Peace: The Pope's Nuncio, and the Venetian Envoy, ſeconded the Deſigns of that Crown; and in His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty's Name, made ſuch large and advantageous Offers to his Royal Highneſs, that he at laſt reſolv'd to accept them. 'Tis true, he was tyed by his Word and Honour to the Confederates, but now-a-days the ſignification of theſe Terms among Princes, ſeems to be reſtrain'd to Policy and Intereſt; and not to mention the Example of his Predeceſſors, his Royal Highneſs had often ſeen this Maxim confirm'd by the Practice of ſome of his Neighbours. But beſides, he wanted not plauſible Reaſons to juſtifie his Conduct: For tho' England and Holland had ever punctually paid in the Subſidies they had promis'd him, and even ſomething more, yet the Emperor and King of Spain were much behind-hand in their Contributions and Supplies. Indeed the Allies did not fail to aſſure his Royal Highneſs, that they would procure him Conditions at the General Treaty, as much, if not more advantageous than thoſe France offer'd him at preſent: But thoſe were looſe and diſtant Promiſes, and thoſe of France certain and at hand; and ſupported beſides, by Threats from that Crown, to Invade the reſt of the Duke's Country next Summer with a formidable Army. However, tho' his Royal Highneſs urg'd the Probability of the Effects of this Meaſure to juſtify his Conduct to the Allies; Yet 'tis certain, a ſtronger Motive inclin'd him to a ſeparate Peace; and that was the Matching his Eldeſt Daughter to the Dauphin's Eldeſt Son. It was not ſafe to conclude this Treaty at Turin, where the Duke was narrowly obſerv'd by the Vigilant Lord Galloway; and therefore his Royal Highneſs, to avoid the prying Sagacity of that Miniſter, went towards the Cloſe of the Winter, with a ſmall Retinue of his own naming, to our Lady of Loretto, concealing a Political Journey under the pretence of a Religious Vow. This gave no ſmall Umbrage to the Lord Galloway, who knowing the Prince to be more a Stateſman than a Bigot, and being refus'd to accompany him, ſent Spies after his Royal Highneſs: But notwithſtanding all their Watching, they could never get the leaſt notice of the Treaty of Peace; which the Duke Sign'd at Loretto, by the Mediation of the Agents of Rome and Venice, and a private Meſſenger from the Mareſchal de Catinat. By this Treaty the French reſtor'd to his Royal Highneſs all the new Conqueſts they had made; as alſo Pignerol demoliſh'd: Gave him Four Millions of Livres, towards the Reparation of the Damages he had ſuſtain'd during the War; Engaged to aſſiſt him with 8000 Foot, and 4000 Horſe, to be Maintain'd at the Charge of the King of France; and that a Marriage between the Duke of Burgundy, and the Princeſs, his Royal Highneſs's Daughter, ſhould forthwith be treated on, to be conſummated as ſoon they ſhould be of Age. As for the Princeſs's Portion, it was agreed that the Duke ſhould give her Two Hundred Thouſand Crowns of Gold; toward the Payment of which, his Royal Highneſs was to give a Diſcharge for One Hundred Thouſand Crowns of Gold which remain'd due by France to the Houſe of Savoy, as part of the Dutcheſs Royal's Portion: And the Remainder the King of France promis'd to remit, in conſideration of this preſent Treaty; of which the Pope and Venetians were Guarantees, and which was ſoon after Ratified in France.

1696. Affairs at Sea.

Nor were our Affairs at Sea much more successfull than at Land. All things betray'd on all sides a weakness and wearines of War. At the first breaking out of the Plot, Sir George Rook Commanding the Fleet at Cadiz, had Orders sent him to return home; and he safely came upon our Coasts towards the latter end of April. This dissipated the Fears of England, lest the French Fleet from Thoulon should overtake and ruin our inferior number of Ships. And indeed the French were not far behind. For before Sir George could pursue the Orders of joyning with some Men of War that lay in the Downs, and then bearing for the Coast of Brest to Intercept and Fight them, they were got safe into that and other Neighbouring Ports of France. Hereupon Sir George Rook left the French Coast and went into Torbay May 23. from whence he set out for London, to assist at the Admiralty Board, having resign'd the command of the Fleet to the Lord Berkley; who about June 24. Sail'd out of Torbay, steering his Course towars Ushant, in order to insult the Coast of France. On July the 3*d*. his Lordship commanded the Burford and the Newcastle Man of War, with a Fireship, to land on the Island of Groy, and at the same time some small Vessels were sent along the Shore. The next day the Fleet came to an Anchor about two Leagues off Belle-Isle, and the Barges and Pinaces were immediately Mann'd, and order'd to land upon Horeal one of the Islands call'd the Cardinals, which they did without any oppositi-on either from the Inhabitants, or the Garison of the adjacent Fort; made themselves Masters of the whole Island, and Burnt the Town of Horeal: they afterwards did the like upon the Island of Hodicke. On the 5*th*. Three more Englisb, and Two Dutch Men of War, with the Long Boats of divers other Ships, and seven Hundred Soldiers and Mariners, were sent to joyn the Burford and Newcastle at Groy, who finish'd what Captain Fitzpatrick had begun: having Destroyed there about Twenty Villages, Kill'd and carried away 1300 head of Black Cattle and Horses, and taken Twenty Boats and small Vessels. While this was doing near Bell-Isle, Sir Martin Beckman with the Bomb-Vessels and a Squadron of Ten Men of War under the Command of Captain Mees, arrived on July 5*th*. before St. Martin's, a Trading and Wealthy Town in the Isle of Rhee, going in with French Colours, which they took down when they Anchor'd. In the Evening Sir Martin Beckman began the Bombardment, and that Night and the next Day fired about Two Thousand Bombs and Carcasses with such success, that the greatest and richest part of the Town was Burnt down, or miserably Shatter'd; the French at last recover'd their Surprize, and brought down Canon and Mortars to the front of the Town towards the Sea, and began to Fire upon the Englisb, who contenting themselves with the Damage already done to St. Martins, bore away towards Clonne, where they had but little Succes, through a mistake of the Situation of the Place. The French thought the Mischief done upon their Coasts to be in some manner reveng'd by the Bold and Famous Du Bart, who on June 8*th*. with Eight Men of War, and Four Privateers fell in with a great Fleet of Dutch Merchant Ships, bound home from the Sound, under Convoy of Six or Seven Frigats, about Six Leagues off the Ulie, and having taken the said Frigats and Burnt four of them, he destroy'd about Thirty of the Merchant Ships, and took several of the Rest.

Our Insulting the French Coasts.

In the next Session of Parliament the Commons in considering the State of the Nation, took notice of the late Miscarriages of the Fleet; and on November the 4*th*. Ordered Sir George Rook to attend the House to give an Account, Why the French Thoulon Squadron was not Intercepted in going into Brest? That Admiral attended accordingly, and produced Copies of his Journal, and of the Orders he had received from the Admiralty; which being Examin'd, Sir Cloudsley Shovel was likewise Order'd to lay before the House the Copies of all such Instructions as he had received from the Admiralty, in order to the joyning Sir George Rook. Soon after Sir Robert Rich from the Commissioners of the Admiralty, presented to the House of Commons Copies of all Orders sent both to Sir George and Sir Cloudsly, in relation to the Fleet in General, between January the 1*st*. 1696. and the time the French got into Brest; as also an Account of what Intelligences they received of the Thoulon Squadron's fitting out, and their Motion towards Brest. When nothing of discovery was made by the Commons, the Lords appointed a Committee to make an Enquiry concerning the Thoulon Squadron's getting into Brest, without any Opposition? But neither could their Lordships tell where to lay the Blame.

1696.

State of Scotland.

The Parliament of Scotland met at Edinburgh on September 8. and the Lord Murray lately created Earl of Tullebardine, His Majesty's High Commissioner, made a Speech to them on occasion of their Meeting; as did likewise the Lord Polwarth, Lord High Chancellor of Scotland. Two Days after, the King's Letter to the Parliament was Read; after which, Committees were appointed, as usual, for the Security of the Kingdom, for Trade and Controverted Elections. Then all the Members Sign'd an Association, being the same in substance with that which the Parliament of England had Subscribed. They soon Resolved to give His Majesty a Supply of 1440000 Pound Scots, to be raised by a Land-Ces, and an additional Excise, for maintaining the Standing Forces both by Sea and Land. They order'd an Act to be brought in for securing their Religion, Lives and Properties, in case His Majesty should come to an untimely Death; and another for obliging all in Publick Trust to Sign the Association. On the 20*th*. of September the Parliament Read and Approved the latter of the said Acts, as also their Answer to the King's Letter; and on the 25*th*. the Lord Commissioner gave the Royal Assent to the Act for the Supply, and to some others. On October the 9*th*. his Grace return'd to the Parliament, and touch'd with the Scepter, An Act for the Security of the Kingdom. An Act in favour of Preachers at Vacant Churches. An Act in favour of the Universities, Schools and Hospitals. An Act for the Levy of 1000 Men. An Act against Protestant Servants in Popish Families. An Act for better providing of the Poor. An Act against Prophaneness; and several other Acts. And on the 12*th*. of October, the Parliament was Adjourned to the 8*th*. of December following.

State of Ireland.

In Ireland, the Lord Capel, Lord Deputy, after a long Sickness Died on May the 30*th*. whereupon the Council in pursuance of an Act made 33. Henry VIII. Elected the Lord Chancellor Porter to be Lord Justice and Chief Governor of that Kingdom, till His Majesty's Pleasure was known. On June the 27*th*. the Irish Parliament met at Dublin: In the Lords House the King's Commission was Read, appointing the Lord Chief Justice Hely to be their Speaker; who being Sworn, a Motion was made and unanimously agreed to, that the whole House with their Speaker, should wait on the Lord Justice Porter, to Congratulate his being placed in the Government

1696. ment of that Kingdom; the Commons at the same time having first expell'd Mr. Sanderson, the only Member of their House who refus'd to sign the Association, made the same Unanimous Vote; and in the Afternoon both Houses attended the Lord Justice, and then adjourned to the 4th of August; upon which Day Sir Charles Porter, Lord Chancellor, and the Earls of Montrath and Drogheda, lately appointed Lords Justices, and General Governors of Ireland, signified His Majesty's Pleasure to the Parliament, That they should further adjourn themselves. On Dec. 8. in the Evening Sir Charles Porter was seized with an Apoplectick Fit, and died immediately; and the 10th at Night his Corps was privately interr'd at Christ-Church.

Proceedings of the Lords Justices in England.

The Lords Justices of England during His Majesty's Absence, did all that was possible to preserve the Peace, and to improve the Honour of the Nation. By Proclamation dated the 18th of May, they prorogued the Parliament from June 16 to July 28, and so on by short Intervals till His Majesty's Return. By another Proclamation dated May 23. they appointed a General Fast to be observed on Friday, June 26. for a Special Blessing on His Majesty's Righteous Undertakings, and that God would consummate the Deliverance of these Nations, by settling the same in a firm and lasting State of Peace, Security and Prosperity. On May 30. They gave an Order in Council, That Mr. Attorney General should prosecute all such Persons who had enter'd into Unlawful Confederacies and Agreements, whereby they had engag'd and obliged each other under Penalties, not to employ any Persons in making the Woollen and other Manufactures of this Kingdom. On July 2. They made another Order in Council, That the Justices of Peace should frequently meet in their Divisions, and consult how they may relieve the Labourers and poorer sort of People, who suffer Hardship by the great Difficulty in the Exchange of Money. On July 17. they issued a Proclamation for apprehending the Famous Pyrate Henry Every and his Crew, who had committed several Depredations in the East-Indies, to the great prejudice of the English Company and Trade. On August 31. they publish'd a Proclamation for apprehending William Birkenhead, who being committed to Newgate for High-Treason, had made his Escape out of the said Prison. On Sept. 10. another Proclamation for apprehending Captain William Wintour of Dymock, in the County of Glocester, and several other Clippers and Coiners. On Sep. 24. they made an Order in Council for encouraging the Coining of New Money in Gold and Silver.

The King leaves the Army.

King William being weary of a Campaign that afforded him no Opportunity for Action, left the Army towards the latter end of August, under the Command of the Elector of Bavaria, and went to His usual Diversion of Stag-hunting, about His Royal Palaces of Dieren and Loo. On the 14th of September His Majesty set out from this Place, accompanied by the Duke of Zell (a Prince whom he ever respected as a Father, and lov'd as a Bosom Friend) and the next Day went to Cleves, where he was magnificently entertain'd by the Court of Brandenburgh, who were come thither on purpose to receive His Visit. Having spent two Days at this Agreeable Place, His Majesty and His Dear Companion, the Duke of Zell, went back to Loo, where three Days after he was followed by the Electoral Prince of Brandenburgh, in return of His Majesty's Visit at that Court. Having staid three Weeks longer at this Place, His Majesty went to the Hague, and on the 14th of October, (N. S.) embarked on board the William and Mary Yatch, attended by several other Yatches, and a Squadron of Men of War, under the Command of Vice-Admiral Aylmer. Two Days after, His Majesty landed at Margate, and arrived the same Evening at Kensington, where on the 8th of the same Month (O. S.) the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen of London attended His Majesty, and Mr. Recorder, in the Name of the City, "Did Congratulate His Majesty's "Safe Return, and gave Him their Hearty "Thanks for His Princely Care, and Indefatigable Pains for the Safety of His Own Kingdoms, "and the Security of Christendom; with the "Humble Assurance of the City's Sincere Affection, and Constant Loyalty, which they would "upon all Occasions effectually demonstrate to "the utmost of their Power." His Majesty received their Compliment very graciously, and on that Occasion conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon John Johnson, Esq; one of the Aldermen, and upon John Wolfe, and Samuel Blewett, Esquires, the Present Sheriffs. No other Honour had been conferr'd during the King's Absence, save only that the Duke of Glocester on his Birth-day, July 24, being now seven Years of Age compleat, was Install'd Knight of the Garter, in the Chapel of St. George at Windsor, with great Order and Magnificence. And all the Companions and other Nobility there present, were splendidly entertain'd by her Royal Highness the Princess Anne of Denmark; the Evening concluded with a Ball at Court, and an Excellent New Ode and Musick in Honour of his Highness's Birth-day, and with Ringing of Bells, Bonfires and Illuminations. On Sep. 18. Mr. Serjeant Blencowe was appointed by the King to be one of the Barons of the Exchequer, in the room of Mr. Justice Turton, who was removed to the Court of Kings Bench, upon the Death of Mr. Justice Gregory.

Duke of Glocester Knight of the Garter.

On Tuesday, Octob. 20. the Parliament met at Westminster, and the King being seated on the Throne, with the usual Solemnity, made this Speech to both Houses.

Parliament meets.

My Lords and Gentlmen,

King's Speech.

"I Have called you together as soon as was possible; and I think it a great Happiness "that this Year has pass'd without any Disadvantage Abroad, or Disorder at Home, consider"ing Our great Disappointment in the Funds gi"ven at your last Meeting, and the Difficulties "which have arisen upon the Re-coining of the "Money.

"This is so Convincing a Proof of the good "Dispositon of My Army, and of the Steady "Affections of My People, that I cannot "but take notice of it with great Satisfaction.

"Our Enemies have not been without hopes, "That such a Conjuncture might have prov'd "fatal to us: But as they have failed in those Ex"pectations, so I am fully persuaded that your "Unanimous Proceedings in this Session will "make them for ever Despair of an Ad"vantage from any Disagreement among Our "Selves.

"It must be confessed, that the Business which "you have before you will be very great, because "of the necessity of supplying former Deficien"cies, as well as making Provisions for the next "Year's Service.

"And upon this Occasion it is fit for Me to ac"quaint you, that some Overtures have been "made in order to the entring upon a Negotiati"on for a General Peace: But I am sure We shall "agree in Opinion, That the only Way of treat"ing with France, is with Our Swords in Our "Hands; and that We can have no reason to ex-

1696. "pect a Safe and Honourable Peace, but by shewing Our Selves prepar'd to make a Vigorous and "Effectual War: In order to which, I do very "earnestly recommend to you, Gentlemen of the "House of Commons, That you would consider of "raising the Necessary Supplies, as well for maintaining the Honour of Parliaments in making "good the Funds already granted, as for carrying on the War the next Year; which I think "ought not to be less than what was intended to be raised for that purpose the last Session.

"I must also put you in mind of the Civil-"List, which cannot be supported without your "Help; and the Miserable Condition of the "French Protestants does oblige Me to mention "them to you again.

My Lords and Gentlemen.

"It may deserve your Consideration, whether "there do not still remain some Inconveniencies "relating to the Coin, which ought to be remedied: And I hope you'll find out the best Expedients for the recovery of Credit, which is "absolutely necessary, not only with respect to "the War, but for carrying on of Trade.

"I am of Opinion, that there is not one good "Englishman, who is not entirely convinc'd how "much does depend upon this Session; and therefore I cannot but hope for your Unanimity "and Dispatch in your Resolutions, which at "this time are more necessary than ever for the "Safety and Honour of England.

Proceedings of the Commons.

The Commons having appointed their Grand Committees, for Religion, for Grievances, for Trade, for Courts of Justice, and for Privileges and Elections, resolved Nemine contradicente, "That they would support His Majesty and His "Government against all His Enemies both at "Home and Abroad, and that they would effectually assist Him in the Prosecution and carrying on the present War against France: And "that an Humble Address should be prepared to "be presented to His Majesty pursuant to the "said Resolution." Which Address was drawn up by Mr. Mountague, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and presented to His Majesty on October 23. by the whole House in these Words:

Address to the King.

May it please Your Most Excellent Majesty.

"This is the Eighth Year in which your Ma-"jesty's Most Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the "Commons in Parliament assembled, have assisted Your Majesty with large Supplies for carrying on a Just and Necessary War, in Defence of "our Religion, Preservation of our Laws, and "Vindication of the Rights and Liberties of the "People of England; which we have hitherto "preserved; and, by the Blessing of God, upon "Your Majesty's Conduct and Good Government, will stedfastly maintain and entail on "our Posterity.

"This has cost the Nation much Blood and "Treasure, but the Hopes of accomplishing so "Great and Glorious a Work, have made Your "Subjects cheerfully support the Charge. And "to show to Your Majesty, and all Christendom, "that the Commons of England will not be amused or diverted from their Firm Resolutions of "obtaining by War a Safe and Honourable Peace, "we do, in the Name of all those we represent, "renew our Assurances to Your Majesty, That "this House will support Your Majesty and Your "Government against all Your Enemies both at "Home and Abroad; and that they will effectually assist You in the prosecution and carrying "on the Present War against France.

His Majesty in Answer was pleased to express Himself thus kindly. 1696.

Gentlemen,

The continuance of Your Zeal and Affection is the Thing of the World I value most, and I will answer it by all the Ways I can think of; and will make your Good, and the Safety of the Nation, the Principal Care of my Life.

The Commons proceed to Business.

These Assurances of Affection on the one side, of Loyalty on the other, and of Mutual Confidence on Both, being happily given, the Commons enter'd with great Alacrity upon the Three Great Affairs that had been recommended to 'em from the Throne: To wit, The further remedying the Ill State of the Coin: The providing a Supply for the next Year's Service: And the restoring of Publick Credit. All which had a near dependance one upon the other, and made the Difficulties more intricate and hard to compose.

State of the Coin.

In order to remove the First and the Last, the Commons resolved on their very first Day of meeting, That They would not alter the Standard of the Gold or Silver in Fineness, Weight or Denomination; and that they will make good all Parliamentary Funds since His Majesty's Accession to the Crown, that have been made Credits for Loan from the Subject. And because the Circulation of Guineas was obstructed by reason of the want of other Coin, and by reason of the Act made the last Session, to take off the Obligation of Coining Gold, a Bill was Order'd to be brought in Oct. 22. For the giving leave to import Guineas, and to Coin Gold at the Mint: And that they might proceed in their Debates with the less Reflection from Abroad, they censur'd a Printed Pamphlet, Entituled, An Account of the Proceedings in the House of Commons, in relation to the Recoining the Clipt Money, and Falling the Price of Guineas; as False, Scandalous and Seditious, and Destructive of the Freedom and Liberties of Parliament; and order'd the said Pamphlet to be burnt by the Common Hangman, and address'd His Majesty to issue His Proclamation, promising a Reward of 500 l. for the Discovery of the Author of that Libel. And two Days after the House being inform'd of a Printed Paper, Entituled, A Summary Account of the Proceedings upon the Happy Discovery of the Jacobite Conspiracy, They resolv'd, "That the Printing the Names of the Members "of their House, and reflecting on them for their "Proceedings in Parliament, was a Breach of the "Privileges of that House, and destructive of the "Freedom and Liberties of Parliament." On Octob. 28. two other Bills were likewise order'd to be drawn up; One, For the further Remedying the Ill State of the Coin; and the other, For encouraging the bringing in Plate into the Mint to be Coin'd: Which at last with great Application were put into one Bill; and on Dec. 3. the King came into the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to, 1. An Act for Importing and Coining Guineas and Half-Guineas. 2. An Act to Explain that Part of the Act passed the last Session of Parliament, for laying several Duties on Low Wines, and Spirits of the first Extraction; and for preventing the Frauds and Abuses of Brewers, Distillers and other Persons chargeable with the Duties of Excise, which relates to the Payment of Tallies, and the Interest thereof. 3. An Act for the further remedying the Ill State of the Coin of the Kingdom. Acts passed.

Supply.

As for the Supply, the Commons having consider'd the State of the War for the Year 1697, both in relation to the Navy and Land Forces, which at their Desire, His Majesty order'd to be laid before them, they granted the Sum of Two Millions Three Hundred Seventy Two Thousand One Hundred Ninety Seven Pounds, for the main-

1696. Maintenance of Forty Thouſand Seamen, and of the Two Marine Regiments; and for the Ordinary of the Navy, and the Charge of the Regiſtry of Seamen; And the Sum of Two Millions Five Hundred Seven Thouſand Eight Hundred and Eighty Two Pounds, both for the Maintaining Eighty Seven Thouſand Four Hundred and Forty Men, which according to the Liſt of the Land-Forces delivered into the Houſe, they Voted neceſſary to be employ'd in England, and beyond the Seas; and for the Extraordinary Service of the Office of Ordnance, the Pay of the General Officers, and the Charge of the Tranſports, Hoſpitals, and other Contingencies of the War. Beſides which, they afterwards on December 23. Voted a Supply of One Hundred Twenty Five Thouſand Pounds, for making good the Deficiency in Recoining Hammer'd Money, and the Recompence to be given for bringing Plate into the Mints to be Coined.

Ways and Means. The Ways and Means of raiſing this Supply, were, Firſt, A General Capitation or Poll-Tax: Secondly, A Tax of Three Shillings in the Pound upon Land: And Thirdly, A Duty upon all Paper, Paſtboard, Velum and Parchment, Imported or made in this Kingdom.

Loſs of Credit to be Retriev'd. But ſtill the greateſt Difficulty of all, was the Loſs of Publick Credit: For the Tallies ſtruck, or Funds ſettled by Parliament, eſpecially ſuch as were remote, were exchang'd for ready Money, at a mighty Loſs: And the Government was oblig'd to make exceſſive Diſcounts and Allowances to bring Treaſure into the Exchequer. This great Loſs of Credit, which was like to prove fatal to our Affairs abroad the laſt Summer, aroſe chiefly from two Springs: Firſt, the Deficiencies of Parliamentary Funds, particularly the unhappy Project of the Land-Bank, which proved wholly Abortive, and did not produce one Penny of above Two Millions and a half with which it was charged: Secondly, The Recoining of our Silver. The firſt created Truſt, and the latter deſtroy'd it, by making Money to be very ſcarce. 'Tis eaſie to imagine what periſhing Circumſtances the Nation was in, when the Notes of the Bank of England, which had been a mighty help to the Publick, were diſcounted at Twenty, and Tallies at Forty, Fifty, or Sixty per Cent. The Government had Contracted a great Debt; ſome Funds were wholly taken away, and the reſt proved Deficient; great Numbers of Tallies were on Funds very remote, and many had no Funds at all. Hereby the Truſt and good Opinion of the People were ſo far loſt, that thoſe few who had any Money to lend, ſhew'd the greateſt backwardneſs imaginable to bring it into the Exchequer, when they could Stock-job it to ſo great Advantage upon the Royal-Exchange; and therefore all Loans to the Government were procured on Exorbitant Præmiums.

Great Difficulty. All Men were amaz'd and confounded at this Obſtruction to Trade and Credit, and hardly believ'd that the Wit of Man was able to find out any Expedient, that could be effectual to retrieve ſo great a Miſchief. The Nation is more obliged to the Wiſdom, Sagacity, and Eloquence of Mr. Mountague, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who Animated the whole Deſign, and Projected the moſt happy Methods to bring it to a happy Effect. On November 25. the Commons Reſolved, That a Supply be Granted to His Majeſty to make good the Deficiencies of Parliamentary Funds; and afterwards order'd an Eſtimate to be laid before them, of what Sums were, or would be wanting to ſatisfie and diſcharge all Principal and Intereſt due, or to become due on the ſeveral Aids, Duties, or Funds, over and above all Arrears, ſtanding out upon them which were determin'd; and beſides all Moneys to be rais'd by ſuch as were then unexpir'd. And the Computation of all the particular Sums that were wanting to make good all the Deficient Funds, being made, the whole amounted to Five Millions, One Hundred and Sixty Thouſand, Four Hundred Pounds. Having now got to the bottom of the Diſeaſe, they Reſolved on a thorough Cure. For being ſenſible, that had ſome Deficiencies been taken care of, and others neglected, publick Credit muſt have continued Lame, and the Government have Halted, if it had not fallen to the Ground, they judg'd it of abſolute neceſſity to make Proviſion for the whole; that ſo there ſhould remain no Tally without a Fund, nor any Tally on a Deficient Fund, but what in its courſe of Payment ſhould be ſatisfied and diſcharged. In order to this, they continued divers Duties ariſing not only by the Cuſtoms, but by continued and additional Impoſitions; Paper and Parchment, Births, Marriages, and Burials, Windows, the Subſidy of Tonnage and Poundage, after the Day on which they would otherwiſe have expir'd, to the 1*ſt.* Day of Auguſt, 1706. and appointed all the Moneys which ſhould ariſe, and be brought into His Majeſty's Exchequer from any of theſe Taxes or Duties, from the Day on which they were otherwiſe to Expire, to the ſaid Firſt Day of Auguſt, 1706. to be the General Fund for making good all the Deficient ones, by the Satisfaction and Payment of the Principal and Intereſt due, or become due thereupon. And that all occaſion of Complaint might be remov'd, and equal Proviſion made for all, the Parliament directed that all Moneys ariſing from the Duties, ſo as before continued and appropriated for the General Fund, ſhould be diſtributed and applied to pay Principal and Intereſts upon every one of the Deficient Funds, in proportion to the Sum of which they were deficient; and that all the Money which ſhould be in ſuch a due Proportion diſtributed or placed to the Account of each deficient Tax or Fund, for the diſcharge of Principal and Intereſt, ſhould be paid out to all who were intitled to receive the ſame, in ſuch Courſe and Order, as if the ſame were Moneys really ariſing by the reſpective deficient Funds, and that without being Diverted, Miſapplied, or Poſtpon'd; and made the Officers of His Majeſty's Treaſury liable to great Penalties, in caſe this Method were not obſerved. Moreover, to remove all Doubts about the Security intended to be given, in caſe on the 1*ſt.* of Auguſt, 1706. or within Three Months, then next enſuing, the whole Produce of the ſeveral Funds and Revenues appropriated for a General Fund, together with other Grants then in being, ſhould not be ſufficient to diſcharge the Sum of Five Millions, One Hundred and Sixty Thouſand Four Hundred Pounds, intended to be diſcharged, that then what was deficient, ſhould be made good out of ſuch Aids or Revenues as ſhould be granted in the next Seſſion of Parliament. Thus the Commons, by an admirable Stroke of Wiſdom, as well as a noble Act of publick Juſtice, provided a ſufficient Security for this great Debt that lay heavy on the Nation; which was all that could be demanded or expected, at a time when Money was not in being, and therefore not to be had. And becauſe all the Branches of Publick Credit did plainly depend on, and mutually ſupport one another, the Parliament took into Conſideration, by what means they might Buoy up the Credit of the Bank of England, which was then ready to ſink.

To make good the Deficiencies.

Great Honour and Juſtice.

1696.

In

1696. Ways and Means. In order to this, the Parliament on February 3. Agreed to augment the common Capital Stock of the Bank of England, by admitting new Subſcriptions; which new Subſcriptions ſhould be made good in Tallies and Bank-Notes. The Proportion was Four Fifths of the Firſt, and one Fifth of the Laſt, and an Intereſt of Eight per Cent. was allow'd, as well for ſuch Tallies that ſhould be brought in to enlarge their Stock by new Subſcriptions, as for thoſe Tallies which the Company was then poſſeſſed of; provided they did not exceed the Value of thoſe Bank-Notes which ſhould be paid in upon this Engraftment on their Stock; and for ſecuring the Payment of this Intereſt of Eight per Cent. the Additional Duty on Salt was afterwards granted and appropriated. The time of the continuance of the Bank of England, they thought fit to extend to the Year 1710. and Reſolv'd likewiſe, "That before the Day were fix'd for the beginning of New Subſcriptions, the old Stock be "made One Hundred per Cent. and that what "ſhould exceed that Value, ſhould be divided "among the old Members. That all the Intereſt "due on thoſe Tallies which ſhould be ſubſcribed into the Bank-Stock, at the time appointed "for Subſcriptions, (to the end of the laſt preceding Quarter, on each Tally) be allow'd as "Principal. That Liberty be given by Parliament to enlarge the Number of Bank-Bills, "to the Value of the Sum which ſhould be ſo "ſubſcribed, over and above the 1200000 l. "provided they be obliged to anſwer ſuch Bills "at Demand; and in Default thereof, to be anſwer'd by the Exchequer out of the firſt Money "due to them. That no other Bank be Erected, Permitted, or Allow'd by Act of Parliament within this Kingdom, during the Continuance of the Bank of England. That on "ſuch new Settlement, the Bank of England be "exempted from all manner of Parliamentary "Taxes. That no Act of the Corporation "ſhould Forfeit the particular Intereſt of any "Perſon concerned therein. That Proviſion be "made for the effectual preventing the Officers "of the Exchequer, and all other Officers and Receivers of the Revenue, from diverting, delaying, or obſtructing the Courſe of Payments "to the Bank. That Care be taken to prevent "the Abetting, Counterfeiting, or Forging any "Bank-Bills or Notes; as likewiſe againſt the "Defacing, Raſing, or Altering any Indorſement upon any ſuch Bill or Note. That the "Eſtate and Intereſt of each Member in the "Stock of the Corporation, be made a Perſonal "Eſtate. And Laſtly, That no Contract or Agreement made for any Bank-Stock to be "Bought or Sold, be Valid in Law or Equity, "unleſs the ſaid Contract be actually Regiſtred "in the Books of the Bank within Seven Days, "and actually transferr'd within Fourteen Days "next, after the making ſuch Contract." Upon which Encouragements, a Million was Subſcribed and paid in Tallies and Bank-Notes, as the Parliament had directed. This Expedient was the Reſult of Mr. Charles Mountague's Skill and Prudence; and tho' many Perſons who were Intereſted in it, could not preſently apprehend the Reaſonableneſs of it, yet the Advantages they afterwards receiv'd, did fully convince them, that no other way could have been found to call back their ſinking Credit: For the Value of Two Hundred Thouſand Pounds in Bank-Notes being ſunk by the New Subſcription, the reſt, as it was reaſonable to believe they would, began preſently to riſe in worth; and ſo likewiſe did the Tallies, after ſo many as amounted to Eight Hundred Thouſand Pounds were paid in to enlarge the Bank. Upon this, the Credit of the Bank recover'd apace; till in a ſhort time their Notes, which bore no Intereſt, were equal with Money; and their Bills that bore Intereſt, better than Money: And by this means the Face of Affairs was quickly much changed for the better; Credit began to revive, and Money to circulate on Moderate Terms; Foreign Exchange was leſs to our Diſadvantage, and ſoon after came to an Equality: And whatever Hardſhips the People had undergone by reaſon of a long and expenſive War, and the Recoining the Silver Money, which could not but occaſion many Complaints, yet the greateſt part attributed this to the Neceſſity of Affairs, and began to hope, both from the Proſpect of a Peace, and the Wiſdom of thoſe at the Helm, that they ſhould enjoy more favourable Times. 1696.

Want of Money in Specie. Another Evil of no leſs Difficulty or Importance than the loſs of Credit, (and which, as was hinted before, was one of the Springs of the latter) remain'd ſtill to be removed; and that was the great Scarcity of Money. The Parliament to prevent Diſappointments, by ſettling Funds which might be Deficient, came to a Reſolution on November 20. That the Supplies for the Service of the Year 1697. ſhould be raiſed within the Year. But how could above Five Millions be raiſed within the Year, while the Silver Money was called in, and Recoining, and there was not Current Coin enough in the Nation, to anſwer the Occaſions of Trade, and ſcarcely the Conveniencies and Neceſſities of Life? This Vote of Parliament ſeem'd impracticable; the Enemies of the Government made themſelves Merry with it; and inſtead of raiſing their Spleen, 'twas the Entertainment of their pleaſant Humour: And many, even of the beſt Friends of the Government, imagin'd that the Parliament by this, rather expreſs'd their Zeal and Willingneſs, than their Ability to ſupport the State, and maintain the preſent Settlement. But this Parliament, for whoſe Wiſdom it was reſerv'd to ſurmount Difficulties that were look'd on as Invincible, made Money without Bullion, and diſtributed great quantity of Coin without the help of the Mint. This they did by Authorizing the Lords of the Treaſury, to Iſſue out Bills from the Exchequer, to the Value, firſt and laſt, of above Two Millions; which Bills were firſt appointed to be brought in and ſunk upon the Capitation-Tax. But before the Seſſion ended, the Parliament being convinc'd by the firſt Collection of that Duty, that it would prove very deficient; they appointed the Exchequer Bills to be brought in, on any other of the King's Duties or Revenues, excepting the Land-Tax; and allow'd an Intereſt of Seven Pounds Twelve Shillings per Annum, upon the ſecond Iſſuing the ſaid Bills out of the Exchequer, whereas at firſt they bore no Intereſt. By this the Parliament laid a good Foundation for Paper Money to ſupply the Place of our Silver Coin; for ſo many Payments were at this time to be made into the Exchequer, that when the People had aſſurance given them, that the Exchequer Notes ſhould be received back again in payment of the King's Taxes, they were very well ſatisfied to take them, at firſt indeed at ſmall Diſcount, but not long after at an Equality. A great number of theſe Notes were only for Five or Ten Pounds, which anſwer'd the neceſſity of Commerce among the Meaner People, for the Common Conveniences of Life. And that thoſe who had advanced Money on Loans on any part of the King's Revenues, might not be obliged to receive it back in Notes that were under the Value of Money, to ſtrengthen the Reputation of theſe Bills, the Parliament authorized the Lords of the Treaſury to contract with any Corporation, Supplied by Exchequer Bills.

1696. on, or Numbers of Private Men, and to allow them a competent Premium, provided they oblig'd themſelves to exchange thoſe Notes for Ready Money, when tender'd to them for that purpoſe; which the Lords of the Treaſury did accordingly. The Credit of the Exchequer Notes being thus ſecur'd, they daily aroſe nearer to Par, till at laſt they exceeded the Value of Money: And whereas the Truſtees, with whom the Government had contracted to exchange them, were at firſt allow'd Ten per Cent, as a Premium, they were ſince contented to do it for Four. Theſe Bills paſs'd as ſo many Counters, which the People were ſatisfied to receive, becauſe they knew the Exchequer would receive them again as ſo much Ready Money: And theſe State-Counters ſo well ſupply'd the want of Money, till New Coin was iſſued from the Mint, that Trade and Commerce were maintain'd, and Mutual Payments well enough made, to anſwer the Neceſſities of the Government and the People. This Project (which proved an Effectual, though a Paper Prop to ſupport the State, when its Silver Pillars, if I may ſo ſpeak, were for a time remov'd) was likewiſe owing to the Prudence and Induſtry of Mr. Charles Mountague, as well as that of recoining the Money; which thoſe very Men, who envied moſt his Succeſs in the Houſe of Commons, and Growing Power at Court, were afterwards contented to call a Fortunate Temerity.

Caſe of Sir John Fenwick.

The greateſt Interruption to the more Publick Affairs, was the Caſe of Sir John Fenwick, a Perſon concern'd in the late Conſpiracy, who endeavouring to fly over into France, under the Name of Thomas Ward, was ſeized at New-Romney in Kent, and from thence brought up to London, and on June the 11*th.* committed Priſoner to the Tower, and afterwards to Newgate. As ſoon as he was Apprehended, he Wrote a Letter with a Black-Lead Pencil to his Lady, in theſe Words.

His Letter to his Lady.

"What I Fear'd is at laſt happen'd; had I gone "alone, I had done it; but the other was Be- "tray'd from London. It is God's Will, ſo we "muſt ſubmit; I know nothing can ſave my "Life, but my Lord Carlile's going over to * Him, "back'd by the reſt of the Family of the How- "ards to Beg it; and offering that I will be "abroad all His Time, where I cannot Hurt "Him, and that I will never Draw Sword "againſt him. I muſt leave it to you what elſe "to ſay. All Friends muſt be made. My Lord "Devonſhire may perhaps by my Lady; my Lord "Godolphin and my Lord Pembroke by my Lady "Montgomery. Mr. Nelſon by the Biſhop of Can- "terbury. My Lord Arran might engage his Bro- "ther Selkirk to uſe his Intereſt with Keppel. My Lord alſo will "have an opportunity to engage † Benting, and "get my Lord of Eſſex to joyn with him. I "cannot think what elſe to ſay, but the great "Care muſt be the Jury; if Two or Three "could be got that would Starve the reſt; That "or nothing can Save me. Money I know "would do it; but alas! that is not to be had, "nor ſhall I get enough for Counſel. I beg of "you not to think of being ſhut up with me; "I know it will Kill you, and beſides I have no "ſuch Friend as you to take care of my Buſi- "neſs: Though it would be the Comfort of my "Life, the little time it laſts, to have you with "me: and I have this only Comfort now left, "that my Death will make you eaſy. My "Deareſt Life, grieve not for me, but Reſign "me to God's Will. You will hear as ſoon as they "bring me to Town, where they put me, and "then I would have a Servant or ſome-body "with me. I am Interrupted, ſo can ſay no more "now. Engage Sir John Lowther, the new "Lord, who has more Intereſt than any Body. "Let my Lord Scarſdale engage Jermaine, to "engage Overkirk for me. Speak to my Lady "Arlington. If my Tryal could be put off till "the King comes back, there would be more "Opportunity to Sollicite him. 1696.

* Meaning King William.

† The Earl of Portland.

This Letter being delivered to Mr. Webber, the Companion of Sir John Fenwick's Flight, was Intercepted by the Mayor of Romney, and brought to the Lords Juſtices. Sir John, who was Ignorant of the Miſcarriage, at his Firſt Examination before their Excellencies denyed every thing he was Charged with. Whereupon the Lords Juſtices producing the Letter, told him, He was not of the ſame Mind when he Wrote that Paper; To which Sir John made no Reply; but laying it down, was confounded into Shame and Silence.

Sir John Fenwick makes a Sham-Plot.

There was another Expedient of double Dealing, ſuggeſted to Sir John Fenwick, by a Perſon, who though he had been a great Inſtrument in the late Revolution, yet to gratifie a private Reſentment, adviſed Sir John to ſet up a Counter-Plot, by Impeaching ſeveral of the King's Beſt and Heartieſt Friends, as Guilty of Conſpiring againſt His Majeſty. Accordingly Sir John deliver'd a Paper to the Government, wherein he ſaid in general, there were in England a ſettled number of Perſons to manage the Affairs of King James. And being afterwards put upon to name thoſe Perſons, and to deſcend to Particulars, he gave in another Writing, wherein among other things he pretended, that the Duke of Shrewsbury came again into the Office of Secretary of State by the Operation and Conſent of King James; and that his Grace was in Treaty with that Monarch, before he laid down the Seals. That the Lord Marlborough had promiſed King James ſome Service, which had inclined His Majeſty to promiſe him his Pardon. That the Earl of Bath was to Betray Plimouth into the Hands of the French King. That Admiral Ruſſel, and the Lord Godolphin, were likewiſe in King James's Intereſt: And that Commiſſary Crawford had ſent over to France a Liſt of the Forces in England. Theſe Informations at firſt ſtartled not only the Court, but the King Himſelf, and gained Sir John Fenwick ſome time: But being ſenſible that this Sham muſt at laſt be diſcover'd, he at the ſame time endeavour'd to get off, at leaſt, one of the Two Evidences who ſwore the Treaſons againſt him at the Seſſions; well knowing, that according to the late Act, One was not ſufficient in a Capital Accuſation.

This Succeſs was fully accompliſh'd in the Perſon of Cardell Goodman; who, for a large Sum of Money given him, withdrew himſelf into France; And, tho' by that means there ſeem'd to be no more Danger for Sir John's Life; yet both he and his Friends could have wiſh'd that Captain Porter, the other Witneſs, had likewiſe been ſpirited away; and to that end they made large Offers to him by an Iriſh Peruke-Maker, call'd Clancey. The Captain, who had a good Penſion from the King, and was loth to truſt a Party he had lately betray'd, diſcover'd the whole Intrigue to the Government: Who finding themſelves abus'd by theſe Clandeſtine Practices of the Jacobites, and having no room left to bring the Criminal to

Puniſh-

1696. Puniſhment by the ordinary Courſe of Law; the King gave Admiral Ruſſel leave to acquaint the Houſe of Commons with theſe Proceedings, and lay before them the ſeveral Papers which were given in by Sir John Fenwick, in the Nature of Information againſt himſelf, and ſeveral other Perſons of Quality. This the Admiral on November the 6th. did accordingly, and deſir'd that the ſaid Papers might be read, that ſo he might have the Opportunity to juſtify himſelf; or, if he did not, to fall under the Cenſure of the Houſe.

Sir John brought to the Bar of the Commons.

Thoſe Papers being delivered by Mr. Secretary Trumbal, were read in the Houſe; and Sir John Fenwick was brought to the Bar, and acquainted, That the Houſe underſtood he had ſhew'd ſome Inclinations to make a Diſcovery of the Practices and Deſigns of the Enemies of the Government, and that now he had an Opportunity for the ſame; and they did require him to make a full and ingenuous Diſcovery to them. But Sir John returned ſuch Anſwers, as the Houſe conceived to be only Excuſes. And being called in again, and required peremptorily to make ſuch Diſcovery; he refus'd to do it. Upon which the Houſe Reſolved, That the Papers read as Sir John Fenwick's Information, reflecting on the Fidelity of ſeveral Noble Peers, divers Members of this Houſe, and Others, only by Hear-ſay; are falſe and ſcandalous, and a Contrivance to undermine the Government, and to create Jealouſies between the King and his Subjects, in order to ſtifle the real Conſpiracy.

A Bill of Attainder againſt him.

And therefore Reſolved, That a Bill be brought in, to Attaint Sir John Fenwick of High Treaſon.

This Bill was to be read the Second time on Friday November the 13th. when Sir John Fenwick and his Council were called to the Bar; where they inſiſted, That no Evidence ſhould be produced againſt Sir John, but what related to the Proof of the Allegations in the Bill: And that Sir John Fenwick might be allow'd further time to produce Witneſſes in his Defence. To both which Motions the Houſe complied, to ſhew a tender Regard to the Priſoner. But when Sir John and his Council were again at the Bar, on Monday November the 16th. and were demanded, Whether they had any Witneſſes to produce; The Council declared, That they had no Witneſſes, but only in relation to a Record. The next day, Sir John Fenwick being brought in without Council, "Mr. Speaker, by Direction of the Houſe, "required him to give an Account of what "he knew, in relation to the Perſons of Qua- "lity that have been in this Government; "againſt whom he had given Information. Whereunto Sir John replied, That he was under a double Proſecution for his Life, and did not know, but what he might ſay might be to his own prejudice: And ſince the Houſe had done him the favour to hear him by his Council, he hoped they would pleaſe to conſider of what they had ſaid. And being preſſed again by Mr. Speaker, to give the Houſe ſatisfaction in what they required; He inſiſted on what he had ſaid before; and that he did not do it out of any Obſtinacy, but for his own Preſervation. After which, the Bill was read a Second time, and Committed by 182 Votes, againſt 123.

Speeches for and againſt the Bill.

On Wedneſday November the 25th. the Bill was read the Third time, and the Debates upon it ran very high. The Arguments for it and againſt it, were beſt ſumm'd up in thoſe Two Speeches, of Mr. Methwen, and Sir Godfrey Copley.

Mr. Methwen. "Mr. Speaker, I have not "troubled you in any of thoſe long Debates you "have had upon this Occaſion, and do it unwil- "lingly now; but I do think it every Man's "Duty, in a Caſe of this great Importance, "freely to own his Opinion, and give his Rea- "ſons for it.

"The greateſt Part of the Debate hath run 1696. "upon Two Things: On the one ſide, the In- "conveniency of Bills of Attainder, or at "leaſt the having them too frequent; On the "other ſide, That it is neceſſary to have them "ſometimes, that no Perſons might think they "were out of Reach, if they could evade the "Laws that were made to Puniſh Ordinary Of- "fenders.

"I think both theſe Points too general, and "that this Bill (as every other) ought to have "its Fate upon the particular Circumſtances of "the Caſe before you; and whoever gives his "Affirmative to this Bill, ought to be convinced "that Sir John Fenwick is guilty of High Trea- "ſon; and alſo, that there are extraordinary "Reaſons why the Nation does proſecute him "in ſo extraordinary a Manner: And I do think "neither of theſe is ſufficient alone.

"If between the Indictment and Arraignment "or Tryal, Goodman ſhould have dyed, and "there had been no other Reaſon for Attainting "Sir John Fenwick, but only the want of his E- "vidence; I ſhould not have thought it a ſuffi- "cient Reaſon, though we ſhould have an Op- "portunity of being inform'd of his particular "Evidence, and believed him guilty: And if "Sir John Fenwick does not appear guilty, I do "not think any Reaſon of State can juſtify this "Bill, though he hath prevaricated and behaved "himſelf to the diſſatisfaction of every body; "therefore, I think, there muſt be both theſe.

"You have heard the Evidence; I ſhall not "repeat it, but rather come to thoſe Things "that diſtinguiſh Sir John Fenwick's Caſe; only "thus, you have received the Evidence againſt "Sir John Fenwick, and given him liberty to "make his Defence, and have fully heard him; "which, I think, hath alter'd the Reaſon of a "great many Precedents, cited from my Lord "Coke and other Authors.

"That which diſtinguiſhes this Caſe, is, the "great Danger the Nation was in from this Con- "ſpiracy, and the Senſe the Nation hath had of "it; and I find, by the general Opinion of all "Perſons, this Danger is not thought yet at an "end.

"There ſeems likewiſe to be an Opinion as "general, That Sir John Fenwick could have con- "tributed to your Safety by a Diſcovery.

"The next Circumſtance is, That Sir John "Fenwick knowing this, and the Expectation the "Nation had from him, that he could have con- "tributed to your Safety, hath made uſe of that "to put off his Trial; and at laſt, has made "ſuch a Paper, as does ſhew an Inclination to "do you all the Prejudice he can; pretended to "the Creating of New Dangers; and by this "means Sir John Fenwick, againſt whom there "was Two Witneſſes when he was indicted, "hath delayed his Tryal, ſo that now there is "but One; and there is a violent Preſumption "that this Perſon is withdrawn by the Practice of "Sir John Fenwick's Friends.

"There remains yet with me as great a Con- "ſideration as any of theſe, The Publick Reſent- "ment of the Nation for ſuch his Behaviour, is "the only means his Practice has left you to pre- "vent the Danger that yet remains; and it "ſeems neceſſary for your Safety, to come the "next beſt way to what he could have done for "you by his Diſcovery. Againſt the Evidence "that hath been given, there have been great "Doubts raiſed, not ſo much whether it be ſuch "Evidence as ought to incline us to believe him "guilty: But whether it be ſuch, as you ſhould "hear in the Capacity you are in; and whether "after it is found ſuch as it is, that is to ſay, not ſuch,

1696. "such, as would convict him upon another Try-
"al, Whether you ought to credit it, and that "it should influence you to give your Vote for
"this Bill of Attainder? This is a Doubt that I "find weighs generally with them that differ
"from me in Opinion about this Bill; and
"therefore I desire leave to speak to that Parti"cular.

"'Tis said, That you are trying of Sir John
"Fenwick, that you are Judges, and that you are
"both Judges and Jury, and that you are obli-
"ged to proceed according to the same Rules,
"though not the Methods of Westminster-Hall,
"Secundum allegata & probata.

"But the State of the Matter, as it appears to "me, is, That you are here in your Legislative
"Power, making a New Law for the attainting
"of Sir John Fenwick, and for exempting his par"ticular Case from being tryed in those Courts
"of Judicature, and by those Rules which you
"have appointed for the Tryal of other Causes,
"and trying of it your selves (if you will use
"that Word, though improperly) in which Case
"the Methods differ from what the Laws
"made by your selves require in other Ca"ses; for this is never to be a Law for any "other.

"Methinks this being the State of the Case, it
"quite puts us out of the Methods of Tryals, and
"all the Laws that are for limiting Rules for E"vidence at Tryals in Westminster-Hall, and other
"Judicatures: For it must be agreed, the same
"Rules of Evidence must be observed in ano-
"ther Place, as well as Westminster-Hall, I mean
"in Impeachments, and it has always been so
"taken.

"The Notion of two Witnesses being necessa-
"ry, has so much gained upon some Gentlemen,
"that we have had it said, That this is required
"by the Law of Nature, the Universal Law of "Nations; nay, by the Eternal Law of God.
"And I think, if it was so, there would be no
"doubt but it would oblige us.

"And therefore to go to the bottom of the "Matter: That any Man deserves to be punish-
"ed, is because he is Criminal: That this or
"that Man deserves it, is because he is guilty of "a Crime, let his Crime be made evident any "way, whatsoever: For whatsoever makes the "Truth evident, is, and is accounted in all Laws
"to be Evidence.

"Now the Rules for examining whether any "Person is guilty, or not, and the Evidence that
"is allowed as sufficient, is different in all Nati-
"ons: No two Nations agree in the same
"Evidence for the Tryal of Criminals, nor
"in the manner of giving the Evidence against "them.

"Your Tryals differ from all other Nations,
"not only that you are tried by a Jury, which is "particular to you, but that the Witnesses are to
"be produc'd Face to Face before the Offender;
"and you have made Laws, that there shall be
"two Witnesses in Cases of High-Treason;
"and herein you are the Envy of all other Nati-
"ons.

"Sir, The Evidence that is to be given against "Criminals, differs in the same Nation, when the "Offence differs; there is a difference between
"the Evidence that will convict a Man of Felo-
"ny, and the Evidence that is to convict a Man
"of Treason; and the Evidence to convict a
"Man for the same Crime, hath been different
"in the same Nation at different times. No doubt,
"by the Canon-Law of England, that Evidence
"was sufficient to convict a Man of any Crime,
"which was sufficient to make the Jury believe
"the Person guilty. Thus before the Statute of
"Edw. VI. a Man might be convicted of Treason 1696.
"by one Witness; though that Statute was made "upon great Reason, and appears to be for the "Publick Good, by the General Approbati-
"on it hath received; but I don't think in
"your Proceedings here you are bound by it.

"But Sir, it is said, shall we that are the Su-
"preme Authority, (as we are part of it) go up-
"on less Evidence to satisfie our selves of Sir John
"Fenwick's Guilt than other Courts? And shall
"we resort to this Extraordinary Way in this "Case?

"Truly, if it did shake the Manner of Trials
"below, I should be very unwilling to do it; but "I do take it clearly, that it cannot make the "least Alteration in the Proceedings of any
"Court; but on the contrary, I think there is no
"stronger Arguments for your resorting to this "Extraordinary Way, than that of the Care and
"Caution with which your Law hath provided
"for Defence of the Innocent. For if we con-
"sider all those Laws that have been made for
"that purpose, 'tis plain it must have been in the "view of our Ancestors, that many Criminals
"might by this means escape. Your Laws are "made for your Ordinary Trials, and for those "things that happen usually; and there is no Go-
"vernment we know in the World, where there
"is not Resort to Extraordinary Power, in Cases
"that require it. Your Government indeed hath
"this Advantage, That you can keep to Rules
"which others cannot: For in a very Wise Go-
"vernment (as was observed by a Person that
"was in this House the last time this was debated)
"all the ways of punishing Crimes of this nature,
"are extraordinary. Persons are condemned
"there, not only unheard, but they are con-
"demned before they are accused, and that is
"thought necessary there, which will not be en-
"dured here: And yet that Government hath
"continued so many Hundred Years, and no En-
"deavours have been to alter it, though so ma-
"ny Noble Families have suffered by it, because "they are convinced, as to their Constitution, 'tis
"necessary.

"The next Argument is from the Precedent
"you are about to make; and you have been
"told, Whatever the other Precedents have been,
"what you do now will be a Precedent for you
"and your Posterity: And whilst that Argument
"is used only to make you cautious, and to make
"you consider well, whether it is according to
"the Duty to your Country, to pass this Bill,
"(which no doubt is the only Question before
"you) 'tis a good Argument.

"Sir, If this Precedent shall appear to Poste-
"rity to be a Precedent of an Innocent Man, or a
"Person whose Guilt was doubted of, or one
"whose Guilt did plainly not appear, and this
"Bill should be carried by a Prevailing Party, I
"do agree it was a very Ill Precedent: But if the "Case be, that this Precedent will appear to Po-
"sterity upon the Truth of the Thing, to be a
"Precedent made of a Man notoriously guilty,
"of a Man that had deserved this Extraordinary
"Way of Proceeding, and this general Resent-
"ment of the Nation, and that nothing could
"have hinder'd this Man from the Common Ju-
"stice of the Nation, but his having endeavour'd
"to elude it in this Matter; and if it appears that "you would not be put off so, but that your In-
"dignation made an Example of this Man, I
"shall not be sorry it should appear to Posterity;
"but I believe Posterity will (as I think they "ought) thank you for it.

"Sir, I do say for my own Particular, while I
"am innocent, I should not think my Life in dan-
"ger to be judged by 400 English Gentlemen, and 1696. "the Peerage of England, with the Royal Aſſent:

"And when I reflect, I can't be of Opinion, That
"the Government could have procured a Parlia-
"ment to have paſſed a Bill of Attainder againſt
"my Lord Ruſſel, or Mr. Corniſh, or Mr. Colledge:
"I don't think all the Power of the Government
"could have prevail'd to have done that, altho'
"they could prevail to have them condemned
"by the Forms of Law. And here I ſee that a "great many Gentlemen have oppoſed every
"ſtep of this Bill, for fear of making an ill Pre-
"cedent: Yet theſe Gentlemen do believe in "their own private Conſciences that he is guilty:
"And I can't think that any Innocent Perſon
"can be in danger by ſuch a Bill, when Gentle-
"men oppoſe this Bill only upon the Prudencial
"Part, though they ſtill confeſs him to be guil-
"ty.

"The Concluſion I make for my ſelf is, That "I am convinced in my Conſcience (which I
"think is ſufficient, when I act in the Capacity
"I now do) that Sir John Fenwick is guilty of
"High-Treaſon, and that there are Reaſons ſo
"Extraordinary to ſupport this Bill of Attainder,
"that I do not ſee how any Perſon that is ſo con-
"vinced, can refuſe to give his Affirmative to
"this Bill.

Sir Godfrey Copley's Speech againſt the Bill.

Sir Godfrey Copley. "Sir, I am very ſenſible
"a great deal hath been ſaid upon this Subject,
"but I think there is ſomething in Duty incum-
"bent upon every Man, eſpecially upon me,
"who can't concur with the general Senſe of the
"Houſe, to give my Reaſons for my Diſagree-
"ment; and I will make uſe of no Arguments,
"but ſuch as I can't anſwer my ſelf. A great "deal hath been ſaid upon this Debate by Gen-
"tlemen learned in the Law; and many of theſe,
"though they have ſaid they would not ſpeak
"againſt the Power of Parliaments, yet the great-
"eſt part of their Arguments have touched upon
"your Method of Proceedings; and to ſhew you
"how they interfere with the Rules of *Weſtmin-
"ſter-Hall*: So great is the Force of Cuſtom and
"Education; but I acknowledge ſome have "brought us Arguments quite of another
"Strain.

"I take the Puniſhment of Offenders to be one
"of the Neceſſary Supports of all Governments;
"and all Societies of Men have laid down to
"themſelves ſome Rules, by which they judge
"whether Perſons accuſed are innocent or guil-
"ty: Therefore in a Matter of this Extraordina-
"ry Importance, it is proper to conſider what
"Rules we have to go by.

"It is the Cuſtom and Law of our Nation to "require two poſitive Witneſſes to prove Trea-
"ſon; and though I think without the utmoſt
"neceſſity it is not prudent to deviate from that
"Rule, yet I will not argue from thence that we are "tied up to it: No, it is moſt certain on the other
"hand, that the Legiſlative Authority which
"hath Power, if they think good, to abrogate all
"Laws now in being, cannot be tied up to any
"Rules of Human Preſcription. But Sir, there
"are the Eternal Rules of Equity, and Juſtice,
"and Right Reaſon, and Conſcience; and theſe
"I think are unalterable, and never to be ſwer-
"ved from: And therefore I ſhall take the li"berty to ſee how far agreeable our Proceedings
"are to theſe Rules.

"Sir, I look upon it as a Fundamental Breach
"of theſe Rules, for an Accuſation to be given
"in againſt any Man behind his Back, by he "knows not whom, or by any with whom
"he is not confronted, and brought Face to "Face.

"I am one of thoſe that look upon Sir John 1696.
"Fenwick to be guilty, and there is a Proof of
"it by one Witneſs; and to this you have added
"an Indictment that is proved. Now I muſt
"needs own, that I think that to be ſo far from
"giving any Credit or Strength to the Evidence,
"that in my Opinion the Injuſtice which at-
"tends it, makes the Scales lighter than they were
"before. For if any Bill or Writing ſworn be"hind a Man's Back, may be uſed as part of E"vidence, I do by parallel Reaſon argue, that
"the like may make up the whole at one time or
"other; and then the Information of any Two
"Profligate Knaves before a Secretary of State,
"or a Juſtice of Peace, ſhall be ſufficient, with-
"out any Living Teſtimony, to make a Man run
"the Hazard of his Life.

"Then Sir, I am not at all convinced of the
"Neceſſity of this Proceeding: I muſt confeſs,
"that thoſe that brought this Matter before us,
"are much wiſer than I, and therefore I will
"not examine what Reaſon they had to do it;
"but it is ſo little agreeable to me, I wiſh it had "not come here. But is it to be ſuppoſed that
"your Government is in hazard by any Man
"that is faſt in Newgate? Can any Man think
"that Sir John Fenwick can do any thing in his "Condition to hazard it? Can you expect that "a Man that hath been Six Months in Priſon,
"and no body came at him, that he may make
"ſuch a Diſcovery as may be worth your while?
"But ſuppoſe you had a Man of Invention and "Practice, what a Spur do you put to it? May "not a Man of Parts, when he hath no other
"Way to ſave himſelf, may not he form ſuch a
"Plot, as (ſhould it gain Belief) might make
"the beſt Subjects in England tremble?

"'Tis not Sir John Fenwick's Life which I ar-
"gue for; I do not think it of ſo great Value to
"deſerve ſo long and Solemn a Debate in this
"Houſe, nor the Conſideration of ſo great an
"Aſſembly after this Manner. But I do ſay, If
"this Method of Proceeding be warranted by an
"Engliſh Parliament, there is an end to the De-
"fence of any Man living, be he never ſo inno-
"cent.

"Sir, I remember I heard it mention'd on the "other ſide of the Way, by an Honourable Per-
"ſon, who never lets any Argument want its "weight, That King James Attainted a great "Number of Perſons in a Catalogue, in a Lump.
"Sir, I am not afraid of what Arbitrary Princes
"do, nor an Iriſh Parliament; but I am afraid
"of what ſhall be done here: I am concerned
"for the Honour of your Proceedings, that it
"may be a Precedent to a future Parliament in
"an Ill Reign, to do that which I am ſatisfied
"you would not do. I had ſome other Thoughts,
"which I cannot recollect, though theſe Rea-
"ſons are ſufficient to convince me.

Members for and againſt the Bill.

The other Members who ſpoke for the Bill, were Mr. Mountague, my Lord Cutts, Sir William Strickland, Sir Herbert Crofts, Mr. Vernon, Mr. Smith, Mr. Boſcawen, Mr. Cowper, Mr. Sloane, Col. Wharton: Thoſe who ſpoke againſt the Bill, were Sir Charles Carteret, Mr. Manley, Mr. Dolben, Sir Edward Seymor, Sir Robert Cotton, Lord Norreys, Mr. Hammond, Mr. Bromley, Mr. Harcourt, Sir Richard Temple, Mr. Paget, Mr. Jefferies, Mr. Edward Harley. After the Arguments had been offer'd on both ſides, the Queſtion was put for paſſing the Bill; whereupon the Houſe divided, and it was carried in the Affirmative by 189 Voices againſt 156, and ſent up to the Lords by Mr. Norris.

The Lords divided on the ſame Bill.

This Bill found the Lords divided in their Opinions. All who were diſaffected to the Government,

1696. vernment, fell in to the Negative; and even ſome of the beſt Friends to the Revolution and Eſtabliſhment, were very averſe to any extraordinary way of Proceeding: Yet the Bill was at laſt carried by a Majority of Seven Voices only, there being 68 for it, and 61 againſt it. Thoſe Lords who were for the Negative, entred their Proteſtation in the Journal of the Houſe; which they grounded on theſe Reaſons. " 1. Becauſe " Bills of Attainder againſt Perſons in Priſon, " and who are therefore liable to be tryed by " Common-Law, are of dangerous Conſequence " to the Lives of the Subjects, and may tend to " the Subverſion of the Laws of the Kingdom. " 2. Becauſe the Evidence of Grand Jury-Men, " of what was Sworn before them againſt Sir " John Fenwick, as alſo the Evidence of the Petty-Jury-Men was admitted here; both which " are againſt the Rules of Law, beſides that they " diſagreed in their Teſtimony. 3. Becauſe the " Information of Goodman in Writing was re- " ceiv'd, which by Law was not admitted; and " the Priſoner for want of his appearing Face to " Face, (as is by Law requir'd) could not have " the Advantage of Croſs-Examining him: And " it did not appear by Evidence, that Sir John " Fenwick, or any other Perſon employ'd by " him, had any way perſuaded Goodman to with- " draw himſelf: And it would be of very dan- " gerous Conſequence, That any Perſon ſo Ac- " cus'd, ſhould be Condemn'd; for by this means, " a Witneſs who ſhould be found inſufficient to " Convict a Man, ſhall have more power to hurt " a Man by his Abſence, than if he were pro- " duced Viva Voce againſt him. 4. Becauſe if " Goodman had appeared againſt him, he was In- " famous in the whole Courſe of his Life; and " could not be a good Witneſs, eſpecially in Ca- " ſes of Blood. 5. Becauſe in this Caſe there " was but one Evidence, viz. Porter, and he a " very doubtful one. 6. Laſtly, Becauſe Sir John " Fenwick was ſo inconſiderable a Man as not to en- " danger the Peace of the Government, that there " was no Neceſſity of proceeding againſt him in " ſo extraordinary a Manner.

Reaſons of Proteſting againſt it.

On Monday, January 11*th.* His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to, 1. An Act to Attaint Sir John Fenwick, Baronet, of High Treaſon. 2. An Act to Attaint ſuch of the Perſons concerned in the late Horrid Conſpiracy to Aſſaſſinate His Majeſty's Royal Perſon, who are fled from Juſtice, unleſs they render themſelves to Juſtice; and for continuing ſeveral other of the ſaid Conſpirators in Cuſtody. 3. An Act for Naturalizing Frederick Chriſtiaen de Rhede, commonly called Lord Aghram, and others. 4. An Act for the Settlement of the Manor of Tregagoe in the County of Hereford, and other Lands, late of Crompton Mynors, Eſq; Deceaſed; and for Raiſing and Increaſing of the Portion of Theodoſia Mynors, the Daughter of the ſaid Crompton, ſhe being an Infant of the Age of Seventeen Years.

Acts paſſed.

On Thurſday, January 28. Sir John Fenwick was brought by the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex, under a Guard from Newgate to Tower-Hill, where he was Beheaded on a Scaffold erected for that purpoſe. Before his Execution, he deliver'd this Paper to the Sheriffs.

Sir John Fenwick Executed.

" Speaking nor Writing was never my Talent. " I ſhall therefore give a very ſhort, but faithful " Account, Firſt, of my Religion; and next, " what I ſuffer moſt Innocently for; to avoid " the Calumnies I may reaſonably expect my " Enemies will caſt upon me when Dead; ſince " they have moſt falſly and maliciouſly Aſperſed " me, whilſt under my Misfortunes.

His Paper to the Sheriffs.

" As for my Religion, I was brought up in the " Church of England, as it is by Law Eſtabliſh- " ed, and have ever profeſſed it; though I con- " feſs, I have been an unworthy Member of it, " in not living up to the ſtrict and excellent Rules " thereof; for which I take Shame to my ſelf, " and humbly ask Forgiveneſs of God. I come " now to Die in that Communion, truſting as " an Humble and Hearty Penitent, to be Receiv'd " by the Mercy of God, through the Merits of " Jeſus Chriſt my Saviour. 1696.

" My Religion taught me my Loyalty, which " I bleſs God is Untainted; and I have ever en- " deavour'd in the Station wherein I have been " placed, to the utmoſt of my Power, to ſup- " port the Crown of England, in the True and " Lineal Courſe of Deſcent, without Interrup- " tion.

" As for what I am now to Die, I call God to " Witneſs, I went not to that Meeting in Leaden- " Hall-Street, with any ſuch Intention as to In- " vite King James by Force to Invade this Na- " tion; nor was I my ſelf provided with either " Horſe or Arms, or engaged for any Number " of Men, or gave particular Conſent for any " ſuch Invaſion, as is moſt falſly Sworn againſt " me.

" I do alſo Declare in the Preſence of God, " That I knew nothing of King James his com- " ing to Calais, nor of any Invaſion intended " from thence, till it was publickly known: And " the only Notion I had that ſomething might " be attempted, was from the Thoulon Fleet com- " ing to Breſt.

" I alſo call God to Witneſs, That I receiv'd " the Knowledge of what is contained in thoſe " Papers that I gave to a Great Man, that came " to me in the Tower, both from Letters and " Meſſages that came from France; and he told " me when I read them to him, that the Prince " of Orange had been acquainted with moſt of " thoſe things before.

" I might have expected Mercy from that " Prince, becauſe I was Inſtrumental in ſaving " his Life: For when about April 95. an At- " tempt formed againſt him, came to my know- " ledge, I did partly by Diſſuaſions, and partly " by Delays, prevent that Deſign; which I ſup- " poſe was the reaſon that the laſt Villanous " Project was concealed from me.

" If there be any Perſons whom I have injur'd " in Word or Deed, I heartily pray their Par- " don; and beg of God to Pardon thoſe who " have injur'd me; particularly thoſe who with " great Zeal have ſought my Life, and brought " the Guilt of my Innocent Blood upon this " Nation, no Treaſon being proved upon " me.

" I return my moſt Hearty Thanks to thoſe " Noble and Worthy Perſons, who gave me " their Aſſiſtance by oppoſing this Bill of At- " tainder; without which it had been impoſſible " I could have fallen under the Sentence of " Death. God Bleſs them and their Poſterity; " though I am fully ſatisfied they Pleaded their " own Cauſe while they Defended Mine.

" I pray God to Bleſs my True and Lawful " Sovereigns King James and the Queen, and " Prince of Wales, and Reſtore Him and His " Poſterity to this Throne again, for the Peace " and Proſperity of this Nation, which is impoſ- " ſible to Proſper till the Government is ſettled " upon a right Foot.

" And now, O God, I do with all Humble De- " votion Commend my Soul into thy Hands, the Great " Maker and Preſerver of Men, and Lover of Souls, " beſeeching Thee, that it may be always dear and " precious in thy Sight, through the Merits of my " Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. Amen.

J. FENWICK.

1696. Acts paſſed.

On Friday January the 29*th.* His Majeſty came again to the Houſe of Peers, and Paſs'd theſe Bills. 1. An Act for Granting an Aid to His Majeſty, as well by a Land Tax, as by ſeveral Subſidies and other Duties payable for one Year. 2. An Act for Veſting the Manors of Holme, alias Eaſt-Holme and Swannage in the County of Dorſet, part of the Eſtate of Sir John Hanham Baronet, in Truſtees to be Sold for Diſcharging a Mortgage thereupon, and upon the Reſidue of the ſaid Sir John Hanham's Eſtate; and for Payment of his other Debts. 3. An Act for Enabling Oliver Neve of Great Witchinham in the County of Norfolk Eſquire, to Sell Two Houſes in London, and for Veſting other Lands in the ſaid County, of greater Value, to the ſame uſe.

On February the 9*th.* the Commons Eſtimated and Computed the Aids Granted to His Majeſty for the Service of the Year, 1697. at Three Millions, which fell ſhort of what was neceſſary to anſwer thoſe Occaſions, and to make good the Defective Funds, which for the laſt Year fell ſhort Eight Hundred and Forty Thouſand Pounds; for Supplying whereof they laid a farther Duty upon Leather, of 15 l. per Cent. for Three Years. While they were conſidering of other ways, they were put in Mind of a new Occaſion of Supply, by this Meſſage from the King in Writing, delivered by Mr. Secretary Trumbal.

King's Meſſage to the Commons.

William R.

" His Majeſty finding Himſelf under very " great Difficulties for want of Money to Supply " the Occaſions of the Civil Liſt, has thought " it neceſſary to remind the Houſe of That " part of His Speech, which relates to that " Head; deſiring that ſpeedy Care may be taken " to make effectual Proviſion for it.

The Civil Liſt ſupported.

This Meſſage and that Part of His Majeſty's Speech to which it referr'd, were taken into due Conſideration, and within a few Days it was Reſolved, that a Supply of 515000 Pounds be Granted to His Majeſty for the ſupport of the Civil Liſt; and that the ſaid Sum be raiſed by laying a Duty of Sixpence per Buſhel upon Malt, for Two Years and a Quarter. And becauſe the Impoſitions before-mentioned did not fully anſwer the Sums already Voted, the Commons Reſolve on March the 3*d.* That towards Raiſing the Supply Granted to His Majeſty for carrying on the War againſt France, for the Service of the Year 1697. and for the Support of the Civil Liſt, a further Duty be laid upon all Cyder and Perry, Mum, Wines and Sweets; and upon all Goods made or mix'd with Wool, Silk or Hair. And for the laſt occaſion of doing Juſtice, by making good the Deficiency of the Proviſion for the Payment of the Intereſt of the Tranſport Debt for the Reducing of Ireland, they Reſolved to lay a Duty upon all Hawkers and Pedlars.

Acts Paſſed.

On Monday March the 8*th.* the King came to the Houſe of Peers and gave the Royal Aſſent to theſe ſeveral Bills. 1. An Act for Granting to His Majeſty ſeveral Duties upon Paper, Vellum, and Parchment, to encourage the bringing of Plate and Hammer'd Money into the Mint to be Coin'd. 2. An Act to encourage the bringing in of Wrought Plate to be Coined. 3. An Act for continuing certain Additional Impoſitions upon ſeveral Goods and Merchandizes. 4. An Act to Enable the Returns of Juries as formerly, until the Firſt day of November, 1697. 5. An Act for the better preventing Frivolous and Vexatious Suits. 6. An Act to Reſtore the Markets at Blackwell-Hall to the Clothiers, and for Regulating the Factors there. 7. An Act for Enabling James Duke of Ormond, to raiſe Money by Sale of Woods, and making Leaſes for Lives, renewable for ever, for Payment of Debts, and for Encouraging Engliſh Plantations in Ireland; and for Charles Lord Weſton Earl of Arran, in the Kingdom of Ireland, to make Leaſes of his Eſtate in the ſaid Kingdom. 8. An Act for the Exchange of certain Advouſons, between the Biſhop of London, and the Earl of Nottingham. 9. An Act for the ſpeedy ſatisfying of the Debtors of Francis late Lord Holles Deceaſed. 10. An Act to Enable Sir Ralph Aſhton Baronet, to ſupply an Omiſſion of a Limitation, intended in his Marriage Settlement, for the Benefit of his Iſſue Male. 11. An Act for the Sale of the Eſtate late of Francis Griffith, late of London, Scrivener, Deceaſed, for Payment of his Debts. 12. An Act for the ſettling the Eſtate of Mary Savile, an Infant, upon her Marriage. 13. An Act to Enable the Sale of Lands, late of Jeffery Stockley in the County of Cheſter, Deceaſed, for Payment of his Debts, and for making Proviſion for Mary his Daughter. 14. An Act for Veſting certain Meſſuages, Lands and Tenements, late of Charles Milſon, Deceaſed, in Truſtees, to Sell for Payment of Debts and Legacies, and lay out the Surplus Money in a Purchaſe of Lands for the uſe of Edward Milſon and his Heirs, according to the Will of the ſaid Charles Milſon. 15. An Act to Enable Nicholas Goodwin the Elder, and Nicholas Goodwin the Younger, to ſell the Manor of Winſlow, in the County of Bucks, and with the Money ariſing thereby, and other Moneys to be advanced by the ſaid Nicholas Goodwin the Elder, to Purchaſe Lands of a greater Yearly Value, to be ſettled to the ſame uſes as the ſaid Manor is now ſettled. 16. An Act for the Veſting of certain Lands of William Milward in the County of Hereford, Clerk, in Truſtees, for Payment of Debts. 17. An Act for Veſting the Eſtate of Edward Kerry Eſq; lying in the Bin-Weſton in the County of Salop, in Truſtees, to diſcharge Incumbrances therein, and to raiſe Portions for Younger Children, and for Confirming the Marriage Settlement of the ſaid Edward Kerry. 18. An Act for Veſting part of the Eſtate of Thomas Panton Eſq; in Truſtees, to be Sold for payment of Debts, and ſecuring a Jointure to Mary his now Wife. 19. An Act for Naturalizing of John Keyſor, and others. 20. An Act to Enable Edward Leigh Eſq; and Jane his Wife, and their Truſtees, to Sell the Manors of Waxham and Horſey, and certain Lands and Tenements in the County of Norfolk, and to Purchaſe and Settle other Lands to the ſame uſes. 21. An Act for Veſting and Settling certain Eſtates of William James Gent. in and upon Truſtees, to be Sold for Payment of Debts, and making Proviſion for himſelf, his Wife and their Children.

Honours and Preferments.

As to Honours and Places beſtow'd during this Seſſion; On November the 19*th.* Sir Joſeph Williamſon was by His Majeſty's Command Sworn of the Privy Council; and with the Lord Privy Seal Earl of Pembrook, and the Lord Viſcount Villars, was on December the 12*th.* named by His Majeſty as Plenipotentiary for the Treaty of a General Peace. On February the 6*th.* His Majeſty was pleaſed to conſtitute the Lord Viſcount Galway, one of the Lords Juſtices of Ireland, and John Methuen Eſq; Lord Chancellor of that Kingdom. On February the 19*th.* in a Chapter held at Kenſington, the Earl of Portland was elected a Knight of the Garter; and inveſted with the Enſigns of that Noble Order. On March the 3*d.* His Majeſty was pleaſed to make Sir Cloudſley Shovel a Colonel of the Marine Regiment, lately Commanded by the Lord Berkley, Baron of Stretham, who after commanding our Fleet in the Channel upon ſeveral Expeditions, Died on February the 27*th.* after a few Days Sickneſs of a Fever and Pleuriſie. On March the 17*th.* the King conferr'd the Dignity of a Barronet upon 1696. Edward Manſel of Trimſaram in the County of Carmarthen Eſq; And on the next day His Majeſty, in his Bedchamber, conferred the Honour of Knighthood upon Richard Blackmore, M. D. having before been pleaſed to order him to be Sworn one of his Phyſicians in Ordinary: He being a Perſon of great Reputation for his Practice in Phyſick, for his excellent Performance in Heroic Poems, for his univerſal Wit and Learning, and for his Affection to the King and the preſent Government: and what is moſt Laudable, for his Reforming and Sanctifying Poetry, by caſting out the Images of Heathen Theology, and writing like a Chriſtian.

Edward

State of Religion. The Church of England had a great Loſs in the Death of Dr. Robert Grove, Lord Biſhop of Chicheſter; who, by the Misfortune of unruly Horſes, was thrown out of his Coach, and in the Fall broke his Leg, and loſt his Life by it. To fill his Place with a worthy Succeſſor, His Majeſty immediately after His Return from Holland, was pleaſed to name Dr. John Williams, Rector of St. Mildred's Poultrey in London, to that Biſhoprick: A ſound Divine, a general Scholar, and a Man of ſingular Probity and Humility. He was Conſecrated on Sunday, Dec. 13*th.* His Prebend of Canterbury was given to the Learned Dr. William Beveridge.

Act for Rebuilding of St. Paul's Church. It was a particular Honour to the Houſe of Commons, that while they were under ſo great Difficulties in raiſing Money for the Exigence of the War, they did receive and paſs a Bill, for the Compleating, Building, and Adorning of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul's, London, by a further Impoſition upon Coals. And they ſeem'd ſo well diſpos'd to that Work of Piety, that it encourag'd many Pariſhes to make ſolemn Petitions to them, for ſome Aſſiſtance towards Repairing or Rebuilding their decay'd and ruin'd Churches. As, from the Miniſter, Church-Wardens, and Pariſhioners of St. Botolph without Aldersgate, London, on February the 5*th.* From the Vicar, Church-Warden, Juſtices of the Peace, Veſtry-Men, and other Inhabitants of St. Martin in the Fields: As alſo from the Pariſhioners of St. Helen's, London; on February the 8*th.* From the Inhabitants of Kenſington, on February the 9*th.* and of Spittle-Fields, for ſome Supply towards Building a Chappel for the ſaid Hamlet. From the Pariſh of St. George in Southwark, towards Repairing their Church, and Rebuilding their Steeple. From St. Thomas's Hoſpital in Southwark, for Rebuilding that Church; on the ſame day, from the Rector, Church-Wardens, and other Officers and Inhabitants of St. John Wapping; for Raiſing their Church, Erecting a Steeple, and compleating the Building of the Rector's Houſe; February the 16*th.* From the Rector, Church-Wardens, and Members of the Veſtry of St. Botolph Biſhopſgate, for Rebuilding of that Church; February the 19*th.* From the Rector, Church-Wardens, and principal Inhabitants of St. Andrew's Holborn; for Rebuilding the Steeple, and Church-yard Walls and Gates; February the 23*d.* From the Pariſh of St. Olave's in Southwark; for Rebuilding their Pariſh-Church; on March the 2*d.* Nothing ſo much obſtructed the Anſwering of thoſe Petitions, as the Multitude of them: It might have been thought partial, to oblige any One or Two Pariſhes, and it was impracticable to gratify them All. Tho' poſſibly, had they all agreed in One Joint Petition, for one common Bill of Relief; at leaſt in Reverſion, after the expiring of the Term allow'd for the Service of St. Paul's Church; they might have gain'd a Proviſional Act for Rebuilding or Repairing thoſe old Churches; which had been then Reaſonable, and muſt be Neceſſary ſome time or other.

Petitions for other decay'd Churches.

1697. The long Seſſions of Parliament were owing to the Multiplicity of Publick Affairs, rather than to the dilatory Proceedings of either Houſe, or to any Obſtruction given by the King or the Court. The great Buſineſs was to retrieve and maintain the publick Credit; and to ſupply the Want of Money by the Currency of Exchequer Bills, and to ſupport the Bank of England. The Commons were ſo intent upon theſe wiſe Ends, that when in a Paper entitled the Flying-Poſt, publiſh'd on Thurſday April the 1*ſt.* there was this Advertiſement: We hear, that when the Exchequer Notes are given out upon the Capitation Fund, whoſoever ſhall deſire Specie on them, will have it at Five Pound and half per Cent. of the Society of Gentlemen that have ſubſcribed to advance ſome Hundred Thouſands of Pounds: They Voted this Paſſage to be a Malicious Inſinuation, in order to deſtroy the Credit and Currency of the Exchequer Bills. They ordered the Printer, John Salisbury, to be ſent for in Cuſtody; and gave leave to bring in a Bill, to prevent the Writing, Printing, or Publiſhing any News without Licenſe. And yet when ſuch a Bill was preſented by Mr. Poultney, it was thrown out before a Second Reading; becauſe tho' they ſaw the Miſchiefs of the Liberty of the Preſs, they knew not where to fix the Power of Reſtraint. On the ſame day, April the 1*ſt.* His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and gave the Royal Aſſent to, 1. An Act for making good the Deficiencies of ſeveral Funds therein mentioned; and for Enlarging the Capital Stock of the Bank of England; and for Raiſing the Publick Credit. 2. An Act for Repealing of a Clauſe in a former Act, relating to Party-Guiles; and for the better preventing Frauds and Abuſes of Brewers, and others chargeable with the Duties of Exciſe. 3. An Act for Enlarging common High-Ways. 4. An Act for continuing ſeveral former Acts, for Puniſhing Officers and Soldiers, who ſhall Mutiny or Deſert His Majeſty's Service; and for Puniſhing falſe Muſters; and for Payment of Quarters for One Year longer. 5. An Act for the Compleating, Building, and Adorning the Cathedral-Church of St. Paul, London; and for Repairing the Collegiate Church of St. Peter, Weſtminſter. 6. An Act for Relief of Creditors, by making Compoſitions with their Debtors, in caſe Two Thirds in Number and Value do agree. 7. An Act for Paving and Regulating the Hay-Market, in the Pariſhes of St. Martin in the Fields, and St. James within the Liberty of Weſtminſter. 8. An Act for Repairing the High-Way between Ryegate in the County of Surrey, and Crawley in the County of Suſſex. 9. An Act for Explaining a former Act of Parliament, entitled, An Act for Enabling Truſtees to Sell Part of the Eſtate of Edmund Warner, deceas'd, for Payment of his Debts, and for preſerving the reſt for the Benefit of his Heir. 10. An Act to Enable William Fallows, an Infant, to Sell an Eſtate in the County of Cheſter, to Pay Debts ſecured by Mortgages. 11. An Act to Veſt certain Lands late of Samuel Trotman, Eſq; deceas'd; lying in Barking, Eaſt-Ham, Weſt-Ham, and Woolwich, in the Counties of Kent and Eſſex, in Truſtees, to be ſold; and to ſettle other Lands in lieu thereof. 12. An Act to ſupply a Defect in an Act, for Enabling Oliver Neve, Eſq; to Sell Two Houſes in London, and for Settling Lands in the County of Norfolk, of greater Value, to the ſame Uſes. 13. An Act for Veſting Part of the Eſtate of Roger Crowle, Eſq; deceas'd, in Truſtees; for Raiſing Portions for his younger Children; in regard he being a Lunatick, could not execute a Power in his Marriage-Settlement, for that Purpoſe. 14. An Act for Importing ſeveral Goods and Merchandizes, laden in Turkey on Board the Ship call'd the Succeſs and Dragon-Galley; paying Cuſtoms, as if Imported by Engliſh Ships.

Parliament intent on the publick Credit.

A Bill againſt News-papers.

There

1697. Grievance of Privileged Places.

There had been a Publick Grievance of long ſtanding. Several Places in and about London, which in the Times of Popery were allowed as Sanctuaries to eſcaping Criminals, had ever ſince the Reformation pretended a Privilege to protect abſconding Debtors: One of theſe, call'd White-Friars, was become a Notorious Neſt of broken and deſperate Men, in the very Heart of the City, whither they reſorted in great Numbers; and to the Reproach of the Government, as well as to the Defrauding of the People, defended themſelves with Force and Violence againſt the Law and Publick Authority. This intolerable Inſult upon the Juſtice of the Nation the Parliament laboured to redreſs, in a Bill, for the more effectual Relief of Creditors in Caſes of Eſcapes; and for preventing Abuſes in Priſons and pretended Privileged Places: Wherein ſuch effectual Proviſion was made to reduce thoſe Outlaws, that immediately after the Act was publiſh'd, they abandon'd their Poſts of Refuge, and left room for better Inhabitants. There was another reigning Scandal in the New Art of Stock-Jobbing, that was grown up into ſuch a Myſtery of Deceit and Impudence, that it obſtructed all other Trade, and taught Men the Trick of living by their Wits, without any viſible Induſtry, or any known Ability. This Miſchief too was in ſome Meaſure remov'd, by a Bill to reſtrain the Number and Ill Practices of Brokers and Stock-Jobbers. There were ſome other Bills depending, to rectify many other Abuſes. As, 1. A Bill to prevent the Buying and Selling of Offices, and Places of Truſt. 2. A Bill to prevent the undue Marriage of Infants; and for better ſecuring the Guardianſhip of them. 3. A Bill for further Regulating Elections of Members to ſerve in Parliament. 4. A Bill to ſettle and regulate the Trade to Africa. 5. A Bill to encourage the Woollen-Manufacture in England; and to prevent the Exportation of it from Ireland to Foreign Parts. 6. A Bill to reſtrain the Wearing of all Wrought Silks and Bengalls, imported into this Kingdom from Perſia and Eaſt-India, and all Callicoes Printed and Stained there. To preſs on this laſt Bill, a Tumultuous Croud of Weavers came in ſo riotous a manner, to the very Lobby of the Houſe of Commons, that the Houſe were oblig'd to Defend themſelves, by ordering the Sheriffs and Juſtices of London and Middleſex, to ſuppreſs the ſaid Tumult; and by making a Vote, That the Inciting and Encouraging any Number of Perſons to come in a Riotous, Tumultuous, or Diſorderly Manner to this Houſe, in order to hinder or promote the Paſſing any Bill, being againſt the Conſtitution and Freedom of Parliament, is a High Crime and Miſdemeanor. But to make ſome Atonement, within few Days after, the Bailiffs, Wardens, and Aſſiſtants of the Corporation of Weavers of the City of London, preſented an Addreſs to His Majeſty; wherein they declar'd their Deteſtation of the late Riotous and Tumultuous Behaviour of the Poorer Sort of Weavers and other Perſons; and that neither they, nor any Maſter-Weavers, were the Inviters or Encouragers thereof: And aſſur'd His Majeſty, That they would not only uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to prevent the like Diſorders for the future, but on all Occaſions would ſacrifice their Lives and all that was dear to 'em in the Defence of His Majeſty's Sacred Perſon and Government.

Grievance of Stock-Jobbing.

Tumult of Weavers.

On Friday, April 16. His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, to put an end to this long continued Seſſion, He gave the Royal Aſſent to theſe ſeveral Bills. 1. An Act for laying a Duty upon Leather, for the Term of Three Years, and making other Proviſion for anſwering the Deficiencies, as well of the late Duties upon Coals and Culm, as for paying the Annuities upon the Lottery, and for Lives, charged on the Tunnage of Ships, and the Duties upon Salt. 2. An Act for granting to His Majeſty certain Duties upon Malt; Mum, Sweets, Cyder and Perry, as well towards carrying on the War againſt France, as for the Neceſſary Expence of His Majeſty's Houſhold, and other Occaſions. 3. An Act for Licenſing Hawkers and Pedlars for a farther Proviſion for Payment of the Intereſt of the Tranſport Debt for the Reducing of Ireland. 4. An Act for granting to His Majeſty a farther Subſidy of Tunnage and Poundage upon Merchandizes imported, for the Term of Two Years and Three Quarters, and an Additional Land Tax for One Year, for carrying on the War againſt France. 5. An Act for the leſſening the Duty upon Tin and Pewter exported, and granting an Equivalent for the ſame, by a Duty upon Drugs. 6. An Act to make Perpetual and more Effectual an Act Entitled, An Act to prevent Delays at the Quarter Seſſions of the Peace. 7. An Act to enforce the Act for the Increaſe and Encouragement of Seamen. 8. An Act for raiſing the Militia for the Year One Thouſand Six Hundred Ninety Seven, although the Month's Pay formerly advanced be not repaid. 9. An Act for Explaining and Inforcing the Act for Paving and Cleanſing the Streets within the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Borough of Southwark, and Weekly Bills of Mortality, and Streets adjoining thereunto; and for Widening the Street at the South End of London-Bridge. 10. An Act for the farther Encouragement of the Manufacture of Luſtrings and Alamodes within this Realm, and for the better preventing the Importation of the ſame. 11. An Act for the Repair of the Peers of Bridlington, alias, Burlington, in the Eaſt-Riding of the Count of York. 12. An Act for the better Obſervation of the Courſe anciently uſed in the Exchequer. 13. An Act for the eaſier obtaining Partitions of Lands in Coparcenary, Joint-Tenancy, and Tenancy in Common. 14. An Act for ſupplying ſome Defects in the Laws for the Relief of the Poor of this Kingdom. 15. An Act to reſtrain the Number and Ill Practices of Brokers and Stock-Jobbers. 16. An Act for the better preventing the Counterfeiting the Current Coin of this Kingdom. 17. An Act for the more Effectual Relief of Creditors in Caſes of Eſcapes, and for preventing Abuſes in Priſons and pretended Privileged Places. 18. An Act for annulling the Marriage of Hannah Knight, an Infant, and directing the Guardianſhip of the ſaid Infant. 19. An Act for the Speedy Payment of the Debts of Sir William Thompſon, Knight, Serjeant at Law, deceas'd. 20. An Act for enabling the Sale of the Manor of Rowling in Kent, which by Miſtake was by General Words comprized in the Marriage Settlement of the ſaid William Hammond, Gent. contrary to the Meaning of the Parties.

Acts paſſed.

After which His Majeſty made this Speech to Both Houſes.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech.

" HAving given My Aſſent to the ſeveral " Bills you have preſented to Me, I am " now to return you my Hearty Thanks for what " you have done this Seſſion, which has been " carried on with great Prudence, Temper and " Affection.

" At the Opening of the Seſſion, I told you " how ſenſible I was of the Difficulties to be ſtrug- " gled with, which were of ſuch a Nature, that I " will freely own the Hopes I had of our being " able to overcome them, were founded on- " ly upon the Wiſdom and Zeal of ſo Good a " Parliament.

" My Expectation has been fully anſwered; " you entred upon the Buſineſs with ſo much " Cheerfulneſs, proceeded ſo unanimouſly, and " have at laſt brought Things to ſuch a Conclu- " ſion, that We may hope to carry on the War " with Succeſs, in caſe Our Enemies do not think

1697. "it their Intereſt to agree to an Honourable "Peace: And ſo Effectual a Proviſion being "made for ſupplying the Deficiencies of former "Funds, (which is the beſt Foundation for re-e-"eſtabliſhing of Credit) I doubt not but in a "ſhort time it will have a very happy Effect, to "the Univerſal Eaſe and Satisfaction of my Peo-"ple.

"The Circumſtances of Affairs making it ne-"ceſſary for Me to be out of the Kingdom for "ſome time, I ſhall take care to leave the Admi-"niſtration of the Government during My Ab-"ſence, in the Hands of ſuch Perſons as I can "depend upon.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I have nothing more to ask of you, but that "you would carry down the ſame Good Diſpo-"ſition into your ſeveral Countries, which you "have expreſs'd in all the Proceedings of this Seſ-"ſion.

And then the Parliament was, by His Majeſty's Command, prorogued until the Thirteenth Day of May next.

Places and Honours. Upon the Plenipotentiaries going to negotiate a General Peace, the King was pleaſed to conſtitute Sir Thomas Mompeſſon, Sir Charles Cottrell, Jun. and James Tyrrell, Eſq; Commiſſioners for executing the Office of Lord Privy-Seal, during the Abſence of the Earl of Pembroke, and His Majeſty delivered the Seal into their Cuſtody on Apr. 11. at Kenſington. Within three Days after His Majeſty was pleaſed to appoint Charles Earl of Manchester to be His Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the Republick of Venice; Sir James Ruſhout, Bart. His Ambaſſador to the Grand Signior; and Lambert Blackwell, Eſq; His Envoy to the Great Duke of Tuſcany; upon whom He conferred the Honour of Knighthood, on Apr. 23. On Apr. 16. His Majeſty was pleaſed to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Charles Iſaac, Eſq; one of the Officers of the Board of Green-Cloth, for his Faithfull Services. On Apr. 19. the Earl of Dorſet having reſigned the Office of Lord Chamberlain of His Majeſty's Houſhold, His Majeſty conferred that Place on the Earl of Sunderland, who had now great Favour and great Influence at Court; and was ſoon after ſworn of the Privy-Council. On Apr. 22. His Majeſty in Council received the Seal from the Hands of Sir John Somers, Lord Keeper, and returned it to him again, with the Title of Lord Chancellor of England, who within few Days after was created a Baron of this Kingdom, by the Stile and Title of Lord Somers, Baron of Eveſham, in the County of Worceſter: His Services to the King and the Nation were truly great and good. On the ſame Evening, Apr. 22. His Majeſty declared in Council, that he had appointed Thomas Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Sir John Somers, Knt. Lord Chancellor of England, Thomas Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, Lord Privy-Seal, William Duke of Devonſhire, Lord Steward of His Majeſty's Houſhold, Charles Duke of Shrewsbury, one of His Principal Secretaries of State, Robert Earl of Sunderland, Lord Chamberlain, Charles Earl of Dorſet, Henry Earl of Romney, and Edward Ruſſel, Eſq; to be Lords Juſtices of England, for the Adminiſtration of the Government during His Majeſty's Abſence. At the ſame time His Majeſty was pleaſed to conſtitute Goodwin Wharton, Eſq; one of the Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty, in the Place of Colonel Auſtin, deceaſed. Before His Majeſty's Departure for Holland, He was pleaſed to beſtow ſeveral other Titles and Honours; Edward Ruſſel, Eſq; was created Baron of Shingey, Viſcount of Barfleur, and Earl of Orford, in the County of Suffolk: The Lord Viſcount Galloway was made Earl of Galloway, and was appointed to be one of the Lords Juſtices of the Kingdom of Ireland, with the Marquis of Winchester, and the Lord Viſcount Villiers. The Earl of Stamford was made Chancellor of the Dutchy and County Palatine of Lancaſter. The Lord Wharton was made Chief Juſtice in Eyre on this ſide Trent, and Lord Lieutenant of the County of Oxon: And Ralph Grey, Eſq; was appointed to be Governor of the Barbadoes. 1697.

King goes for Holland. Before the publick declaration of theſe Honours, His Majeſty had left Kenſington on Saturday Morning April the 24*th*. and lay that Night at Captain Ball's Houſe near Margate; and on Monday about Eleven in the Morning went on Board the William and Mary Yatch, and under a Convoy, Commanded by Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, Landed ſafely the next day in Holland; being at firſt much Indiſpoſed, but after loſing ſome Blood, He took the Air, and went from Hague to Zuleſtein, and thence to Loo: and there waited the Opening of the Congreſs and Treaty at Reſwick.

Treaty of General Peace, The firſt Difficulty that aroſe upon this Treating for a General Peace, was about the Place of Meeting. The Emperor propoſed either Mentz or Frankfort; the Dutch inſiſted upon a Place in Holland; and moſt of the Allies were either for Maeſtricht, Nimeguen or Breda: but towards the middle of January, M. Callier by his Maſters Order moved, that the Plenipotentiaries of the Allies ſhould reſide at the Hague, and thoſe of France at Delft; and that the Conferences ſhould be held at Reſwick, a Place belonging to his Britannick Majeſty, and equally diſtant from both thoſe Towns; which was agreed to by the Confederates. This Point being thus ſettled, the Preliminaries after ſeveral Debates were alſo concluded and Sign'd on the 10*th*. of February, by which the King of France agreed, "I. That the "Treaties of Weſtphalia and Nimeguen ſhould be "the Baſis of this to be negotiated at Reſwick. "II. That Strasburg ſhould be reſtored to the "Empire, in the ſame Condition as the French "took it. III. And Luxemburg to the Spaniards, "in its preſent Condition, (but here the French "offer'd the Allies an Equivalent for both thoſe "Places.) IV. That Mons and Charleroy ſhould "be Surrender'd as they were. V. That all "Places taken by the French in Catalonia, ſince "the Peace of Nimeguen, ſhould be Reſtor'd in "the ſame manner. VI. That Dinant, both "City and Caſtle, ſhould be given up to the "Biſhop of Liege, as they were when taken. "VII. That all Reunions ſince the Treaty of "Nimeguen ſhould be made void. VIII. That "Lorrain ſhould be Reſtored according to the "Condition of that Treaty; But further agreed, "that in Caſe the Conditions made in reſpect to "that Country ſhould not pleaſe, that Article "ſhould be referr'd to the General Treaty, and "that it ſhould be the firſt Point Debated in the "Negotiation. Here it was likewiſe farther "agreed more particularly, that upon conclu-"ſion of the Peace, the King of France ſhould "acknowledge the Prince of Orange as King of "Great Britain, without any manner of Diffi-"culty, Reſtriction, Condition, or Reſerve; but "as for other Princes, whether they were in "the Confederacy or not, their Pretenſions "ſhould be reſerved to the General Negotiation, "under the Mediation of the King of Sweden. "IX. That the Dutchy of Deux-Ponts ſhould be "reſtor'd to Sweden. X. That Philipsburg ſhould "be given up to the Biſhop of Spire. XI. That "the Fort of Keel and other Fortifications made "on the Rhine, ſhould be raz'd. XII. That the "ſame ſhould be done by Fort-Louis and Hun-

At Ryſwick.

That the Elector Palatine ſhould not only "be reſtor'd to all the Electorate, but alſo to the "Dutchies of Simmeren and Lauthern, with the "Earldom of Manheim; as alſo other Places, "whereof he had been diſpoſſeſs'd to the preſent "time. XV. That the Dutcheſs of Orleans ſhould "not have Recourſe to open Force to maintain "her Pretenſions, but might bring her Actions "according to Law, in relation to the Elector. "XVI. That the Caſtle and County of Veldens "ſhould be reſtor'd to their Lawful Owner. "XVII. That Biſweiler ſhould be given to the "Count of Hinaw. XVIII. That the Seigniories "of March, Marmoſy, and Dagſtein, and the Coun-"ty of Dagsburg, ſhould be deliver'd up to the "Count of Overſtein. XIX. That the Seignio-"ries of Salms and Valkenſtein ſhould be given "up to the Prince of Salms, or to their Propriе-"tors, ſeeing the ſame was ſtill in Queſtion. "XX. That the Seigniories of Latzenſtein and Al-"theim ſhould be Surrendred to their Owners. "XXI. That Otweiler ſhould be given up to the "Houſe of Naſſau. XXII. That the City and "County of Mombelliard, Harcourt, Bainont, and "Chattelette, ſhould be put into the Poſſeſſion of "the Houſe of Wirtemberg. XXIII. That Ger-"meſheim ſhould be given up to the Elector Pa-"latine, notwithſtanding any former Treaties to "the contrary. And XXIV. That the Princi-"pality of Orange ſhould be given up to its So-"vereign."

Some of the Miniſters of the Allies, after having conſulted their Maſters upon theſe Preliminaries, declar'd, That as to what concern'd the Firſt Article, they fully agreed to it; but as for Strasburg, they farther inſiſted it ſhould be Reſtor'd, with its Fortifications and Dependencies, and that no Equivalent ſhould be accepted. They allow'd of the Third, Fourth, and Fifth Articles; only they inſiſted, that not only the City, but the County of Luxemburgh, and that of Chinay, ſhould be given up; as they did, that the City and Caſtle of Dinant ſhould be yielded, together with the Dutchy of Bouillon, in the ſame State they were. They likewiſe own'd themſelves ſatisfy'd as to the Seventh Article concerning the Reunions; but not ſo with the Agreement made about Lorain, which they would have reſtor'd to the Duke its Sovereign, without any manner of Reſtriction.

Farther Demands of the Allies.

Beſides theſe Pretenſions, the Death of Charles XI. King of Sweden, by whoſe Mediation the Treaty was ſet on Foot, was like to put a ſtop to the Progreſs of it. His Swediſh Majeſty having been Ill for ſome time, Died at Stockholm on the 5*th.* of April, 1697. (O. S.) in the 42*d.* Year of His Age, and 37*th.* of His Reign, leaving His Crown to His Son Charles XII. then ſcarce Fifteen Years old; and appointing by His Will, both the Queen, and Five of the Senators, to Adminiſter the Government, during His Son's Minority, which would be till he was entring upon the 18*th.* Year of his Age. However, this Accident made no manner of Alteration in the Affairs of Europe; for the Regents of Sweden, among whom the Queen had Two Voices, having full power to make Treaties, and perform all other Acts of Sovereignty, as ſhould be agreed on by the major part of them, ſent immediately Expreſſes to ſeveral Foreign Courts, to acquaint them with their Intentions to purſue the Mediation began by the late King, for the Tranquility of Chriſtendom; and diſpatch'd a new Commiſſion to Monſieur Lillienroot for that purpoſe. Some time before, it was agreed by the Plenipotentiaries at the Hague, that for the eaſier carrying on the Treaty, all Ceremonies ſhould be laid aſide, and the Titles any Prince took, be of no Conſequence; That the ſeveral Miniſters ſhould have free and ſecure Correſpondences with the Princes their Maſters. That in order to that, Blank Paſports ſhould be given to each Party, for the Couriers diſpatch'd by them; as alſo for the Pacquet-Boats to and from England; and that the Powers of the reſpective Plenipotentiaries ſhould be on the ſame Foot they were at Nimeguen. 1697.

First Conference at Ryſwick.

In purſuance of theſe Preliminaries, Monſieur Lilienroot, the Mediator, appointed the Firſt Conference to be held at Ryſwick, on the 9*th.* of May; and accordingly, the Allies being met together in the Apartments on one ſide of the Palace, the French in the Apartments on the other ſide, and the Mediator in the middle between Both; the Allies and the French ſhew'd him their Powers, and gave him Copies of the ſame; which he communicated to the reſpective Miniſters, and left the Copies with them. This and the ſettling Part of the Ceremonial, in order to further Proceedings, took up near Three Hours; and then the Conference was adjourn'd to Saturday the 11*th.* of the ſame Month: When being met again in the ſame manner as they did at firſt, the Powers of the Allies were by the Mediator exchanged with the French Ambaſſadors. Moreover, they agreed to meet conſtantly on Wedneſdays in the Morning, and Saturdays in the Afternoon; and that, to prevent the Inconveniencies that might ariſe from Crowds of Attendants, each Ambaſſador ſhould go thither only with One Coach with Six Horſes, Two Pages, and Two Footmen. On the 15*th.* and 18*th.* the Mediator and Plenipotentiaries met again; but all they did at thoſe Two Conferences, was only to regulate ſeveral Points of Ceremony; in which, for the moſt part, they follow'd the Rules that were obſerv'd at the Treaty of Nimegnen.

On the 22*d.* of May, the Imperial Plenipotentiaries deliver'd to the Mediator their Demands, in the Name of the Emperor and Empire; and ſome of the German Miniſters at the ſame time, gave in the particular Pretenſions of the Princes their Maſters: After which, the Allies drew up a large Deduction, in Juſtification of their Claims; of which however, they reſolv'd to give the French Ambaſſadors no Copy, till they had the King's Orders to propoſe theirs. But the French Plenipotentiaries having declar'd, that they had nothing to ask, or pretend to, and that they were ready to anſwer the others, the Allies chang'd their Thoughts; and the French in the mean while, had ſeveral ſeparate Conferences with the Dutch, about Commerce, and a Ceſſation of Arms. This laſt Point the French ſeem'd very eager for, and the ſame was much preſs'd by the Mediator; who, upon the Spaniſh Miniſters declaring their Grievances, declar'd, That he was of Opinion, that nothing could more contribute to the Advancement of the Peace, than the agreeing on a Truce by common Conſent; Mens Minds being ſo much the leſs compos'd and fit for a calm Negociation, by how much they were diſtracted and put out of order, elevated or caſt down, by the good or bad Succeſſes of War. Tho' this Motion ſeem'd then to be approved by Silence, yet other things interven'd, which cauſed it to be laid aſide. About the ſame time, the Brandenburgh Ambaſſadors did very much inſiſt, that all the Names of the Confederate Princes ſhould be Expreſs'd, and particularly Inſerted in the Treaty; and ſome of the Allies took it very ill, that the Pretenſions of the Empire were propoſed by

1697. the Emperor's Ambaſſadors, only in his Imperial Majeſty's Name. To ſilence which Complaints, it was replied, That every one of the Allies was free to propoſe ſeparate Articles concerning his own Affairs. Whereupon ſeveral Princes gave in their Grievances to their Mediator.

King of France makes Peace with Sword in Hand.

The King of France wiſely foreſeeing that the Houſe of Auſtria would inſiſt upon the Treaty of the Pyrenees, reſolv'd to make his laſt Efforts in Flanders and Catalonia, to bring down the Spaniard to his own Terms; and to advance the Prince of Conti to the Crown of Poland: Not doubting but that Warlike Prince, who both by Inclination, and out of Gratitude, would ever promote the Intereſt of France, would ſoon make the Emperor more tractable. His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty's Army was very numerous and formidable this Year in the Low-Countries; and having beſides, the Advantage of being earlier in the Field than the Confederates, both by reaſon of the remoteneſs and ſlow March of the German Troops, and of His Britannick Majeſty's Indiſpoſition, they boaſted of Attacking a no leſs conſiderable Town than Namur; but having reflected on the Difficulties of that Enterprize, they were contented to Beſiege Aeth, a Place the French had yielded to Spain by the Treaty of Nimeguen. There were no leſs than Three Marſhals of France in that Army; to wit, Villeroy, Boufflers, and Catinat; but the laſt being without Diſpute the greateſt General of the Three, 'twas to him the King of France gave the Direction of the Siege, and order'd Monſieur Vauban to aſſiſt him in it; whilſt Villeroy and Boufflers ſhould obſerve the Confederates. Upon Intelligence of the French having Inveſted Aeth, King William, who by this time was perfectly recover'd of His late Illneſs, immediately repair'd to His Army in Brabant, and had an Interview with the Duke of Bavaria, who commanded another Army at hand, to join His Majeſty upon Occaſion. But beſides the great Superiority of the French, which would have made the Attempt very difficult, His Britannick Majeſty openly declar'd, He would not ſacrifice One Man for the Relief of a Place which the French muſt be oblig'd to give up by the Peace. 'Tis true, His Majeſty might eaſily have laid Siege to Dinant, while Marſhal de Canat was beſieging Aeth; but then Bruſſels had been left expos'd to Villeroy and Boufflers, who had a Deſign upon that City, and which His Majeſty utterly diſappointed by His Prudence. As for Aeth, it was ſo vigorouſly preſs'd by the Beſiegers, and ſo faintly defended by the Governor, for the ſame Reaſons which induc'd King William not to attempt its Relief, that it ſurrender'd after Twelve Days of open Trenches.

Crown of Poland deſired by Pr. Conti.

The Succeſſes in Flanders and Greater Catalonia would in all probability have made the French ſole Maſters of the Peace, and given their Ambaſſadors a fair Occaſion to ſpeak the Language of Nimeguen; had not their Expectations from Poland been miſerably diſappointed. It was the general Opinion, that Prince James, Son to the King, was the only Competitor that could oppoſe the Prince of Conti's Advancement to the Throne; and the former being univerſally diſlik'd, upon account of his Father's Avarice; who, in order to fill his Coffers, made open Sale of his Favours, more like a penurious Trader, than a Generous Sovereign; the Abbot of Polignar, who manag'd the French King's Affairs there, did confidently aſſure his Maſter, that Prince Conti would certainly carry the Election, if he did but come in Perſon, and ſend him a ſufficient Sum of Money to Bribe ſome Palatines that oppos'd the French Intereſt. Upon this Encouragement, the Prince of Conti ſet out for Poland, and great Remittances were made to the Abbot of Polignar, which he laviſh'd away with much Oſtentation, and as little Succeſs. 1697.

Obtain'd by the Elector of Saxony.

In the mean time the Elector of Saxony, whom no body ſuſpected to have any Thoughts towards the Crown of Poland, being ſupported by the King of England's Powerful Recommendation to the Emperor, took a Journey in the End of the Spring to Vienna, under the pretence of Settling Matters in relation to the Campaign in Hungary, where 'twas given out he would command the Imperial Army again this Summer. But the Event ſhew'd, that his real Intention was to concert Meaſures with that Court, in order to aſcend the Throne he had in view; to which his Religion could be no Obſtacle, ſince he had already privately reconciled himſelf to the Church of Rome, or at leaſt did pretend he had done ſo afterwards. This Deſign was carried on with wonderful Secreſy and Addreſs: For all of a ſudden the Elector left Vienna; and this was attended with various Reports, induſtriouſly ſpread abroad, of ſome Miſunderſtanding between the Emperor and him; which no body could aſſign a Cauſe for. But when People ſaw the Elector muſter up a Body of his Troops, they entertain'd ſeveral Suſpicions; and the Brandenburghers ſo far took the Alarm, as immediately to gather all the Forces they could, to oppoſe any Attempt that might be made that way. The Elector's ſudden March towards Silefia, and the Frontiers of Poland, quickly occaſion'd other Speculations; and 'twas not long before it was publickly declar'd, that he put in for the Crown of Poland: Which he at laſt obtain'd, by outbidding the Prince of Conti's Agent, both in ready Caſh and Promiſes; and ſo he was proclaim'd King by the Biſhop of Cujavia, and all the Partizans of the Houſe of Auſtria, which made up the Majority of the Poliſh Dyet. 'Tis true, the Prince of Conti was alſo proclaim'd by the Cardinal Primate, and ſome Palatines that were in the French Intereſt; but his Competitor having an Army at hand to ſupport his Claim; and his Highneſs, who ſoon after arrived in Poland, nothing but a great deal of Perſonal Merit to maintain his Title; the latter was, at laſt, neceſſitated to return to France.

Slow Advances of the Treaty.

To quicken the ſlow Advances of the Treaty, the Miniſters of Sweden and Dennark did both declare to the French, that their Maſters would be conſtrained to join their Forces to thoſe of the Allies, to cut off by the Sword all the unneceſſary Difficulties, which France raiſed to protract the Negotiation. Whereupon, the French, on July the 20*th*. gave in their Project of Peace, founded on the fore-mentioned Treaties of Weſtphalia and Nimeguen: The main Articles of which, as to the Empire, were; "An Offer to "make void ſeveral Reunions made on that ſide, "by the Chambers of Mentz and Beſangon, and "the Sovereign Council of Briſac, ſince the "Treaty of Nimeguen. To reſtore the City of "Strasburg, or to give as an Equivalent for it the "City and Caſtle of Friburg, and the Towns of "Briſac and Philipsburg, with the Fort of Kiel, "in the Condition they were at preſent. To "demoliſh the Fortifications of Hunninghen, on "the other ſide of the Rhine. To reſtore Lorain to the Duke of that Name, in the ſame "manner as it was offer'd at the Treaty of Nimeguen; that is, in the ſame Condition it was "poſſeſſed by Duke Charles in 1670. and the City of Nancy, upon certain Conſiderations; "with the Demoliſhing of divers Places, ſuch "as Mont-Royal, Traerbach, &c. As for the Spaniards, the French offered to give them the Ci-

1697. "ty and Country of Luxemburgh, and the Coun-
"try of Chiny; or in Lieu of them, ſome other "Places hereafter to be named; for which there
"was a Blank left in the Project. That all Re-
"unions ſince the Treaty of Nimeguen ſhould be "made void. That the City and Caſtle of Di-
"nant ſhould be delivered to the Biſhop of Liege.
"And that all other Places taken on both ſides
"during the War, ſhould likewiſe be reſtored."
The Spaniards ſeem'd in the main to be pretty well ſatisfied with the French Conceſſions: But the Imperial Miniſters made a tedious, and as ſome thought, an unreaſonable Anſwer to the Project; which the French did not much regard, their chief Aim being to ſatisfy the reſt, upon what Terms they were willing to give them, in order to break off the Grand Confederacy, and by that means to preſerve part of their Acquiſitions on the Rhine, ſince there was ſo little Proſpect of having any thing elſewhere. After the Delivery of the Project of Peace, the King of France, finding much time ſpent to little purpoſe, by Carrying on a Treaty in Writing, order'd His Plenipotentiaries to agree to the Propoſals the Imperialiſts had made not long before, of Treating by Word of Mouth: and tho' the 10*th* of September was the utmoſt the French would give, to accept their Offers; yet 'tis remarkable, that ſince their Diſappointment in Poland, they began to be more tractable than before.

Upon the 17*th*. of Auguſt an extraordinary Conference was held at Ryſwick, which laſted almoſt a whole Day, and wherein the Method agreed on of Treating by Word of Mouth was firſt put in practice. Not many Days after came the News of taking Barcelona by the French, after one of the moſt vigorous Sieges that had been known in any Age. This made the Spaniards very uneaſy, and very preſſing to have the Peace Sign'd upon the Conditions offer'd by France; and more eſpecially, ſince by the Memorial given in to the Mediator on the 1*ſt*. of September, there had been an Offer made to reſtore this Place alſo to the Catholick King, upon a ſlight Conſideration of a few Villages belonging to the Chateleine of Aeth, to be yielded to the French, for the Conveniency of the Trade of the Inhabitants of Tournay. But by how much the more condeſcending the French ſeem'd to be with the Spaniards, the ſtiffer they became with the Empire; now poſitively inſiſting upon the keeping of Strasburg, and that the Emperor ſhould reſt ſatisfied with the Equivalent; which, they ſaid, would be more conſiderable to him, ſince he would have the entire Sovereignty of thoſe Towns that France quitted; whereas Strasburg, if reſtor'd, muſt have been ſet at its own liberty, as a Free Imperial City. If the Imperialiſts were ſtartled at this New Project, they were not leſs ſurprized at the ſhort time prefixed by France for their Anſwer; which was the 20*th*. of Auguſt, and after which the moſt Chriſtian King would no longer be oblig'd to thoſe Offers. This was ſtill the more mortifying to them, ſince they began now to be ſuperior in Force to the French, and to act offenſively on the Rhine; not to mention their Jealouſies, leſt ſome of the Allies ſhould Sign a Separate Peace and leave them out; which occaſion'd ſome Heats amongſt the Confederates.

The Peace owing to King William.

On the other hand, the French Plenipotentiaries were amaz'd at the profound Silence of the Miniſters of the Allies, concerning their laſt Memorial: But it ſeems the Concluſion of the Peace was to be owing to the ſame Genius, who had been the Soul of the War; I mean, King William. His Majeſty wiſely conſidering, that the uſual Forms and incident Chicaneries of a ſolemn Negotiation, were no ſmall Hindrance to the Progreſs of the Treaty; thought fit to commit his Perſonal Intereſts and thoſe of his Dominions, to the Arbitratinn of Two Men of the Sword; to wit, the Earl of Portland on His Britannick, and the Mareſchal de Boufflers on His moſt Chriſtinan Majeſty's Part. Accordingly, the Royal Confederate Army being encamp'd at Cockleberg, near Bruſſels; and the French, under Villeroy, Catinat, and Boufflers, not far from thence, at Iſeringue Vive St. Eloi, and Pepinge; the Earl of Portland, as from himſelf, demanded a private Interview with Monſieur de Boufflers: Which being readily granted, the Two Generals, on June the 10*th*. N. S. met at an equal Diſtance from their reſpective Camps, attended by the ſame Number of Guards, and accompanied by ſeveral Officers of Note. This Preliminary Conference was ſoon followed by Three others; at the laſt of which, on July the 26*th*. the Two Negotiators, after they had been ſome time in the open Field, retir'd into a Houſe in the Suburb of Hall; where they had Pen, Ink, and Paper, and in an Hour adjuſted ſeveral Points, that the Plenipotentiaries at Ryſwick would not have agreed upon in a Year. On the 2*d*. of Auguſt, Portland and Boufflers Sign'd the Paper they had drawn up ſome Days before. Whereupon His Majeſty, on Auguſt the 3*d*. left the Army, and went to Dieren: From whence He diſpatch'd that Earl to the Hague, to acquaint the Congreſs, That as for what concern'd His Majeſty and His Kingdoms, all Matters were ſo adjuſted with France, that this would occaſion no Delay in the General Peace; and therefore He earneſtly preſs'd the other Allies, and particularly the Emperor, to contribute all that in them lay towards the concluding ſo great a Work.

Conferences between the E. of Portland and Mareſch. Boufflers.

The frequent Interviews between King William's Favourite and Mareſchal de Boufflers, occaſion'd divers Speculations. On the one hand, the Jacobites, who, againſt all reaſon, flatter'd themſelves, that tho' a Treaty of Peace was carry'd on at His Majeſty's own Palace, yet He ſhould be left out of it; ſaw by theſe Conferences their Hopes entirely baffled: And on the other hand, a great many People, and even ſome of His Majeſty's beſt Friends, began to ſuſpect that His Majeſty had entred into a private Agreement with the King of France, in favour either of King James, or His Iſſue; upon account of His Britannick Majeſty's having the peaceful Enjoyment of His Dominions during Life, and being acknowledg'd as King of Great Britain by His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty: Which ill-grounded Suſpicion was Three Years after fully remov'd by King William's effectual promoting the Settlement in the Proteſtant Line. Others gave out, that my Lord Portland and Monſieur Boufflers had only agreed, that King James's Queen ſhould have Her Dowry paid Her by England, in ſuch a manner, as if Her Husband was really dead; but that afterwards She refus'd to accept it. And others again have ſince imagin'd, not without ſome Probability, that in theſe Interviews was laid the firſt Foundation of the Famous Treaty of Partition, which was afterwards concluded between King William, and the King of France. But theſe are meer Conjectures, and will remain ſuch, till the Earl of Portland, or the Mareſchal de Boufflers, are pleas'd to reveal what paſs'd betwixt them; which has been hitherto kept ſecret.

The Critical Day appointed by France being come, when either a Happy Peace, or a long and Bloody War, was to determine the Fate of Chriſtendom; the Engliſh, Spaniſh, and Dutch Plenipotentiaries, after a long Conference with thoſe of France, having adjuſted all Matters remaining

The Treaty Signed

1697. maining in difference between any of them, did respectively Sign the Treaty a little after Midnight, and then Complimented each other, upon the Finishing that important Negotiation. The Imperial and Electoral Plenipotentiaries, who most of them were all the while present in the Hall, were so far from consenting to what was done, that on the contrary, they required the Mediator to enter a Protestation, "That this "was a Second Time that a separate Peace had "been concluded with France, (meaning that of "Nimeguen for one) wherein the Emperor and "Empire had been excluded: And that the States "of the Empire, who had been impos'd upon thro' "their own over-credulity, would not for the future "be so easily perswaded to enter into Confederacies." The Spanish Plenipotentiaries, and particularly Don Bernardo de Quiros, by way of Excuse, replied, That he had a long time been made acquainted with His Catholick Majesty's Pleasure, not to delay the Signing of the Treaty, which had been agreed on before; And if he had obey'd those Orders, the French would not have taken Barcelona: But that having deferr'd the Conclusion of that Treaty, at the Perswasion of the Imperial Ministers, he had given the French time to make themselves Masters of that important Place; which Success embolden'd their Plenipotentiaries to change their Language, and thereby he had himself run the hazard of incurring his Master's Displeasure.

The truth is, the Spaniards could not but perceive, that the English and Dutch could have sav'd Barcelona this Year, if they had pleas'd; but that they rather declin'd it, with an Intention to bring the Spaniards the more readily to accept the Offers of the French. And indeed those two Powers having in a manner born the whole Burden of the War, both by Sea and Land, whereby their respective Subjects were reduc'd to great Streights, especially as to their Trade; it could not seem strange that they were forward to Sign a Glorious and Advantageous Peace.

Condition of K. James.

All this while the Abdicated King of England made but an indifferent Figure in his Melancholy Retirement at St. Germains: The French King's Promise to that Unfortunate Prince, and open Declaration to all Europe, that He would never lay down Arms till He had restor'd Him to His Throne, had rais'd His late Britannick Majesty's Hopes to a great height. But He found by sad Experience how little the Promises of Sovereigns are to be rely'd on, when their own Interest comes in Competition. After a tedious War, dubiously maintain'd, the King of France being exhausted both of Men and Money, thought it Prudence to clap up a Peace, and restore to His Neighbours all the Conquests He had made upon them since the Treaty of Nimeguen; which He was the more inclin'd to do, in hopes, that having disarm'd and broke the Confederacy, He might get all again at the Death of the King of Spain, who for many Years had been in a pining, lingring State of Health; and who at the Conclusion of the Peace of Ryswick, was in so desperate a Condition, that the French Court thought He could not live a Month longer. On the other hand, His most Christian Majesty being sensible that a Treaty could not be set on Foot, not only without owning King William, but also (as a Consequence of that Acknowledgment) without Abandoning King James; He neither did insist that a Minister from that Unfortunate Monarch should be admitted to the Conferences at Ryswick; which Proposal was unanimously rejected by the Allies, nor would the French Plenipotentiaries meddle with that Prince's Manifesto. King James's Expectation of the French King's Protection being thus disappointed, and His Majesty finding that His Pardons, as well as His Threats, had no effect upon His Subjects, He was perswaded to draw up a Manifesto or Memorial, containing both a Summary Account of the Reasons that should engage the Confederate Catholick Princes to promote His Restoration; An Expostulation of the Injustice done him; and a Protestation against what was due at Ryswick, as Null, in respect to the Violation of His Rights. There were two of these Memorials offer'd by order of King James; the One to all the Plenipotentiaries of Popish Princes, and the Other to those from Protestants. In Both He asserted His own Right, and claimed the Observance of all the Treaties which any of them had made with Himself, and mixed with it a severe Invective against King William. Upon which, it was thought necessary to prepare a Memorial in Answer to these, which was intended to be given in the Name of King William to all the Ministers. Accordingly such a Memorial was drawn up by King William's own Direction: He explaining Himself upon every Particular, and examining the Draught, and sending it to some of His wisest Ministers, by whom it was carefully Revised and Corrected. But when it was Resolv'd to Translate it into Latin and French, in order to the Communicating it, the King had Advice from the Hague, that those Memorials were so little consider'd there, that the offering an Answer to them would give them some Credit, and that without that they had none at all. So the Draught was order'd to be Writ over again in another Stile, not in King William's Name, but as the Answer of a Private Hand to the Memorials of King James, and so to be Printed: Yet before this could be done, another Advice came to let the Matter quite alone, and to leave the Memorials of King James to sleep in that Neglect under which they were fallen. And so the Answer of King William rested in the Dark, till it was Publish'd by the Lord Bishop of Sarum at London, 1705. 4*to*. under this Title; A Memorial drawn by King William's Special Direction, intended to be given in at the Treaty of Ryswick, justifying the Revolution and the Course of His Government: In Answer to Two Memorials that were offer'd there in King James's Name.

As to the late King's Friends in England, they were so enrag'd to see Him forsaken by the King of France, that they could not forbear venting their bitter Invectives against His most Christian Majesty; for which some of them were committed to Prison, and Fined; the same being a Violation of the late Treaty between the Crowns of England and France.

The Protestant French Refugees in England, Germany, and Scotland, were at this time no less disappointed than the Royal Exile in France: K. William having on all occasions declar'd Himself their Protector, they reasonably expected that He would also prove their Deliverer; and never conclude a Peace with France, without obliging their Natural Sovereign to restore them both to their Estates, and the free Exercise of their Religion, in their own Country. Upon this Presumption, several Consultations were held in London by the French Ministers, and the most considerable Persons among the Refugees there; wherein it was debated, in what Method they should make their Applications to the Plenipotentiaries at Ryswick; and upon what Terms they should agree to their Restoration, which some amongst them look'd upon as Infallible. The Result of these Assemblies being transmitted to Monsieur Jurieu, the Head of all the French Refugees in Holland, He, with his usual Zeal for the Protestant Cause, address'd himself to King 1697. William, who directed the Dutch Plenipotentiaries to open that Matter at a Diſtance to the French Ambaſſadors. The Dutch Miniſters follow'd His Majeſty's Orders; but the King of France, to whom this Overture was communicated, expreſſing an inſuperable Averſeneſs to it, and urging, that as he did not pretend to preſcribe K. William any Rules about His Subjects, ſo He expected the ſame Liberty as to His own, which He look'd upon as the great Prerogative of a Sovereign; His Britannick Majeſty inſiſted no farther upon it.

To make an end of this Memorable Negotiation, the Conferences continu'd at Ryſwick between the Imperial and French Plenipotentiaries, till the 30th of October, when all Things were agreed on, and the Treaty ſign'd, two Days before the Time limited by France was expir'd. And though this Peace with the Empire was not ſo advantageous to it, nor the Reſtitution of Lorrain, in ſo ample a manner as was expected, yet it muſt be own'd, that the Power of France was now extremely reduc'd, if it be conſider'd, That She gave up many Conſiderable Towns in Germany, which She had been long poſſeſs'd of, particularly the Important Place of Briſac: That by the taking of Cazal, and the Peace of Savoy, ſhe had entirely loſt her Footing in Italy: That the ſame Barrier was left in Catalonia as before; and that there was a ſtronger Frontier in the Low-Countries, by her Reſtitution of all ſhe took ſince the beginning of the War, with the Addition of Luxemburg and Dinant. The French themſelves, who did not enter into the Views of their Monarch, were ſo ſenſible of this, and ſo little pleas'd with the Treaty of Ryſwick, that they made very ſevere Reflections on Meſſieurs Harlay, Crecy, and Cailliere, their Plenipotentiaries, whom they traduc'd in their Lampoons, which were publickly ſung in Paris, and over all the Kingdom of France; whilſt the Courage, Reſolution, and Wiſdom of King William, to which this great Work was principally owing, were celebrated and admir'd throughout all the World.

Treaty ſign'd between France and the Empire.

'Twas the Admiration of thoſe Eminent Virtues, that drew the Czar of Muſcovy, the moſt Potent Prince of the North, out of his own Dominions, and made Him traverſe vaſt Tracts of Land to receive His Majeſty's Inſtructions; wherein He prudently imitated the Queen of Sheba, who, many Ages before, had done the ſame, to hear the Wiſdom of Solomon: And becauſe He could not appear in other States with that Majeſty and Splendor which He had in His Own Empire, He condeſcended to go incognito, among the Ambaſſadors, whom to cover His Journey, He ſent to Holland and England. After theſe Ambaſſadors had had their Audience of the States General at the Hague, they were admitted to that of His Britannick Majeſty at Utretcht; which being over, His Majeſty and the Czar met in a ſmall Gallery, into which they entered, both at a time, out of the adjoining Rooms, and hearty Embraces and Compliments being paſs'd on both ſides, they had a long Conference together about the Poſture of Affairs; wherein the Czar highly applauded His Majeſty's Indefatigable Endeavours, and conſtant Aim to reduce France within His Ancient Limits. The Ruſſian Emperor's Eſteem for King William being highly encreas'd by this Interview, and confirm'd by ſeveral other Conferences He had with His Majeſty, He reſolv'd to viſit that Happy and Powerful Nation who had ſo great a Prince to their Sovereign. Accordingly the Czar followed King William into England, where He was magnificently entertain'd with all His numerous Retinue, at His Majeſty's own Charge, and had Private Conferences not only with His Majeſty, but with the Princeſs and Prince of Denmark, who contributed not a little to His Diverſion, and at the ſame time rais'd His Surprize by a Splendid Ball, at which were preſent the Brighteſt Beauties in England. During His Stay in London, His Czariſh Majeſty endeavour'd to inſtruct Himſelf in the Knowledge of ſeveral Uſeful Arts, unknown to His Barbarous Subjects, and more particularly, in that of Navigation; with deſign to build a Fleet both on the Baltick, to advance the Trade of His Empire, and on the Black-Sea to annoy the Turks: Which Project, however, has not been yet put in execution. There were not wanting thoſe who cenſur'd that Prince for leaving His Dominions after this manner: I will not altogether excuſe Him, but content my ſelf to ſay, That His Example is never to be followed, till there ariſe again ſo Great a Man as King William, whoſe Merit may in ſome meaſure juſtifie the Curioſity of ſeeing Him.

Czar of Muſcovy comes to England.

During His Majeſty's Abſence, there had little happen'd that deſerves our Notice. At the beginning of the Campaign, the King was pleas'd to make the Earl of Rivers Lieutenant General, and Brigadier Lumley Major General of the Engliſh Forces. On July 19, His Majeſty was pleaſed to confer the Dignity of a Baronet of this Kingdom upon William Lowther of Mask in Yorkſhire, Eſq;. Toward the end of the Campaign, upon Colonel Coy's quitting his Regiment of Horſe, His Majeſty was pleaſed to give it to the Earl of Arran; and his Lordſhip's Regiment in England to Colonel Daniel Harvey. On July 27, John Povey, Eſq; was ſworn Clerk of the Privy-Council in Ordinary, in the Place of Richard Cooling, Eſq; deceas'd: And at the ſame time James Vernon, Jun. Eſq; was ſworn Clerk of the Council in Extraordinary. In the Beginning of October, Edward Lord Viſcount Villiers, one of His Majeſty's Ambaſſadors Extraordinary, and Plenipotentiaries for the Treaty of Peace, was created Earl of Jerſey, and ſoon after received the Character of His Majeſty's Ambaſſador to the States General; and on Nov. 25. was ſworn of His Majeſty's Privy-Council. When the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen attended His Majeſty to congratulate His Safe Return, and Happy Concluſion of the Peace, His Majeſty conferred the Honour of Knighthood upon the two Sheriffs, Bartholomew Gracedieu, and James Collet, Eſquires, and upon Robert Beddingfield, Eſq; Alderman, and Thomas Cudden, Eſq; Chamberlain of London.

Honours and Preferments.

On Friday, Dec. 3. the Parliament met at Weſtminſter, and the King in His Robes made this Speech to the Two Houſes.

Parliament meets.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"THE War which I enter'd into by the Advice of My People, is by the Bleſſing "of God, and their Zealous and Affectionate "Aſſiſtance, brought to the End We all propos'd, "an Honourable Peace; which I was willing to "conclude not ſo much to eaſe My Self from "the Trouble or Hazard, as to free the Kingdom "from the Continuing Burthen of an Expenſive "War.

King's Speech.

"I am heartily ſorry My Subjects will not at "firſt find all that Relief from the Peace which "I could wiſh, and they may expect; but the "Funds intended for the laſt Years Service, have "fallen ſhort of anſwering the Sums for "which they were given; ſo that there re-"main Conſiderable Deficiencies to be pro-"vided for.

"There's

1697. "There's a Debt upon the Account of the "Fleet and the Army. The Revenues of the "Crown have been Anticipated by My Conſent "for Publick Uſes; ſo that I am wholly deſtitute "of Means to Support the Civil Liſt; and I can "never diſtruſt you'll ſuffer this to turn to My "Diſadvantage, but will Provide for Me, during "My Life, in ſuch a manner as may be for My "Honour, and for the Honour of the Govern-"ment.

"Our Naval Force being incr eaſed to near double "what it was at my Acceſſio n to the Crown, the "Charge of Maintaining it will be proportiona-"bly augmented; and it is certainly neceſſary "for the Intereſt and Reputation of England, to "have always a great Strength at Sea.

"The Circumſtances of Affairs Abroad are "ſuch, that I think my ſelf oblig'd to tell you "My Opinion, That for the preſent, England "cannot be Safe without a Land Force; and I "hope We ſhall not give thoſe who mean Us Ill, "the opportunity of Effecting that, under the "Notion of a Peace, which they could not "bring to paſs by a War.

"I doubt not but you Gentlemen of the Houſe "of Commons, will take theſe Particulars into "your Conſiderations, in ſuch a manner as to "provide the neceſſary Supplies, which I do ve-"ry earneſtly Recommend to you.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"That which I moſt delight to think of, and "am beſt pleaſed to own, is, That I have all "the Proofs of My People's Affection, that a "Prince can deſire; and I take this Occaſion to "give them the moſt ſolemn Aſſurance, That as "I never had, ſo I never will, nor can, have any "Intereſt ſeparate from theirs.

"I eſteem it one of the greateſt Advantages "of the Peace, that I ſhall now have Leiſure to "rectify ſuch Corruptions or Abuſes as may have "crept into any part of the Adminiſtration du-"ring the War; and effectually to diſcourage "Prophaneneſs and Immorality: And I ſhall "employ My Thoughts in promoting Trade, and "advancing the Happineſs and Flouriſhing Eſtate "of the Kingdom.

"I ſhall conclude with telling You, That as "I have, with the Hazard of every Thing, Reſ-"cued your Religion, Laws and Liberties, when "they were in the Extremeſt Danger; ſo I "ſhall place the Glory of My Reign in Preſerv-"ing them Entire, and leaving them ſo to Po-"ſterity.

Lords Addreſs. This Speech ſeem'd to be moſt acceptable to the Lords, who made an Addreſs to His Majeſty. "Congratulating His Happy Return, accompa-"nied with the Bleſſings of a Safe and Honou-"rable Peace; which next under God they "were ſenſible was owing to His Courage and "Conduct: That after the Hazards and Labours "He had ſo long ſuſtained for the good of Eu-"rope, there wanted nothing but this to com-"pleat the Glory of His Reign. They ſhould "never be wanting in their Endeavours to aſſiſt "His Majeſty in Maintaining that Quiet which "He had ſo glorioufly reſtored to theſe King-"doms, and in contributing all they could to the "Safety of His Perſon, and the ſecuring the "Peace and Proſperity of His Government." His Majeſty in Return aſſured their Lordſhips of His Kindneſs; and told them, He hoped this Peace would be ſo Bleſt, that they might long enjoy it.

His Majeſty's Speech did more variouſly affect the Commons: Some thought ſome Expreſſions in it too Magiſterial; Others ſeem'd to be of-fended at His Majeſty's putting them in mind of what He had done for the Nation; Others again diſtruſted the great Promiſes of what He would do for them; and moſt began to be Jea-lous of the Expreſſion, That England could not be Safe without a Land Force. By which they un-derſtood that odious thing, a Standing Army. However, on Dec. 9th, the Commons preſented this Humble Addreſs to the King. 1697.

Commons Addreſs. "We your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal "Subjects, the Commons in Parliament Aſſem-"bled, who have ſo frequently waited on Your Ma-"jeſty with the tender of our Aſſiſtance for car-"rying on the War, come now to Congratulate "Your Majeſty upon the Happy Concluſion of "it, in a Peace ſo Honourable and Advantage-"ous to the Nation, as ſufficiently juſtifies the "Wiſdom of the Commons in Adviſing, and "Your Majeſty's Conduct in the Proſecution "of it.

"The Proſpect of the Benefits Your People "will receive from this Peace, is very pleaſing. "The Honour Your Majeſty has reſtor'd to Eng-"land, of holding the Balance of Europe, gives "Your Subjects great Content. But what Your "Commons are moſt Affected and Delighted "with, is, That Your Majeſty's Sacred Perſon "will now be Secure from thoſe many and "great Dangers, to which You have ſo often "Expos'd it for our Sakes. Nothing being ſo "Evident, as that Your Majeſty's Return in "Safety, was a Bleſſing more welcome to Your "People than Peace, and received with greater "Demonſtrations of Joy.

"We therefore with Hearts full of Affection, "Duty, and Gratitude, do aſſure Your Majeſty "in Name of all the Commons of England, That "this Houſe will be ever ready to Aſſiſt and Sup-"port Your Majeſty, who by putting a Period "to the War, has confirm'd us in the quiet Poſ-"ſeſſion of our Rights and Liberties, and ſo "fully compleated the Glorious Work of our "Deliverance.

King's Anſwer. The King Anſwered thus: Gentlemen, nothing that relates to the Peace pleaſes Me ſo much, as the Satisfaction you have in it: And as you have aſ-ſiſted Me in the War beyond all expreſſion, I do not doubt, but you will be as Zealous in maintaining the Peace.

The griе-vance of Standing Forces. Standing Forces, however eſtabliſhed and regu-lated by Law, or however neceſſary to Maintain the Peace, were thought Intolerable; and there-fore upon entring into a Conſideration of His Majeſty's Speech, the firſt Reſolution of the Commons, was on Dec. 11. That all the Land Forces of this Kingdom that have been raiſed ſince the 29th of September 1680, ſhall be Paid and Diſ-banded. The Friends of the King and His Go-vernment had well argued, that the Nation was ſtill Unſettled, and not quite delivered from the Fear of King James; that the Adherents to that Abdicated Prince were as Bold and Numerous as ever; and He Himſelf ſtill Protected by the French King, who having as yet diſmiſt none of His Troops, was ſtill as formidable as before. That if our Army was entirely Disbanded, the Peace which was obtained at the expence of ſo much Blood and Treaſure, would be altogether Precarious: And not only England but all Europe lie once more at the Mercy of that Ambitious Monarch, an Inveterate Enemy to King William, the Proteſtant Religion, and the Liberties of Chriſtendom. On the other hand, the Countrey-Party who valued themſelves upon oppoſing any Motions of the Court; the Diſaffected Party who never heartily approved the Revolution; the Commonwealth-Party who were ſecretly driving at a Change of Government into their own Scheme and Intereſt; and even many wor-

1697. thy Patriots, who had no worſe View than the Rights and Liberties of their Country: All upon different thoughts agreed in the ſame Aveſion to a Standing Army; and labour'd to repreſent it as abſolutely deſtructive to the Conſtitution of the Engliſh Government. And it was no wonder that their Objections prevail'd, when they were more Popular, and had this Weight in them, That Standing Forces would want a continual Tax; and Disbanding would relieve the People from the Burden of the War, which they would never be willing to bear in a Time of Peace. The King hoped that He had prevented the Warmth of theſe Debates at His laſt coming over, when He had cauſed ſeveral Regiments of Horſe, Dragoons, and Foot, to be Disbanded; and even others to be reduced, and ſent away (moſt of them) either to Scotland or Ireland. And therefore He reſented it as the greater Hardſhip upon Him, that He muſt have no Troops remaining, but be left ſo Naked and Expoſed, as if the Peace were only to encourage His Enemies to ſurprize Him with another War.

Commons for Disbanding the Army.

The Commons however perſiſted in their Reſolutions of Disbanding; but to make it the more plauſible, they paſs'd a Vote, December the 13th. That it be an Inſtruction to the Committee who were to conſider of the Supply, that they ſhould likewiſe conſider of a Gratuity to be given to ſuch Officers and Soldiers of the Engliſh Army, who were or ſhould be Disbanded: And at the ſame time, ordered Mr. Hammond and Mr. Moyle, to bring in a Bill, To enable Soldiers who ſhould be Disbanded, to exerciſe their Trades in any Town or Corporation throughout this Kingdom. And, to ſeem to provide for the Security of the Kingdom, when the Army ſhould be Disbanded, on December the 17th. they appointed ſeveral Members to prepare and bring in a Bill, To regulate the Militia, and make them the more uſeful. And on December the 18th. they reſolved, That Ten Thouſand Men are neceſſary for a Summer and Winter-Guard at Sea, for the Year One Thouſand Six Hundred Ninety Eight.

Supply.

On December the 20th. the Commons took the Supply into Conſideration, and reſolved, "That "in a juſt Senſe and Acknowledgment of what "Great Things His Majeſty has done for theſe "Kingdoms, a Sum not exceeding Seven Hun- "dred Thouſand Pounds be granted to His Ma- "jeſty during His Life, for the Support of the "Civil Liſt. On Friday January the 14th. to encourage the Diſpatch of Buſineſs, His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and ſending for the Commons, gave the Royal Aſſent to, 1. An Act to prevent the further Currency of any Hammer'd Silver Coin of this Kingdom; and for Recoining ſuch as is now in being; and for the making out New Exchequer-Bills, where the former Bills are, or ſhall be, filled up by Indorſements. 2. An Act againſt Correſponding with the late King James, and His Adherents. 3. An Act for continuing the Impriſonment of —— Counter, and others, for the late Horrid Conſpiracy to Aſſaſſinate the Perſon of His Sacred Majeſty. 4. An Act to give farther Time for the adminiſtring of Oaths relating to Tallies and Orders; and for the eaſier Diſpatch of Publick Buſineſs, in the Exchequer, and in the Bank of England. 5. An Act for Veſting in Sydenham Barker, Gent. an abſolute Eſtate of Inheritance in Fee-Simple, in a certain Rent, Meſſuages, Lands and Hereditaments in the County of Devon; and ſecuring to John Baker, Gent. and Henry Baker, an Infant, his Son, Moneys in Lieu of their Claims thereunto. The ſame day, the Houſe of Commons agreed to the Reſolutions which had been taken in a Grand Committee about the Supply: Firſt, That a Sum not exceeding Three Hundred Fifty Thouſand Pounds, be granted to His Majeſty, for Maintaining Guards and Garriſons for the Year 1698. Secondly, That a Supply be granted to His Majeſty, which together with the Funds already ſettled for that purpoſe, ſhould be ſufficient to Anſwer and Cancel all Exchequer-Bills, iſſued, or to be iſſued, not exceeding Two Millions Seven Hundred Thouſand Pounds. Thirdly, That a Supply be granted to His Majeſty, for the ſpeedy Paying and Disbanding the Army. And then they Ordered, That a Bill be brought in for reducing the Diſcount upon Exchequer-Bills, and giving them a better Currency. On January the 18th. they came to other ſoftning Reſolutions. Firſt, That upon Disbanding the Army, over and above what is due to them, there be allow'd by way of Bounty, Fourteen Days Subſiſtence to each Foot-Soldier and Non-Commiſſion Officer; and to each Foot-Soldier Three Shillings more, in Lieu of his Sword, which he is to deliver up. Secondly, That upon Disbanding the Army, over and above what is due to them, there be allow'd by way of Bounty, Six Days full Pay to each private Trooper and Non-Commiſſion Officer of the Horſe and Dragoons. Thirdly, That of the Supply to be granted to His Majeſty, the Sum of Two Hundred and Fifty Thouſand Pound be allow'd upon Account, towards defraying the Charge of Disbanding the private Troopers, and Centinels, and Non-Commiſſion Officers, of the Horſe, Dragoons, and Foot. Thirdly, That Proviſion be made for giving Half-Pay to the Commiſſion-Officers, (His Majeſty's Natural-born Subjects of England) till the ſaid Officers ſhall be fully paid off and cleared, and be otherwiſe provided for.

For making good Deficiencies.

To proceed in the ſofter ways, the Commons reſolved to make good the Deficiencies of former Funds; and therefore on January the 22d. they Voted the Sum of Four Hundred and Seven Thouſand Pounds, for making good the Deficiency of the Aid of Three Shillings in the Pound granted to His Majeſty the laſt Seſſion of Parliament: And Nine Hundred and Forty Thouſand Pounds, for making good the Deficiency of the Subſidies, and other Duties granted at the ſame time. And One Hundred Twenty Nine Thouſand Pound, for making good the Deficiency of the Aid of One Shilling in the Pound. And they ordered a Committee to conſider of Ways and Means for making good the ſaid Deficiencies. On February the 1ſt. having taken the Arrears of the Army into Conſideration, They reſolved, that the Sum of 1254000 l. was neceſſary to clear the Arrears of Pay, due to the Land-Forces, according to the Eſtabliſhment from the 1ſt. of April 1692, to the laſt day of September 1697. beſides 940815 l. for Subſiſtence, 28295 l. for Contingencies, 5000 l. for the General Officers, and 75000 l. for the Guards and Garriſons; in all 2348102 l. And that there was but 855502 l. remaining in the Hands of the Pay-Maſter of the Army, the firſt Day of January, 169⅞.

To raiſe the Sums which the Parliament had Voted neceſſary for Disbanding the Army, paying off of Quarters, and paying of Seamen, and towards making good of Loans, and the Deficiencies of former Funds; they reſolv'd on February 9. to lay an Aid of Three Shillings in the Pound upon Land, by way of Aſſeſsment upon every County, in Proportion to the Rates of the firſt Four Shillings Aid granted in 1691. by which means they prevented any future Deficiency of this Fund. The next day they conſider'd the Account of what was due to ſome of His Majeſty's Allies, both for Arrears of Subſidies, and for Payment of Auxiliaries; and reſolv'd, That 180000 Rix-Dollars were due to the Elector of Brandenburgh;

Acts paſſed.

Uſes of Supply.

1697. burgh; 250000 Rix-Dollars to the Landgrave of Hesse Cassel; 121223 Rix-Dollars to the Dukes of Wolfenbuttle; 149997 Rix-Dollars to the Bishop of Munster; 50000 Rix-Dollars to the Dukes of Hannover and Zell; 25000 Rix-Dollars to the Duke of Holstein, and 200000 Rix-Dollars to the King of Denmark, both upon the foremention'd Account, and in consideration of an entire Prohibition of Commerce between that Crown and France. They also Resolv'd, That there was due the Sum of 177000 Pounds to the Contractors for Bread and Forage. Four Days after, they further examin'd into the Debt of the Nation, and Resolv'd, That the Sum of 1392742 l. was due upon the several Heads of the Estimate of the General Debt of the Navy; 204157 l. to the Office of Ordnance; 340708 l. for Transports for reducing of Ireland; 125785 l. for other Transport-Service; and 49929 l. for Quartering and Cloathing the Army rais'd by Act of Parliament in 1677, and Disbanded by another Act in 1679.

For paying all Arrears of Debt.

It being impossible for the Nation to acquit this vast Debt at once, the Commons resolv'd to do it by Degrees; and therefore Voted, First, That the Debt due for clearing the Army, from the 1*st.* of April, 1692. to the last Day of September, 1697. amounting to 1254000 l. the Sum of 139066 l. be raised in the Year 1698. which would clear the Army to the 1*st.* Day of April, 1693. Secondly, That the Sum of 203450 l. be raised for the clearing the Arrears of Subsistence to the Troops in England, between the 1*st.* Day of January, 1696. and the 1*st.* Day of August, 1697. Thirdly, That 450816 l. be raised for clearing the Arrears of Subsistence to the Troops in Flanders, to the 4*th.* Day of October, 1697. Fourthly, That the Sum of 50000 l. be raised for the General Officers. Fifthly, That 137990 l. be raised for clearing the Arrears of Subsistence due to the Troops in Flanders, from the 4*th.* of October, 1697. to the last Day of December. Sixthly, That the Sum of 1100117 l. be raised for the Navy; to wit, 100000 l. for Wear and Tear; 600000 l. for Seamens Wages, in part of 1862849 l. due on that Score; 16389 l. due to the Registred Seamen; 24000 l. for the Salaries of the Commissioners of the Admiralty, and other Officers, and for Contingencies; 28663 l. for the Half-pay Sea-Officers; 90073 l. for Pensions to Superannuated Sea Officers and Widows; 15927 l. for the Charge of the Yards; 848 l. for the Muster-Masters of the Out-Ports; 43399 l. for Wages to Ships and Vessels in Ordinary; 19608 l. for Victuals of the Ships in Ordinary; 32558 l. for Harbour-Moorings; 35848 l. for Ordinary Repairs of the Navy; 55520 l. for the Two Marine Regiments; and 37286 l. for the Charge of the Office for Registring Seamen. Seventhly, That the Sum of 60000 l. be allowed for the Ordnance: And Eighthly, That Provision be made towards Payment of the Principal and Interest of the Transport-Debt. All which Sums they resolv'd to raise in the Year 1698.

Exchequer-Bills.

The false Endorsement of Exchequer-Bills was such a scandalous Practice, that it took up much of the Commons time to enquire into it, and reform it. These Exchequer-Bills were of mighty use in the Nation, by supplying the Scarcity of Money during the Recoining of the Silver Species. Now because there was an Interest of Seven Pounds Twelve Shillings per Annum allowed upon the Second Issuing the said Bills out of the Exchequer, after they had been paid in, on any of the King's Taxes; whereas at their first issuing out of the Exchequer, they bore no Interest; this encourag'd several of the King's Officers, both in the Exchequer, the Customs, and the Excise, to contrive together to get great Sums of Money by false Endorsements on these Exchequer-Bills, before they had circulated about, and been brought into any Branch of His Majesty's Revenue. The most considerable Persons that had carried on this unwarrantable Practice, were Mr. Charles Duncomb, Receiver-General of the Excise; Mr. John Knight, Treasurer of the Customs; Mr. Bartholomew Burton, who had a Place in the Excise-Office; and Mr. Reginald Marryot, one of the Deputy-Tellers of the Exchequer; which last, to get his Pardon, compounded to accuse the rest. Upon a full Proof of the Matter, Duncomb and Knight, who were Members of the House of Commons, were first Expell'd the House, and Committed Prisoners to the Tower; Burton sent to Newgate, and Bills order'd to be brought in to punish them. The Bill against Mr. Duncomb, whereby a Fine of near half his Estate, (which at that time was judg'd to be worth 400000 l.) was set upon him, did quickly pass the House of Commons, notwithstanding the Opposition that was made to it, particularly by the Attorney-General: But being sent up to the House of Lords, and their Lordships being equally divided, the Duke of Leeds gave his Casting Vote for the Rejecting of the Bill. It was then the Common Report, That Mr. Duncomb dispell'd the impending Storm by a Golden Sacrifice; which however History cannot relate as a Truth, because it never came to publick Notice: But we must not pass over in Silence, that Mr. Duncomb being set at Liberty by the Order of the House of Lords, without the Consent of the Commons, the latter resented it to that degree, that they caus'd him to be remanded to the Tower of London, where he continu'd to the end of the Session. The Bills against Knight and Burton had the same Fate; and so all those threatning Clouds that seem'd ready to crush the false Indorsers, spent themselves in Vapour and Noise.

The Commons did this Year design to apply part of all the Forfeited Estates to the Use of the Publick; in order to which, they enquir'd into the Grants made by King Charles IId. and King James IId. and order'd a Bill to be brought in to make them Void. Afterwards they examin'd the Grants made by His present Majesty in Ireland; and because a Grant was found made to Mr. Roylton, which Mr. Mountague, Chancellor of the Exchequer, own'd to be for his Benefit, a warm Debate arose thereupon; and the Enemies of the latter, who were not few, (for the Reasons I hinted before) mov'd, That he should withdraw; which passing in the Negative, it was Resolv'd by a great Majority, That it was the Opinion of this House, That the Honourable Charles Mountague, Esq; Chancellor of the Exchequer, for his good Services to this Government, did deserve His Majesty's Favour. A Vote that will render his Name famous to all succeeding Ages.

Earl of Macclesfield's Bill of Divorce.

The Earl of Macclesfield, to Vindicate the Honour of his Family, was forc'd to publish the Shame of his Marriage-Bed, and to prefer a Bill in the House of Lords to be Divorc'd from his Wife. It seems his Lady, about Ten Years before, being weary of living with the Earl's Father, under whose Care her Husband left her, during his Absence beyond Sea, did retire to her Mother the Lady Mason's House: The Earl being return'd Home, and resenting this Step of his Lady, which she had made without his Privity, instead of recalling her, suffer'd her to live in a State of Separation; during which it is no Wonder she was tempted to break her Matrimonial Vows, since her Husband did not perform his; and since we daily see both Sexes prove unfaithful to one another, without any Just Provocation. However, we ought to account the Lady

1697. dy Maclesfield Virtuous, till the Fruits of her Amours prov'd her otherwise; which was towards the latter end of the Year 1696, when she was deliver'd of a Daughter. The Death of this Child, before the Earl had heard any thing of the Matter, with the Belief that this might be a sufficient Warning against Liberties that carried such Visible Effects with them, with-held him from attempting publick Satisfaction; and moreover, at the Solicitation of his Wife's Relations, who undertook for her Conduct, for the future, his Lordship consented to allow her 500 l. yearly, for a Separate Maintenance. This Treaty was hardly concluded, when the Earl being inform'd of his Lady's being delivered of another Child, he commenced his Suit in the Spiritual-Court, for such a Divorce as might be given by that Law: But being disappointed in his Prosecution through the Dilatoriness of Ecclesiastical Proceedings, his Lordship apply'd himself to his Peers for a Remedy, which nothing but a Parliament could give: All the Relief which he could expect from a Sentence in Doctors-Commons being no more than that State of Separation, in which he and his Lady had long liv'd. He alledg'd, That it is evident, that the Divine Law admits of Second Marriages in such Cases, and there had been Acts of Parliament for them, as well as for Bastardizing Spurious Issue: That those Canons which have prohibited Second Marriages in like Cases, were so manifestly an Effect of the Popish Doctrine of Marriage being a Sacrament, and of the Avarice of the Court of Rome to get Money for dispensing with them, that in the Reformation of Ecclesiastical Laws, prepar'd and intended in the Time of Edward VI. in pursuance of an Act of Parliament of Hen. VIII. there was express Liberty given by those Canons, to marry again; which by virtue of that Act of Parliament, would have become a General Law, or at least, have occasion'd one: That whatever Objection might be against a General Law, from the Temptation it might give Ill People to seek groundless Dissolutions of Marriages, yet upon Extraordinary Cases such as this was, such Relief had been granted; and where it had been denied, either the Fault was not fully prov'd, or the Parties had cohabited; or, after the Grounds of Dissatisfaction, had been reconciled: That if in such a Concurrence of Circumstances as were in his Case, he must still be thought to have a Wife, and the Children she had had, must be look'd upon as his, from the Common Presumption, till Contrary Proof, in that they were born within the Four Seas; besides, that it could not but be too great an Encouragement to Women, to make an ill Use of a Separate Maintenance, which is provided for in most Marriage-Settlements, it would be a most unreasonable Hardship upon him, that the Standing Law, which is design'd to do every Man Right, should by the Rigor of the Letter, be to him the cause of the greatest Wrong; and that for his Wife's Fault, he should be deprived of the Common Privileges of every Freeman in the World, to have an Heir of his own Body, to inherit what he possess'd either of Honour or Estate: Or that his own Brother should lose his Claim to both, and have his Birth-right sacrific'd to the Lady Maclesfield's Irregular Life.

While this Affair was depending in the Spiritual-Court, the Lady Maclesfield insisted upon her Innocence, and her Agents industriously spread a Report, That the Earl her Husband had been surprized into a Private Meeting with her, (by a Woman of Intrigue) at which time he got her with Child: But this Story being confuted by the Earl's Positive Evidence to the contrary, her Ladyship gave up that Point now, and only endeavoured to make her Husband the Author of her Miscarriages. She alledg'd, That the late Earl of Maclesfield had turn'd her out of Doors: That the present Earl, notwithstanding the Obligation she had laid upon him, by petitioning King James for his Life, had maliciously secluded her from Bed and Board: And therefore if the Lords thought fit to pass this Bill of Divorce, she demanded her Fortune to be refunded; both because a Divorce dissolves the whole Frame of the Marriage Contract; and because it were the highest pitch of Injustice, that a Man who was guilty of making his Wife commit Adultery, should be rewarded out of the same Wife's Fortune. This Affair occasion'd great Debates in the Upper House; some Peers representing the Danger of granting Divorces; and others, amongst whom Dr. Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury, spoke the longest, shewing the Necessity and Lawfulness of such Extraordinary Proceedings in some particular Cases. Upon the whole Matter, the Lords pass'd a Bill for Dissolving the Marriage between Charles Earl of Maclesfield, and Anne his Wife, and to illegitimate her Children; but with a Proviso, that the Earl should refund her Fortune. This Bill being sent down to the Commons, the Parties concern'd were both heard by their Council, but notwithstanding the Lady Maclesfield's Opposition, the Bill was read the Third Time, and pass'd without any Amendment. 1697.

On Monday, March 7. the King came to the House of Peers, and pass'd these Publick and Private Bills:

Acts Passed.

1. An Act for Explaining an Act made the last Session of Parliament, for granting to His Majesty certain Duties upon Malt, Mum, Sweets, Cyder, and Perry. 2. An Act for Satisfying and Discharging the Arrears of several Annuities which incurred between the Seventeenth Day of May, One Thousand Six Hundred and Ninety Six, and the Seventeenth Day of May, One Thousand Six Hundred and Ninety Seven. 3. An Act, That all Retailers of Salt shall sell by Weight. 4. An Act for rendring the Laws more effectual, for preventing the Importation of Foreign Bone-Lace, Loom-Lace, Needle-Work, Point and Cut-Work. 5. An Act to prevent the Throwing and Firing of Squibs, Serpents and other Fire-Works. 6. An Act for Enabling Simon Lord Bishop of Ely, and his Successors, to Lease the Mannor-House, and Demesne-Lands of Downham in the Isle of Ely, and for confirming a Lease lately thereof made by the said Bishop, and for clearing the said Bishop and others from Dilapidations there. 7. An Act to enable Sir Francis Guybon, and Dame Isabella his Wife, and their Trustees, to sell the Mannor of Avenals, and other Lands in, or near Gunthorp, in the County of Norfolk, and for settling other Lands in lieu thereof. 8. An Act for the Naturalization of Gerrard Maesacker, and others. 9. An Act to enable Rebecka Lassels, Widow, to sell Copyhold-Lands and Houses in Ealing, in the County of Middlesex. 10. An Act for Vesting in Trustees certain Lands of George Farrington, Esq; lying in the Counties of Middlesex and Surrey, (settled upon the Marriage of William Farington his Nephew) and with the Money arising thereby, for Purchasing of other Lands in Lancashire, where the Ancient Estate of the Family lies, to be settled to the same Uses. 11. An Act to enable the Trustees of William Knott, Gent. and his Wife, to sell a Lease of Houses in Bread-street, London, for Payment of Debts, and to settle another Estate of better Value in lieu thereof. 12. An Act to enable Thomas Kynnersley, Esq; an Infant, to make a Jointure and Settlement of his Estate. 13. An Act for Naturalizing Dudley Vesey, an Infant. 14. An Act to enable John Lewin to sell certain Messuages in Southwark, for Payment of Debts.

Since

1697. Honours and Preferments.

Since the beginning of this Seſſion, theſe Places and Honours were well beſtowed by the Favour of His Majeſty. On Dec. 5. upon the reſignation of Mr. Secretary Trumbull, the King made choice of James Vernon, Eſq; to ſucceed him in the Office of Principal Secretary of State, and that Evening he took the uſual Oaths of Secretary and Privy Counſellor. On Dec. 12. His Majeſty was pleas'd to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon John Blencow, one of the Juſtices of the Common-Pleas; Henry Hatſel, Eſq; one of the Barons of the Exchequer; Joſeph Jekel, Eſq; Chief-Juſtice of Cheſter; and William Sympſon, Eſq; Curſitor Baron of the Court of Exchequer. In the Chriſtmas Holydays, the Earl of Sunderland reſigned his Office of Lord Chamberlain, in a Prudent Fear that the Commons would addreſs the King for the removal of him. About the end of December, the Duke of St. Albans was ſent into France, to compliment the King and the Dauphine, upon the Marriage of the Duke of Burgundy: And ſoon after the Earl of Portland went over Ambaſſador Extraordinary to that Court; And Mr. Prior was Secretary of that Embaſſy. On Feb. 16. His Majeſty conferr'd the Dignity of a Baronet upon Thomas Tipping of Wheatfield, in the County of Oxon, Eſq; in conſideration of his conſtant Loyalty and good Services. The Count de Tallard came Ambaſſador from His Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, landing at Greenwich on March 18.

State of Religion.

It was a great Honour to the Houſe of Commons, that on Feb. 9. a Committee was appointed to draw up an Humble Addreſs to His Majeſty, upon the Debate of the Houſe, to ſuppreſs Prophaneneſs and Immorality, and all Books which endeavour to undermine the Fundamentals of the Chriſtian Religion, and to puniſh the Authors. So that on Feb. 17. this Addreſs was preſented to the King by the whole Houſe.

May it pleaſe Your Majeſty,

Addreſs of the Commons againſt Prophaneneſs and Immorality.

"We Your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal "Subjects, the Commons in Parliament aſſem-"bled, do with great Joy and Comfort remem-"ber the many Teſtimonies which Your Majeſty "has given us of Your Sincerity and Zeal for "the True Reformed Religion, as eſtabliſh'd in "this Kingdom: And in particular, we beg Leave "to preſent to Your Majeſty our moſt Humble "and Thankful Acknowledgments for the late "Gracious Declaration Your Majeſty has made "to us from the Throne, That You would ef-"fectually diſcourage Prophaneneſs and Immo-"rality, which chiefly by the Neglect and Ill Ex-"ample of too many Magiſtrates, are, like a "General Contagion, diffuſed and ſpread "throughout the Kingdom, to the great Scan-"dal and Reproach of our Religion, and to the "Diſhonour and Prejudice of your Majeſty's Go-"vernment.

"Therefore in concurrence with Your Maje-"ſty's Pious Intentions, we do moſt humbly de-"ſire, That your Majeſty would iſſue out Your "Royal Proclamation, commanding all Your "Majeſty's Judges, Juſtices of the Peace, and "other Magiſtrates, to put in ſpeedy Execution "thoſe good Laws that are now in force againſt "Prophaneneſs and Immorality, giving due En-"couragement to all ſuch as do their Duty there-"in: And that Your Majeſty would be pleaſed "to require from Your Judges and Juſtices of "Aſſize, from time to time, an Account of ſuch "their Proceedings.

"And ſince the Examples of Men in High and "Publick Stations have a Powerful Influence up-"on the Lives of others, we do moſt humbly be-"ſeech Your Majeſty, that all Vice, Prophane-"neſs and Irreligion may in a particular manner 1697.
"be diſcouraged in all thoſe who have the Ho-"nour to be employ'd near Your Royal Perſon; "and in all others who are in Your Majeſty's "Service, by Sea and Land; appointing Strict "Orders to be given to all Your Commanders, "that they not only ſhew a good Example them-"ſelves, but alſo inſpect the Manners of thoſe "under them; and that Your Majeſty would up-"on all Occaſions diſtinguiſh Men of Piety "and Virtue, by Marks of Your Royal Fa-"vour.

"We do further, in all Humility beſeech Your "Majeſty, that Your Majeſty would give ſuch "effectual Orders, as to Your Royal Wiſdom "ſhall ſeem fit for the ſuppreſſing all Pernicious "Books and Pamphlets, which contain in them "Impious Doctrines againſt the Holy Trinity, "and other Fundamental Articles of our Faith, "tending to the Subverſion of the Chriſtian Re-"ligion, and that the Authors and Publiſh-"ers thereof may be diſcountenanc'd and pu-"niſh'd.

"And we do alſo moſt humbly beſeech Your "Majeſty, that Your ſaid Proclamation may be "Ordered to be Read at leaſt Four Times in the "Year, in all Churches and Chappels, immedi-"ately after Divine Service; and at the Aſſizes "and Quarter-Seſſions of the Peace, juſt before "the Charge is given.

"We preſent to Your Majeſty this our moſt "Humble Addreſs, proceeding from our Duty "and Zeal for the Glory of God, and to the end "that all our Counſels may be bleſſed by his Di-"vine Aſſiſtance, and may produce Honour, Safe-"ty and Happineſs, with all the Bleſſings of a "Laſting Peace to Your Majeſty and Your Peo-"ple.

His Majeſty receiv'd this Addreſs with a Singular Satisfaction, and gave this Agreeable Anſwer.

Gentlemen,

I cannot but be very well pleaſed with an Addreſs of this Nature; and I will give immediate Directions in the ſeveral Particulars you deſire: But I could wiſh ſome more Effectual Proviſion were made for the Suppreſſing thoſe Pernicious Books and Pamphlets which your Addreſs takes notice of.

Upon this Seaſonable Intimation of His Majeſty, Leave was given Feb. 26. to bring in a Bill or Bills for the more Effectual ſuppreſſing Prophaneneſs, Immorality and Debauchery; and Sir John Philips, and Mr. Edward Harley were order'd to prepare and bring in the ſaid Bill or Bills. In the mean time an Ingroſs'd Bill from the Lords came down to the Commons, Entituled, An Act for the more Effectual Suppreſſing of Atheiſm, Blaſphemy and Prophaneneſs: which being committed at ſecond Reading to a Committee of the whole Houſe, was, after ſome Amendments and Conferences, happily agreed to. And in the mean time His Majeſty with immediate Compliance to the Requeſt of the Commons, publiſh'd this Proclamation for Preventing and Puniſhing Immorality and Prophaneneſs.

Act for ſuppreſſing Atheiſm, &c.

William R.

Proclamation againſt Immorality and Prophaneneſs.

"Whereas we cannot but be deeply ſenſible of "the great Goodneſs and Mercy of Almighty God, "in putting an end to a Long, Bloody and Ex-"penſive War, by the Concluſion of an Honour-"able Peace, ſo we are not leſs touch'd with a "Reſentment, that notwithſtanding this and ma-"ny other great Bleſſings and Deliverances, Im-"piety, Prophaneneſs and Immorality do ſtill

1697. "abound in this our Kingdom: And whereas "nothing can prove a greater Diſhonour to a "well-ordered Government, where the Chriſtian Faith is profeſſed, nor is likelier to provoke "God to withdraw his Mercy and Bleſſings from "us, and inſtead thereof to inflict heavy and ſevere Judgments upon this Kingdom, than the "Open and Avowed Practice of Vice, Immorality and Prophaneneſs, which amongſt many "Men has too much prevail'd in this Our Kingdom of late Years, to the high Diſpleaſure of "Almighty God, the great Scandal of Chriſtianity, and the Ill and Fatal Example of the reſt "of our Loving Subjects, who have been ſoberly "educated, and whoſe Inclinations would lead "them to the Exerciſe of Piety and Virtue, did "they not daily find ſuch frequent and repeated "Inſtances of Diſſolute Living, Prophaneneſs and "Impiety; which has in a great meaſure been "occaſion'd by the Neglect of the Magiſtrates "not putting in execution thoſe good Laws "which have been made for ſuppreſſing and puniſhing thereof, and by the Ill Example of many in Authority, to the great Diſhonour of "God, and Reproach of Our Religion: Wherefore, and for that we cannot expect Increaſe "or Continuance of the Bleſſings We and Our "Subjects enjoy, without providing Remedies to "prevent the like Evils for the future, We think "our ſelves bound by the Duty We owe to God, "and the Care We have of the People committed to our Charge, to proceed in taking effectual Courſe, that Religion, Piety and Good Manners may, according to Our hearty Deſire, flouriſh and increaſe under Our Adminiſtration "and Government. And being thereunto moved "by the Pious Addreſs of the Commons in Parliament aſſembled, We have thought fit, by the "Advice of Our Privy-Council, to iſſue this Our "Royal Proclamation, and do declare our Royal Purpoſe and Reſolution to diſcountenance "and puniſh all manner of Vice, Immorality and "Prophaneneſs in all Perſons from the higheſt to "the loweſt Degree, within this Our Realm; and "particularly in ſuch who are employ'd near Our "Royal Perſon; and that for the greater Encouragement of Religion and Morality, We will, "upon all Occaſions, diſtinguiſh Men of Piety "and Virtue by Marks of Our Royal Favour. "And We do expect that all Perſons of Honour, "or in Place of Authority, will to their utmoſt "contribute to the diſcountenancing Men of "Diſſolute and Debauched Lives, that they being "reduced to Shame and Contempt, may be enforced the ſooner to reform their Ill Habits and "Practices, that the Diſpleaſure of Good Men towards them, may ſupply what the Laws (it may "be) cannot wholly prevent. And for the more "effectual reforming theſe Men, who are a Diſcredit to Our Kingdom, Our further Pleaſure "is, and We do hereby ſtrictly charge and command all Our Judges, Mayors, Sheriffs, Juſtices of the Peace, and all other Our Officers "and Miniſters, both Eccleſiaſtical and Civil, "and other Our Subjects whom it may concern, "to be very vigilant and ſtrict in the Diſcovery, "and the effectual proſecution and puniſhment "of all Perſons who ſhall be guilty of Exceſſive "Drinking, Blaſphemy, Prophane Swearing "and Curſing, Lewdneſs, Prophanation of the "Lord's Day, or other Diſſolute, Immoral or "Diſorderly Practices; as they will anſwer it to "Almighty God, and upon pain of Our higheſt "Diſpleaſure. And for the more effectual Proceeding herein, We do hereby direct and command Our Judges of Aſſizes, and Juſtices of "Peace, to give ſtrict Charges at the reſpective "Aſſizes and Seſſions, for the due proſecution and "puniſhment of all Perſons that ſhall preſume to offend in any kinds aforeſaid; and alſo of all "Perſons, that contrary to their Duty, ſhall be "remiſs or negligent in putting the ſaid Laws in "execution; and that they do at their reſpective "Aſſizes and Quarter-Seſſions of the Peace, cauſe "this Our Proclamation to be publickly read in "Open Court, immediately before the Charge "is given. And We do hereby further charge "and command every Miniſter in his reſpective "Pariſh or Chappel, to read or cauſe to be read "this Our Proclamation at leaſt four times in every Year, immediately after Divine Service, "and to incite and ſtir up their reſpective Auditories to the practice of Piety and Virtue, and "the avoiding of all Immorality and Prophaneneſs. And to the end that all Vice and Debauchery may be prevented, and Religion and "Virtue practiſed by all Officers, private Soldiers, "Mariners or others, who are employed in Our "Service, either by Sea or Land, We do hereby "ſtrictly charge and command all Our Commanders and Officers whatſoever, That they do "take care to avoid all Prophaneneſs, Debauchery and other Immoralities, and that by the Piety and Virtue of their own Lives and Converſations, they do ſet good Examples to all ſuch "as are under their Authority; and likewiſe to "take care and inſpect the Behaviour and Manners "of all ſuch as are under them, and to puniſh all "thoſe who ſhall be guilty of any the Offences "aforeſaid. And whereas ſeveral Wicked and "Prophane Perſons have preſumed to print and "publiſh ſeveral pernicious Books and Pamphlets, "which contain in them Impious Doctrines againſt "the Holy Trinity, and other Fundamental Articles of Our Faith, tending to the Subverſion of "the Chriſtian Religion; therefore for the puniſhing the Authors and Publiſhers thereof, and "for the preventing ſuch Impious Books and "Pamphlets being publiſh'd or printed for the "future, We do hereby ſtrictly charge and prohibit all Perſons, that they do not preſume to "write, print or publiſh any ſuch Pernicious "Books or Pamphlets, under the Pain of incurring Our High Diſpleaſure, and of being puniſh'd according to the utmoſt Severity of the "Law. And we do hereby ſtrictly charge and "require all Our Loving Subjects to diſcover and "apprehend ſuch Perſon and Perſons whom they "ſhall know to be the Authors or Publiſhers of "any ſuch Books and Pamphlets, and to bring "them before ſome Juſtice of the Peace, or Chief "Magiſtrate, in order that they may be proceeded againſt according to Law.

Given at our Court at Kenſington the Four and Twentieth Day of February, 1697, in the Tenth Year of Our Reign.

This Good Example of the King and Parliament gave a new Zeal to the Worthy Perſons who had engag'd themſelves in Voluntary Societies for the Reformation of Manners; who had ſoon after their Publick Sermons and Aſſemblies at Bow-Church, to animate the good Work: And to make the World the more ſenſible of their Intentions, Methods and Progreſs, they publiſh'd a Diſcourſe Entituled, An Account of the Societies for Reformation of Manners, in London and Weſtminſter, and other Parts of the Kingdom; with a Perſuaſive to Perſons of all Ranks to be zealous and diligent in promoting the Execution of the Laws againſt Prophaneneſs and Debauchery, for the effecting a National Reformation. To which Book was prefix'd this Laudable Teſtimony of many of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal.

Societies for Reformation of Manners.

To

1697.

To the Author.

" SIR, We have perused the Book you sent " us, Entituled, An Account of the Societies for " Reformation of Manners; the design of which " is so truly Great and Noble, so much for the " Honour of God, the Advancement of Piety " and Virtue, and the publick Good both of " Church and State, that it cannot fail of being " approved by all good Men. The Method " likewise proposed, in order to the promoting " and accomplishing the said Design, is, We " conceive most proper, and (by the Blessing " of God attending it) most likely to prove ef- " fectual. And that pious Men of all Ranks and " Qualities may be excited by this good Book, " to contribute in their respective Places and Sta- " tions, their best Endeavours towards a Natio- " nal Reformation of Manners, is the most humble " and hearty Prayer of, Sir, your very Loving " Friends,

Society for Propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts.

There was about the same time another excellent Design laid, and chiefly manag'd by one active Divine, Dr. Thomas Bray, for propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts, by sending over Missionaries, Catechisms, Liturgies, and other useful Books for the Instruction of the People, too Ignorant and Prophane in our West-India Colonies and Plantations. The worthy Doctor had taken incredible Pains to promote this Evangelical Undertaking, and had procured the Contributions of many excellent Persons to enable him to proceed in the Burden and growing Expences of it. And to take all Opportunities of establishing a Fund for so glorious a Project, on March 3. upon the Second reading of a Bill in the House of Commons, For the better Discovery of Estates given to Superstitious Uses, the said Doctor presented a Petition to the House, Praying that some part of the said Estates may be set apart for those Pious Uses, in order to the Propagation of the Reformed Religion in Maryland, Virginia, and the Leeward Islands; or else that some other Provision may be made for that purpose.

1698.

The Parliament continued Sitting; and the Commons having addres'd to His Majesty, that He would please to cause to be Printed a List of the Persons Names to whom License have been granted, pursuant to the Act lately passed; Entituled, An Act against Corresponding with the late King James and His Adherents: His Majesty was pleased to say, That He would cause a List to be made, and to be sent to the House. 1698.

Proceedings of the Commons.

On Saturday, April 2. the King coming to the House of Peers, and commanding the Commons to Attend Him, gave the Royal Assent to, 1. An Act for granting to His Majesty the Sum of One million four hundred eighty four thousand and fifteen Pounds one Shilling and Eleven-pence three farthings, for disbanding Forces, paying Seamen, and other the Uses therein mentioned. 2. An Act for explaining an Act made the last Sessions of Parliament; Entituled, An Act for supplying some defects in the Laws, for the Relief of the Poor of this Kingdom. 3. An Act for the Enlarging, Repairing, and Preserving the Bridge and Key of the Borough of Bridgwater in the County of Somerset. 4. An Act for dissolving the Marriage between Charles Earl of Macclesfield, and Anne his Wife; and to Illegitimate the Children of the said Anne. 5. An Act to enable John Lord Bishop of Chichester to make Leases of certain Houses and Grounds belonging to the Bishoprick of Chichester, situate in Chancery-Lane for a competent number of Years. 6. An Act for Confirming and Establishing the Administration of the Goods and Chattels of Sir William Godolphin, Knight, deceased. 7. An Act to Naturalize Charles May, Esq; 8. An Act to rectify a mistake in the Marriage Settlement of William Gardiner, Esq; 9. An Act to enable certain Trustees therein named to make, renew, and fill up Leases of the Estate of Sir Coppleston Warwick Bamfield, during the Minority of him and his Brother. 10. An Act for settling the Estate of John Hall, a Lunatick, subject to a Debt charged thereon. 11. An Act for erecting Hospitals and Workhouses in the Town and Parish of Tiverton, in the County of Devon, for the better Employing and Maintaining the Poor there. 12. An Act for the Naturalization of John Fauquier, Joseph Ducasse, and others. 13. An Act for the better enabling Sir Ralph Hare to make a Joynture, and settle his Estate, and raise Portions and Maintenances for his younger Children. 14. An Act for vesting in Trustees to be sold certain Lands of George Hewett, Esq; lying in the County of Middlesex, settled upon his Marriage, and with the Money arising thereby, for purchasing other Lands in Leicestershire, where his Estate and Seat lies, to be settled to the same uses.

Acts Passed.

The Commons proceeded to other Ways and Means of raising the Supply. On April 7. they resolved that over and above the Duties already payable, a further Duty be laid upon all Coal and Culm. On April 9. they laid an Imposition upon all Forfeited Estates, which have been restored by the Crown, in England or in Ireland, by reversal of Outlawry, or otherwise; and upon all Beneficial Grants from the Crown since May 29. 1660. that the Fourth part of them be applied to the use of the Publick. On April 14. They continued the Poll or Capitation Tax for one year longer. On April 16. they laid a Duty upon all Coals imported from Scotland, or other parts beyond Sea. On April 28. they doubled the Duties upon Stampt Vellum, Parchment and Paper, until the 1*st.* day of August, 1706. They continued the Duties upon Coffee, Tea, and Chocolate and Spices: As also the Duty payable by Hawkers and Pedlars, for the term of Three Years, to commence from the expiration of the present Duties upon them. On May 7. they laid a further Duty upon Salt, one Shilling and eight Pence per Bushel. On May 14. they doubled the Duties upon all Lustrings and Alamodes imported: And enlarged the Time for

Ways and Means.

1698. purchasing Annuities upon the several Acts of Parliament for Granting the same. On May 20. they laid a further Duty upon Sugar. And on May 21. towards raising a Fund for Two Millions, they made the Duties upon Salt and Stampt Paper to continue to His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors, redeemable by Parliament.

East-India Companies.

By this time the Commons were entred on the Business of the East-India Trade, which had been depending many Years, and was look'd on as so nice and difficult, that it had been referr'd to the King and His Council, and back again by Them to the Parliament. The Old Company having offer'd to advance 700000 l. at Four per Cent. for the Service of the Government, in case the Trade to India might be settled on them, exclusive of all others, the House seem'd inclin'd to embrace their Proposal; when another Number of Merchants, of whom one Shepherd was the Chief, and who were protected by Mr. Mountague, Chancellor of the Exchequer, propos'd to the House to raise Two Millions at 8 per Cent. on condition the Trade to India might be settled on the Subscribers, exclusive of all others: They also propos'd that these Subscribers should not be oblig'd to Trade in a Joint-stock; but if any Members of them should afterwards desire to be Incorporated, a Charter should be Granted to them for that Purpose. The House judg'd this new Overture not only to be more Advantagious to the Government, but likewise very likely to settle this controverted Trade on a better Foundation than it was on before. A Bill was therefore, on May 26. order'd to be brought into the House for settling the Trade to the East-Indies on those who should subscribe the Two Millions, according to the Limitations before-mentioned, and the following Resolutions: First, "That every Subscriber might have the Liberty of Trading "Yearly, to the Account of his respective Subscription; or might assign over such his Liberty of Trading to any other Person. Secondly, "That His Majesty be empower'd to Incorporate "such of the said Subscribers, as should desire "the same. Thirdly, That the Powers and Privileges for carrying on the East-India Trade, "should be settled by Parliament. Fourthly, That "the said Subscribers should enjoy the said Eight "Pounds per Cent, and Liberty of Trading to "the East-Indies, exclusive of all others, for the "Terms of Ten Years, and until the same "should be redeem'd by Parliament. Fifthly, "That every Person subscribing Five Hundred "Pounds, have a Vote; and no Person to have "more Votes than one. Sixthly, That all Ships "laden in the East-Indies, should be oblig'd to "deliver in England. Seventhly, That no Person that should be a Member of any Corporation Trading to the East-Indies, should Trade "otherwise than in the Joint-Stock of such Corporation of which he was a Member. Eighthly, That Five Pounds per Cent. ad Valorem, "upon all Returns from the East-Indies, be paid "by the Importer; to be placed to the Account "of the Subscribers, towards the Charge of "sending Ambassadors, and other extraordinary "Expences. And Ninthly, That over and above "the Duties now payable, a further Duty of "One Shilling and Ten Pence per Pound-weight, "be laid upon all Wrought Silks imported from "India and Persia; to be paid by the Importer." This Bill being accordingly brought into the House, the Old East-India Company presented a Petition against it: To which the Commons had so much regard, as to offer them to settle this Trade upon them, if they would accept it on the same Terms and Limitations, on which the others were contented to take it; and which the Parliament judged most Advantagious for the Kingdom. But the Members of the Old Company having rejected this Proposal, the Commons, on June the 25*th.* pass'd the Bill in favour of the New Adventurers. 1698.

The Old East-India Company follow'd the Bill to the Upper House; where they were heard by their Council, Sir Thomas Powis, and Sir Bartholomew Shower; who represented, "That this Bill "invaded their Property, and ruin'd many Families. That in the Charters granted them by "Queen Elizabeth, King James I. K. Charles II. "and King James II. it was suggested, That "their Corporation was for the Honour of England, for the Increase of Navigation, and the "Advance of Trade. That the said Charters "contain'd a Grant of the Trade to the East-Indies, to the Company, exclusive of all others. "That by some of them they were constituted "the Lords Proprietors of Bombay, and of the "Island of St. Helena. That by these Grants, "they were induced to think they had a Right "in Law to the Trade; at least, that they should "have an uncontroverted Title to the Lands: "And that on this Presumption, and relying on "the Publick Faith and Credit of the Great "Seal of England, they had expended above a "Million in Fortifications, and acquir'd Revenues of 4400 l. per Annum, and many Settlements and Privileges. That in the Year 1691. "the House of Commons had made a Resolution, That the East India Trade should be carried on "in a Joint-Stock, exclusive to all others. That "their Company was confirm'd and settled by "Three Charters, granted by His present Majesty, on the 7*th.* of October, and 17*th.* of November, 1693. and 28*th.* of September, 1694. "That upon the Security of these Charters, the "Company consented to a New Subscription: "That there was a-new subscrib'd 744000 l. and "the Money brought in during the Sitting of "the Parliament; and that nothing was done, "said, or offered against His Majesty's Charter "of Regulations: So that upon the Publick "Faith, (at least tacitly given) 781 New Adventurers, of which many were Widows and "Orphans, did subscribe a large Part of their "Substance to support this Trade, during a hazardous War, for the Profit and Honour of "England: And that the New Adventurers "thought they might, without any hazard, subscribe on the Security of a Charter, which "was so plainly design'd by His Majesty to preserve the East-India Traffick, then in danger of "being lost. That on the 10*th.* of June, after "the Bill now depending before their Lordships "was brought in, the Company did agree to "submit their present Stock to a Valuation of "50 l. per Cent. viz. 20 l. per Cent. for their Dead "Stock, and 30 l. per Cent. for their Quick Stock, "which they were contented to warrant at the "said Sums: And upon these Terms they offer'd to open their Books for New Subscriptions, in order to raise the Two Millions. "That afterwards, to ascertain the Payments of "the said Two Millions, they had a General "Court on the 20*th.* of June; in which they "agreed to an immediate Subscription by private Adventurers of 200000 l. to be paid at "the first Payment, subject to make good the "subsequent Payments: Which Subscription was "accordingly made. That it has been the constant Practice, in Farms, Bargains, and Offers "of the like nature, not to close with a new "Proposal, till the first Bidder be ask'd, Whether "he is able to Advance further? And that notwithstanding their Charters, and the Right "they had to the Trade, they were early told, 1698. "Their Propoſal ſhould be oppoſed, tho' they "offer'd the Two Millions in Queſtion. And "laſtly, That the Bill allow'd Foreigners as well "as the King's Subjects to ſubſcribe to the Two "Millions; whereby they would be let into the "Secrets and Myſteries of this Trade, which "might produce Effects very pernicious to the "General Intereſt of the Nation.

"Their

To this the Council for the New Subſcribers replied, "That in the Recital of their Charters, "the Old Company had omitted to give an Account of the Proviſo's inſerted therein; viz. "That the reſpective Kings that granted them, reſerved a Power to make them void upon Three Years "Warning. That the King by His Charter could "not grant the Trade to the Eaſt-Indies, excluſive of all others; and that ſeveral Recoveries "had been made againſt them at Law, for proſecuting ſuch pretended Right. That as the Crown "has not a Power to grant ſuch a Right, ſo His "preſent Majeſty had not in fact granted any ſuch "Right excluſive. That when they mention'd the "Reſolution of the Commons in 1691. they omitted their other Reſolution, That it was lawful for "all Perſons to Trade to the Eaſt-Indies, unleſs reſtrained by Act of Parliament. Neither did they "take notice of the Two Addreſſes made by the "Houſe of Commons to the King in 1691, and "1692. to diſſolve the Company. That on the "14*th.* of November, 1692. Sir Edward Seymour "declar'd to the Commons a Meſſage from His "Majeſty, importing, That His Majeſty had requir'd the Eaſt-India Company to anſwer directly, Whether they would ſubmit to ſuch Regulations as His Majeſty ſhould judge proper "and moſt likely to advance the Trade? And "the Company having fully agreed to it, and "declar'd their Reſolution in writing, His Majeſty had commanded a Committee of His Privy "Council to prepare Regulations; which they did, "and offer'd them to the Company; but that notwithſtanding their Declaration of Submiſſion, "they rejected almoſt all the material Particulars. "So that His Majeſty finding that what poſſibly "the Houſe of Commons might have expected, "and indeed was neceſſary to preſerve this Trade, "could not be perfected by His own Authority "alone; and that the Company could not be induced to conſent to any ſuch Regulations as "might have anſwer'd the Intentions of the "Houſe of Commons, and that the Concurrence of the Parliament was requiſite to make "a compleat and uſeful Settlement of this Trade, "He had directed all the Proceedings in this "Matter to be laid before them; and recommended to them the preparing ſuch a Bill, in "order to paſs into an Act of Parliament, as "might eſtabliſh this Trade on ſuch Foundations "as were moſt likely to Preſerve and Advance it."

'Twas alſo urg'd againſt the Old Company, that their Charter being become void by their Non-payment of the Tax impos'd upon them by Parliament, they obtain'd a New Charter the 7th of October, 1693. by indirect Means, having that Year paid Eighty odd Thouſand Pounds out of the Company's Stock, for ſpecial Service. That this Charter was conteſted before the Queen and Council, by thoſe they called Interlopers; upon the hearing whereof it was unanſwerably proved, That the King had not by Law a Power to grant the Trade to ſome Perſons, excluſive of others; and that the Company's Affairs were then in ſuch a Condition, that it would be a plain Cheat to others, that ſhould come in upon their Stock. They however, Law and Reaſon failing, had recourſe to other Methods, and great Sums of Money were diſtributed, (as it was acknowledg'd before a Committee of Both Houſes of Parliament) to get another Charter; but that thoſe who were concern'd to Adviſe His Majeſty in Point of Law, were ſo juſt to their Truſt, as to take care that no Right of Trade, excluſive of others, was granted: And alſo that the Company ſhould ſubmit to ſuch Alterations, Reſtrictions, and Qualifications, as the King ſhould make on the 29th of September, 1693. following. And ſo on the 17th of Nov. 1693. a new Charter of Regulations was made, and another the 28th of September, 1694. wherein amongſt other things was this Proviſo; That if it ſhould appear to the King, His Heirs, and Succeſſors, that the ſaid Two Charters, or any other Charters heretofore granted, ſhould not be profitable to the King, His Heirs, and Succeſſors, or to this Realm; that then and from thenceforth, upon and after Three Years warning to be given to the ſaid Company by the King, &c. the ſame ſhould ceaſe, be void, and determin'd. That it appear'd by the Proceedings of the Houſe of Commons in 1694. how this Charter was obtain'd, which had more in it of private Promiſes than publick Faith: That it was not to be wonder'd, that the Parliament took no notice of the matter, whilſt the new Subſcribers paid in their Money, when it was conſidered, that, according to Sir Baſil Firebraſs's Depoſitions, there were ſeveral Contracts, ſome to the value of 60000 l. on Account of procuring a new Charter; and others to the value of 40000 l. on Account of procuring an Act of Parliament. That by ſuch Means the Matter might be overlook'd for a while, but it was not long before the Parliament took publick Notice of it; and if the greater Affairs of the Nation had not been ſo urgent, and the Seſſion been ſo near an end, perhaps the Company might have had Juſtice done them then, and had been paſt complaining of any imaginary Injuſtice done them now. That therefore it was plain, that it was not for the Profit and Honour of the Nation, and to ſupport the Trade, that the New Subſcribers came in, but that they were deluded into it by a Charter obtain'd by indirect ways, and by the Hopes of an Act of Parliament to confirm it, to be obtain'd in the ſame manner. That the Trade would have been much better preſerv'd, and more to the Honour of the Nation, if no ſuch underhand Practices had been carried on. That if ſome Perſons thinking themſelves to have a greater Reach than others, or being deceived by the Old Company's making His Majeſty believe their Stock to be worth 750000 l. and by afterwards ſharing 325000 l. of the New Subſcribers Money among themſelves, or by the Perſons failing them who had promiſed to get an Act of Parliament, or by Loſſes at Sea, or by what other Means ſoever it were, happen'd to fail in their Expectation, no Body was anſwerable for it but themſelves; eſpecially ſince they had warning enough by the Tranſactions before the Council. 'Twas alledg'd further, That in Edward III. and Queen Elizabeth's Reigns, upon Complaint in Parliament of Patents granted for Monopolies, moſt of them were immediately revoked, and the reſt left to the Law. That in King James the I. Time an Act of Parliament paſt, to make void a Charter for the ſole Trade to Spain, and another againſt all Monopolies. That though the Patents for ſome Trades with Joint-Stocks (whilſt the Trades for which they were granted were in their Infancy) had been permitted for the ſettling of a Trade, and till the firſt Adventurers have reap'd ſome reaſonable Compenſation for their firſt Undertaking and Adventures; yet afterwards when thoſe Trades have increaſed and become Great, the Wiſdom of the Nation has always thought fit to open a way for the Kingdom to receive a general Benefit thereby. That it never was eſteemed a Breach 1698.

1698. a Breach of the publick Faith, or a Derogation either from the Credit of the Great Seal, or from the Honour of our Kings, to have their Patents annulled by Parliament, when the Grants were thought by that Grand Council of the Nation, not to be profitable, or to be againſt the Common Right of the Subject; and that no King or Queen thought themſelves bound in Honour or Conſcience not to paſs an Act of Parliament to make void ſuch Patent. That the King being buſied in the many arduous Affairs of the Kingdom, cannot be ſuppoſed to know always what he might legally grant, and is oftentimes deceived in his Grants, and for that reaſon they are often annulled by the ordinary Courſe of Law; and ſo might this Company's Patent have been: For all Perſons having a Right by Law to Trade to the Eaſt-Indies, unleſs excluded by Parliament, the King by His Charter could not grant to the Company any new Right to the Trade, beſides the Privileges of an Incorporated Body; but that the Commons juſtly bearing a high Veneration to His preſent Majeſty, who had run ſo great Hazards, and perform'd ſo glorious Atchievements for the Honour and Good of the Nation, had notwithſtanding taken Care in this Bill, that nothing ſhould interfere with His Majeſty's Patent. That by this Patent the Old Company had indeed Power to Trade to the Eaſt-Indies, and other Privileges, but without any expreſs Clauſe to exclude others, or any Covenant, (as was in the former Charters from the Crown) that His Majeſty would not grant likewiſe to others, to Trade thither during the continuance of the ſaid Charters: So that even according to the Charters themſelves, all other Subjects of England had a Right to Trade to the Eaſt-Indies, and many actually Traded thither without any hindrance. That tho' the Old Company talk'd ſo much of their Dependance on the Security of their Charters, yet they themſelves were convinc'd, that their Right was not well founded, ſince they had formerly laid out ſo much Money to get an Act of Parliament to Confirm their Charters, and had lately offer'd to Lend 700000 l. to the Government, to have the Trade to themſelves, excluſive of all others. As to their offering afterwards to raiſe Two Millions, it was anſwer'd, That they made no ſuch Offer with an Intention that it ſhould take Effect, but only as an Amuſement to gain time, and ſo to baffle the Bill; for when they agreed to ſubmit their Stock to a Valuation of 50 l. per Cent. they knew very well that others did not value it at any thing near ſo much: And as to their Subſcribing 200000 l. ſubject to make good the ſubſequent Payments of the Two Millions, that it was only to obtain what they had been ſo long aiming at, viz. An Act of Parliament excluſive for the Sum of 200000*l.* whereby the King would be defeated of a much more conſiderable Loan; others delivering us Subſcriptions for about 1200000 l. And finally, that the Old Company heretofore thought it an Advantage to admit Foreigners into their Trade, and that many were actually now in the preſent Company, tho' they were pleas'd to argue againſt it. The Lords weighed the Reaſons on both ſides, and chiefly conſider'd that the Old Company's Propoſal to Lend the Two Millions, was like to prove ineffectual, by reaſon that ſome of their Principal Members were known to have no great Affection to the preſent Government; ſo that upon mature Deliberation, their Lordſhips gave their Concurrence to the Bill, which on July 5. received the Royal Aſſent.

The Bill being paſs'd, the Commiſſioners Appointed by His Majeſty for taking Subſcriptions toward the raiſing of Two Millions, and for ſettling a New Eaſt-India Company, laid open their Books at Mercers-Hall, on Thurſday the 14*th.* of July, 1698. And ſuch was the Zeal which People of all Ranks, and even Foreigners, ſhew'd on this Occaſion to aſſiſt the Government, and promote the Trade of the Nation, that on the Saturday following the whole Sum, and ſomething above it was ſubſcribed: Nay, it's very probable that Two Millions more had been ſubſcrib'd, had not the Books been ſhut up before the diſtant Corporations, private Men in remote Countries, and Merchants beyond Sea, could remit their Commiſſions for the great Sums they intended to ſubſcribe. The diſpatch of ſo great a Work in leſs than three Days time, after the Nation had born ſo chargeable a War for ſo many Years, ſurpriz'd and amaz'd all the World: And as it greatly mortified all thoſe who were joyfully aſſur'd that His Majeſty would be diſappointed of this Supply, ſo it gave our Neighbouring Nations an aſtoniſhing Image, both of the Opulence of England, and the Strength of the Government. This Tranſaction viewed in all its Circumſtances, is indeed ſo very ſtrange and wonderful, that the like is not to be found in Story, and 'twill be a hard Matter for Poſterity to believe it. This was owing to the Wiſdom of this Parliament, who had ſo much Skill in touching the Springs of the People's Affections, that notwithſtanding all the Loſſes they had ſuſtain'd, and all the Expence they had been at, they were prevail'd with to advance this great Supply with ſuch incredible Expedition. And by this means, the Parliament only by Doubling the Duty on Paper and Parchment uſed in Proceedings at Law, and that on Salt, raiſed a Supply of Two Millions; which to have done by any other ways, was at that time a Matter of the higheſt Difficulty. Now for the making up of the King's Revenue, the Commons Reſolv'd, on May 28. That of the Hereditary and Temporary Exciſe, Poſt-Office, ſmall Branches of the new Subſidies of Tunnage and Poundage, continued to the Firſt Day of February, 1699. Seven Hundred Thouſand Pounds be granted to His Majeſty during His Life; and that whatſoever the ſaid Revenues ſhould exceed Seven Hundred Thouſand Pound yearly, ſhould be appropriated to ſuch Uſes as ſhould be directed by Parliament. And becauſe the Glaſs-Makers and Tobacco-Pipe-Makers did juſtly complain of the grievous Taxes that had been laid on their Manufactures, the Commons Reſolv'd, on January 25. to take off half the Duties now upon Glaſs-Wares, and the whole Duties upon Stone and Earthen Wares, and Tobacco-Pipes; and to Grant to His Majeſty an Equivalent, by laying a further Duty upon Whalebone and Scotch Linnen imported. As for the Act for applying the Fourth Part of the Forfeited Eſtates to the uſe of the Publick, ſo many People Petition'd againſt it, that no Progreſs was made in it.

On Monday, May 16. The King was pleaſed to give the Royal Aſſent to theſe Publick and Private Bills. 1. An Act for Granting to His Majeſty ſeveral Duties upon Coals and Culm. 2. An Act for Continuing the Duties upon Coffee, Tea, Chocolate and Spices, towards Satisfaction of the Debt due for Tranſport-Service, for the Reduction of Ireland. 3. An Act for the better Preventing the Counterfeiting, Clipping, and other Diminiſhing the Coin of this Kingdom. 4. An Act to Execute Judgments and Decrees, ſaved in a Clauſe in an Act of Parliament the Firſt Year of the Reign of King William and Queen Mary, entituled, An Act for taking away the Courts holden before the Preſident and Council of the Marches of Wales. 5. An Act for Determining Differences by Arbitration. 6. An Act for the better Payment of Inland Bills of Exchange.

On May 21. a Complaint was made to the Commons of a Printed Book, Entituled, The Case of Ireland's being bound by Acts of Parliament in England, (written by William Molyneux of Dublin, Esq;) which denied the Dependance of Ireland, upon the Authority of the Parliament of England. A Committee was thereupon appointed, to examine further into the said Pamphlet, to enquire into the Author of it; and also to search what Proceedings had been in Ireland, that might occasion the said Book; and an Address to the King Voted, That His Majesty would give Directions for the discovery and punishment of the Author. A Month after, upon the Report of the Committee, it was unanimously resolv'd, "That the said "Book was of Dangerous Consequence to the "Crown and People of England, by denying the "Authority of the King and Parliament of England, to bind the Kingdom and People of Ireland, and the Subordination and Dependance "that Ireland has, and ought to have upon England, as being united and annexed to the Imperial Crown of this Realm; and that a Bill, Entituled, An Act for the better Security of His Majesty's Person and Government, transmitted under "the Great Seal of Ireland; whereby an Act of "Parliament made in England, was pretended to "be re-enacted, Alterations therein made, and "divers Things enacted also, pretending to "oblige the Courts of Justice, and the Great Seal "of England, by the Authority of an Irish "Parliament; had given Occasion and Encouragement to the forming and publishing the Dangerous Positions contained in "the said Book. Four Days after, the Commons in a Body presented an Address to the "King: Wherein they laid before His Majesty "the Dangerous Attempts that had been of late "made by some of His Subjects of Ireland, to shake "off their Subjection to, and Dependance on this "Kingdom; which had manifestly appear'd to "the Commons, not only by the Bold and Pernicious Assertions in a Book publish'd and dedicated to His Majesty, Entituled, The Case of Ireland being bound by Acts of Parliament in England "Stated: But more fully and authentically by the "Votes and Proceeding of the House of Commons in Ireland, in their late Sessions; and "whereby the forementioned Bill sent hither "under the Great Seal of Ireland, whereby they "would have an Act passed in the Parliament of "England, expresly binding Ireland, to be re-enacted there, and Alterations therein made; some of "which amounted to a Repeal of what is required by the said Act made in England; and in "other of the sad Alterations, pretending to give "Authority to, and oblige the Courts of Justice "and Great-Seal here in England. That this they "could not but look on as an Occasion and Encouragement in the forming and publishing the "dangerous Positions contain'd in the said Book: "That the Consequence of such Positions and "Proceedings would be so fatal to this Kingdom, "and even to Ireland it self, that they needed not "to be enlarged on, or aggravated. Therefore "they rested satisfied that His Majesty by His "Royal Prudence, would prevent their being "drawn into Example: So they assur'd His Majesty of their ready Concurrence and Assistance, "in a Parliamentary way, to preserve and maintain the Dependance and Subordination of Ireland to the Imperial Crown of this Realm. And "they humbly besought His Majesty, That He "would give effectual Orders to prevent any "thing of the like nature for the future, and the "Pernicious Consequences of what was past'd, "by punishing and discountenancing those that "had been guilty thereof: That He would take "all necessary Care, that the Laws which direct "and restrain the Parliament of Ireland in their

And afterwards His Majeſty made this Speech to Both Houſes.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" I Cannot take leave of ſo good a Parliament, King's " without publickly acknowledging the Senſe Speech. " I have of the Great Things you have done for " My Safety and Honour, and for the Support " and Welfare of My People.

" Every one of your Seſſions hath made good " this Character. The Happy Uniting of Us in " an Aſſociation for Our mutual Defence; The " Remedying the Corruption of the Coin, which " had been ſo long growing upon the Nati- " on; The Reſtoring of Credit; The Giving " Supplies in ſuch a manner for carrying on the " War

1698. "War, as did by God's Bleſſing produce an honourable Peace; And after that, the making "ſuch Proviſions for Our Common Security, "and towards ſatisfying the Debts contracted in "ſo long a War, with as little Burden to the "Kingdom as is poſſible, are ſuch things as will "give a laſting Reputation to this Parliament, "and will be a ſubject of Emulation to thoſe which "ſhall come after.

"Beſides all this, I think My ſelf perſonally "oblig'd to return My Thanks to you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, for the Regard you have had to My Honour, by the "Eſtabliſhing of My Revenue.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"There is nothing I value ſo much as the Eſteem and Love of My People; And as for "their Sakes I avoided no Hazards during the "War; ſo My whole Study and Care ſhall be "to Improve and Continue to them the Advantages and Bleſſings of Peace.

"And I earneſtly deſire you all, in your ſeveral Stations, to be Vigilant in preſerving Peace "and good Order, and in a due and regular Execution of the Laws, eſpecially thoſe againſt "Prophaneneſs and Irreligion.

And then the Lord Chancellor, by His Majeſty's Command, Prorogued the Parliament until Tueſday the Second day of Auguſt next.

Earl of Portland Ambaſſador to France.

The Earl of Portland had made his publick Entry into Paris, on Febr. 27. with ſuch extraordinary Splendor, as had never been ſeen at the Court of France, ſince the Duke of Buckingham's Embaſſy, when he came to demand in Marriage for King Charles the firſt, Mary Henrietta of France. His Excellency (I mean the Earl of Portland) accompanied by the Lords Cavendiſh, Haſtings, Paſton, Raby, and Woodſtock his Excellency's Son, Mr. Fielding, Col. Stanhope, Mr. Charles Boyle, Mr. Prior, Secretary to the Embaſſy, and ſeveral other Engliſh Gentlemen; and attended by a Gentleman of the Horſe, Twelve Pages, Fifty Six Footmen, Twelve Led Horſes, Four Coaches with Eight Horſes, and Two Chariots with Six, was received by the Duke of Boufflers, and conducted to the Hotel, reſerv'd in Paris for the Entertainment of Foreign Ambaſſadors, through Multitudes of Spectators, who were aſtoniſhed at the Grandeur and Opulence of the Engliſh Nation. Two Days after, he was admitted to his firſt Publick Audience, which for a diſtinguiſhing Mark of Honour, he had in His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty's Bed-Chamber, and even within the Rails round the Bed, where the King ſtood, with the Three young Princes his Grandſons, and the Count de Thoulouſe, the Duke d' Aumont, and the Mareſchal de Noailles. His Excellency having made his Speech in French, and deliver'd his Credentials, the King Anſwer'd him in very obliging Terms, both in Relation to His Maſter, and Himſelf; and then his Excellency preſented to the King the Engliſh Noblemen and Gentlemen of his Retinue; which being over, he had Audience of the Dauphin, and the reſt of the Royal Family.

Not only in imitation, but by expreſs directions of the King of France, all that Court ſhew'd the Engliſh Ambaſſador moſt ſingular Marks of Honour and Reſpect. On the 3d. of March (O.S.) he receiv'd a Viſit from the Prince of Conti; and the ſame day paid one himſelf to the Duke of Maine, and the Count of Thoulouſe, who return'd it not many days after. 'Tis obſervable, that in all the Viſits his Excellency made, he was attended by the ſame ſplendid and numerous Equipage which he had at his Publick Entry. And as the Magnificence of his Table was anſwerable to the Grandeur of his Attendance, his Excellency entertain'd daily at Dinner ſome Perſon or other of the firſt Rank. 1698.

On the 12th of April (O. S.) his Excellency and ſeveral of the Noble Perſons who always accompanied him, were entertain'd at Dinner by the Duke of Orleans, at his Houſe at St. Cloud, and in the Afternoon, his Royal Highneſs carried them in his own Coaches to ſee the Gardens. A Week after he went to Verſailles, and ſtaid there Four days, being lodg'd at the Hoſtel de Bouillon; The firſt Day he was Treated by the Mareſchal de Boufflers, who in the Afternoon went with his Excellency into the Gardens, and ſhew'd him the Water-works; The next day he was invited to Dine with Monſieur de Livry, Maſter of the King's Houſhold, and after Dinner had a long Converſation with the King in the Gardens; the Fountains playing all that while. On the 21*ſt.* of April he was entertained by the Duke de Beauvilliers, and in the Afternoon view'd the Houſe of Trianon, and the Park; and on the 22*d.* return'd to Paris. During his Excellency's ſtay at Verſailles, there happen'd a Paſſage between Mr. Prior, the Secretary of the Embaſſy, and one of the French King's Officers, that deſerves to be related: As the latter with abundance of Civility, was leading Mr. Prior about the Apartments, among other Curioſities, he ſhew'd him thoſe fine Peices of Le Brun, which repreſent the King of France's Victories; and ask'd him whether King William's Actions were alſo to be ſeen in his Palace? No, Sir, replied Mr. Prior, The Monuments of my Maſter's Actions are to be ſeen every where, but in His own Houſe.

Retirement of K. James.

King James paſt His Time very indifferently all the while; for beſides the Honours which were done to the Ambaſſador of the Prince, who poſſeſſed his Abdicated Throne, and which could not but be a ſenſible Mortification to that unfortunate Monarch, he was inform'd that his Excellence inſiſted upon the Removing of him at a farther diſtance from the King of France's Preſence, promiſing in his Maſter's Name to give him and the Queen an Honourable Penſion, which would eaſe His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty from the great Charge He was at in Maintaining him and his Family, ever ſince They had taken Sanctuary in His Dominions. After the Concluſion of the late Treaty of Peace, where his Concerns were wholly overlook'd, King James ſeem'd to be abſolutely abandoned to the ſiniſter Influence of his Stars; and therefore concluding that Portland's Demand would be comply'd with, His Majeſty was reſolv'd to retire to Avignon, and began already to inform Himſelf, if He could Live conveniently there. But He was agreeably ſurpriz'd, when He heard that the King of France would never give Ear to the Engliſh Ambaſſador's Propoſal. However, to ſhew in what entire Confidence and Amity He deſigned to Live with King William, His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty open'd to the Earl of Portland the ſubtile Project of the Diviſion of the Spaniſh Monarchy; which to make His Britannick Majeſty go into, without ſuſpecting any latent Subterfuge, the King of France, like a good Politician, endeavour'd to dazzle His Eyes by the extraordinary Reception He made to His Ambaſſador; and by the Marks of His Eſteem and Affection, which He gave Him by ſeveral Letters; which Count de Tallard confirm'd by Word of Mouth.

In this Interval, the Earl of Mancheſter being arrived at Paris, in his Return to England from his Embaſſy to Venice, he and the Earl of Portland went to St. Cloud on the 5*th* of May, to viſit the Duke of Orleans, and in the Evening to Verſailles, to wait on the Moſt Chriſtian King, and were received at both Places with great Civility and Reſpect.

1698. ſpect. Four Days after, both their Excellencies had the Honour to dine with the Dauphin at Meudon, and the next Day the Earl of Portland had his Publick Audience of Leave of the Royal Family; King William having nam'd the Earl of Jerſey to ſucceed him, in the Quality of Ambaſſador Extraordinary to France. On the 15th of May his Excellency dined at Verſailles with the Mareſchal de Villeroy, who in the Afternoon conducted him to Marli, to ſee the Gardens and Water-Works: The next day he went to Meudon, where he hunted and ſupp'd with the Dauphin, and on the 17*th* returned to Verſailles, where he had a Private Audience of the King. The following days he continued to take his Leave of the Court, and on the 27*th* there being a Review of the Troops of the Houſhold in the Plain of Archers, where the King and the Dauphin, the Young Princes of France, and divers Perſons of Quality were preſent; his Excellency went thither alſo, but would perhaps have forborn coming, if he had known that King James and the Titular Prince of Wales had likewiſe been there. The Prince of Wales, by his Father's Directions, endeavoured to join Converſation with the Lord Woodſtock; but the Lord Portland, his Father, knowing the Young Prince's Deſign, order'd his Son to avoid him; as he did himſelf all thoſe that belong'd to the Court of St. Germains; though it was reported King James had cauſed it to be inſinuated to his Excellency, that he never pretended to make his Lordſhip anſwerable for the Ill Uſage he receiv'd from Him he repreſented. At this Review King James himſelf did all he could to engage the Lord Cavendiſh, and the other Engliſh Noblemen to accoſt him, but all imitated the Earl of Potland, who a Week after went to Verſailles, and had a Private Audience of the King in His Cloſet, where his Excellency took his laſt Leave; as he did afterwards of the Dauphin, and of the Duke and Dutcheſs of Orleans at St. Cloud. The King ſent the Earl the uſual Preſent of His Picture ſet with Diamonds, but with this Difference, that the Stones were worth three times as much as thoſe of other like Gifts. Beſides this, His Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty preſented him with all the Stamps and Prints engraved at the Louvre, conſiſting in Twelve Large Folios; in return of which the Ambaſſador made the King a Preſent of Nine very fine Engliſh Horſes. On the 8*th* of June his Excellency left Paris, and went to Chantilli, a Houſe belonging to the Prince of Conde, where he was entertain'd in a ſplendid manner till the 11*th*, when he took leave of his Highneſs, and proceeding on his Journey in his Return to England, arriv'd at Kenſington on the 19*th*. Thus ended this Famous Embaſſy, which coſt King William Fourſcore Thouſand Pounds to little purpoſe: It having been wiſely obſerved, That no Ambaſſador was ever more honour'd, or leſs ſucceſsful, than the Earl of Portland; who could obtain nothing, either as to the Removal of King James, or in Favour of the Proteſtants of France, againſt whom the Perſecution, which in many places had been interrupted during the War, began now to rage afreſh with redoubled Violence. As for the Earl himſelf, he was ſo far from getting any thing by his Embaſſy, that on the contrary he found at his Return, that Mr. Keppel, who ſome time before was created Earl of Albemarle, had ſo advantageouſly improved his Abſence, as to become entire Maſter of His Majeſty's Confidence.

Earl of Albermarle the New Favourite.

This New Earl, at the King's firſt coming over, was but Page to His Majeſt, till by his Artful Inſinuations, he was made Maſter of the Robes, in which Place he grew ſo far into His Majeſty's Favour, that the Earl of Portland did every day loſe Ground in it. This Change did at firſt pleaſe the Engliſh and Dutch, the Earl of Albemarle having cunningly made ſeveral Powerful Friends in both Nations, who out of Envy to my Lord Portland, were glad to ſee another in his Place: However, though the firſt became now the Reigning Favourite, yet the latter did ever preſerve the Eſteem and Affection of King William, who ſtill employ'd him in the management of moſt Foreign Affairs, and in what related to Scotland. 1698.

Count Tallard Ambaſſador from France.

On the 19*th* of March, Count Tallard, the French Ambaſſador arriv'd in London, and on the 28*th* had a Private Audience of the King at Kenſington. The next day the Baron of Simeoni, Captain of the Guards of his Electoral Highneſs of Bavaria, had his firſt Publick Audience; and the Count de Platten, Chamberlain to his Electoral Highneſs of Brunſwick, had the ſame day his Audience of Leave of His Majeſty. On the 4*th* of April the King went to Newmarket, to take the Diverſions of Hunting and Horſe-racing; and the next day the Univerſity of Cambridge paid their Duty to His Majeſty, upon Occaſion of His Arrival in their Neighbourhood; being introduc'd by the Duke of Somerſet, their Chancellor. The French Ambaſſador follow'd His Majeſty to this Place, and was not a little ſurprized to ſee the vaſt Concourſe of Nobility and Gentry, and the great Sums of Money that were either won or loſt there. On the 16*th* His Majeſty returned to Kenſington, and ten days after, the Count de Bonde, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from Sweden, made his Publick Entry in Mourning, on the Occaſion of the Death of the late King of Sweden, and on the 29*th* had his firſt Publick Audience of the King at Windſor.

On the 16*th* of May the French Ambaſſador made his Publick Entry, with a fine, but ſmall Retinue, like one who came rather for Buſineſs, than for Shew; and on the 19*th* he had his Publick Audience of His Majeſty at Windſor, where he was ſplendidly entertain'd at Dinner. Two days after, the Earl of Mancheſter being returned from his Embaſſy at Venice, waited on His Majeſty at Kenſington, and was received with great Marks of Favour and Eſteem; and not long after admitted into His Majeſty's Privy-Council. On the 30*th* of May the Swediſh Ambaſſador return'd to the Sovereign the Garter and George of His Majeſty Charles XI. the King of Sweden, with the whole Habit, and other Enſigns of the Order, (wherewith he had been inveſted in 1669,) which was done in great Ceremony at Kenſington.

Trade of France.

France reap'd but ſmall Benefit from the Peace, as to her Commerce, which continued almoſt as dead as in time of War. 'Tis true, ſome Engliſh and Dutch came to Bourdeaux and Rouen, in order to take in Wine and Paper, and brought other Commodities to be ſold there, but the Tariff not being regulated between all the Parties, and the Treaty of Ryſwick mentioning only, That in relation to Holland it ſhould be put upon the ſame Foot, as it was agreed in 1664, which was not yet done; and in reſpect to England, that Commiſſioners appointed by both Kings ſhould meet in London, three Months after the Ratification, to determine all Differences, This, together with the Loſs of at leaſt 20 per Cent by the Money, which the King of France to ſupply preſent Neceſſities, had raiſed to an extravagant rate, oblig'd moſt of thoſe Ships to return home without ſelling or buying any Thing. Thereupon the States-General ſent Deputies to the King of France, to demand the Regulation of the Tariff, purſuant to the late Treaty: But the Trade of Holland being far leſs advantageous to France than that of England, by reaſon the Dutch uſe to import more of their own Commodities into that 1698. Kingdom, than they export of the Growth of it from thence; and that, on the contrary, the Engliſh were us'd, before the War, to ſend vaſt Sums of Money yearly into France, not only for Wines, Paper, Stuffs, Linnen, Hats, and Silks, but alſo for abundance of unprofitable Bawbles, the Purchaſe of which could not be made with what they imported thither of the Growth and Manufacture of England: So the Court of France did at firſt reſolve to keep up the Tariff as high as poſſible with the Hollanders, while they deſign'd to lower it with the Engliſh. But Monſieur Philippeaux d' Herbeaut being ſent over hither as Commiſſary General from the moſt Chriſtian King, for regulating the Commerce between the Two Nations, he found inſuperable Difficulties in his Commiſſion, not only becauſe of the high Duties laid by the Parliament on all French Goods, and which were already appropriated to ſeveral uſes, but alſo becauſe the Engliſh had, by this time, learnt to make ſhift without the Commodities of the Product of France, ſupplying themſelves, for the moſt part, with Wine from Italy, Spain and Portugal; with Linnen from Holland and Sileſia; and with Paper, Stuffs, Hats and Silks, by the Manufactures of thoſe Goods ſet up in England by the Proteſtant French Refugees there.

King-

Honours and Preferments.

On May 4. His Majeſty had appointed the Earl of Jerſey to go as His Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the Court of France.

On May 7. His Majeſty as a Mark of His Royal Favour, was pleaſed to confer upon John Rogers, Sen. of Wiſdom, in the County of Devon, Eſq; the Dignity of a Baronet of this Kingdom.

The King fond of the Duke of Glouceſter.

Ever ſince the Death of the Queen, His Majeſty was more particularly fond of the Duke of Glouceſter, who was now entring on the Tenth Year of His Age, and had given ſuch Proofs of a forward Genius that it was high time to take him out of the Hands of the Women; the King therefore apply'd himſelf to the forming of a Family and a Court for this Hopeful Young Prince; and to oblige his Affectionate Mother the Princeſs, was pleas'd on June 19, to appoint the Right Honourable John Earl of Marlborough to be Governor to his Highneſs, as a Mark of the good Opinion His Majeſty had for his Lordſhip's Zeal for His Service, and his Qualifications for an Employment of ſo great a Truſt; and the ſame Evening his Lordſhip was ſworn of the Privy-Council. The Biſhop of Salisbury was appointed to be Preceptor to his Highneſs, having under him Mr. Willis, Chaplain to the King, and Mr. Prat, Chaplain to the Princeſs; which latter had taught him the firſt Rudiments of Learning, with Right Application, and great Succeſs. June 22. His Majeſty appointed Charles Lord Cornwallis to be Lord Lieutenant and Cuſtos Rotulorum of the County of Suffolk. On July 7. the Inſtallation of the Duke of Newcaſtle Knight of the Garter, was performed at Windſor with great Solemnity: And on the 16*th* His Majeſty declar'd in Council, That intending to go over to Holland for a ſhort time, he had appointed Thomas Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, John Lord Somers, Baron of Eveſham, Lord Chancellor of England; Thomas Earl of Pembroke Lord Privy Seal; William Duke of Devonſhire, Lord Steward of His Majeſty's Houſhold; Charles Earl of Dorſet and Middleſex, John Earl of Marlborough Governor to his Highneſs the Duke of Glouceſter; Henry Earl of Romney Lord Warden of the Cinque-Ports; Edward Earl of Orford firſt Commiſſioner of the Admiralty; and Charles Mountague, Eſq; firſt Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, to be Lords Juſtices of England, for the Adminiſtration of the Government during His Majeſty's Abſence. About the ſame time His Majeſty granted the Honour and Dignity of a Baron of this Kingdom to Chriſtopher Vane of Rabie Caſtle, Eſq; by the Title of Lord Barnard, of Barnard Caſtle, in the County Palatine of Durham; and the Dignity of a Baronet upon Thomas Powell of Broadway, in the County of Carmarthen, Eſq; and upon Samuel Clark of Snailwell, in the County of Cambridge, Eſq;. 1698.

Lords Juſtices.

On July 19. the King dined at Sittingborn, and lay that Night at Captain Ball's, near Margate, and the next Morning embark'd in the William and Mary Yatcht, under a Convoy commanded by Sir Cloudeſley Shovel, and next Day late in the Evening landed at Orange Polder, lay that Night at Hounſlaerdike, and went next day to the Hague, where He aſſiſted at the Aſſembly of the States of Holland, and that of the States General, and gave Audience to ſeveral Publick Miniſters, particularly to the Envoy of Lorrain, who notified to His Majeſty the Marriage of the Duke his Maſter with Madamoiſelle, Daughter to the Duke of Orleans. The King goes to Holland.

On Aug. 6. N. S. the King went to Loo, attended by the Earls of Eſſex, Portland and Selkirk, and ſeveral other Perſons of Quality; He had not been long there, before He was waited upon by the Count de Tallard, a cunning and vigilant Miniſter, who had Orders to ſolicite His Majeſty upon the Propoſal made by the King of France to the Earl of Portland, of coming to an Agreement with His Britannick Majeſty, concerning the Succeſſion of the Crown of Spain; which Overture King William had communicated to His Chancellor before He left England. The French Ambaſſador having preſs'd His Majeſty for an Anſwer, the Earl of Portland by His Majeſty's Order writ a Letter to Mr. Secretary Vernon, wherein it was mentioned, That Count Tallard having declar'd an Accommodation might be found out in relation to the Spaniſh Succeſſion, His Majeſty had founded France upon the Conditions; which were in ſubſtance, That the Electoral Prince of Bavaria ſhould have the Kingdom of Spain, the Indies, and the Low-Countries, and all that depended upon the Spaniſh Dominions, except Naples and Sicily, Sardinia, the Province of Guipuſcoa on this ſide of the Pyrenees, Fontarabia, and St. Sebaſtian, Final, and the Places in Tuſcany, of which Spain ſtood poſſeſſed; in conſideration of which, France was abſolutely to renounce the Right it pretended to the Succeſſion of Spain; and as for Milan, it was to be given to the Arch-Duke Charles, the Emperor's Second Son. Treaty of Partition.

At the ſame time the King did Himſelf acquaint my Lord Somers, by Letter, That He had order'd Vernon not to communicate the Propoſitions made by Count Tallard, to any other beſides his Lordſhip, and to leave to his Lordſhip's Judgment to whom elſe he would think proper to impart them; to the end that His Majeſty might know his Lordſhip's Opinion upon ſo Important Affair, which required the greateſt Secrecy, and wherein no time was to be loſt, if it was fit this Negotiation ſhould be carried on. For that purpoſe, His Majeſty commanded my Lord Somers to ſend Him the full Powers under the Great Seal, with the Names in Blank to treat with Count Tallard; which His Majeſty believed might be done ſecretly, that none but his Lordſhip and Vernon, and thoſe to whom his Lordſhip ſhould have communicated it, might have knowledge of it; and ſo that the Clerks themſelves, who were to write the Warrant, and the Full Powers, might not know what it was. And moreover, to preſs the Neceſſity of this Treaty, His Majeſty acquainted His Chancellor, That, according to all Intelligence, the King of Spain could not outlive the King's Letter to the Lord Chancellor.

1698. Month of October, and that the leaſt Accident might carry Him off before that time.

Mr. Vernon having ſent the Earl of Portland's Letter to my Lord Somers, who was then at Tunbridge, for the benefit of the Medicinal Waters of that Place, his Lordſhip immediately return'd the ſame Letter to Mr. Vernon, and deſired him to communicate the Contents of it to my Lord Orford, Mr. (Charles) Mountague, and the Duke of Shrewsbury, which his Lordſhip thought the beſt way of executing the King's Commands. At the ſame time letting them know, how ſtrictly His Majeſty required that it ſhould remain an abſolute Secret. Which Caution made Mr. Vernon impart it to the Duke of Shrewsbury only, as he afterwards acquainted my Lord Somers.

Some time after, Mr. Mountague, and Mr. Secretary Vernon going down to Tunbridge, they and my Lord Somers debated this important Affair; and thereupon his Lordſhip writ a Letter to His Majeſty. However, the Negotiation was eagerly carried on, inſomuch that on the 29th of Auguſt (N. S.) ſeveral days before His Majeſty had received the Lord Somers's Anſwer, a Treaty was concluded; whereby it was Agreed, "I. That the Peace of Ryſwick ſhould be Confirm'd. "II. That in conſideration of the ill State of the "King of Spain's Health, and for preſerving the "Publick Peace, in caſe the ſaid Prince ſhould "die without Iſſue, the Kingdoms of Naples and "Sicily, with the Places then depending upon "the Spaniſh Monarchy, ſituated on the Coaſts "of Tuſcany, or the adjacent Iſlands, comprehended under the name of Santo Stephano, Porto Hercole, Orbitello, Telamore, Portolongo, Proinbino, the Marquiſate of Final, the Province of "Guipuſcoa, particularly the Towns of Fontarabia, and St. Sebaſtian, and eſpecially the Port "Paſſage, and likewiſe all Places on the French "ſide of the Pyrenees, or the other Mountains of "Navarre, Alava, or Biſcay, on the ſide of the "Province of Guipuſcoa, with all the Ships and "Gallies, and other Appurtenances belonging to "the ſaid Gallies, ſhould be given to the Dauphin in conſideration of his Right. III. That "the Crown of Spain, and the other Kingdoms "and Places both within and without Europe, "ſhould deſcend to the Electoral Prince of Bavaria, of whom his Father, the Elector, was "to be a Guardian and Adminiſtrator till he came "of Age. And IV. That the Dutchy of Milan "ſhould be reſerved and allotted to Arch-Duke "Charles, the Emperor's Second Son." This Treaty was to be communicated to the Emperor and the Elector of Bavaria, by the King of Great Britain, and the States General; and if they did not agree to it, then the proportion of the Party not agreeing, ſhould remain in Sequeſtration till things could be brought to an Accommodation: And in caſe the Electoral Prince of Bavaria ſhould come to inherit his Share, and yet die before his Father without Iſſue, the Elector was to ſucceed him in thoſe Dominions, and his Heir after him. Likewiſe the Dutchy of Milan, upon the Arch-Duke's Refuſal to accept it, was to be Sequeſtred to, and Govern'd by the Prince of Vaudemont; and after him by his Son, Prince Charles of Vaudemont. Soon after the Concluſion of this Treaty, King William took a Review of the Dutch Troops near Arnheim, and then on Sep. 20. went to Zell, to give a Viſit to the Duke of that Name. Here His Majeſty was received with extraordinary Reſpects (as he had been at all the Places through which He paſt in His way thither) and waited upon by ſeveral Neighbouring Princes and Princeſſes, particularly the Electoreſs of Hanover, with the Electoral Prince, and the Princeſs his Siſter. Mr. Stepney, His Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary to the Elector of Brandenburgh, did likewiſe attend the King with Letters from that Prince; and at his return to Loo, the Duke of Bavaria came to pay his Acknowledgments to His Majeſty, for the Care He had taken of his Electoral Highneſs's Intereſt in the late Treaty of Partition.

Whilſt the King of France was Courting King William into the Treaty of Partition; the Marquis de Harcourt, the French Ambaſſador in Spain was playing another Game at Madrid. The Queen of Spain, who was nearly related to the King of the Romans, and conſequently entirely in the Intereſt of the Houſe of Auſtria, foreſeeing the Deſigns of the King of France, had early concerted Meaſures with Count de Harrach, the Imperial Miniſter, to diſappoint them. She had not only got Her Creatures into His Catholick Majeſty's Council, but likewiſe procured the Vice-Royalty of Catalonia to be beſtow'd on the Prince of Heſſe d' Armſtadt, and the Government of Milan on Prince Vaudemont; both which Princes had upon many Occaſions ſignaliz'd their Affection and Zeal for the German Intereſt. Some ſay His Majeſty deſign'd to have made Prince Eugene Vice-Roy of Navarre, but was oppos'd in it: And that as to the Duke of Medina Celi, Vice-roy of Naples, it was thought adviſable to continue him there, by Reaſon of his being one of the moſt conſiderable Grandees of Spain, and moſt belov'd of the People; and who conſequently might obſtruct the Deſigns of the German Party, if he came home diſguſted. This was the poſture of the Spaniſh Affairs when the French Ambaſſor arriv'd at Madrid. His Inſtructions were, that if he ſaw no poſſibility, as in effect there ſeem'd at firſt to be none, to derive the Succeſſion of that Kingdom upon one of the Dauphin's Sons, he ſhould endeavour at leaſt, to hinder it from devolving on any of the Emperor's Children, on whom it was ſetled by the Will and Teſtament of Philip the IV. the preſent King of Spain's Father: And to add a powerful weight to the Ambaſſador's Inſtances, and at the ſame time, to awaken the Ambition of ſome Grandees, and fright the reſt into Compliance, his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty caus'd Sixty thouſand of his beſt Men to file off towards the Frontiers of Catalonia and Navarre; and ſent a conſiderable Number of His Ships of War and Gallies into ſeveral Ports of Spain. The Marquis followed His Inſtructions with great Addreſs and Application. He told thoſe whom he found inclined to act in concert with him in ſo Important an Affair, That Philip IV. had exerted His Power too far, in diſpoſing of His Crown againſt the Laws of Nature, and the Conſtitution of the Realm; That the Succeſſion did lawfully belong to his Daughter's Children, and not to His Relations Four Degrees remov'd: That the Dauphin, Son to Maria Thereſa, the preſent King of Spain's Siſter, had Three Sons; And if the Spaniards would fix their Eyes upon the Second of them, the Duke of Anjou, to be their King, he being ſtill as pliable as Wax, they might eaſily mould him to the Cuſtoms and Manners of their Countrey: That if they were averſe to this Overture, the Electoral Prince of Bavaria, being Grandſon to a Daughter of Spain, the King of France would rather approve of him to Succeed in the Spaniſh Monarchy, than any of the Emperor's Children; unleſs as the Poles had often done, to cut off the Pretenſions of Foreign Princes, they would chuſe a Sovereign among themſelves, in which the King of France would Protect them, ſince He never intended to unite Spain to His own Kingdom, but only to keep it from falling into the hands of the Houſe of Auſtria, who was already grown too Powerful by her late Intrigues of France in the Court of Spain.

Con-

1698. Conqueſts in Hungary. The Queen of Spain having a watchful Eye upon the French Ambaſſador, who made it his Buſineſs to thwart Her Deſigns in favour of the Emperor, did ſoon diſcover his Practices. And therefore under pretence that the Air of Madrid was prejudicial to Her Husband's Health, She carried Him to Toledo, without allowing any Foreign Ambaſſador to follow him thither. The Marquis d' Harcourt did quickly penetrate into the Deſign of the Queen's Journey, and judg'd very rightly, that being ſole Miſtreſs of the King, She might eaſily prevail with Him to Ratify King Philip IV's Will. He was confirm'd in this Apprehenſion by Count d' Harrach's being no more to be ſeen at Madrid; and ſuppoſing he was gone to Toledo, he went immediately thither himſelf, under pretence of a feign'd Memorial, which, he gave out, he had receiv'd from his Maſter, with poſitive Orders not to communicate it to any beſides His Catholick Majeſty. The Queen was extreamly ſurpriz'd at the unexpected Arrival of the French Ambaſſador; and caus'd Her Husband to acquaint him, That He had left the Cardinal of Corduba (he was one of the Queen's Creatures) at Madrid, to take Care of Foreign Affairs during His Abſence, to whom he might have communicated his Memorial; and that He only came there to recover His Health, and not to trouble Himſelf with Buſineſs. This pretended Memorial was, it ſeems, to offer to the King of Spain his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty's Aſſiſtance to raiſe the Siege of Ceuta, which the Queen was too Wiſe to let Her Husband Accept; ſince by that means the French would have got what She was endeavouring to prevent; I mean, a Footing and Intereſt in Spain. The Marquis d' Harcourt, after this unſucceſsful Journey, bethought himſelf of another Stratagem, and being return'd to Madrid, did ſo powerfully work on the Ambition of Cardinal Portocarero, that he engag'd him in the Intereſt of France.

While theſe Things paſt in the South Parts of Europe, the French were not leſs buſy to ſtrengthen themſelves towards the North, by an Alliance with the Crown of Sweden, which at length was concluded at Stockholm, on the 9*th* of July; the main Articles of which were, I. That the ancient Alliance was renew'd between the Kings of France and Sweden, their Heirs and Succeſſors. II. That the Aim and Intention of this Treaty, was to preſerve and ſecure the common Peace, by ſuch means as ſhould be judg'd moſt proper and convenient. III. That if it ſhould be diſturb'd by any Breach and Hoſtilities, the Two Kings would make it Their Buſineſs to Repair the Wrongs in an Amicable way. IV. That if Their Endeavours prov'd Ineffectual, They would jointly conſider of ways to defend the Rights of the Country injur'd. V. That in caſe any Prince or State would enter into this Treaty within a Year, They ſhould be admitted by the Conſent of Both Kings. VI. That neither the One nor the Other, ſhould make Peace or Truce without comprehending the other therein. VII. That the Articles of the Treaties formerly concluded by either of the Two, with other Kings, Princes, or States, ſhould remain in full Force and Vigor, ſo far as they ſhould not be contrary to this. VIII. That the Freedom of Commerce between the Subjects of the Two Kings, ſhould be preſerved as formerly. IX. In purſuance of which, all Ports, Cities, and Provinces, ſhould be open to the Subjects of both Crowns, according as the Laws and Cuſtoms ſhould permit, both to Sell their Commodities in theſe Places and Buy others. X. And that this particular Treaty ſhould continue Ten Years, with liberty to prolong this Term, if it were judg'd convenient by the Two Kings; who by Conſent ſhould have a watchful Eye upon the Means to preſerve the Peace againſt the Danger that threatned it. It was Treaty between France and Sweden.

Comical to hear the French Miniſters in Foreign Courts talk of their Maſter's Endeavours to preſerve the Tranquility of Europe, when he ſeem'd the moſt forward to diſturb it, upon the firſt News of the King of Spain's Death, which was hourly expected at the Court of France. For to ſay nothing of the Motions of His Land and Naval Forces, which I have already hinted, His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty caus'd a great Camp to be made at Compeigne, the pretence of which, was to inſtruct the Duke of Burgundy in the Art of War; but which gave no ſmall Umbrage to the Neighbouring Princes and States, who look'd upon it as deſigned to make a ſudden Irruption into the Spaniſh Netherlands. However, the unexpected Recovery of the King of Spain's Health, as it diſappointed the Hopes of the one, ſo it diſpell'd the Fears of the reſt, at leaſt for this Year. 1698.

King William's Journey to Zell, gave the Court of France as much Uneaſineſs, as France gave the Allies, by the Camp at Compeigne; tho' 'tis moſt certain that his Britannick Majeſty had nothing in View, but to cement the Union of the Princes of Germany, by a Match between the King of the Romans, and the Princeſs of Hannover, which was now agreed on, and ſoon after Compleated; and by removing the Apprehenſions ſome Members of the Empire were under, of the growing Power of the Emperor; which His Britannick Majeſty did effectually in concert with the States, by putting a ſtop to the Hungarian War, which had continu'd for above Fifteen Years. The Armies on both ſides were indeed conſiderable in Number and Strength this Summer; but yet there ſeem'd no great Diſpoſition in either for Action, but rather an inclination in the contending Parties, to ſet up a Treaty under the Mediation of the Lord Paget the Engliſh, and Mr. Colliers the Dutch Ambaſſador, who towards the middle of Auguſt arrived in the Turkiſh Camp near Belgrade; and by their good Offices got the Place to hold the Conferences to be between Peter Waradin and Salankemen; the Emperor's and Confederate Miniſters being to reſide at Carlowitz, the Sultan's at Salankemen, and the Mediators between the two Places. It was the 7th of November when the latter delivered to the Turkiſh Plenipotentiaries the Preliminary Articles; which were in ſubſtance, That each Party reſpectively ſhould return what he poſſeſs'd: And the Five following Days were ſpent in preparing Matter upon which they were to enter in Conference. On the 13th, the Imperial and Turkiſh Plenipotentiaries caus'd ſeveral fair Tents to be ſet up on the ſides of the Houſe appointed for the Conferences. And by Nine in the Morning, the firſt arrived at the Mediator's Lodgings, whither the Turkiſh alſo repair'd about the ſame time; and from thence went together to the Houſe of the Conference. Here after mutual Civilities, they took their Places in the midſt of the Tent, which had Four Doors, Two whereof being oppoſite to one another, ſerv'd for the Entrance of the Mediators; and the other Two for the Imperial and Turkiſh Plenipotentiaries. The Count of Ottinghen, one of the Emperor's Ambaſſadors, had the Right of the former, and the Effendi, or Chancellor of the Ottoman Port, of the latter; the Mediators, Secretaries, and thoſe of the Imperial Embaſſy, were placed behind; and the Turkiſh Secretary ſat down before upon the Floor. The Conference was open'd with the Pronunciation of theſe Words, God Grant an Happy Peace: And laſted from half an Hour after Ten, till Three in the Afternoon, when the Mediators and Plenipotentiaries went out in the ſame Order as they Enter'd. The Conferences were renew'd in the ſame manner the three ſucceeding Days, with good ſucceſs;

1698. ceſs; but ſome Debates ariſing about the giving up of Teckley, and the Holy Sepulchre, the diſmantling of Caminiec, and the ſurrendring of another Place upon the Black-Sea; beſides the quitting of Azoph to the Muſcovites; and chiefly about the regulation of Limits between the two Empires, and the Venetian and Turkiſh Territories; the Plenipotentiaries ſent Expreſſes to their reſpective Maſters, which waſted a great deal of time: However, at length the Imperialiſts and Poles concluded their Part of the Treaty on the 26*th* of January, 1699. and perhaps would have done it ſooner, but in a ſort of Compliance to the Venetians, who did not ſign theirs till the middle of the next Month. As for the Articles between the Czar of Muſcovy and the Sultan, they contain'd only a Truce for two Years, and ſo were ſoon agreed upon and ſign'd on the 25*th* of December, 1698. By this Peace the Emperor preſerv'd His late Acquiſitions, and vaſtly enlarg'd His Territories; the Poles had the Important Place of Caminieck reſtored to them, in its preſent State, with other Advantages: The Muſcovites were Gainers by the keeping of Azoph; and though the Venetians ſeem'd to have far'd hardeſt in this Negotiation, as is uſual with thoſe who make their Terms laſt, yet they had all the Morea, and ſeveral Fortreſſes in Dalmatia yielded up to them: So that upon a right Computation it will appear, that the Turks loſt the beſt half of their Dominions in Europe. By this time the New King of Poland having brought the Cardinal Primate, who had all along ſtickled for the Prince of Conti, to acknowledge His Majeſty's Title, and compos'd the Troubles of Lithuania, an Univerſal Peace ſeem'd now to be ſettled throughout Chriſtendom.

King Returns from Holland.

On Thurſday, Dec. 1. the King ſet ſail from the Coaſt of Holland, in the William and Mary Yatcht, under a Convoy commanded by Sir Cloudſly Shovel, and landed at Margate, Dec. 3. He lay that Night at Canterbury, and came the next Evening to Kenſington. After ſeveral ſhort Prorogations to wait His Majeſty's Return, the Parliament met at Weſtminſter on Tueſday, Dec. 6. and His Majeſty coming to the Houſe of Peers with uſual Solemnity, ſent for the Commons, to whom the Lord Chancellor ſignified His Majeſty's Pleaſure, that they ſhould proceed to the Choice of a Speaker, and preſent him on Friday next; the Commons made choice of a very Worthy Perſon, Sir Thomas Littleton, Bart., who being preſented on Dec. 9. was graciouſly approv'd by His Majeſty, who then made this Speech to Both Houſes.

New Parliament meets.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech.

"I Have no doubt but you are met together with Hearts fully diſpoſed to do what is neceſſary for the Safety, Honour and Happineſs of the Kingdom; and that is all I have to ask of you.

"In order to this, two Things ſeem principally to require your Conſideration.

"The One is, What Strength ought to be maintained at Sea, and what Force kept up at Land for this Year. All I ſhall obſerve to you upon this Head is, That the Flouriſhing of Trade, the Supporting of Credit, and the Quiet of Peoples Minds at home, will depend upon the Opinion they have of their Security; and to preſerve to England the Weight and Influence it has at preſent on the Councils and Affairs Abroad, it will be requiſite Europe ſhould ſee you will not be wanting to your ſelves.

"The Second Thing I ſhall mention to you as of great Conſequence, is the making ſome further Progreſs towards diſcharging the Debts which the Nation has contracted by reaſon of the long and expenſive War. In this the Publick Intereſt as well as Juſtice is concerned: 1698.
"And I think an Engliſh Parliament can never make ſuch a Miſtake, as not to hold ſacred all Parliamentary Engagements.

"Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, I do earneſtly recommend theſe Things to you, that you may provide ſuch Supplies as you ſhall judge neceſſary for theſe ſeveral Occaſions.

My Lords and Gentlmen,

"I think it would be happy if ſome effectual Expedient could be found for employing the Poor, which might tend to the great Increaſe of Our Manufactures, as well as remove a Heavy Burthen from the People. I hope alſo you will employ your Thoughts about ſome good Bills for the Advancement of Trade, and for the further diſcouraging of Vice and Prophaneneſs. The Things I have mentioned to you being of Common Concern.

The King deſirous of Forces by Land and Sea.

It appear'd by this Speech, that His Majeſty was very deſirous to have a good Body of Land-Forces kept on foot, as well as a good Navy maintain'd at Sea; being apprehenſive that if England was entirely diſarmed, it would be too great a Temptation to the Ambition of France, to break through all Treaties and Engagements, in order to invade the Monarchy of Spain. Had the late Partition Treaty been communicated to the Commons, they would perhaps at that time have approv'd of it, or at leaſt have been ſo far under the ſame Apprehenſions with His Majeſty, as to ſee the neceſſity of keeping and awing France within the Bounds ſet Her by the Peace of Ryſwick. But the French King having now evacuated moſt of the Towns he was to ſurrender, the Accounts from Madrid giving great Hopes of the King of Spain's Recovery, and all Things having a Fair Aſpect Abroad, the Commons fell in with the Popular Notion, That a Standing Army in Time of Peace was uſeleſs and burthenſome, would be an Ill Example to Poſterity, and might encourage a Bad Prince to encroach upon the Liberties of the Subject. This Cry was artfully improved by thoſe Members who were diſaffected to King William, and was carried on by ſome of the greateſt Inſtruments of the Revolution, who having, contrary to their Expectations, got nothing from the Court, were now in Anger to turn againſt it; that they might hereafter be bought of, when they could not be before rewarded. Under this Diſpoſition of the Houſe of Commons when they came to a Conſideration of His Majeſty's Speech, they Reſolved, That all the Land Forces of England, in Engliſh Pay, exceeding Seven Thouſand Men (and thoſe conſiſting of His Majeſty's Natural Born Subjects) be forthwith Paid and Disbanded. And that all the Forces in Ireland, exceeding Twelve Thouſand Men (and thoſe His Majeſty's Natural Born Subjects, to be kept and maintain'd by the Kingdom of Ireland) be likewiſe forthwith disbanded. And they ordered a Bill to be brought in upon the ſaid Reſolutions, which was eagerly puſh'd on, and ſoon brought to perfection, becauſe the Good and the Ill Deſigns concentred in it.

The Commons for Disbanding.

Theſe Proceedings made the King very uneaſy; and the more ſo, becauſe His Dutch Regiment of Guards, who had ſo long ſerv'd Him, was by this Bill to be torn away from Him, and to be ſent out of the Kingdom. However, His Majeſty like a Wiſe and Good Prince, never oppoſing His own Will to what ſeem'd to be the Voice and Judgment of His People, choſe rather to compliment the Commons, than to contend with them. So on Wedneſday, Feb. 1. the King came to the Parliament, and gave the Royal Aſſent to the ſeveral Bills ready for Him.

1. An

1698. Bills paſſed. 1. An Act for granting an Aid to His Majeſty for Diſbanding the Army, and other Neceſſary Occaſions. 2. An Act to prevent the Making or Selling of Buttons made of Cloth, Serge, Drugget, or other Stuff. 3. An Act to prohibit the Exportation of any Corn, Malt, Meal, Flower, Bread, Biſcuit, or Starch, for one Year, from the 10th of February, 1698. 4. An Act for the more eaſy and certain Payment of the Debts of Edward Earl of Darentwater, by Sale of Woods and Timber, and for enabling him to raiſe Money for Diſcharge of Incumbrances upon part of his Eſtate. And three other Private Acts for Naturalizing Elizabeth Farewell, Nicholas Lepall, and Bartholomew Ogilvy. After which His Majeſty made a Kind and Wiſe Speech, to ſhew His Reaſons to paſs the Diſbanding Bill, and yet to expoſtulate a little upon the Hardſhip of it.

King's Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" I came to Paſs the Bill for Disbanding the " Army, as ſoon as I underſtood it was ready for Me: Though in Our preſent Circumſtances there appears great hazard in breaking " ſuch a Number of the Troops: And though " I might think My ſelf unkindly uſed, that thoſe " Guards who came over with Me to your Aſſiſtance, and have conſtantly attended Me in all " the Actions wherein I have been engaged, " ſhould be removed from Me; yet it is My fixt " Opinion, That nothing can be ſo fatal to Us, " as that any Diſtruſt or Jealouſie ſhould ariſe between Me and My People, which I muſt own " would have been very unexpected, after what I " have Undertaken, Ventured, and Acted for " the Reſtoring and Securing of their Liberties.

" I have thus plainly told you the only Reaſon " which has induced Me to Paſs this Bill: And " now I think My ſelf oblig'd, in diſcharge of the " Truſt repoſed in Me, and for My Own Juſtification, that no Ill Conſequences may lye at " My Door, to tell you as plainly My Judgment, that the Nation is left too much expoſed.

" It is therefore incumbent on you to take this " Matter into your ſerious Conſideration, and " effectually to provide ſuch a Strength as is neceſſary for the Safety of the Kingdom, and " the Preſervation of the Peace which God hath " given Us.

The Commons were ſo well pleas'd with this Gracious Complaiſance of the King, that they immediately reſolved, That an Humble Addreſs be preſented to the King, to give His Majeſty Thanks for His Moſt Gracious Speech to Both Houſes of Parliament; with the Aſſurances of this Houſe, That they will ſtand by, and aſſiſt His Majeſty in the Support of Him and His Government, againſt all Enemies whatſoever. And they accordingly put their Reſolution into this Form of Addreſs.

Commons Addreſs of Thanks.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

" We Your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal " Subjects, the Commons in Parliament Aſſembled, being highly ſenſible of the Difficulties " Your Majeſty has undertaken, the Labours " You have ſuſtained, and the Hazards You have " run, in Reſcuing us from Popery and Arbitrary Power, Reſtoring our Liberties, and Giving " Peace and Quiet to all Chriſtendom; beg " leave to return our moſt hearty Thanks for " Your moſt Gracious Speech: In which You " expreſs ſo great a Regard for the Good Will " and Affections of Your People, and have given " ſo undeniable a Proof of Your Readineſs to " Comply with the Deſires of Your Parliament: And as Your Majeſty has ſhewn a 1698. " moſt Tender and Fatherly Concern for the " Security and Safety of Your People; ſo " give us leave to aſſure Your Majeſty, That " You ſhall never have Reaſon to think the " Commons are Undutiful or Unkind to Your " Majeſty; but that We will upon all Occaſions " Stand by, and Aſſiſt Your Majeſty in the Preſervation of Your Sacred Perſon, and Support " of Your Government againſt all Your Ene" mies whatſoever.

This Addreſs being Preſented by the whole Houſe, had the Honour to be thus Anſwered by the King. Gentlemen, I take this Addreſs very kindly: I am fully ſatisfied of your Duty and Affection to Me, and have no doubt but you will always Act in the manner you have expreſs'd on this Occaſion.

Lords Addreſs.

The Lords had made an Addreſs on Jan. 3. wherein they repreſent their being highly ſenſible of His Majeſty's great Care and Goodneſs towards His People, expreſs'd upon ſo many Occaſions, and particularly in His Speech to Both Houſes, at the opening of this Parliament; begg'd leave, by way of Addreſs, humbly to aſſure His Majeſty, that as they ſhould always retain a lively Impreſſion of thoſe great and continued Obligations, which His Majeſty had laid upon this Nation to all Poſterity; ſo it ſhould be, upon every Occaſion, the perpetual Care and Study of that Houſe, with the moſt Zealous Duty, and the moſt Grateful Affections imaginable, to make His Majeſty all ſuitable Returns within their Power. And at this time particularly, they further aſſur'd His Majeſty, That they ſhould not fail to uſe their moſt diligent Endeavours, for the attaining of thoſe great and good Ends which His Majeſty had been pleaſed to recommend to His Parliament. The King told the Lords, " That He took their Addreſs very kindly, and " gave them His hearty Thanks; and that they " might always depend upon His Kindneſs, as " He did on this Aſſurance of theirs to Him; and " their Zeal for the Publick Good. And now " upon His Majeſty's Signing the Act for the " Diſbanding the Army, the Lords preſented " their moſt hearty Thanks to His Majeſty for it, " and for the Gracious Expreſſions in His Speech; " That it was His Majeſty's fix'd Opinion; that no" thing could be ſo fatal to them, as that any Diſtruſt " or Jealouſie ſhould ariſe between His Majeſty and " His People. As likewiſe for His great Care and " Concern for the Safety of the Kingdom upon " all Occaſions; aſſuring His Majeſty, that at " all times, for the Safety of the Kingdom, and " the Preſervation of the Peace which God had " given them, they would Aſſiſt and Defend His " Majeſty againſt all His Enemies, both at Home " and Abroad.

King Diſbands the Army.

The King Thank'd the Lords for their Addreſs; and finding that Both Houſes concurr'd in the ſame Opinion, as to the Diſbanding of the Army, His Majeſty gave effectual Orders for reducing it, according to the late Act, to the Number of Seven Thouſand Men, to be Maintain'd in England, under the Name of Guards and Garriſons: But by reaſon that Cavalry is more ſerviceable upon any ſudden Exigency, than Infantry, His Majeſty took care to preſerve more Regiments of the firſt than of the laſt: I mean, in reſpect to the uſual Proportion which is obſerved between the Number of the Horſe and Foot of an Army.

And ſends away His Dutch Guards.

This great Reform coſt the King many a heavy and melancholy Thought: But what touch'd His Majeſty to the very Quick, was the Neceſſity He was under, of ſending away His Dutch Guards: A Regiment, who had faithfully attended His Perſon from His Cradle; follow'd His Fortune every where; and to whom, beſides innumerable 1698. numerable other Signal Services, He ow'd His Victory at the Famous Battel of the Boyne. With these His Majesty had the utmost, and indeed, the justest Regret to part: And therefore upon the 18*th*. of March, He sent a Message by the Lord Ranelagh to the Commons, not only Sign'd by His Majesty, but all of His own Hand-Writing.

William R.

But first Expostulates with the Commons.

" His Majesty is pleased to let the House know, " that the Necessary Preparations are made for " Transporting the Guards who came with Him " into England; and that He intends to send them " away immediately, unless out of Consideration to Him, the House be disposed to find a " way for continuing them longer in His Service, which His Majesty would take very " kindly.

Upon Reading this Message, the Question was put, That a Day be appointed to consider of His Majesty's said Message. But it was carried in the Negative, and Resolved, That a Committee be appointed to draw up an Humble Address to be Presented to His Majesty, representing the Reasons why the House cannot comply with the Purport of His Majesty's Message this Day communicated to the House. And this Address was accordingly prepared, and delivered on March 24.

Commons Answer.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

" We Your Majesty's most Dutiful and Loyal " Subjects, the Commons in this present Parliament Assembled, do, with unfeigned Zeal to " Your Majesty's Person and Government, " (which God long preserve) most humbly Re- " present to Your Majesty,

" That the passing the late Act for Disbanding " the Army, gave great Satisfaction to Your " Subjects; and the Readiness Your Majesty has " expressed by Your Message to comply with the " punctual Execution thereof, will prevent all " Occasions of Distrust or Jealousie between " Your Majesty and Your People.

" It is, Sir, to Your Loyal Commons an " unspeakable Grief, that Your Majesty should " be advised to propose any thing in Your Mes- " sage, to which they cannot consent, with due " Regard to that Constitution Your Majesty " came over to restore, and have so often ex- " pos'd Your Royal Person to preserve, and did " in Your Gracious Declaration promise, that " all those Foreign Forces which came over " with You, should be sent back.

" In Duty therefore to Your Majesty, and to " discharge the Trust reposed in Us, we crave " leave to lay before You; That nothing conduceth more to the Happiness and Welfare of this " Kingdom, than an entire Confidence between " Your Majesty and Your People; which can " no way be so firmly established, as by intrusting Your Sacred Person with your own Subjects, who have so eminently signalized themselves on all Occasions, during the late long " and expensive War.

The King could not be pleased with this Address, which was a Denyal of what He Himself, and most Part of the World, did believe to be a Reasonable and Modest Request of a King to His People. However, to disappoint some Enemies, and if possible, to reconcile others, His Majesty gave this Gracious Answer.

The King wisely yields.

Gentlemen,

" I Came hither to restore the Ancient Constitution of this Government. I have had " all possible Regard to it since my Coming, and " I am resolved through the Course of My Reign, " to endeavour to preserve it entire in all the " Parts of it. 1698.

" I have a full Confidence in the Affections of " My People, and I am well assured, they have " the same in Me; and I will never give them " just Cause to alter this Opinion.

" As to my Subjects who served during the " War, I am an Eye-witness of their Bravery, " and of their Zeal for My Person and Government; and I have not been wanting to ex- " press My Sense of this to My Parliament, as " well as upon other Occasions.

" I have all the Reason to trust and to rely " upon them, that a Prince can have; and I am " satisfied, there is not one Person among them " capable of entertaining a Thought, that what " was proposed in My Message, proceeded from " any Distrust of them.

" It shall be My Study to the utmost of My " Power, to perform the Part of a Just and a " Good King: And as I will ever be strictly " and nicely careful of Observing My Promises to My Subjects, so I will not doubt of their " Tender Regards to Me.

The People pleased.

This Answer, though it could not but please, yet it would not move the Commons from their Resolutions; so that the Dutch Guards were soon after Shipp'd off for Holland: Which, though it seem'd to weaken His Majesty in His Military Defence and Safety, yet it strengthened his Interest in the Hearts of all good Subjects, who saw now in an extraordinary Instance, that the King could deny Himself any thing to oblige His People. On the same day, March the 24*th*. the King came to the House of Peers, and pass'd these several Bills. 1. An Act to prohibit the excessive Distilling of Spirits and Low Wines from Corn; and against the Exporting of Beer and Ale; and to prevent Frauds in Distillers. 2. An Act to enlarge the Trade to Russia. 3. An Act for preventing irregular Proceedings of Sheriffs and other Officers, in making the Returns of Members chosen to serve in Parliament. 4. An Act for the clearing, repairing, preserving, and maintaining the Haven and Peers of Great Yarmouth in the County of Norfolk. 5. An Act for making and keeping the River Tone Navigable, from Bridgwater to Taunton, in the County of Somerset. 6. An Act for making the Ships Margaret and Friendship of Bristol, to Trade as Free Ships. 7. An Act for the Relief of the Creditors of Sir Robert Vyner, Knight and Baronet, deceas'd. 8. An Act for enabling George Penn, Esq; to sell Lands for the Payment of his Debts, and other Purposes therein mentioned. 9. An Act for the Ship Charles, Fly-Boat of Exeter, to Trade as a Free Ship. And several other private distinct Acts, for the Naturalizing of James St. Pierre, John Denny, Remond Herfberg, Charles de Sibourg, Francis St. George, William Lloyd, Cornelius de Wit, Godfrey Lloyd, John Meoles, Theophilus Rabemiers, and many others. Acts passed.

One of the Consequences of Disbanding the Army, was a more visible Concourse of the Jacobites and Papists about the Town and the Court, in so bold and insolent a manner, that the Commons took notice of it, and upon that Occasion presented this Address to the King, on February the 21*st*.

Address against Papists and Jacobites.

" We your Majesty's most Dutiful and Loyal " Subjects, the Commons in Parliament Assem- " bled, having observ'd the great Concourse to " this City, of Papists and other disaffected Per- " sons, who have not own'd Your Majesty to be " Lawful and Rightful King of these Realms; " and the Boldness they assume from your Maje- " sty's

1698. "fty's unexampled Clemency, not only to keep "Horſes and Arms contrary to Law, but alſo to "frequent all publick Places of Reſort near Your "Two Houſes of Parliament, and even to ap- "proach Your Royal Palaces, whereby they may "have Opportunities to perpetrate any Wicked "Attempt againſt Your Royal Perſon; on the "Safety and Preſervation whereof, our Religion "and Liberties, and the Peace and Welfare not "only of theſe Kingdoms, but of all Europe, do "in very great meaſure depend.

"And having alſo conſidered the many Plots "and Conſpiracies againſt Your Majeſty's Per- "ſon and Government, but eſpecially the late "Horrid intended Aſſaſſination, contrived and "carried on not only by Papiſts, (whoſe Religion "and Intereſt might lead them to it) but even "by ſuch who at their Death (to the great Scan- "dal of our Religion) profeſſed and owned "themſelves to be Members of the Church of "England; which chiefly, under God, owes its "Preſervation and Defence to Your Majeſty; "and whoſe Doctrines are directly oppoſite to "all ſuch Inhuman and Treaſonable Practi- "ces.

"And having alſo certain Information, That "great Numbers of Popiſh Prieſts and Jeſuits, "within this City and Parts adjacent, intrude "themſelves into the Preſence of Sick and Dy- "ing Perſons, with deſign to prevail upon them "in their Weakneſs, to be reconciled to the "Church of Rome; and daily endeavour to per- "vert and ſeduce from their Allegiance, Your "Majeſty's good Subjects, impoiſoning them "with their Wicked and Damnable Doctrines "and Principles: And that they have imported "great Quantities of Popiſh Books, and keep "Schools to Breed up, and Inſtruct Children in "the Romiſh Superſtition and Idolatry.

"We therefore hold our ſelves obliged, for "quieting the Minds of Your Good Subjects, "and in Duty to Your Majeſty, humbly to be- "ſeech Your Majeſty, That You will be Gra- "ciouſly pleaſed (in order to ſuppreſs ſuch Pra- "ctices of the reſtleſs and notorious Enemies of "Your Government) to iſſue out Your Royal "Proclamation, for Removing all Papiſts, and "others who diſown Your Majeſty's Govern- "ment, from the City of London, and Parts ad- "jacent, according to the Laws; and that the "Laws may be put in Execution againſt them in "ſuch manner, that their wicked Deſigns may "be effectually diſappointed.

To this Addreſs His Majeſty made Anſwer; That He would take care that the Laws ſhould be put in Execution, according to their Deſire. In order to which, His Majeſty cauſed His Royal Proclamation to be publiſhed on the 2*d.* of March. A little before, the Old Eaſt-India Company had preſented a Petition to the Commons, praying, "That their Caſe might be taken into Conſide- "ration; and that the Houſe would make ſome "Proviſion, that their Corporation might ſubſiſt "for the Reſidue of the Term of Twenty One "Years, granted by His Majeſty's Charter: "That the Payment of the Five Pounds per Cent. "by the late Act for Settling the Trade to the "Eaſt-Indies, might be ſettled and adjuſted in "ſuch a manner, as it might not remain a Bur- "den upon the Petitioners. And that ſuch fur- "ther Conſiderations might be had for the Peti- "tioners Relief, and for the Preſervation of the "Eaſt-India Trade to England, as ſhould be thought "meet." The Commons conſider'd of this Petition, and on February the 27*th.* order'd a Bill to be brought in thereupon; which Bill was rejected before it came to a Second Reading.

Eaſt-India Companies.

At the beginning of December, William Norris, Eſq; His Majeſty's Ambaſſador to the Great Mogul, had the Honour and Dignity of a Baronet conferr'd upon him. When the Court of Directors of the Engliſh Company Trading to the Eaſt-Indies attended on His Majeſty, to Congratulate His ſafe Return, and to make their humble Acknowledgments for his Royal Favours to that Company, December the 14*th*, the King conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Streynſham Maſters, James Bateman, and Edmund Harriſon, Eſqs; Three of the Directors. On January the 15*th.* the King conferr'd the ſame Honour of Knighthood upon Edward Littleton, Eſq; whom the Company had made choice of, to be their Preſident in the Bay of Bengall. 1698.

As to the Affairs of Scotland, the Parliament met at Edinburgh on July the 19*th.* and His Majeſty's Commiſſion conſtituting Patrick Earl of Marchmont (Lord Chancellor of that Kingdom) His Majeſty's High Commiſſioner for holding the ſame, was read; as likewiſe His Majeſty's Letter to the Lord Commiſſioner, appointing the Viſcount Seafield Principal Secretary of State, to be Preſident during this Seſſion; and the Lord Polworth, to Sit and Vote as Lord High Treaſurer: Who being both Sworn, and having Sign'd the Aſſurance and Aſſociation, took their Places in the uſual manner. This done, His Majeſty's Letter to the Parliament was read: "Wherein "His Majeſty thank'd them for the Proofs of "their Loyalty and good Affection to his Perſon "and Government, in the former Seſſions of "Parliament; and aſſur'd them, that he deſign'd "to give them ſuch Encouragement upon all Oc- "caſions, as might make them find the Advan- "tages of their Faithfulneſs and Duty to Him. "That he was ſenſible of their cheerful Aſſi- "ſtance, during the Continuance of the War; "which by the Bleſſing of God was now ended "in an honourable Peace. Moreover, His Ma- "jeſty acquainted them, That the preſent Cir- "cumſtances of Affairs hindred Him from proſe- "cuting His Deſign of holding this Seſſion in "Perſon; but that he had appointed the Earl of "Marchmont to repreſent His Royal Authority "among them; being well ſatisfied of His Abi- "lities for diſcharging this Truſt, and having "fully inſtructed him to do whatever might be "neceſſary for the Support of the Government, "and Safety of the Kingdom. That their Ene- "mies abroad, and thoſe who were diſaffected "to the Government at home, were ſtill ready "to lay hold on all Opportunities for carrying "on their bold Deſigns: And therefore His Ma- "jeſty judged it abſolutely neceſſary for their "Preſervation, that the Forces upon the preſent "Eſtabliſhment ſhould be continued; and He did "not doubt but they would provide ſuitable Sup- "plies for maintaining them. His Majeſty alſo "recommended to them the Raiſing Supplies to "make good the Deficiencies of the Funds gi- "ven in former Seſſions, for the paying the Ar- "rears that were due, and repairing the Forts "and Gariſon'd Places: The taking effectual "Methods to diſcourage Vice, Immorality, and "Irreligion; and Unanimity and Cordial Con- "currence in the Diſpatch of the Publick Af- "fairs; that it might appear to all they were not "unmindful of the happy Deliverance they had "had, from the Dangers to which their Religi- "gion and Liberties were formerly expos'd: Aſ- "ſuring them, in the Concluſion, of His Care "to maintain their Religion, Laws, and Liber- "ties; and of His Royal Favour and Protecti- "on, in all their Concerns." After this, the Lord High Commiſſioner, and the Lord Preſident, enlarg'd the Reaſonableneſs of His Maje- Affairs of Scotland.

1698. fty's Demands, in their reſpective Speeches to the Parliament; and then Adjourn'd the ſame to the 21ſt. When the Parliament met again, and appointed Four Committees; one to conſider of the Security of the Kingdom; one for Trade, another for Elections, and a fourth for returning an Anſwer to His Majeſty's Letter. Two days after, the firſt of theſe Committees having made their Report, it was reſolved, That the preſent ſtanding Forces of this Kingdom were neceſſary to be continued. And thereupon another Committee was Named, to find Ways and Means to raiſe the neceſſary Sums for their Subſiſtance.

In the mean time, the Scotch India-Company being very uneaſy upon account of the ſtop put to their Subſcriptions by England, laid open their Grievances before the Parliament, in a Petition; wherein they Repreſented, "That whereas the "Wiſdom of the King and Parliament had thought "fit, by Two ſeveral ſolemn Acts and Letters "Patent, under the Great Seal of that Kingdom, "to eſtabliſh their Company with ſuch Power, "Privileges, and Immunities, as were needful "to encourage any ſuch new Undertaking in "that Nation; and particularly to raiſe a Joint-"Stock in ſuch manner as they ſhould think fit; "and for that end, to enfranchiſe ſuch Foreign-"ers as would become Partners with them, and "to enter into Treaties of Commerce with any "in Amity with His Majeſty for that Effect: "That thoſe of their Number, who were then en-"truſted with the Management of that Affair, did "think it moſt natural to make the firſt Offer of "ſharing their ſaid Privilege with their Country-"men, and other Neighbours in England, as living "under the ſame Monarchy; and that they not "only readily embraced the Offer, but in Nine "Days ſubſcrib'd 300000 l. Sterling, as the one "half of the Capital Stock then propoſed, and "actually paid in the firſt fourth Part thereof; "part in Specie, part in Bank Notes, payable "upon Demand. That Both Houſes of Parlia-"ment of England, taking Umbrage at thoſe "Proceedings, had not only jointly Addreſſed "His Majeſty, for fruſtrating the Ends of the "ſaid Acts, but the Houſe of Commons had al-"ſo appointed a Committee, to Examine what "Methods were taken for obtaining the ſaid Acts "of Parliament for Eſtabliſhing their Company; "who were the Subſcribers thereunto, and who "were the Promoters and Adviſers thereof; "with Power to ſend for Perſons, Papers, and "Records: And that purſuant thereto, the ſaid "Committee had given Orders to Summon not "only the Engliſh Subſcribers, but even ſome "Perſons reſiding then in Scotland; as by the "ſaid Addreſs, Votes of the Houſe of Commons, "and Copy of the ſaid Summons, did appear: "By all which, together with ſome other Mea-"ſures then taken, their Friends in England were, "to their great Loſs, Diſappointment, and Re-"tardment, forced to relinquiſh their Enterprize. "That, notwithſtanding that Diſcouragement, "not only moſt of the Nobility, Gentry, Mer-"chants, and the whole Body of the Royal Bur-"roughs, had upon the Inducement, and publick "Faith of the ſaid Acts of Parliament, and Let-"ters-Patent, contributed as Adventurers in rai-"ſing a far more conſiderable Joint-Stock than "any was ever before rais'd in the Kingdom for "any publick Undertaking or Project of Trade "whatſoever, which made it of ſo much the "more univerſal a Concern to the Nation; but "they had alſo all the promiſing Hopes of Fo-"reign Aid that their Hearts could wiſh, eſpe-"cially at Hamburgh, where the Merchants of "that City enter'd into Contract with their De-"puties, to join at leaſt 200000 l. Sterling with "them; till to their great Surprize and Loſs the 1698.
"Engliſh Miniſters there, had, under the pre-"tence of ſpecial Warrant from His Majeſty, "put a ſtop thereto, by giving in a Memorial to "the Senate of that City, not only diſowning "the Authority of the ſaid Acts of Parliament "and Letters-Patent, but alſo threatning both "Senate and Inhabitants, with the King's utmoſt "Diſpleaſure, if they ſhould countenance or "join with them in any Treaty of Trade or "Commerce; as by the annexed Copies thereof "might appear: Which Memorial they pray'd "might, for the better Information of his Grace "and the Eſtates, be read in Parliament. That after "the ſaid Memorial was by the Senate tranſmitted "to the Commercii, or Body of Merchants of that "City, they to aſſert their own Freedom, had "adviſed and prevailed upon their (the Scots) "Deputies and Agents, who were there for the "time, to open Books in the ſaid Merchants "Hall, where for ſome days they ſign'd conſide-"rable Sums purſuant to their ſaid Contract, tho' "under Condition to be void, if they ſhould not "procure ſome Declaration from the King that "might render them ſecure from the Threatnings "and other Inſinuations contain'd in the ſaid Me-"morial. That as the reaſonable (nay, and unqueſti-"onable) Proſpects which they had of a power-"ful Aſſiſtance from Hamburgh, and ſeveral other "Places (if not obſtructed as aforeſaid) had "induced them to prepare a far greater Equi-"page at firſt, than otherwiſe they would have "done; ſo the rendring theſe Meaſures abortive, "had not only weaken'd their Stock, leſſen'd "their Credit, retarded their firſt Expedition, "and diſheartned many of their Partners at home "but even ſlacken'd their Reſolution and Power "from Proſecuting at that time, ſeveral other "Branches of Foreign and Domeſtick Trades "and Improvements, which they had in view, "if they had not met with ſuch Obſtructions and "Diſcouragements from time to time. That "though their Company was more immediately "and ſenſibly touch'd in many Reſpects by ſuch "Proceedings than any other, yet they humbly "conceived alſo, that the Honour and Independency "of the Nation, as well as the Credit and Autho-"rity of the Parliament, was ſtruck at through "their Sides. That they could not as Country-"men, and in Duty to that Collective Power "which gave their Company firſt a Being, but "inform his Grace his Majeſty's High Com-"miſſioner, and the Right Honourable the E-"ſtates of Parliament, of the Premiſes, to the "end that the Great Council of the Nation (then "Aſſembled) might do therein, as they in their "profound Wiſdom and Diſcretion ſhould think "fit. That as to what concerned their Compa-"ny in particular, they ſhould humbly crave "leave to ſuggeſt farther, That the Ships being "then at Sea, on their intended Voyage, the "former Treatment which their Company met "with in England, and elſewhere, might give "them juſt grounds to ſuſpect, that if either "through multiplicity of publick Affairs, or "otherwiſe howſoever, his Grace, and the Right "Honourable the Eſtates of Parliament, ſhould "neglect the taking preſent Notice of ſuch Um-"brage, the Enemies of their Company would "be thereby encourag'd either directly or indirect-"ly to purſue their former Deſigns of ruining "(if poſſible) all their Meaſures. Therefore "they deſir'd his Grace and the Eſtates of Par-"liament to take the Premiſes into their ſerious "Conſideration, to vindicate their Company's "Reputation Abroad, by ſupporting the Credit "of the Acts of Parliament, and Letters-Patent, "by which the ſame was Eſtabliſh'd, and where-1698. "in the Honour of the Nation was so much con-

"in

"cern'd; to take effectual Measures for repair-
"ing the great Loss and Damages which they
"had already sustain'd through the unwarranta-
"ble Treatment above-mentioned, as well as for "preventing the like for the time to come; And
"withal to continue to them the Privileges and
"Exemptions mentioned in the said Acts of Par-
"liament, and Letters-Patent for some longer
"time, in consideration of the time already
"elapsed without Execution, and their Stock ly-
"ing dead without Improvement, by reason of
"the aforesaid Obstructions.

The Parliament having maturely weighed this Petition, thought fit, by way of Address, humbly to represent to His Majesty, "That ha-
"ving consider'd a Representation made to them
"by the Council General of the Company tra-
"ding to Africa and the Indies, which mention-
"ed several Obstructions that they met with in
"the prosecution of their Trade; particularly
"by a Memorial presented to the Senate of Ham-
"burgh, by His Majesty's Resident in that City,
"tending to lessen the Credit of the Rights and "Privileges granted to the said Company, by "an Act of the then present Parliament: They
"therefore in an humble Duty laid before His "Majesty the whole Nation's Concern in that
"Matter, and they did most earnestly intreat,
"and most assuredly expect, that His Majesty in
"His Royal Wisdom would take such Measures
"as might effectually vindicate the Undoubted
"Rights and Privileges of the said Company, and "support the Credit and Interest thereof. And
"as they were in Duty bound to return His Ma-
"jesty most hearty Thanks for the Gracious Assu-
"rance His Majesty had been pleased to give
"them of all due Encouragement, for promo-
"ting the Trade of that Kingdom; that so they "were thereby encouraged humbly to recom-
"mend to the more especial Marks of His Roy-
"al Favour, the concern of the said Company,
"as that Branch of their Trade, in which they
"and the Nation which they represented, had a
"more peculiar Interest.

The Company having thus engaged the Parliament to espouse their Interest, they seconded their Address by a Petition to the King, importing, "That whereas the Parliament had by their
"Address been pleased to recommend the Con-
"cerns of the Company to His Majesty, for sup"porting the Credit and Interest thereof, which "had already suffer'd in a great measure, by rea-
"son of the several Obstructions which they had
"met with in the Prosecution of their Trade;
"particularly by a Memorial given in to the Se-
"nate of Hamburgh, by His Majesty's Minister
"there; These encourag'd them with all Humi-
"lity to lay before His Majesty, That as the said
"Memorial was given in to the Senate of Ham-
"burgh in a most Solemn and Publick Manner, so
"they humbly conceiv'd, that the Effects thereof
"could not be taken away, but by some Intima-
"tion made to the said Senate, that they might
"enter into Commerce with them as freely and
"securely in all respects as they might have done
"before giving in of the said Memorial. That
"in consideration of the Damages sustain'd by
"the Company, His Majesty would be pleas'd
"for their Encouragement, as a Gracious Mark
"of His Royal Favour, to bestow upon them
"the two smallest of the Frigats then lying use-
"less in Bruntisland Harbour: And that in re-
"gard of the Time lost by reason of the said Ob-
"structions, His Majesty would be graciously
"pleas'd to continue the Privileges granted by "Act of Parliament to the said Company, of "being Custom-free for such longer Time as
"His Majesty should think fit.

This Affair occasioning great Heats and Dis- 1698.
contents in the Parliament, the Lord High Commissioner put a stop to their Proceedings towards the beginning of September, and adjourn'd them to the 25*th* of November.

During this Interval, there being a Letter sent from Mr. Stevenson, the Company's Agent at Hamburgh, to the Court of Directors of the Company, on the 4th of November, concerning the Hamburgh Memorial, and another of the 18th of the same Month; this occasion'd another Letter from the Directors of the Company to the Lord Seafield, Secretary of State, wherein they declar'd, "That they had by Order of the Council-
"General of their Company, transmitted the Co-
"pies of Two Letters receiv'd from their Com-
"pany's Agent at Hamburgh to his Lordship; up-
"on the reading whereof the Day before, at a "Meeting of the said Council-General, they "were not a little surpriz'd at the Contents, con-
"sidering the many repeated Assurances they had
"formerly by Letters and Word of Mouth, and
"even in Parliament, That the King had given
"Orders to His Minister at Hamburgh, with Re-
"lation to the Memorial given in to the Senate
"of that City against their Company; but after
"some reasoning thereupon, and considering
"how far his Lordship's frank Undertaking, when
"in Scotland, as well as the Station he was in, did
"engage his best Endeavours to procure the "Company Justice, and vindicate the Compa-
"ny's Rights in that Matter, they had order'd
"them, (the Court of Directors) to transmit the "said Copies to His Lordship, and expected his "Lordship's Answer to that and their late Petiti-
"on to His Majesty, before they remonstrated
"any further with relation thereunto." Hereupon the Secretary, on December 13. ensuing, acquainted the said Court of Directors, by a Letter sent to Sir John Sahaw, President to the said Court, That he would take the first convenient Opportunity he could have to represent the Matter to the King, but could not yet expect to have it, His Majesty being very much employ'd in the Affairs of the English Parliament.

To look over into Ireland, the Parliament met at Dublin on Septemb. 27. and the Lords Justices address'd themselves to Both Houses in this manner.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Affairs of Ireland.
"We have called you together by His Maje-
"sty's Command, as soon as the Season of the "Year would permit us to do it with your Con-
"veniencies, being very desirous to send you
"those Bills which we transmitted the last Year;
"and which are so great Proofs of the Continu-
"ance of His Majesty's Affection to you, that
"whosoever considers them, and those Acts al-
"ready passed this Parliament, will be convinc'd,
"that as you owe to His Majesty your Delive-
"rance and present Safety, so He designs you
"shall likewise owe to Him your firm Establish"ment, and future Prosperity.

"Amongst those Bills there is one for the En-
"couragement of Linnen and Hempen Manu-
"factures. At our first meeting we recommend-
"ed to you that Matter, and we have now en-
"deavour'd to render this Bill practicable and
"useful for that Effect, and as such we recom-
"mend it to you. The Settlement of this Ma-
"nufacture will contribute much to People in
"the Countrey, and will be found much more
"advantageous to this Kingdom than the Woollen
"Manufacture, which being the settled Staple
"Trade of England, from whence all Foreign
"Markets are supplied, can never be encoura-

1698. "ged here for that purpoſe; whereas the Linnen "and Hempen Manufactures will not only be "encouraged, as conſiſtent with the Trade of "England, but will render the Trade of this "Kingdom both uſeful and neceſſary to Eng- "land.

"We hope the great Debt due at Midſummer, "1697. will be paid by what you have formerly "given and deſign'd for that purpoſe. The King "has ſince the Peace thought fit to ſend hither "a part of thoſe Forces who ſerved abroad du- "ring all the War, having disbanded the greateſt "part of thoſe who ſerved here, with a Reſoluti- "on notwithſtanding to continue the Suſiſtence "to the Officers until they can be otherwiſe pro- "vided for. His Majeſty expects that you will "enable Him to ſupport the Charge of the pre- "ſent Eſtabliſhment, which ſhall be laid before "you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, with an "Account of what the Revenue produced for "One Year from the ſaid Midſummer, 1697.

"We muſt inform you, that there hath been "ſo great Remiſneſs in the Management of the "preſent Poll, that very little of that Money is "yet receiv'd. We are ſo ſenſible of the neceſ- "ſity and uſefulneſs of the Barraques, that we "have advanc'd the Money neceſſary to go on "with them, ſo faſt as it could be employ'd, and "hope you will enable us to finiſh all thoſe you "ſhall think neceſſary for eaſing the Country in "Quarters. My Lords and Gentlemen, We have "taken all Occaſions to aſſure His Majeſty of "your Loyalty and Zeal for His Service: You "will judge beſt of the Effects of thoſe Aſſu- "rances, when you conſider His Majeſty's whole "Conduct in every thing which concerns you. "We can never doubt of ſuitable Returns on "your Part, but join with you in hearty Ac- "knowledgments of the Bleſſings we enjoy under "ſo Great and Juſt a Prince; and in earneſt "Prayers to God for the long continuance of "ſo Glorious a Reign, ſo neceſſary for the Eſta- "bliſhment of the Church, and for a laſting "Settlement of your Happineſs and Proſperi- "ty.

Both Houſes Voted Thanks to their Excel- lencies for the Speech; and the Commons expreſs'd theirs in the following Addreſs. "We "the Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes, in Parlia- "ment Aſſembled, being the Repreſentatives of "a People reſtor'd to the free Exerciſe of their "Religion, and free Enjoyment of their Civil "Rights, Liberties and Properties, by His Ma- "jeſty's Courage and Conduct, are deſirous to "lay hold of every Opportunity to expreſs the "Senſe and Gratitude of our Hearts for thoſe in- "eſtimable Benefits. And it is a great Addition "to our Happineſs, to be aſſur'd by your Excel- "lencies, that as His Majeſty has been pleaſed "already to paſs ſeveral Excellent Acts in this "Parliament, ſo there will Bills be laid before "us this Seſſion, which may ſecure us a firm E- "ſtabliſhment and Proſperity for the future: "Such Laws we have long wanted and wiſh'd "for; but it is reſerv'd to His Majeſty's Good- "neſs alone, to be the Author of them to us.

"We pray leave to aſſure your Excellencies, "That we ſhall heartily endeavour to Eſtabliſh "the Linnen Manufacture, and to render the "ſame uſeful to England, as well as advantageous "to this Kingdom; and that we hope to find "ſuch a Temperament in reſpect to the Woollen "Trade here, that the ſame may not be injuri- "ous to England. And as we have to our utmoſt "Abilities, granted Supplies, which have hither- "to with Honour ſupported and defrayed the "Expences of the Eſtabliſhment, we ſhall again "take the ſame into our Conſideration, when "laid before us; and come to ſuch Reſolutions 1698. "thereon, as become Dutiful and Loyal Subjects.

"We are ſenſible how neceſſary the Erecting "Barraques is, for eaſing the Country of Quar- "ters, and pray your Excellencies the ſame may "be proceeded on.

"And that His Majeſty may effectually re- "ceive thoſe Aids already granted Him by this "Parliament, we ſhall take into our En- "quiry, thro' whoſe Defaults or Remiſneſs "the preſent Poll hath been ſo ſlowly paid, "and anſwer'd into the Treaſury: And by all "Dutiful Deportment, will continue to deſerve "the Character your Excellencies have, with "great Truth, repreſented us under to His Ma- "jeſty, of being a People Zealous for His Ma- "jeſty's Service, and firm in our Loyalty to the "Crown of England: For which Juſtice done "us, we owe, and with all Acknowledgments, "return your Excellencies our moſt Humble and "Hearty Thanks." To this Addreſs their Ex- cellencies made the following Anſwer. Gentle- men, There are ſo many Expreſſions of Loyalty and Zeal for His Majeſty's Service in your Addreſs, that We receive it with great Satisfaction; and are very glad, that by Repreſenting it to His Majeſty, We ſhall confirm in Him the good Opinion He hath of your In- tentions for His Service, and the Proſperity of this Kingdom.

On the 1ſt. of October, the ſame Day the afore- mention'd Addreſs was preſented, the Commons read for the firſt time a Bill for Confirming the Eſtates and Poſſeſſions held and enjoy'd under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation; and order'd Heads to be brought in for a Bill for En- couraging of Plantations, and Improvements in that Kingdom. Nine Days after, the Committee ap- pointed to take into Conſideration the Lords Ju- ſtices Speech, reported, That it was their Opinion that a Supply be granted to His Majeſty, and that it was neceſſary that the Woollen Trade of Ireland be Re- gulated: To which Reſolutions the Houſe unani- mouſly agreed. On the 17th. of the ſame Month, a Motion was made, that an Addreſs be preſen- ted to the Lords Juſtices of that Kingdom, to in- tercede with His Majeſty, that the Five Regi- ments of French Proteſtants, then in Ireland, ſhould be Disbanded; but the ſame paſs'd in the Nega- tive. Five Days after, the Commons read the Bill for the better Security of His Majeſty's Perſon and Government; and took particularly into their Conſideration, that Clauſe which had been Vo- ted out by the Majority of Ten Voices, relating to the Roman Catholicks taking the new Oaths; and after a long Debate, threw out the Bill: But at the ſame time, they appointed a Committee to bring in the Heads of a Bill to prevent the Eſtates of Proteſtants to come to Papiſts, and to encourage Perſons to turn Proteſtants. On the 14th. the Committee appointed to conſider of Ways and Means for raiſing the Supply, reported their O- pinion; which was, Firſt, That an Additional Duty be impos'd on the Old and New Drapery of that Kingdom, that ſhould be exported, Free- zes excepted; to which the Houſe agreed: And Secondly, That a Tax be laid on all Beneficial Grants of Lands and Tenements, made by His Majeſty and Her late Majeſty; to which the Houſe diſagreed: And inſtead of it, they after- wards on October 22. reſolv'd to lay a further Tax of 30000 l. upon Lands, over and above the 90000 l. already impoſed upon them. The Bill for Levying theſe Sums being compleated, the Lords Juſtices Adjourned the Parliament, and then took a Progreſs into the Country, in or- der to view the State of ſeveral Places in that Kingdom, and give ſuch Inſtructions as they thought convenient for the Security of the Go- vernment, and the Good of the Subject. As 1698. As to any distinguishing Matters of Religion, we ought to observe that of all sorts of Dissenters, the Quakers, who least deserved the Toleration, made the boldest use of it: They appear'd now in Parliamentary Elections, and gave their Votes without Swearing to their Freeholds; and being in their Faction united, they could bring the weight and the turn in many Elections. Nay, and they seem'd to hope to be Representatives as well as Electors. One of the Members, Mr. Waller, became at last professedly their Friend and Brother: And in his Neighbourhood at Wickham another Quaker, one Archdale, was chosen a Burgess for this Parliament, though he was himself conscious that he could not qualify himself to be a legal Sitting Member; and therefore at the beginning of the Session, he went to the Speaker, and delivered him a Letter Sealed up, wherein he said he had represented his Case to the House, submitting the same to their Pleasure and Determination. This Letter was read Jan. 6. and the Writer, John Archdale, was called in, and Mr. Speaker, by Direction of the House, asked him, Whether he had taken the Oaths, or would take the Oaths appointed to qualify himself to be a Member of that House? To which he answered, That in regard to a Principle of his Religion, he had not taken the Oaths, nor could take them. Upon which, without asking what that Religion was, or why he would suffer himself to be returned, when he knew his own Incapacity; it was only ordered, That a Warrant should be issued for a new Writ, for Electing a Burgess to serve in this present Parliament, for the Borough of Chipping-Wicomb, in the County of Bucks, in the room of the said Mr. Archdale, who hath refused to qualify himself to be a Member of this House, by taking the Oaths by Law appointed for that purpose. And it was indeed somewhat Scandalous to see, when any Bill or Petition was depending, wherein the Quakers had their Account or Design, what Crowding, what Solliciting, what Treating and Trading there was by that sly and artificial Set of Men.

State of Religion.

Boldness of the Quakers.

On Friday, December 23. leave was given to bring in a Bill or Bills for the more effectual discouraging and suppressing Prophaneness, and all manner of Vice and Immorality. And Sir John Philips, Sir Richard Cocks, Mr. Perry, and Mr. Boscawen, were to prepare and bring in the Bill. This pious Care had been recommended by the King, in His Speech at the opening of the Session; but the Omission of it was left for Him to Complain of in His Speech at concluding the same Session. Indeed Immorality and Prophaneness could not be effectually restrain'd, while they were acted over with so much indecent Liberty upon the Stage. The ordinary Plays, instead of answering the good old Design of exposing Vice and recommending the Charms of Virtue, were debauch'd with the wrong Images of things, and with a Language bordering upon Impious and Obscene. This Licentious Vein had grown into a fashion under the Rejoicings of King Ch. II. and was now continued to please the vitiated Palate of the Gay and Loose People, that frequented the Play-Houses for want of Religion and Business. The King, who rarely or never went to those Places of Diversion, was honestly inform'd of the Scandal given in them; and therefore to put some Check upon their Liberty and Lewdness, He commanded the following Order to be sent to Both Play-Houses.

Liberty of the Stage very Scandalous.

His Majesty being inform'd, that notwithstanding an Order made the 4th of June, 1697. by the Earl of Sunderland, then Lord Chamberlain of His Majesty's Household, to prevent the Prophaneness and Immorality of the Stage, several Plays have lately been Acted, containing Expressions contrary to Religion and Good Manners. And whereas the Master of the Revels has represented, that in Contempt of the said Order, the Actors do often neglect to leave out such Prophane and Indecent Expressions, as he has thought proper to be Omitted. These are therefore to signify His Majesty's Pleasure, that you do not hereafter presume to Act any thing in any Play contrary to Religion or Good Manners; as you shall answer it at your utmost Peril. Given under My Hand this 13th of February, 1698. in the Eleventh Year of His Majesty's Reign.

1698.

Pere. Bertie.

An Order was likewise sent by His Majesty's Command to the Master of the Revels, not to License any Plays, containing Expressions contrary to Religion and Good Manners; and to give Notice to the Lord Chamberlain of His Majesty's Household, or in his Absence, to the Vice-Chamberlain, if the Players presume to Act any thing which He has struck out.

It must be confess'd, that the greatest Stain to the late General Peace, was the too little Security provided for the Protestant Interest Abroad: And especially in France, where the King was so far from being brought to any Temper and Indulgence toward his Protestant Subjects, that he seem'd rather to have the Strength and Leisure to Persecute them with greater Fury. This was a sensible Grief to King William; and the more, that He was unable to give them any Redress. However, to shew His Royal Pity and Concern, He ordered a Day of Fast and Solemn Humiliation, for averting of those Judgments which our manifold Sins and Provocations have most justly deserved; and that God would in his Great Mercy and Goodness Relieve and Comfort such as Suffer Abroad for the Protestant Religion. And besides this publick Commiseration of their Sufferings, the King gave Instructions to His Ambassadors in the Court of France to sollicit the Release of many Protestant Ministers and People from the Slavery of the Gallies. But all the Answer that could be obtained from the French Ministry, was this, That they were their Master's own Subjects, and no Prince ought to interpose in His Majesty's way of governing His own People. We ought to remember, that there was another good Intention in the House of Commons, which came to no effect. On Monday, Jan. 2. they Ordered that Leave be given to bring in a Bill, for the Conveying of Lands, Tenements, Rents, Tithes, and Hereditaments, to any College or School, for the Education of Poor Scholars, or Advancement of Learning, or Improvement of any Parsonage, or Vicaridge, or any other Charitable Use; and that Mr. Thirsby and Mr. Foley do prepare and bring in the Bill. This Bill was accordingly presented to the House on Saturday, 7. Jan. and Received and Read the first Time, and was ordered to be Read a Second Time; but it was unhappily dropt.

Sufferings of the Protestants in France.

A good Bill dropt.

On March 27. Mr. Boyle Reported the Resolutions of the Committee of the whole House, to whom it was referred to consider of the State of the Navy; and the House agreed to the Resolutions, and ordered them to be laid before His Majesty in this Humble Address.

1699.

Most Gracious Sovereign.

" We your Majesty's most Dutiful and Loyal " Subjects, the Commons in Parliament Assem- " bled, having taken into our Serious Considera- " tion the State of the Navy, do most humbly " Represent to Your Majesty,

Address of the Commons.

" That the Streights Squadron not Sailing till " September last, was prejudicial to England, and a " great Mismanagement.

" That

1699. "That the Order made by the Commissioners "of the Admiralty the 12*th.* of September, One "Thousand Six Hundred Ninety Five, giving "Henry Priestman, Esq; an Allowance of Ten "Shillings per diem, from the Date of his Com- "mission, as Commander in chief before Sally "in the Year One Thousand Six Hundred Eigh- "ty Four, till the Ship Bonadventure was paid off, "over and above his Pay as Captain of the said "Ship; was very unreasonable, and a Misap- "plication of the Publick Money.

"That the Victualling any of Your Majesty's "Ships by others than by the Victuallers ap- "pointed for that Service, or their Agents, is "contrary to the Course of the Navy, and may "be of ill Consequence.

"That many New and Unnecessary Charges "have, in an extraordinary manner, been intro- "duced into the Navy, contrary to the Rules of "the Navy; which is a great Mismanage- "ment.

"That the Deductions of Poundage taken by "the Pay-Masters of the Navy for Slop-Cloaths, "Dead Mens Cloaths, Tobacco, Chest at Chat- "ham, Chaplain and Surgeon, is without War- "rant, and ought to be accounted for.

"That it is inconsistent with the Service of the "Navy, for the same Person to be one of the "Commissioners for executing the Office of Lord "High Admiral, and Treasurer of the Navy at "the same time.

"And that the Passing any Account of Mo- "neys impressed for the contingent Uses of the "Navy, without regular Vouchers, or such other "Proof as the Nature of the Service will admit, "either with or without a Sign Manual; is con- "trary to the Rules and Methods of the Navy, "and of dangerous Consequence.

"All which we beg leave to lay before Your "Majesty, desiring that You will be graciously "pleased to take effectual Care, that the Misma- "nagements herein complained of, may be pre- "vented for the future.

This Address having been presented by the whole House on Monday April the 3*d.* the King gave this Gracious Answer.

Gentlemen, I will consider Your Address. It is My Desire, that all Sorts of Mismanagements and Irregularities should be prevented or redress'd. You may be assured, I will take the best Care I can in relation to the Navy; the right Management whereof is of so great Concern to this Kingdom.

Conclusion of the Session.

There was nothing else remarkable in this Session, but the Conclusion of it on Thursday May the 4*th.* when His Majesty came to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to

Acts passed.

After the Paſſing ſuch a Multitude of Acts, the King made this Gracious Speech to both Houſes, which ſhew'd He was not fully ſatisfied in their Proceedings.

1699. My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech.

"AT the Opening this Parliament I told you my Opinion was, That you were come "together with Hearts fully diſpoſed to do what "was Neceſſary for the Safety, Honour, and "Happineſs of the Kingdom; and having no-"thing elſe to Recommend to you, I had Rea-"ſon to hope for Unanimity and Diſpatch.

"You have now Sat ſo many Months, that the "Seaſon of the Year, as well as your particular "Affairs, make it reaſonable you ſhould have a "Receſs: I take it for granted, you have Fi-"niſh'd all the Bills which for the preſent you "think requiſite to be Paſs'd into Laws, and I "have given my Aſſent to all you have Preſen-"ted to Me.

"If any thing ſhall be found wanting for Our "Safety, the Support of Publick Credit, by ma-"king good the Faith of the Kingdom, as it "ſtandsEngaged by Parliamentary Securities,and "for Diſcharge of the Debts occaſioned by the "War, or towards the Advancing of Trade, the "Suppreſſing of Vice, and the Employing of "the Poor, which were all the Things I propo-"ſed to your Conſideration when We met firſt; "I cannot doubt but effectual Care will be taken "of them next Winter: And I wiſh no Incon-"venience may happen in the mean time.

And then the Lord-Keeper, by His Majeſty's Command, Prorogued the Parliament until Thurſday the Firſt Day of June next.

Tryal of the Earl of Warwick, and Lord Mohun.

At the latter end of March, Edward Earl of Warwick, and Charles Lord Mohun, being ſeverally Indicted for the Murder of Richard Coot, Eſq; were Tryed by their Peers, in a Court prepared for that purpoſe in Weſtminſter-Hall. The Lord Chancellor of England being conſtituted Lord High Steward upon this Occaſion: The Court being open'd with the uſual Ceremonies, the Tryal of the Earl of Warwick came on, March 28. and laſted till late in the Evening, when the Peers adjourn'd to their own Houſe; and after ſome Debate, the Lords Temporal only return'd to the Court in Weſtminſter-Hall, where they deliver'd their Judgments ſeriatim upon their Honours, and unanimouſly acquitted the Earl of Warwick of the Murder, but found him Guilty of Manſlaughter; who craving the Benefit of his Peerage, according to the Statute in that Caſe provided, was thereupon Diſcharged. The next Day came on in like manner the Tryal of the Lord Mohun, who with great Compoſedneſs and Elocution, made his Innocency ſo well appear, that he was Acquitted by the unanimous Suffrage of the Peers, and lived to be a great Example of Sobriety and Publick Spirit.

Honours and Preferments.

On April 17. the King was pleaſed to confer the Dignity of a Baronet upon John Stanley of Grange-Gormon, in the County of Dublin in Ireland; and within few Days after, the like Honour on Edmund Denton of Hilliſdon, in the County of Bucks, Eſq;. On May 14. the Earl of Jerſey lately return'd from his Embaſſy at the Court of France, was Conſtituted one of His Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, in the room of the Duke of Shrewsbury; who thought himſelf under a neceſſity of travelling abroad to reſtore his Conſtitution impair'd in the Service of the Publick. At the ſame time the Earl of Manchester was appointed to ſucceed the Lord Jerſey, in the French Court. On May the 15*th*. His Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on Edward Haſell of Dalemaine, in the County of Cumberland, Eſq;. On May 18. the King in Council declared Thomas Earl of Pembroke, Lord Preſident

1699. sident of the Council; and receiving the Privy-Seal from his Lordship, delivered it to John Viscount Lonsdale, who took the Oaths and Place as Keeper of the Privy-Seal. The same Evening, Edward Southwell, Esq; was Sworn Clerk of the Council, in the room of William Bridgman, Esq; Deceased: And Abraham Stanyon, Esq; was Sworn Clerk of the Council in Extraordinary. On May 20. His Majesty was pleased to constitute Christopher Codrington, Esq; a Fellow of All-Souls in Oxford, Captain-General and Governor in Chief of His Majesty's Leeward Caribbee-Islands in America, in the room of his Father Colonel Codrington, Deceased; who, during the late War, had perform'd many Signal Services to the Government, and ruin'd several French Plantations in those Parts.

On May 31. His Majesty declared in Council, that intending to go over to Holland for a short time, He had appointed the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor Somers, the Earl of Pembroke, the Lord Lonsdale, the Duke of Devonshire, the Earl of Bridgwater, the Earl of Marlborough, the Earl of Jersey, and Mr. Mountague, to be Lords Justices of England, during His Absence. The next Day the King went from Kensington, between Ten and Eleven at Night, and arrived at Margate the next Day about Noon, and about Three Embark'd for Holland, and within the next Day safely Landed at Oranie-Poulder, from whence he went to the Hague. After He had received the Compliments of the Foreign Ministers, and other Persons of Quality, He assisted at the Assembly of the States-General, and at that of the States in Holland. He then gave His Instructions to Mr. Hill, whom He had appointed to go His Envoy Extraordinary to Savoy, to make His Compliment of Congratulation to that Court, upon the Birth of the Prince of Piedmont, which had been Notified to His Majesty in England, by Count de Maffey, Envoy Extraordinary from the Duke for that purpose. On June 22. N. S. His Majesty left the Hague about Six in the Morning, and having Dined at Cruitzberg, passed in the Afternoon thro' the Cities of Harlem and Amsterdam; from thence to Narden, where viewing all the Fortifications, which he found in great perfection, He lay that Night at Soertdyke, and the next Morning set out for Loo; at which Royal Palace, and that of Dieren, His Majesty spent most part of the Summer, in His usual Diversions of Hunting and Shooting.

Lords Justices.

The King goes to Holland.

Towards the beginning of July, Count Tallard the French Ambassador, and the Baron Schultz, Envoy from the Princes of the House of Lunenburgh, who were lately arriv'd at the Hague from Holland, waited upon His Majesty at Loo, and a few Days after the Sieur Galesky, Ambassador from the King of Poland to the States General, and the Count de Guiscard, Ambassador from France to the Court of Sweden, paid likewise their Respects to His Majesty.

On the 25*th* of August my Lord Paget's Steward, His Majesty's Ambassador at the Port, brought Letters from the Grand Signior to His Majesty, in acknowledgment of His Good Offices in mediating the late Peace at Carlowitz; and not long after the Czar of Muscovy sent a Letter of Thanks to His Majesty upon the same Account. About this time the States of Holland, out of their tender Care for His Majesty's Preservation, put forth a Placaet, requiring that all such Persons that had been declar'd Rebels in England, should forthwith depart their Dominions; and on the 2*d* and 3*d* of September (N. S.) the King reviewed the Dutch Forces encamp'd near Arnheim, and then return'd to Loo, to entertain His Bosom Friend the Old Duke of Zell, who was come there to make His Majesty a Visit, with a Numerous and Magnificent Retinue. 1699.

But nothing deserves more our Attention this Summer than the Contest between the Prince of Conti and the Dutchess of Nemours, about the Succession of Neufchastel, a Protestant Independent City and Principality, bordering upon, and allied to the Switzers, whose Sovereign was the late Duke of Longueville. Now the Parliament of Paris having made a Decree in Favour of that Prince whose Interest was supported by the King of France himself, to whom the Dutchess refus'd to refer the Decision of her Cause: His Highness, to maintain his Pretensions, and to obviate the Designs of his Competitor, went in Person to Neufchastel, where he did all that lay in his Power by Letters, Memorials, Caresses and large Promises, to draw the States of that Principality, and their Confederates the Swiss Cantons to own him for the next and immediate Successor to the Duke. Thereupon King William, who set up for the Universal Heir of the House of Longueville, order'd Mr. Hervart, His Envoy in Switzerland, immediately to repair to Neufchastel, and to present the following Memorial to the Prince of Conti.

King William's Memorial to the Prince of Conti.

"The Orders of the King of Great Britain, my "Master, having brought me hither, my first Bu-"siness is to pay my Respects to your Highness, "and to assure you of my most humble Services. "You are not ignorant, I assure my self, that His "Majesty lays Claim to the County of Neufcha-"stel, and its Dependencies; His Ministers at "the Treaty of Ryswick having acquainted His "most Christian Majesty's Plenipotentiaries with "it. Nevertheless, His Majesty, whose Pleasure "it was, that those Countries should be expresly "comprehended in the Treaty of Peace, has been "further pleas'd, for the better securing the Tran-"quility of that Principality, to defer the ma-"king out His Right, tho' very lawful, till the "Death of Madam the Dutchess of Nemours, who "has been invested with that Sovereignty for "these five Years last past.

"But understanding the present Movements "there, occasion'd by your Highness's Pretensions, "His Majesty has thought it to be His Interest, "to declare more expresly by His Ministers at the "Court of France, His Right to that Sovereignty, "hoping that the most Christian King would "observe an exact Impartiality in that Affair; "and that He would Leave it to the States, who "are Real Judges of it, so soon as a Convocati-"on should be summon'd together, after the Death "of the Dutchess of Nemours: And that His Ma-"jesty thought it reasonable that your Highness "should then propose your Pretensions as well "as the rest of the Competitors concern'd. The "Assurance which His most Christian Majesty's "Ministers thereupon gave of His Impartiality, "are so positive that the King my Master, "thought He might remain in silence till a more "convenient time to settle the Justice of His "Claims.

"But the Design form'd by your Highness, pre-"sently to summon a Tribunal, during the Life "of Madam de Nemours, obliges me, according "to His Majesty's Orders, to represent to your "Highness, That His Majesty cannot but look "upon such a Convocation as prejudicial to His "Right, contrary to the Laws and Customs of "the Countrey, and a Means to banish Peace "and Tranquility from thence.

"I hope your Highness will be pleased seriously "to consider, That I have the Honour to lay be-"fore you in His Majesty's Name, and to vouch-"safe that I may add to what I have said, the As-"surance of the high Value, and profound Re-"spect I have for your Highness. Mr.

1699. Mr. Hervart did at the same time present another Memorial to the Dutchess of Nemours, wherein in his Master's Name, he communicated to her what he had represented to the Prince of Conti; assuring her Grace of His Majesty's Favour and Protection. The Dutchess and the States of Neufchastel, expres'd great Acknowledgments of His Majesty's interposing in this Affair: And as for the Prince, he made a very respectful Answer to the forementioned Memorial, and by Direction from the French Court, immediately return'd to Paris: His most Christian Majesty, like a Subtile Politician, not thinking it proper to enter into any Dispute with the King of England, but rather to shew Him all manner of Deference, the better to engage Him in a New Treaty of Partition, which was become necessary since the Death of the Electoral Prince of Bavaria, which happen'd this Year on the 6th of February, N. S.

The Duke of Cell having staid about a Month with King William, went from Loo on the 3*d* of October, (N.S.) on his Return home; and a few Days after, His Majesty came to the Hague, where He assisted at the Assembly of the States General, when the State of the Forces for the ensuing Year was presented to them, and order'd to be sent to the several Provinces.

On the 26th of the same Month His Majesty embark'd in the Maese on board the William and Mary Yatcht, and the next Day landed at Margate, lay that Night at Canterbury, and on the 18th (O.S.) arriv'd at Kensington.

On May 20. the Lord Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen and Citizens of London went to Kensington to congratulate His Majesty's Safe Return. His Majesty express'd His Favourable Acceptance of their Affections, and did earnestly recommend to them the Careful and Vigorous Execution of the Laws against all Prophaneness, Debauchery and Ill Livers: And also, that Effectual Care be taken to provide for the Poor, so that they may not be necessitated to wander about the Streets for Relief. And then His Majesty was pleas'd to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Charles Duncomb and Jeffry Jeffreys, Esquires, the present Sheriffs, and William Withers, Esq; Alderman. On the same Day Don Lewis d' Achunha, Envoy Extraordinary from the King of Portugal, had Audience of His Majesty to notifie the Death of the Queen of Portugal.

Joy and Congratulation.

On the 24th the Parliament met at Westminster, and was further prorogued to the 16th of November, on which day the Members of Both Houses were required by His Majesty's Proclamation to give their Attendance.

On October 25. the King conferred the Office of Lord Chamberlain of His Houshold (which had been some time vacant) upon Charles Duke of Shrewsbury, to whom His Majesty delivered the Key and White-Staff. The 4*th* of November being His Majesty's Birth Day, was observed with great Solemnity: His Highness the Duke of Glocester went in the Morning to Kensington, to make his Compliment to His Majesty on this Occasion. Their Royal Highnesses the Princess and Prince of Denmark dined with His Majesty at Kensington, and in the Evening the King and the whole Court came to St. James's, and were entertain'd with a Ball by the Princess; the Cities of London and Westminster shewing their Universal Joy with Fire-Works, Illuminations, and Ringing of Bells.

Parliament meet.

On Thursday, 16 November, the Parliament met at Westminster, and His Majesty with usual Solemnity made this Speech to Both Houses.

1699. King's Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I Hope you will not think I have called you "out of your Countries too soon, if you con- "sider, that Our Common Security requires a "farther Provision should be made for the Safety "of the Kingdom by Sea and Land, before We "are at the end of what was granted for that "purpose the last Session. And when you enter "upon this Business, I believe you will think it "necessary to take care of the Repairs of the "Ships, and of the Fortifications; without which "Our Fleet cannot be safe when it is in Har- "bour.

"I cannot omit to put you in mind of another "Matter in which so great a number of my Sub- "jects is concern'd, and wherein the Honour of "the Kingdom, and the Faith of Parliaments is "so far engag'd, that Our future Security seems "to depend upon it; I mean, the making good "the Deficiencies of the Funds, and the discharg- "ging the Debts contracted by reason of the "War.

And till We may be so happy to see the Pub- "lick Debts paid, I shall hope that no Session "will end, without something done towards les- "sening them. While I am speaking to you on "this Head, I think my self obliged to mention "with a very particular Concern, a Debt which "is owing to the Prince of Denmark, the State "whereof I have order'd to be laid before "you.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

"These things are of such importance, that I "must earnestly recommend them to your Con- "sideration, and desire you to provide the Ne- "cessary Supplies.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"There is nothing I could more rejoice in, "than that I were not under the Necessity of so "often asking Aids of My People; but as the "Reason of it is evident, because the Funds for- "merly apply'd to defray the Publick Expence, "are now anticipated for payment of the Debts "of the Kingdom; so it is My Satisfaction, that "you all see that nothing of what is demanded, "is for any Personal Use of Mine: And I do faith- "fully assure You, That no Part of what is gi- "ven shall be diverted from any Purpose for which "it is designed.

"I believe the Nation is already sensible of the "Good Effects of Peace, by the manifest Increase "of Trade, which I shall make it My Business to "encourage by all Means in My Power. Pro- "bably it might receive an Advantage, if some "Good Bill were prepared for the more effectu- "al preventing and punishing Unlawful and Clan- "destine Trading, which does not only tend to "defraud the Publick, but prejudice the Fair "Merchant, and discourage Our Own Manu- "factures.

"The Increase of the Poor is become a Bur- "then to the Kingdom, and their Loose and Idle "Life does in some measure contribute to that "Depravation of Manners which is complain'd "of (I fear with too much Reason). Whether "the Ground of this Evil be from Defects in the "Laws already made, or in the Execution of "them, deserves your Consideration. As it is "an Indispensible Duty, that the Poor, who are "not able to help themselves, should be main- "tain'd, so I cannot but think it extremely des- "rable, that such as are able and willing, should "not want Employment; and such as are obsti- "nate and unwilling, should be compell'd to La- "bour.

1699. My Lords and Gentlemen,

" I have a full Aſſurance of the Good Affe-
" ctions of my People, which I ſhall endeavour
" to preſerve by a conſtant Care of their Juſt
" Rights and Liberties; by Maintaining the E-
" ſtabliſhed Religion, by ſeeing the Courſe of
" Juſtice kept Steady and Equal, by Countenan-
" cing Virtue, and Diſcouraging Vice, and by " declining no Difficulties or Dangers where
" their Welfare and Proſperity may be concern-
" ed. Theſe are my Reſolutions; and I am
" perſuaded that you are come together with
" Purpoſes on your Part ſuitable to thoſe on " Mine. Since then Our Aims are only for the " General Good, let Us act with Confidence in
" One Another; which will not fail, by God's
" Bleſſing, to make Me a Happy King, and you
" a Great and Flouriſhing People.

This Excellent Speech ſeem'd to reliſh of the Diſſatisfaction which the King had expreſs'd upon the Proceedings of the Commons, when He laſt parted with them. But theſe gentle Intimations of Diſpleaſure ſerv'd to irritate, rather than to mitigate a great Number of Perſons, who did not love to ſeem to be Accus'd, nor ſo much as Suſpected, whatever Occaſions might be given for it: And therefore the Commons, upon a Conſideration of His Majeſty's Speech, agreed to offer this Humble Addreſs to the King.

Addreſs of the Commons.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

" We Your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal
" Subjects, the Commons in Parliament Aſſem-
" bled, being highly ſenſible, that nothing is more
" Neceſſary for the Peace and Welfare of this " Kingdom, the Quieting the Minds of Your
" People, and Diſappointing the Deſigns of Your
" Enemies, than a mutual and entire Confidence
" between Your Majeſty and Your Parliament,
" do eſteem it our greateſt Misfortune, that af-
" ter having ſo amply provided for the Security
" of Your Majeſty and Your Government, both
" by Sea and Land, any Jealouſie or Diſtruſt
" hath been raiſed of our Duty and Affections
" to Your Sacred Majeſty and Your People;
" and beg Leave humbly to Repreſent to Your
" Majeſty, That it will greatly conduce to the " Continuing and Eſtabliſhing an Entire Confi-
" dence between Your Majeſty and Your Par" liament, that You would be pleaſed to ſhew
" Marks of Your high Diſpleaſure towards all
" ſuch Perſons who have, or ſhall preſume to
" Miſrepreſent their Proceedings to Your Ma-
" jeſty.

" And Your Commons (having likewiſe a due
" ſenſe of the great Care and Concern Your
" Majeſty has always expreſs'd for Preſerving
" and Maintaining the Religion, Rights, and " Liberties of Your People, in Defence of which
" Your Majeſty hath ſo often expoſed Your
" Royal Perſon) will uſe their utmoſt Care and
" Endeavours to Prevent and Diſcourage all
" Falſe Rumours and Reports reflecting upon
" Your Majeſty and Your Government, where-
" by to create any Miſunderſtandings between
" You and Your Subjects.

The King was ſo far from Expoſtulating upon the Senſe of this Addreſs, that He wiſely ſeem'd to take it on the ſofter Side, and expreſs'd His Thanks for it in a ſingular Air of Lenity and Good Nature.

King's Anſwer.

Gentlemen,

" My Parliaments have done ſo great Things
" for Me, and I have upon all proper Occaſions
" expreſs'd ſo great a Senſe of their Kindneſs,
" and my Opinion has been ſo often declar'd, 1699.
" that the Happineſs of an Engliſh King depends " upon an entire good Correſpondence between
" Him and His Parliament, that it can't ſeem
" ſtrange for Me to aſſure you, that no Perſons
" have ever yet dared to go about to Miſrepre-
" ſent to Me the Proceedings of either Houſe.
" Had I found any ſuch, they would have im-
" mediately felt the higheſt Marks of my Diſ-
" pleaſure. It is a Juſtice I owe not only to
" my Parliaments, but to every one of My Sub" jects, to Judge of them by their Actions: And
" this Rule I will ſteadily purſue. If any ſhall
" hereafter attempt to put Me on other Methods,
" by Calumnies or Miſrepreſentations, they will " not only fail of Succeſs, but ſhall be looked " upon, and treated by Me as My worſt Ene-
" mies.

Gentlemen,

" I am pleaſed to ſee by your Addreſs, that
" you have the ſame Thoughts of the great Ad-
" vantages which will enſue to the Kingdom
" from our mutual Confidence, as I expreſſed to
" Both Houſes at the Opening of the Seſſion.
" I take very kindly the Aſſurance you give Me,
" of uſing your utmoſt Care and Endeavour to " prevent and diſcourage all falſe Rumours and " Reports reflecting upon Me and My Govern-
" ment: And I faithfully Promiſe you, that no
" Actions of Mine ſhall give a juſt Ground for " any Miſunderſtanding between Me and My " People.

Commiſſioners for Forfeited Eſtates in Ireland.

The Commons in the laſt Seſſion of Parliament, had appointed Seven Commiſſioners for taking an Account of the Forfeited Eſtates in Ireland; the Earl of Drogheda, Francis Anneſley, Eſq; John Trenchard, Eſq; James Hamilton, Eſq; Henry Langford, Eſq; Sir Richard Leving, and Sir Francis Brewſter: Who having Executed their Commiſſion with great Application and Fidelity, they fram'd a Report which was Preſented to the Commons by Mr. Anneſley, and wherein they ſet forth:

" That they met with great Difficulties in
" their Enquiry, which were occaſioned chiefly
" by the backwardneſs of the People of Ireland
" to give any Information, out of fear of the " Grantees, whoſe Diſpleaſure in that Kingdom
" was not eaſily born; and by Reports induſtri-
" ouſly ſpread and believ'd, that their Enquiry
" would come to nothing. Nevertheleſs, it ap-
" pear'd to them, that the Perſons Outlaw'd in " England, ſince the 13*th.* of February, 1688. on " account of the late Rebellion there, amounted
" in Number to Fifty Seven, and in Ireland to
" Three Thouſand Nine Hundred Twenty one.
" That all the Lands in the ſeveral Counties in " Ireland belonging to the forfeiting Perſons, as " far as they could reckon, made 1060792 Acres,
" worth per Annum 211623 l. which by Compu-
" tation of Six Years Purchaſe for a Life, and
" Thirteen Years for the Inheritance, came to
" the full Value of 2685130 l. That ſome of
" thoſe Lands had been Reſtor'd to the old Pro-
" prietors, by Virtue of the Articles of Lime-
" rick and Galloway, and by His Majeſty's Fa-
" vour, and by Reverſal of Outlawries, and Roy-
" al Pardons, obtain'd chiefly by Gratifications to
" ſuch Perſons as had abus'd His Majeſty's Roy-
" al Bounty and Compaſſion." Beſide theſe Re-ſtitutions, which they thought to be corruptly procur'd, they gave an Account of Seventy Six Grants and Cuſtodiams, under the Great Seal of Ireland; as to the Lord Romney, three Grants now in Being, containing 49517 Acres; to the Earl of Albemarle in two Grants, 108633 Acres, in Poſſeſſion and Reverſion; to William Bentinck, 1699. tinck Esq; Lord Woodstock, 135820 Acres of Land; to the Earl of Athlone Two Grants containing 26480 Acres; to the Earl of Galloway One Grant of 36148 Acres, &c. wherein they observed, that the Estates so mention'd did not yield so much to the Grantees as they were here valued at; because as most of them had abused His Majesty in the real Value of their Estates, so their Agents had Imposed on them, and had either Sold or Let the greatest part of those Lands at an under Value. But after all Deductions and Allowances there yet remain'd 1699343 l. 14*s.* which they lay before the Commons as the gross Value of the Estates since the 13*th.* of day of February and not Restored. Besides a Grant under the Great Seal of Ireland, Dated Thirtieth Day of May, 1695. passed to Mrs. Elizabeth Villiers, now Countess of Orkney, of all the private Estates of the late King James, (except some small Part in Grant to the Lord Athlone) containing 95649 Acres, worth per Annum 25995 l. 18*s.* value, Total 331943 l. 9*s.* Concluding, that there was payable out of this Estate, Two Thousand Pounds per Annum to the Lady Susanna Bellasis, and also One Thousand Pounds per Annum to Mrs Godfrey for their Lives; and that almost all the Old Leases determin'd in May, 1701. and then this Estate would answer the Value abovemention'd, —— Sign'd Francis Annesly, John Trenchard, James Hamilton, and Henry Langford.

Bill for Forfeited Estates in Ireland.

The Commons having presented and examined this Report, came to an unanimous Resolution, 15*th.* of December, That a Bill be brought in to apply all the Forfeited Estates and Interests in Ireland, and all Grants thereof, and of the Rents and Revenues belonging to the Crown within that Kingdom, since the 13th. of February 1688. to the Use of the Publick; and order'd a Clause to be inserted in that Bill, for erecting a Judicature for determining Claims touching the said Forfeited Estates. They likewise resolved, That they would not receive any Petition from any Person whatsoever, touching the said Grants or Forfeited Estates; and that they would take into Consideration the great Services performed by the Commissioners appointed to enquire into the forfeited Estates of Ireland.

Uneasie to the King.

'Tis easy to imagine how ill these Proceedings were relished at Court; but 'tis hardly to be conceived, how uneasie the King was about the following Passage: While the Commissioners appointed by Parliament, were discharging their Trust in Ireland, Mr. M----- a Member of the House of Commons, sent them a Letter (of his own private Motion) wherein he directed them, to make a separate Article of the Lady Orkney's Grants, because that might reflect upon Some body: Meaning the King. Another Member having learned the Contents of that Letter from Mr. M----- and being zealous to vindicate His Majesty's Honour, which he thought was struck at in that Letter, Complain'd of it to the House. Being press'd to tell his Author, he at first excused himself, alledging he was under an Obligation, not to reveal what had past in a Private Conversation; But the House threatning to send him to the Tower, he named the Person from whom he had this Report; which Person, who was also a Member of the House, deny'd flatly, that he had ever mention'd any such thing. Thus the affectionate Stickler for His Majesty being left in the Lurch, the House on January the 15*th.* Resolved, That the said Report was False and Scandalous: And a Motion being made That the Four Commissioners for Irish Forfeitures, who sign'd the Report presented to the House, had acquitted themselves in the Execution of that Commission with Understanding and Integrity; a warm Debate arose thereupon; which was adjourn'd to the next day, when the Commons Resolved, That the said Commissioners had acquitted themselves in the Execution of their Commission, with Understanding, Courage and Integrity; That Sir Richard Leving, one other of the Commissioners, had been the Author of the groundless and Scandalous Aspersion cast upon the Four Commissioners beforementioned; and that the said Sir Richard Leving be committed Prisoner to the Tower of London for the said Offence. Two days after, the Bill for Applying the Irish Forfeitures to the Use of the Publick was Read a Second time, and committed to a Committee of the whole House: Upon this Occasion, the Courtiers made a Motion, and caus'd the Question to be put, That the said Committee be impower'd to receive a Clause for Reserving a Proportion of the Forfeited Estates in Ireland, to the Disposal of His Majesty; which passing in the Negative, it was Resolved on January the 18*th. That the Advising, Procuring and Passing the said Grants of the Forfeited and other Estates in* Ireland, had been the occasion of Contracting great Debts upon the Nation, and levying heavy Taxes on the People; That the advising and passing the said Grants, was highly reflecting on the King's Honour; And that the Officers and Instruments concern'd in the Procuring and Passing these Grants, had highly fail'd in the Performance of their Trust and Duty. 1699.

Business of Supply.

By this time, the Commons were enter'd upon the Business of the Supply, and had at several times made the Following Resolutions: That the Sum of 76383 l. now remaining in the Exchequer upon the Account of the Subsidy of Tonnage and Poundage, with what should arise from the same Fund, to the 25*th.* of December, should be applied towards the Payment of Seamen's Wages; that whosoever shall advance or lend a Sum, not exceeding 220000 l. for the further Paying of Seamen's Wages should be repaid the same, with Interest, at Five Pound per Cent. per Annum out of the First Aid to be granted this Session. That Seven Thousand Men be a Complement for the Sea Service for the Year 1700. for Thirteen Months; And that the usual Pay of Four Pounds per Month, be allowed for maintaining the said Seven Thousand Men, including the Ordnance for Sea Service. That 18000 l. be allow'd for Bounty Money to the Officers of the Fleet: And 90000*l.* for the Extraordinary of the Navy: That 300000 l. be granted to his Majesty for Maintaining Guards and Garisons, and 25000 l. for the Office of Ordnance, for the Year 1700. and that Half-Pay be allow'd to the Disbanded Officers, not otherwise provided for: which last Vote was principally owing to Mr. How.

Ways and Means.

In order to raise the Supply already granted, the Commons resolved, to lay a Tax of Two Shillings in the Pound for One Year, upon all Lands, Pensions, Offices, and Personal Estates; and at the same time, January 26. they appointed a day to consider of the Grants made since the settling the Civil List upon his Majesty. Upon the 1*st.* of February, the Bill for Levying the Two Shillings Aid was Read a Second time, and committed to a Committee of the whole House, to whom the Bill for resuming the Forfeited Estates in Ireland was also committed; and who were order'd to join both the said Bills together, and to receive a Clause of Credit, and another of Appropriation. Not many days after, the House being inform'd that several Grantees of Forfeited Estates in Ireland, were felling Timber, and committing other Wastes, they resolved, that such Persons should be answerable for the same, and directed the Committee of the whole House to insert a Clause in the forementiond

1699. Bill of Resumption for that purpose. On February the 6th. the Commons resolved to grant a Supply to His Majesty for the discharging the Debt due to the Army.

Towards the middle of February, the Commons in a Grand Committee consider'd the State of the Nation, and a Motion being made, and the Question put, That the Procuring or Obtaining of Grants of Estates belonging to the Crown, by any publick Minister concern'd in the Directing or Passing such Grants, to or for their own Use or Benefit, whilst the Nation lay under the heavy Taxes of the late War, was highly injurious to His Majesty, and prejudicial to the State, and a Violation of the Trust repos'd in them; the Court Party carried it in the Negative; but at the same time, they gave their Consent to an Order for bringing in a Bill, To Resume the Grants of all Lands and Revenues of the Crown, and all Pensions granted by the Crown since the 6th. of February, 1684. and for applying the same to the use of the Publick: Which Order was however of no Effect, by Reason it touch'd many of King James's Friends. On February the 15*th.* the Commons proceeded to consider further of the State of the Nation; and upon a very hot and long Debate, it was resolved, That an Address be presented to His Majesty, representing to Him the Resolutions of this House of the 18th. of January last, relating to Grants of the Forfeited Estates in Ireland. The same day the Commons resolv'd "That a Supply be granted to His Majesty, towards the payment of his Proportion of the "Debt owing to the Prince of Denmark, and "the Moneys to be raised, to be laid out in this "Kingdom, and settled upon the Prince and "Princess, and their Issue, according to their "Marriage Agreement; That an Address be "presented to His Majesty, That He would "please to use His Endeavours to procure other "Princes and States to pay their Proportions of "the Debt due to his Royal Highness. And that "a Supply be also granted to His Majesty, for "the carrying on the Coinage of the Gold and "Silver of this Kingdom; for continuing the "Contracts and Circulating Exchequer Bills for "One Year longer; for making good both the "Deficiencies of the Aid of Three Shillings in "the Pound, granted in the Eighth Year of His "Majesty's Reign; of the Duty on Paper and "Parchment, granted the same Session of Parliament; of Malt Tickets, and of the Quarterly Poll granted in the Ninth Year of His "Majesty's Reign; for paying off the Debt due "for Transport Service; and lastly, for the "payment of the Debt due to the Navy, and "the Sick and Wounded Seamen." Towards raising of which Supplies, the Commons resolv'd on February 17. That only one Moiety of the several Duties paid upon the Importation of Tallow-Candles from Ireland, be drawn back upon the Exportation thereof. That the Forfeited Estates and other Interests in Ireland, to be vested in Trustees, for the benefit of the Publick, be applied towards Satisfaction of the said Debt to the Army, the Transport Debts, and Tallies or Tickets upon Deficient Funds: And that a farther Duty be laid upon Wrought Silks, Bengals, and Stuffs mix'd with Silks, or Herba, of the Manufacture of Persia, China, or East-India; and all Callicoes Painted, Died, Printed, or Stain'd there, until the 30*th of* September, 1701.

King's Answer to the Commons.

On the 21*st* of February the Commons in a Body having waited upon the King, with their Address of the 15*th* of that Month, in relation to the Irish Forfeitures, His Majesty told them; "Gentlemen, I was not only led by Inclination, "but thought my Self obliged in Justice, to Reward those who had serv'd well, and particularly in the Reduction of Ireland, out of the "Estates Forfeited to me, by the Rebellion there. —— The long War in which we were "engag'd, did occasion great Taxes, and has "left the Nation much in Debt; and the taking "just and effectual Ways for lessening that Debt, "and supporting publick Credit, is what, in my "Opinion, will best contribute to the Honour, "Interest, and Safety of the Kingdom. 1699.

The Speaker having Five days after reported this Answer, the Commons were so provok'd by it, that they Resolved, That whosoever Advis'd it, had used his utmost Endeavour to create a Misunderstanding and Jealousy between the King and His People. The same day the Commons Resolv'd, That towards raising the Supply, a Duty be laid upon all Hops imported into Ireland, except such as are of the growth of this Kingdom. And on the First of March, Colonel Granville reported from the Committee of the whole House, who had consider'd the State of His Majesty's Revenue, That it was their Opinion, That there had been a great Loss in His Majesty's Revenue of Excise, to the prejudice of the Publick To which Resolution the House Agreed; and moreover Resolv'd, That it be an Instruction to the Committee of the whole House, to whom the Land Tax and Irish Forfeiture Bills were committed, that they receive a Clause to enable His Majesty, for the Improvement of the Revenue, to let to Farm the Duties of Excise, if He thought fit. And that it be an Instruction also, that no Member of this House be concern'd in the Farming or Managing the Revenue of Excise.

On the 7*th* of March, the Commons having taken into consideration the Services perform'd by the Commissioners appointed to enquire into the Irish Forfeitures, Resolv'd, That the Sum of One Thousand Pounds be paid to the Earl of Drogheda, Francis Annesley, John Trenchard, James Hamilton, Henry Langford, Esq; and to James Hooper, Esq; Secretary to the Commissioners; and the Sum of 500 l. only to Sir Richard Leving, and Sir Francis Brewster, Two of the said Commissioners, in consideration of their Expences; which Sums were order'd to be paid out of the Irish Forfeitures. On March 12. The Commons made an end of the business of the Supply; having agreed to these Resolutions. That the Superplusage over and above 700000 l. of this Year's produce of the Subsidies, Duties, and small Branches of the Revenue, appropriated to the Service of His Majesty's Houshold, be applied for the Service of Year 1700. That towards the further raising the Supply already granted, the Sum of 60000 Pounds be raised, by enlarging the time to purchase Annuities; That the Additional Duties of 25 l. per Cent. on all French Goods, and 25 l. per Cent. on all French Wines and Brandies, the Duty of Five Shillings per Tun upon all French Shipping, the Plantation Duties, and Duty of one Shilling and Tenpence per pound weight upon all wrought Silks, be applied for the Service of this present Year; That a further Duty to be laid upon all Wrought Silks, Bengalls, and Stuffs mix'd with Silk or Herba, of the Manufacture of Persia, China, or East-India, and all Callicoes painted or stained there, imported before 30th of September, 1701. be 15 l. per Cent. upon the gross Sales at the Candle, over and above the Duties now payable for the same. And that a further Duty of 15 l. per Cent. be laid upon all Muslins imported. Which they order'd to be form'd into a Bill, directing the Committee appointed for that purpose, to bring Two Clauses into the Bill; one for a draw-back of the Duties upon East-India Goods, upon the Exportation thereof: And another for the Importing Custom-free, a certain quantity of Paper for the Printing Dr. Allix's Ecclesiastical History; which was to consist of several Volumes in Folio.

Acts passed.

On February 9th. the King came to the House

1699. of Peers, and ſending for the Commons, He gave the Royal Aſſent to a Bill, Entituled, An Act for taking away the Bounty Money for exporting Corn from the Ninth day of February, One thouſand ſix hundred ninety nine, to the Twenty ninth day of September, One thouſand ſeven hundred. And to a private Act, for enabling Thomas Noble, Gentleman, to ſell the undivided third part of the Manner of Foxton, in the County of Leiceſter, when he ſhall have ſettled other Lands (an entire Eſtate) of a greater Value to the ſame Uſes.

The Grand Committee for Trade, upon the Repreſentations made by the Merchants, of ſeveral Piracies committed in the Eaſt-Indies, by Captain Kidd and his Crew, examin'd the Copies of ſeveral Commiſſions given to the ſaid Kidd; of His Majeſty's Warrant for a Grant of Pyrates Goods to the Earl of Bellamont and others; of an Indenture between His Majeſty and the ſaid Earl; of a Letter from the Lords of the Treaſury to that Earl, about ſending over the Treaſure ſeiz'd in Kidd's Ship; of another Letter to the ſaid Earl, about ſeizing of Kidd; of ſeveral Papers receiv'd from the Earl of Bellamont; and of a Petition of the Old Eaſt-India Company, preſented to the King on the 21*ſt.* of September, 1699. And then they brought in a Bill for the more effectual Suppreſſion of Piracy. And on March 16*th*, upon Information that Captain Kidd was ſent for home, from the Weſt-Indies, the Commons Addreſs'd the King, That the ſaid Captain Kidd might not be Tryed, Diſcharg'd, or Pardon'd until the next Seſſion of Parliament. And that the Earl of Bellamont, Governour of New-England, might tranſmit over all Inſtructions and Papers taken with or relating to the ſaid Kidd. With which His Majeſty complied.

Other Proceedings in Paliament not grateful to the King.

Some other things were done in this Seſſion that could not be grateful to the Court. A Bill was ſet on foot in the Houſe of Commons for qualifying Juſtices of the Peace; and a Committee appointed to inſpect the Commiſſions of the Peace, and Commiſſions for Deputy-Lieutenants as they now ſtood, and as they were for ſeven Years laſt paſt. This Committee having made Report to the Houſe, that not only many Perſons diſſenting from the Church of England, but Men of Small Fortunes, and who conſequently had an entire Dependence on the Court, were put into thoſe Places; the Commons Reſolv'd, That an Addreſs be made to His Majeſty, that it would much conduce to the Service of His Majeſty, and the Good of this Kingdom, that Gentlemen of Quality and good Eſtates be reſtor'd and put into the Commiſſions of the Peace and Lieutenancy; and that Men of Small Eſtates be neither continued, nor put in the ſaid Commiſſions. When this Addreſs was preſented by the whole Houſe, the King gave this Favourable Anſwer.

Addreſs of the Commons about Juſtices of Peace.

King's Anſwer.

Gentlemen,

I am of the Opinion, That Men of the beſt Quality and Eſtates are moſt proper to be intruſted in the Commiſſions of the Peace and Lieutenancy, and Directions ſhall be given accordingly.

With which Anſwer the Commons were ſo well pleaſed, that they preſented their Humble Thanks in a Body to His Majeſty; who thereupon took occaſion to ſay farther:

Gentlemen,

I ſhall always endeavour to do what is for the Good of the Publick.

Addreſs about the Allies.

Another Umbrage of Diſcontent was taken at the Allies not bearing a Proportion to England in ſome of the Common Burthens and Engagements. They preſented an Addreſs to His Majeſty about the beginning of March, That His Majeſty would uſe His Endeavours to procure other Princes and States to pay their Proportions of the Debt due to the Prince of Denmark. To which the King anſwer'd in an obliging manner; That He would uſe His utmoſt Endeavours for it. 1699.

Growth of Popery.

The moſt reaſonable of all Jealouſies and Fears, was the Growth of Popery. On Feb. 21. the Clergy of the County Palatine of Lancaſter had preſented a Petition to the Commons of England, Praying, "That ſuch Effectual Methods as ſhould "be thought fit, might be uſed to ſtop the Growth "of Popery, and prevent the miſchievous Effects "that were otherwiſe likely to be produced by "the Inſolent Behaviour and Attempts of Popiſh "Prieſts." Whereupon Mr. How reported from the Committee appointed to enquire how far the Laws againſt Popiſh Recuſants had been put in execution, and to propoſe what further Remedies were neceſſary to ſuppreſs the Growth of Popery in theſe Kingdoms, and to ſtrengthen the Proteſtant Religion; "That it did not appear to them "that the Laws againſt Popiſh Recuſants had ge"nerally been put in execution: That it was "their Opinion, That a further Reward be gi"ven to ſuch Perſons as ſhould Diſcover and "Convict Popiſh Prieſts or Jeſuits: That it would "be a further Remedy againſt the Growth of Po"pery, that perpetual Impriſonment be inflicted "upon Popiſh Prieſts, and Popiſh School-Maſters, "convict upon the Oath of one or more Witneſ"ſes: That no Perſon born after the 25th Day "of March, 1700, being a Papiſt, be capable of "inheriting any Title of Honour or Eſtate with"in the Kingdom of England, Dominion of Wales, "or Town of Berwick upon Tweed: And that no "Papiſt be capable of purchaſing any Lands, Te"nements, or Hereditaments in the ſaid King"dom, either in his own Name, or in the Name "of any Perſon in Truſt for him." The Commons having agreed to theſe Reſolutions, order'd a Bill to be brought in thereupon; which Bill ſoon after received the Royal Aſſent.

Scotch Eaſt-India Company.

Beſides the Affairs of England, the Remonſtrances of the Scotch Eaſt-India Company did much perplex His Majeſty's Thoughts. On Dec. 4. 1699, the Council General of that Company writ a Letter to the Scotch Secretary of State in England, acquainting his Lordſhip, "That they had pre"vail'd upon the Lord Bazil Hamilton to go up "with an Addreſs to His Majeſty, in behalf of "Captain Robert Pinkarton, and thirty more, who "were wrongfully detain'd Priſoners at Carthagena ſince the beginning of February (then) laſt "paſt; and, as they were inform'd, moſt inhu"manly treated. That they were daily impor"tuned by their Relations (who were very con"ſiderable) for their Relief; and it was of great "Concern to the Company, that ſomething ma"terial ſhould be done ſpeedily therein, not only "for the ſake of the ſaid Priſoners, but that "others might thereby ſee they did not abandon "the Intereſt of ſuch as engag'd themſelves in "their Company's Service. Wherefore they in"treated his Lordſhip, That he would be pleaſed "to introduce the Lord Baſil Hamilton to the "King, in preſenting the ſaid Addreſs, and to "aſſiſt him in procuring a gracious Return from "His Majeſty." Thereupon the Lord Chancellor writ a Letter to the Scotch Directors, importing, That His Majeſty's Secretaries of State acquainted Him, That the King would not allow my Lord Baſil Hamilton Acceſs to Him, becauſe he did not wait upon His Majeſty when he was formerly in London; and that he had never ſince given any Publick Evidence of his Loyalty, nor had hitherto own'd His Majeſty's Government. But that His Majeſty would not refuſe to hear what my Lord Baſil's Inſtructions were, being willing to be informed of what the Company deſir'd: And that 1699. that if the Lord Basil would give in Writing to His Majesty's Secretaries what he had to present, His Majesty would receive Information from their Hands of what was demanded, and would give his Answer to the Company. In short, That His Majesty did not refuse the Petition, but would not allow my Lord Basil to be the Presenter of it. At the same time, His Majesty, to give the Company all the present Satisfaction he could, Wrote to his Council of Scotland; "That whereas the Council Gene-"ral of the African Company of that Nation, "had by their Letter to the Secretaries of State, "desired that they might give their Concurrence "to procure a gracious Return to their Petition, "which they had sent with Lord Basil Hamilton, "and which together with his Instructions, he had "communicated to the Secretaries of State; and "that they had represented to him what was de-"sired in behalf of the said Company; and that "he having refused the said Lord Basil Hamil-"ton Access, for the Reasons communicated to "the Lord Chancellor by the Secretaries of "State; yet being willing to give an Answer "to what the Company desired, his Majesty "was resolved in the Terms of Treaties, to de-"mand from the King of Spain, that Captain "Pinkarton and those of his Crew, who were "detained Prisoners at Carthagena, should be set "at Liberty; That it was His Majesty's Inten-"tion to advance the Trade of Scotland; and "that the Subjects of that Kingdom should be "allowed the same Liberty of Commerce that "others enjoy'd with English Plantations; but "that the Three Frigats they demanded, having "been given by Parliament for Guarding the "Coasts, he was resolved not to dispose of "them, till He had the Advice of His Parliament.

In answer to the said Chancellor's Letter, the Directors sent another to the Secretaries of State for Scotland, containing in Substance, "That "the Council General of their Company having "thought fit to send up one of their Number "with an Address to his Majesty, and with In-"structions concerning the Contents of their "Company's former Petitions, they thought "that none could be more capable to discharge "that Trust than the Lord Basil Hamilton, as "being throughly vers'd in the Course of the "Company's Affairs; Nor more acceptable to "His Majesty, as having no Objections made "against him when he was appointed, several "Lords of His Majesty's Privy Council, being "then present. That they were surpriz'd to find "by a Letter from the Lord Chancellor, that "the King would not allow the Lord Basil Ac-"cess, because he had not waited on His Ma-"jestty when last in London; but his Lordship "being sent by, and having Instructions from "the Council General, they could say nothing "to it, other than intreat their Lordships, That "they would use their Interests with His Ma-"jesty to allow the Lord Basil to have Access to "His Royal Person, lest the Refusal of it might "not be only a Discouragement to the Compa-"ny, and all its Well-wishers, but give ground "to the World to believe, That his not being "allow'd Access to His Majesty was upon Ac-"count of carrying an Address from the Com-"pany, which every Body knew stood in need "of, and had a just Right to his Majesty's Roy-"al Favour and Protection. They also Writ to "the Lord Basil Hamilton, That as they were sen-"sible of his generous Condescension to their "Request, in undertaking so troublesome a Jour-"ney to London at that time of the Year, purely to "serve the Interest of his Countrey; so they could "not but heartily Regret, That the carrying "the Company's Commission, should be the oc-"casion of putting a distinguishing Mark upon "a Person of his Lordships Quality and Merit, 1699.
"as to be denied Access to His Majesty's Per-"son, because he had not Waited on His Ma-"jesty when last in London. That no body was "so Blind but might see through that. And "that whereas they never heard that his Lord-"ship had ever done any thing unworthy of his "Quality, or inconsistent with the Duty of a "Loyal and Peaceable Subject; so they still "hop'd that by his Prudent Management His Ma-"jesty might be undeceived of any Misrepre-"sentation he might have of him, and that he "would yet condescend to grant his Lordship "Access to His Royal Person, with their Ad-"dress, and give a Gracious Answer to the Con-"tents of it, and the other Particulars mentio-"ned in his Instructions.

On the other Hand, the House of Lords in England represented in an Address to His Majesty; "That according to their Duty, being Address of the Lords against the Scots Settlement at Darien.
"sollicitous for the Preservation and Increase of "the Trade of the Kingdom, on which the sup-
"port of His Majesty's Greatness and Honour
"so much depended, as well as the Security and
"Defence of his People, had been very appre-
"hensive, that the Step made towards the Set"tlement of the Scots at Darien might tend to
"the great Prejudice of England, and possibly
"to the Disturbance of that Peace and good
"Correspendence with the Crown of Spain,
"which they conceived to be very advantage-
"ous. That therefore they had taken the same
"into serious Consideration, and thought it pro-
"per to be laid before His Majesty as the common
"Father of both Countries. And that as they "were truly sensible of the great Losses their
"Neighbour Kingdoms had sustain'd, both by
"Men and Treasure, in their Expeditions to
"that Place, which they very heartily lamen-
"ted; so they should not endeavour by any In-
"terposition of theirs, to defeat the Hopes the "Scots might still entertain of the Recovering
"these Losses by their further engaging in that
"Design, but that they judged such a Prosecu-
"tion on their Parts, must tend not only in far
"greater Disappointments to themselves, but
"at the same time time, prove inconvenient to
"the Trade and Quiet of the Kingdom of *Eng-
"land*. That they presumed to put His Ma-
"jesty in mind of the Address of both Houses
"of Parliament, presented to His Majesty on
"the 17*th*. of December, 1695. in the close of "which Address His Majesty would see the una-
"nimous Sense of the Kingdom, in relation to
"any Settlement the Scots might make in the "West-Indies, by virtue of an Act of Parlia-
"ment past about that time in the Kingdom of "Scotland, which was the occasion of the Ad"dress. That they also humbly represented to "His Majesty, That having received Informa-
"tion of some Orders his Majesty had sent to
"the Governors of the Plantations, on that Subject,
"and the House had on Jan. 18. than last past,
"come to this Resolution, that His Majesty's Plea-
"sure signified to the Governors of the Plantati-
"ons, in Relation to the Scots Settlement at *Da-
"rien*, was agreeable to the forementiond Address
"of both Houses of Parliament; and that on the
"8*th*. of that Instant February, that House came to
"a farther Resolution, That the Settlement of
"the Scots Colony at Darien, was inconsistent
"with the Good of the Plantation Trade of "the Kingdom. All which they hoped His Ma-
"jesty would take into His Royal Consideration.

This Address was carried only by Four or Five Votes, and about Sixteen Peers enter'd their Protests against it. As for the Commons, they absolutely refus'd to concur with it; but 1699. however, His Majeſty made Anſwer; That having receiv'd a very Dutiful Addreſs from the Houſe of Peers, He was pleas'd to let them know, That He would always have a very great regard to their Opinion, and that He aſſur'd them, that He would never be wanting by all Means, to promote the Advantage and Good of the Trade of England. At the ſame time His Majeſty was pleaſed to declare, That He could not but have a great Concern and Tenderneſs for His Kingdom of Scotland, and a Deſire to Advance their Welfare and Proſperity; and was very ſenſibly touch'd with the Loſs His Subjects of that Kingdom had ſuſtain'd by their unhappy Expedition, in order to a Settlement at Darien: That His Majeſty did apprehend, that Difficulties might too often ariſe, with reſpect to the different Intereſt of Trade between His Two Kingdoms, unleſs ſome Means were found out to unite them more nearly and compleatly; wherefore He took this Opportunity of putting the Houſe of Peers in mind of what He recommended to His Parliament ſoon after His Acceſſion to the Throne, That they would conſider of an Union between the Two Kingdoms. That His Majeſty was of Opinion, That nothing would contribute more to the Security and Happineſs of both Kingdoms; and was inclin'd to hope, that after they had liv'd near a Hundred Years under the ſame Head, ſome happy Expedient might be found for making them one People, in caſe a Treaty were ſet on foot for that purpoſe: And therefore He very earneſtly recommended that Matter to the Conſideration of the Houſe. Hereupon the Lords fram'd and paſs'd an Act for Authorizing certain Commiſſioners of the Realm of England, to Treat with Commiſſioners of Scotland, for the Weal of both Kingdoms: To which the Commons refus'd to give their Concurrence. About two Months before, a Complaint was made to the Houſe of Commons of a Printed Book, entituled, An Enquiry into the Cauſes of the Miſcarriages of the Scots Colony at Darien; and the Houſe having examin'd the ſaid Book, reſolv'd, That it highly reflecting on the Honour of His Majeſty, and both Houſes of Parliament, and tending to create Jealouſies and Animoſities between the two Kingdoms of England and Scotland, was a Falſe, Scandalous, and Traiterous Libel: Order'd it to be Burnt by the Hands of the Common Hangman, and Addreſs'd His Majeſty to iſſue out His Royal Proclamation for the Diſcovering and Apprehending the Author, Printer, and Publiſher of the ſaid Libel; which Proclamation was publiſh'd accordingly.

King for an Union of Scotland to England.

In the mean time, notwithſtanding His Majeſty's Proclamation iſſued out in Scotland on the 18*th.* of December laſt, againſt Diſorderly Petitioning, the Scotch went on with a National Addreſs to His Majeſty, which was Preſented by the Marquis of Tweedale on the 25*th* of March; and imported, "That they being deeply affected "with the hard Circumſtances of the Indian and "African Company of His Majeſty's Kingdom "of Scotland, both Abroad and at Home, as be"ing of Univerſal Concern to the whole Na"tion: And that His Majeſty having been "pleas'd by His Royal Anſwer to the Council "General of the ſaid Company's Petition, to "ſignifie, That He very much regretted the Loſs "which that Kingdom and the Company had "then lately ſuſtain'd: That upon all Occaſions "His Majeſty would Protect and Encourage the "Trade of the Nation, and that He would or"der the Parliament to meet when He judg'd "the Good of the Nation requir'd it: That they "were thereby encourag'd in moſt dutiful and "humble Manner, to repreſent to His Ma"jeſty, That as the Eſtates of Parliament, and "that Nation which they repreſented, had a "peculiar Intereſt in the Concerns of the ſaid "Company, as was particularly manifeſted in "their Unanimous Addreſs to His Majeſty, 1699. "Auguſt 5, 1698. ſo they humbly conceiv'd no"thing could be ſo conducible to ſupport the "Credit and Intereſt of the ſaid Company, un"der its preſent Misfortunes, as a Meeting of "the ſaid Eſtates in Parliament; and that the "Good of the Nation could at no time require "their Meeting, more than at preſent. That "they doubted not but that under the Influences "of His Majeſty's Favour and Protection, toge"ther with the Aſſiſtance which might be rea"ſonably expected from His ſaid Parliament, "the ſaid Company might be enabled to pro"ſecute their Undertaking with greater Aſſu"rance, and better Succeſs than hitherto they "could have done, under the many Stops and "Difficulties which they met with from time to "time. Wherefore they in all humble Duty, "moſt earneſtly intreated, and moſt aſſuredly "expected, That His Majeſty would Order His "ſaid Parliament to meet as ſoon as poſſible; "which they doubted not, would tend to the "Honour of His Majeſty, and the general Good "and Satisfaction of the Nation.

Upon the Preſenting of this Addreſs, one of the Commiſſioners ſignified to the King, That it was hop'd His Majeſty would be pleas'd to look upon it, not only as a Petition for Allowing the Parliament to Sit, but likewiſe as a Teſtimony of the Nation's Concern for the Intereſt of the Indian and African Company. To which His Majeſty was pleas'd to Anſwer, That that would be beſt known in Parliament, and that the Parliament could not Sit before the 14th. of May then next enſuing, but that it would Sit then.

On December 14. His Majeſty was pleaſed to confer the Dignity of a Baronet of this Kingdom, on William Brown of London, Eſq; and on Richard Allin of Summerly, in the County of Suffolk, Eſq; On December 17. His Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Charles Eyre, Eſq; who was Elected by the Eaſt-India Company to be Governor of Fort-William, and Preſident for the Management of all their Affairs in the Kingdoms of Bengall and Bahar in the Eaſt-Indies. On December 19. His Majeſty granted the Dignity of a Baronet to Richard Newman of Fiſchead Magdalene, in the County of Dorſet, Eſq; On December 30. He conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Andrew Fountain, Junior, of Narford, in Norfolk, Eſq; a Gentleman of great Parts and Learning. On January 9. the ſame Honour was done to Roger Jenyns of Ely, in the County of Cambridge, Eſq; On March 23. His Majeſty conferr'd the Dignity of a Baronet upon Martin Weſtcomb, Eſq; His Majeſty's Conſul at Cadiz.

Honours and Preferments.

As to the State of Religion, the King in His Speech at the opening of the Seſſion, November 16. had juſtly imputed the growing Burden of the Poor to the Depravation of Manners, occaſion'd by their Looſe and Idle Life; and had deſir'd them to conſider, whether the Ground of this Evil was from Defects in the Laws already made, or in the Execution of them: Promiſing Himſelf to Countenance Virtue, and Diſcourage Vice. Upon which, the Commons Reſolved on November 28. that an Humble Addreſs be made to His Majeſty, That He will be pleaſed to Iſſue His Royal Proclamation, for the Suppreſſing of all Vice and Immorality, and for putting the Laws in Execution relating thereunto. And they Ordered a Committee to be appointed to prepare Heads for a Bill againſt Gaming and Duelling. When the Addreſs was Preſented by thoſe Members who were of the Privy Council, His Majeſty was pleaſed to ſay, That He would ſpeedily comply with the Deſires of the Houſe therein. And accordingly

State of Religion.

Suppreſſing Vice and Immorality.

on

1699. on December 11. was publiſhed his Majeſty's Proclamation for preventing and puniſhing Immorality and Prophaneneſs.

Archbiſhop of Canterbury's Circular Letter.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury was a ſteady Promoter of Peace and Piety: And to that excellent Purpoſe, his Grace ſent out this Circular Letter to the Right Reverend the Lords Biſhops of his Province. Dated April 4. 1699.

Reverend Brother,

"My Writing to you and the reſt of our Brethren at this time, is occaſioned by a ſenſible "growth of Vice and Prophaneneſs in the Nation; which, to the great Affliction of all good "Men, appears not only in the corrupt Practices of particular Perſons, but alſo in the endeavours that are uſed to ſubvert the general "Principles of our holy Religion. And this "with a boldneſs and openneſs, far beyond the "Examples of paſt Times. So that if a ſpeedy "ſtop be not put to ſuch National Provocations, "we have juſt cauſe to fear they may bring "down the heavieſt Judgments of God upon us. "The preventing whereof belongs more immediately to us, who are the Miniſters of Chriſt; "and as ſuch, are obliged to the utmoſt care "and watchfulneſs in oppoſing theſe Inſtruments "of Satan.

"I doubt not but many of the Parochial Clergy "are ſufficiently ſenſible, both of their own Duty and the Danger we are in. In the Cities of "London and Weſtminſter, and other places, I am "ſure the good Effects of their Diligence have "been very evident of late Years; but in ſome "parts that are more remote, all of them may "not ſo well underſtand either the Arts or the Induſtry of theſe Enemies of Religion. And therefore I thought it a Duty incumbent on the Station wherein Providence has placed me, to "deſire of you and the reſt of our Brethren, to "warn the Clergy, under your Care, of theſe "Attempts againſt Religion and Virtue; and "to excite them to a Diligence proportionable "to the Danger; and to ſuggeſt to them ſuch "Methods as are moſt likely to work a General "Reformation.

"With this Requeſt, I ſend you ſuch Particulars, as, in my Opinion, are very neceſſary "to be preſſed upon your Clergy, for the attaining ſo deſirable an End. As,

"I. That in their own Lives, and the Government of their own Families, they would "make themſelves Examples of a ſober and regular Converſation. It is the Apoſtles Reaſoning; If a man know not how to rule his own "houſe (and much more his own Life and Actions) "how ſhall he take care of the Church of God? The "true method of working a Reformation Abroad, "is to lay the Foundation at home; which alone "can give our Reproofs a juſt Weight and Authority: But till that is done, no Exhortations, whether in publick or private, can either be offer'd with Decency, or receiv'd with Reverence.

"II. To Piety, they ſhould add Prudence in "all their Actions and Behaviour; which even "in Private Chriſtians is a great Ornament to Religion; but in Publick Teachers, is a moſt neceſſary Qualification for the due Diſcharge of "their Miniſtry. A Mildneſs of Temper, with "a Gravity and Calmneſs in their Converſation, "will not fail to gain them a general Love and "Eſteem among their Neighbours: And a diſcreet Caution in their Words and Actions, will "preſerve them from thoſe little Imprudencies "that are ſometimes ſo ſenſible an Obſtruction to "the good Endeavours of well-meaning Men.

"Perſons in Holy Orders are not only bound, in 1699.
"the Conduct of their Lives, to conſider what "is Lawful or Unlawful in it ſelf, but alſo what "is Decent or Indecent in Them, with reſpect to "their Character and Function: Abſtaining from all "appearance of evil; and giving no Offence in any "thing, that the Miniſtry be not blamed.

"III. While our Enemies are ſo very Induſtrious in ſeeking out Objections againſt the Chriſtian Religion, it becomes the Clergy (who are "ſet a-part for the Vindication of it) to be no "leſs Diligent in their Preparations for its Defence: By acquainting themſelves thoroughly "with the rational grounds of Chriſtianity, and "the true State of ſuch Points as are the ſubjects "of our preſent Controverſies; together with "the Objections which are uſually made by our "Adverſaries of all ſorts, and the effectual Anſwers that have been returned to them by ſo "many Eminent Writers of our own Church. "That ſo they may be ready on all Occaſions, "to do Juſtice and Honour to our Religion; "and be able to expoſe the Folly and Ignorance "of theſe Gainſaying Men. The Cauſe which "God has put into our hands, is undoubtedly "good; but the beſt Cauſe may ſuffer by the "weakneſs of its Advocate: And when this "happens in the matter of Religion, it gives the "Adverſary an occaſion of Triumph, and is apt "to ſtagger the Faith even of ſincere and unprejudic'd Chriſtians.

"IV. It were to be wiſh'd, that the Clergy "of every Neighbourhood would agree upon "frequent Meetings, to conſult for the good of "Religion in general; and to adviſe with one "another about any Difficulties that may happen "in their particular Cures. By what Methods "any evil Cuſtom may moſt eaſily be broken; "how a Sinner may be moſt effectually Reclaim'd; and (in general) how each of them "in their ſeveral Circumſtances may contribute "moſt to the advancement of Religion. Such "Conſultations as theſe, beſides the mutual Benefit of Advice and Inſtruction, will be a natural means to excite the Zeal of ſome, to reduce the over-eagerneſs of others to a due "Temper, and to provoke all to a Religious "Emulation in the improvement of Piety and "Order within their reſpective Pariſhes. And "theſe Meetings might ſtill be made a greater Advantage to the Clergy, in carrying on the Reformation of Mens Lives and Manners, by inviting the Church-Wardens of their ſeveral Pariſhes "and other Pious Perſons among the Laity, to "join with them in the Execution of the moſt "probable Methods that can be ſuggeſted for "thoſe good Ends. And we may very reaſonably expect the happy Effects of ſuch a Concurrence, from the viſible Succeſs of that Noble Zeal wherewith ſo many about the great "Cities in my Neighbourhood, do promote true "Piety, and a Reformation of Manners. And "therefore I deſire you, that you will particularly excite your Clergy to the procuring ſuch "Aſſiſtances as theſe, for the more effectual diſcharge of their own Duty.

"V. It would very much further and facilitate "all their Endeavours of this kind, to gain over "the Perſons who have the greateſt Eſteem and "Authority in their Pariſhes, to a hearty Concern "for the Honour of God and Religion: Frequently ſuggeſting to them the Obligation "that God has laid upon them to be Examples to "others; and the great good that it is in their "Power to do, by ſetting a Pattern of regular "Living, and the unſpeakable Miſchief of their "irregular Behaviour. For if once the better "ſort can be brought to ſuch a Serioufneſs and 1699. "Sobriety, the reſt will more eaſily follow: Example being the moſt powerful Inſtruction; and Experience teaching us that Shame and Fear, which ariſe from the Authority of ſuch good Patterns, are commonly the moſt effectual Reſtraints upon the meaner ſort.

Sobri-

"VI. When any Perſon is Obſtinate in his Vices, and not to be Reclaimed either by Teaching or Example, by Exhortation or Reproof; the Ordinary ought to be informed of it, that he may proceed to Reclaim ſuch by Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures; and where thoſe are like to prove ineffectual, the Civil Magiſtrate muſt be applied to, and deſired to proceed againſt them according to the Laws in thoſe Caſes provided. Which Information and Requeſt, eſpecially in the Caſe of ſuch incorrigible Offenders, can be made by none ſo properly as by the Clergy; who may beſt be ſuppoſed to underſtand the neceſſity there is of having recourſe to the Civil Magiſtrate. And ſince our Lawgivers have Enacted theſe Temporal Puniſhments, on purpoſe to aſſiſt us in the diſcharge of our Miniſtry; it would be a great failing in us, not to make uſe of them, when all other Methods have been tried to little or no Effect.

"VII. Every Pious Perſon of the Laity, ſhould, if need be, be put in mind by the Clergy, that he ought to think himſelf oblig'd to uſe his beſt Endeavours to have ſuch Offenders puniſhed by the Civil Magiſtrate, as can no otherwiſe be amended. And that when he hears his Neighbour Swear or Blaſpheme the Name of God, or ſees him offend in Drunkenneſs or Prophanation of the Lord's Day, he ought not to neglect to give the Magiſtrate notice of it. In ſuch a Caſe to be called an Informer, will be ſo far from making any Man Odious in the judgment of Sober Perſons, that it will tend to his Honour, when he makes it appear by his unblameable Behaviour, and the Care he takes of Himſelf and his own Family, that he doth it purely for the Glory of God, and the good of his Brethren. Such well-diſpoſed Perſons as are reſolved upon this, ſhould be encouraged to meet as oft as they can, and to conſult how they may moſt diſcreetly and effectually manage it in the Places where they live.

"VIII. As in reforming the Laity, they ought to uſe the Aſſiſtance of the Civil Magiſtrate; ſo if any of their own Brethren be an irregular Liver, and cannot be reclaim'd by Brotherly Admonition, the Neighbouring Clergy ſhould be ſtrictly enjoyned to make it known to their Dioceſan, either by themſelves or the Archdeacon, or by ſome other convenient way. That ſo the Offender may be Admoniſh'd to live ſuitable to his Character; and if a bare Admonition will not do, he may be proceeded againſt by Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures; for the preventing ſuch Scandals and Miſchiefs as will always accompany the irregular Life of a Miniſter of the Goſpel.

"IX. And whereas the Foundations of Piety and Morality are beſt laid at the beginning, in the Religious Education of Children; I cannot but wiſh that every one of the Parochial Clergy would be very diligent in Catechiſing the Children under their Care; and not only ſo, but in calling upon them afterwards as they grow up, to give ſuch further Account of their Religion, as may be expected from a riper Age. That being thus carefully inſtructed in the Faith and Duty of a Chriſtian, they alſo may teach their Children the ſame; and ſo Piety, Virtue and Goodneſs, may for ever Flouriſh in our Church and Nation.

Your Affectionate Brother,

The Majority of the Commons were well affected to the Church of England, and ſeem'd to ſuſpect that the Court had ſhewn too much Favour to the Diſſenters: It was upon this Jealouſie, that a Committee complain'd, that Many Perſons diſſenting from the Church of England, were made Juſtices of Peace: tho' upon Enquiry it did not appear that any two Men were Commiſſioned in the Peace, or Lieutenancy, who deſerved the Name of Diſſenters; tho' ſome of them indeed were but Occaſional Conformiſts; which, if it proceeded from the Intention of getting or keeping Places, was a Shameful Practice. And the Indignation which many ſincere Chriſtians had on this account, gave the better colour to ſome People, for appearing with extraordinary warmth againſt Diſſenters; and to love to be diſtinguiſh'd by the Name of High Church Men; and to treat All Perſons of Charity and Moderation with the Character of Low Church, and Whigs, and even Fanaticks; tho' Men of the greateſt Affection to the Church, and of the ſtricteſt Conformity to the eſtabliſh'd Rules of it. Under this new Spirit of Diviſion, the very Prelates of the Church were to fall into Suſpicion and Reproach: Hence on December the 13*th.* a Motion was made in the Houſe of Commons, and the Queſtion was put, That an Humble Addreſs be made to His Majeſty, for Removing Gilbert Lord B. of Sarum from being Preceptor to his Highneſs the Duke of Glouceſter. But the Majority of that Honourable Body were ſenſible of the unreaſonable Prejudice, and ſo it Paſſed in the Negative. However, there was a Jealouſie fomented, of the Church being betrayed by Moderate Men, and it was unhappily increaſed by a Paſſage that made a great deal of Noiſe. Mr. William Stephens B. D. Rector of Sutton in Surry, a Man of looſe Principles, and of no ſtrict Converſation, was appointed to Preach before the Houſe of Commons on January the 30*th.* He had been always a Bold Talker for Rights and Liberties, and therefore he choſe the ſame Subject on this Day, and ſeem'd to aſſert the Original Power of the People in ſuch a manner, as look'd towards excuſing the Murder of King Charles I. and directly ſuggeſted, that after an Act of Oblivion and length of Time, the Obſervation of the Anniverſary Faſt need not to be longer continued; but rather for Charity and Peace to be now utterly Aboliſh'd. This Doctrine was ſo diſreliſh'd, and the Man ſo unacceptable; that when a Motion was the next day made, and the Queſtion put, That the Thanks of this Houſe be given to Mr. Stephens for the Sermon Preached by him Yeſterday at St. Margarets Weſtminſter; It paſſed in the Negative. And it was Reſolved, That for the future, no Perſon be Recommended to Preach before this Houſe, who is under the Dignity of a Dean in the Church, or hath not taken his Degree of Doctor in Divinity.

Unhappy diſtinction of High Church and Low Church.

In this Seſſion, the Duke of Norfolk, upon the Precedent made the laſt Year in the Caſe of the Earl of Macclesfield, lodg'd a Bill in the Houſe of Peers, to Diſſolve his Marriage with the Lady Mary Mordant, and to Enable him to Marry again; which in few days Paſſed Both Houſes,

Bill for the D. of Norfolk's Divorce.

1700. notwithstanding the Opposition of the Dutchess. The Duke did not Marry again, and after his Death, the Dutchess took Sir John Germain to be her Lawful Husband. The Duke's Case was thus deliver'd, with Reasons for Passing the Bill.

The Duke's Arguments for it.

If want either of Precedent or Parliamentary Divorce, before going through the tedious and ineffectual Methods of Doctors Commons, or of Demonstration of Fact, have hitherto deprived the Duke of Norfolk of that Relief against his Wife's Adultery, which the Divine Law allows; The late Statute made in the like Case, and the coming in of Two Witnesses, who while the Duke's former Bill was depending, had been sent away to prevent that Discovery which they now make, cannot but be thought to remove all Objections against an Act of Parliament, not only for the Benefit of the Duke, but of the Publick; as a means to preserve the Inheritance of so great an Office and Honours, to Persons of the True Religion.

And since Bishop Cozens his Argument in the Lord Ross's Case has made it Evident, that those Canons which govern the Spiritual Court in this Matter, are but the Remains of Popery; Nothing can be now requisite to satisfie the most Scrupulous of the Reformed Religion, but to set the Duke's Proofs of his Lady's Adultery in a true Light.

The Reputation which the Dutchess had maintain'd of Wit and Discretion, made it difficult for many to believe that she could be surpriz'd in the very Act of Adultery, as had been formerly prov'd. And though then it appear'd that one Henry Keemer liv'd with the Dutchess, while she went by a Feigned Name, at a House hired for her at Fox-hall, by Sir John Jermain's Brother; and that Nicola, who then liv'd with Sir John, used to receive Wood sent from the Dutchess to Sir John's House by the Cock-Pit; the withdrawing of Nicola, and carrying with him the Dutch Maid, equally intrusted with the Secret on Sir John's side, left no Evidence of their constant Conversation, but Keemer since dead, and Susannah Barrington, who had the like Trust from the Dutchess.

Keemer, though very unwillingly, some Years since confessed his living with the Dutchess at Fox-Hall, where she pretended she was obliged to conceal her self for Debt; and what Share Susannah had kept secret, was unknown, till Nicola appear'd: Nicola coming into England, and being destitute of a Service, express'd his readiness to discover what he knew, and to bring with him the Dutch Maid.

She proves, That for two Months, the first Summer after the King came for England, Sir John Jermain and the Dutchess liv'd together as Man and Wife, and were seen in Bed by her, Mr. Bryan and his Wife, Sir John's Sister: And that Nicholas Hanseur, Sir John's Valet de Chambre, used to be assisting to him, as the Dutchess's Woman, Susannah Barrington, was to her at going to Bed and rising.

She proves the like Conversation at Fox-Hall, and the Dutchess's House at the Mill-Bank, till the Duke's first Bill of Divorce was depending; within which time Nicholas Hanseur by Sir John's Order carried her away, and Susannah Barrington, with intention of going for Holland, to prevent their being examined to what they knew; but the Wind proving contrary, they could not go till the Bill was rejected; and then Sir John fetch'd back Susannah, who was most useful to the Dutchess; but Hanseur went for Holland with Ellen.

He confirms Ellen's Evidence in every Particular; and besides the Persons mention'd by Ellen, as privy to Sir John's Intriegue, names Sir John's Brother Daniel. Nicholas having been found very trusty, his Master sent for him to return to his Service, and gave him the Opportunity of proving the Continuance of the same Conversation at several Times and Places, from the Summer 1692, to the 26*th* of April 1696. He swears he had after his Return to Sir John's Service, seen them in Bed together in Sir John's House at the Cock-Pit, and at the Dutchess's House at Milbank, where she now lives; and used to be let into the Dutchess's Apartment by Susannah Barrington, or Keemer. Nor can any Man who shall read the Ample Testimonials given Mr. Hanseur by Sir John; by the last of which it appears, that he serv'd him faithfully as his Steward, reasonably question Hanseur's Credit. 1700.

Another who had been advanc'd by Sir John from his Footman to Mr. Hanseur's Place, and from thence to a good Office in the Excise, very unwillingly confirm'd the Testimony of Hanseur, and the Dutch Maid, not only as to the time of their going from the Service of Sir John and the Dutchess, but (though being no Foreigner, he could not so easily be sent away to prevent Discovery, and therefore was not let so far into the Secret as Hanseur and the Dutch Maid;) yet he swears the Dutchess used to come masked to his Master's House; that he has gone with him as far as the Horse-Ferry, towards her House at the Mill-Bank; that then his Master sometimes lay out all Night, and the next Morning he has carried Linnen and Cloaths for his Master to Keemer's House, or Keemer has fetch'd them from him: And this he proves to have been since the rejecting the former Bill; and about five Years since, when he was succeeded by Hanseur, as before he had succeeded Hanseur.

Two other Foreigners, La Fountaine, who had lived with Sir John, and was serv'd with Summons at the Dutchess's House at Drayton; and Huganoe, who ran away from the Lord Haversham's since Summons was taken out against him, seem to have had the same Trust that Hanseur had; for both declar'd, That nothing should oblige them to betray their Master's Secrets: One said, No Court could dispense with his Oath of Secrecy; and both declar'd, they would immediately go beyond Sea. Summons have been taken out for Mr. Bryan and his Wife, and Sir John Jermain's Brother (who are, or lately were in Town) to confess or deny what Nicola and Ellen appeal to them for: And it cannot be imagin'd that Sir John should chuse the Honour of being thought to have to do with a Dutchess, before the clearing her and himself from the Imputation, by bringing his Relations to disprove the Charge, if what is sworn to be within their Knowledge is false.

And if Sir John's Vanity should prevail with him, at least it is to be presum'd, that his Relations would be more just to him and the Lady, than to suffer any thing to pass against them, which they could with Truth and Justice prevent.

But since none of them appear, the World will believe their absenting more than a Thousand Witnesses, in confirmation of what Mr. Hanseur, Ellen and Baily have sworn. Whose Evidence stands untouch'd by any thing offer'd by the Dutchess's Witnesses, but is plainly confirm'd by them in the Principal Parts.

This being the Nature of the Proofs, 'tis observable.

1. There

1700. 1. There never yet was any Case of this kind, where the Evidence was not liable to greater Objections than can be made to this.

Though in the latest Case of that kind, there was full Conviction of the Lady's having Children while she liv'd separate from her Husband; and the Presumption was very violent, whose the Children were; yet this was but Presumption, and that was weaken'd by the Presumption in Law, that they were the Husband's; especially, since there was no direct Proof of the Lover's ever lying with her.

2. Tho in that Case, by reason of the Interval of Parliament, and fear of the deaths of Witnesses, a Suit was begun in Doctors-Commons, 'twas taken from thence while the Suit was depending; therefore that was rather an Objection against proceeding in Parliament, than an Argument for it.

3. In that Case several Witnesses were examined at the Bars of both Houses, who had not been examined at Doctors-Commons, nor any notice given of their Names before their Examination.

4. It appears by that Case, and the present, that the Examinations in Parliament are more solemn and certain than those of the Spiritual Court; which depend too much upon the Honesty of the Register, or his Deputy.

1 Eliz. n. 31. 5. Before that Case, Parliaments have either broken through the Rules which bind the Spiritual Court, as in the Case of the Duke of Norfolk, 1 Eliz. where the Parliament ratified a Marriage, as lawful according to God's Law, though protracted and letted, by reason of certain Decrees and Canons of the Pope's Law; or else have dissolved a Marriage where there had been no Application to Doctors-Commons; as in the Case of Mrs. Wharton, who had been married to Mr. Cambel; and yet 2 and 3 W. and M. there had been no Examination of Witnesses but what had been before the Two Houses.

So long before, in the Case of Sir Ralph Sadler, upon Proof before the Two Houses, that the Lady Sadler's former Husband had deserted her, and disappeared for Four Years before she married Sir Ralph, the Parliament legitimated her Children by Sir Ralph. 37 H. VIII.

Whereas some object against the passing the Bill, as if it would countenance a Jurisdiction in the House of Lords to examine such Matters in the first Instance, or originally; the Objection would be the same, if it had begun, as it might, in the House of Commons, but in truth would be of equal force against most Private, and several Publick Acts, occasioned by the Examination of Witnesses, or notoriety of Fact.

Since therefore the Duke has so long, and so often in vain endeavoured to be freed from a Lady, publickly fam'd and prov'd to have liv'd with Sir John Germain, as his Wife, the Duke's former Disappointments cannot but be powerful Arguments for his speedy obtaining that Justice which the Spiritual Court cannot give him, their Power reaching no farther than to that Liberty of living as she list; some Years since settled by Articles: but as none of less Art and Oratory than her Council, could have turn'd this into License to commit Adultery, if she list, or a Pardon afterwards, had not there been Evidence of her Acting according to such Construction, the Duke would have hoped she had repented of the former Injuries he had received from her; but now hopes she shall not longer continue to bear the Name of his Wife, and put him in Danger of being succeeded by Sir John Germain's Issue; or deprive him of the Expectation of leaving his Honours, Offices and Estate to a Protestant Heir.

1700. Resumption of Forfeited Estates in Ireland.

The Resumption of the Forfeited Estates in Ireland was an Affair of great Perplexity to the Commons, and of greater Uneasiness to the King and His Ministers. And though there was some just Occasion given for it, by the Promises of the King, and the Expectance of the Nation tending that way; and the profuse disposal of them to Persons not so well deserving; and the great want of Money to discharge the Publick Debts; and the King's declining to accept of some Terms of Accommodation that were said to be offered: Yet after all the Arguments for doing of it, the Thing when done would appear to be some Indignity put upon the King and His Councils; and a very great Hardship upon the Grantees, and the Purchasers and Tenants under them; and indeed a Confusion and Distraction to the whole Government in Ireland. However, the Commons proceeded in this Matter, and having Considered of the Number, Qualifications, and Manner of chusing the Trustees for the Bill of Irish Forfeitures, they resolved on March 26, That the Number of the said Trustees be Thirteen: That no Person be a Trustee, who had any Office or Profit; or was accountable to His Majesty; or was a Member of this House. And that the said Trustees be chosen by balloting. Two days after, the several Members of the House having given in Lists of Thirteen Persons Names, which were put into Glasses, the Majority fell upon Francis Annesley, James Hamilton, John Biggs, John Trenchard, James Isham, Henry Langford, James Hooper, Esqs; Sir Cyril Wyche, John Cary, Gent. Sir Henry Sheeres, Thomas Harrison, Esq; Sir John Worden, William Fellows, and Thomas Rawlins Esqs;. The two last Persons having equal Voices, either of them must have been left out; but the House being informed, that Sir John Worden was a Baron of the Exchequer, in the County Palatine of Chester, during his Life, at a yearly Salary from the Crown, it was resolved, That the said Sir John Worden was not capable of being a Trustee in the said Bill; and so the other two stood.

On the 2*d* of April, the Commons pass'd the Bill, for granting an Aid to His Majesty, by sale of the forfeited and other Estates and Interests in Ireland; and by a Land-Tax in England, for the several Purposes therein mentioned; and sent it to the Lords for their Concurrence.

To justifie their Proceedings, if not to expose the Conduct of the Court, tht Commons on April 8. ordered the Report of the Commissioners for Irish Forfeitures to be published; "And that "the Resolutions of the 18*th* of January last, the "Resolution of the 4*th* of April 1690, relating to "the Forfeited Estates; His Majesty's Speech to "Both Houses, the 5*th* of January, 169⅞. the Address of the House to the King the 5*th* of February last; His Majesty's Answer thereunto "the 26*th* of the same February, and the Resolution of the House thereupon: And lastly, the "Address of the House of Commons, of the 4*th* "of March, 169⅔, and His Majesty's Answer "thereunto, be also reprinted with the said Report. And resolved, That the procuring or passing "Exorbitant Grants by any Member now of the Privy-"Council, or by any other that had been a Privy-"Counsellor in this or any former Reign, to his Use "or Benefit, was a high Crime and Misdemeanour.

On the other hand, the Court finding their Party extremely weak in the House of Commons, endeavour'd to oppose the passing of the complicated Bill in the House of Lords; to which the Majority of that Illustrious Assembly were inclin'd; some out of Complaisance to the King, and most of them because they looked upon the Tacking of one Bill to another, as an Innovation in 1700. Parliamentary Proceedings, and ſuch as evidently tended to retrench, if not wholly to take away the ſhare the Peers of England ought to have in the Legiſlative Authority. But becauſe they could not reject the Bill, without leaving the urgent Neceſſities of the State unprovided, their Lordſhips contented themſelves to make great Amendments to that part of it that related to Forfeitures. The Commons having conſidered and unanimouſly diſapproved the ſaid Amendments, ſent to deſire a Conference with the Lords thereupon; appointed a Committee to draw up Reaſons to be offered to their Lordſhips; Reſolved, That two days after they would proceed in the further Conſideration of the Report given in by the Commiſſioners for Iriſh Forfeitures; and ordered a Liſt of His Majeſty's Privy-Council to be laid before the Houſe.

On the 9*th* of April a Conference was manag'd between both Houſes, in which the Lords did warmly inſiſt on their Amendments; and the Commons as vehemently maintain their Diſagreement with their Lordſhips. The next day two Conferences were had on the ſame Subject, and with as little ſucceſs; at which the Commons were ſo exaſperated, that they ordered the Lobby of their Houſe to be cleared of all Strangers; the Back-doors of the Speaker's Chamber to be lock'd up; and that the Serjeant ſhould ſtand at the Door of the Houſe, and ſuffer no Members to go forth, and then proceeded to take into Conſideration the Report of the Iriſh Forfeitures; and the Liſt of the Lords of the Privy-Council.

The King deſires the Lords to comply with the Commons.

The King being inform'd of the high Ferment the Commons were in, and apprehending the Conſequences, ſent a Private Meſſage (by the Earl of Albemarle) to the Lords, to paſs the Bill without any Amendments; which their Lordſhips did accordingly, and acquainted the Commons with it.

Though againſt his own Judgment and Intereſt.

This Condeſcenſion did not wholly appeaſe the Commons, who purſuing their Reſentment againſt the preſent Miniſtry, put the Queſtion, That an Addreſs be made to His Majeſty, to remove John Lord Somers, Lord Chancellor of England from His Preſence and Councils for ever. Which though it was carried in the Negative, by reaſon of the acknowledg'd Merit, and great Services of that Peer, yet it was Reſolv'd, That an Addreſs be made to His Majeſty, That no Perſon, who was not a Native of his Dominions, except his Royal Highneſs Prince George of Denmark, be admitted to His Majeſty's Councils in England or Ireland.

Parliament prorogued.

The King did not think it proper to receive any ſuch Addreſs, and therefore to prevent the Offer of it, His Majeſty came the day following, viz. Thurſday, April 11. to the Houſe of Peers, and commanded the Earl of Bridgwater to prorogue the Parliament to the 23*d* of May, after His Majeſty had given the Royal Aſſent to theſe many Bills.

Bills paſſed.

While the Parliament was ſitting, there was a Second Treaty of Partition concluded March 15, N. S. between England, France, and Holland; whereby inſtead of the Electoral Prince of Bavaria, (who died on the 6th of Feb. 1699. N. S.) the Arch-Duke Charles of Auſtria was to have all the Spaniſh Dominions both within and without Europe; except what by the former Treaty had been aſſign'd to the Dauphine and France: And that the Duke of Lorrain, inſtead of his own Country, which was alſo to be given to France, ſhould have the Dutchy of Milan; and the Prince of Vaudemont the County of Bilche conferred upon him. His Majeſty's Plenipotentiaries for making this Treaty were the Earls of Portland and Jerſey. But this Treaty of Partition, like the former, was but a preſent Amuſement, and ſerved only for an Occaſion of the more violent Breach of Faith in the French King; and for a Pretence of caſting more Odium upon King William and His Miniſtry.

Seals taken from the Lord Somers.

Immediately after the Parliament was prorogued (ſays a late Writer) "the King ſent the "Earl of Portland to the Lord Chancellor Somers, "to demand the Great Seal of him: Whether "His Majeſty made this Step by His own Deter-"mination, or by the Impulſe of His new Fa-"vourite, who headed a growing Party, Hiſto-"ry cannot affirm; but 'tis moſt certain, that "thereby His Majeſty loſt abundance of True "Friends, without gaining any Real ones: For "tho the Lord Somers had been attacked by the "Commons, yet the Majority of that Houſe had "warmly ſtood up in his Defence. And as the "abandoning ſo Faithful a Miniſter could not "but diſcourage others from embracing heartily "His Majeſty's Service, ſo His Majeſty's yield-"ing ſo tamely (if I may be allowed the Ex-"preſſion in ſpeaking, of a Prince who was a "Hero in the Field) to the Faint and Negative "Reſolves of the Houſe of Commons, could not "but lay him open to more vigorous Attacks. "Not long after, the Great Seal was committed "to the Cuſtody of Sir Nathan Wright, one of "His Majeſty's Serjeants at Law, with the Title "of Lord Keeper, who by virtue of His Office, "took his Place in the Privy-Council.

The Removing of the Lord Somers from his high Station, though it diſpleas'd many People, yet

1700. yet it ſeem'd not to affect his Lordſhip, who retir'd with Content and Temper; and upon all Occaſions in Parliament ſerved the King and the Intereſts of the Publick, with the ſame Zeal as if he had not loſt a Place. The admitting the Earl of Albemarle into the moſt Noble Order of the Garter, which the King did on May 14. was generally diſliked; though to make it go down the better, His Majeſty did at the ſame time beſtow that diſtinguiſhing Mark of Honour on the Earl of Pembroke, Preſident of the Council; who highly deſerved it, not only by his Eminent Services to the Government, but by his Illuſtrious Birth. About three Weeks after, the two Knights Elect were inſtalled at Windſor with the uſual Formalities; but it was obſerved, that though the Concourſe of People was extraordinary great, and the Entertainment very ſplendid, yet few of the Nobility grac'd the Ceremony by their Preſence; and that many Severe Reflections were then made on His Majeſty, for laviſhing away a Garter on His Favourite.

Honours and Preferments.

On April 11. His Majeſty conferred the Dignity of a Baronet upon John Chetwode of Oakeley, in the County of Stafford, Eſq; On June 24. the King was pleaſed to confer the Office of Lord Chamberlain (which had been ſometime Vacant;) upon Edward Earl of Jerſey; and to make the Earl of Romney Groom of the Stole to His Majeſty; and the Earl of Carliſle one of the Gentlemen of His Bedchamber. On June 27. the King, in Council at Hampton-Court, was pleaſed to Declare, That the Publick Affairs requiring His going over to Holland for a ſhort time, He had appointed Thomas Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury; Sir Nathan Wright, Lord Keeper; Thomas Earl of Pembroke, Lord Preſident of the Council; John Viſcount Lonſdale, Lord Privy Seal; William Duke of Devonſhire, Lord Steward of His Majeſty's Houſhold; John Earl of Bridgwater, firſt Commiſſioner of the Admiralty; John Earl of Marlborough, Governour to his Highneſs the Duke of Glouceſter; and Ford Earl of Tankerville, Firſt Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, to be Lords Juſtices of England, for the Adminiſtration of the Government during His Abſence. So on July 4. His Majeſty went in the Morning from Hampton-Court, and lay that Night at Canterbury; next day he came to Margate, and went on Board His Yatcht; and toward Evening ſail'd with a fair Wind for Holland, under a Convoy Commanded by Sir Cloudeſly Shovel; and Arriving next day in the Maeſe, He Landed at the Oranie-Polder; and went directly to the Hague.

Parliament of Scotland.

Before His Majeſty left England, He thought it neceſſary to Aſſemble the Parliament of Scotland; and for that purpoſe appointed the Duke of Queensbury to be His High Commiſſioner. On the 21*ſt*. of May, the Parliament of that Kingdom being met at Edinburgh, His Majeſty's Letter to them was firſt Read; which was to this Effect:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"The great Deſire We have to promote and "advance the Intereſt of that Our Ancient King- "dom, did make Us intend to have held this "Seſſions of Parliament in Perſon, that We "might more clearly have diſcern'd what is yet "Needful to be done, for the full Eſtabliſhment "of your Religion, Laws, and Liberties. And "as Our Deſign in coming to Britain, was the "Relief and Happineſs of the Three Kingdoms, "ſo We are firmly reſolv'd to make it the chief "Deſign of Our Reign, to do every thing that "may tend to the Advantage and Good of Our "Subjects.

"The preſent Circumſtances of Affairs A- "broad, not allowing of Our being with you at "preſent; We have appointed Our Right Tru- "ſty and Right entirely belov'd Couſin and 1700. "Counſellor, James Duke of Queensbury, to re- "preſent Our Royal Perſon, and to be Our Com- "miſſioner in this Seſſion. We are fully ſatisfied "with his Fitneſs and Ability for diſcharging "this Truſt: And we doubt not but his conſtant "Loyalty to Us, ſince Our Acceſſion to the "Crown, and his Zeal and Fidelity for Our "Service, and the Proſperity and Good of the "Kingdom, which has appear'd on all Occaſions, "and in all the Truſts wherein he has been Em- "ploy'd, will render him Acceptable to you.

"We have fully inſtructed him in all Things "that We think may fall under your Conſidera- "tion, and ſeem to be Neceſſary at preſent. "Therefore We deſire that you may give him "entire Truſt and Credit. The breaking out "of the War in ſome places of Europe, the great "Arming by Sea and Land, the uncertain State "of the Publick Peace, and the continued De- "ſigns of Our Enemies, both at Home and Abroad, "cannot but convince you that it is neceſſary "for your Safety, That the Forces be Main- "tain'd; and We expect that you will certainly "Supply us with ſufficient Funds for that end.

"We are heartily ſorry for the Misfortunes "and Loſſes that the Nation has ſuſtained in their "Trade; and We will effectually Concur in any "thing that may contribute for Promoting and "Encouraging Trade, That being ſo indiſpen- "ſibly needful for the Welfare of the Nation. "And we do particularly recommend to you the "encouraging Manufactures, and the improve- "ment of the Native Product of the Kingdom, "which is not only the ſureſt Foundation of Fo- "reign Trade, but will be an effectual way for "providing and employing the Poor, whoſe "Circumſtances require your Conſideration and "Aſſiſtance.

"We give you full Aſſurance, that We will "Maintain your Religion, Laws and Liberties, "and Presbyterian Government, as it is Eſta- "bliſh'd. And it will be moſt acceptable to Us, "that you fall upon effectual Methods for pre- "venting the Growth of Popery, and diſcouraging "Vice and Immorality.

"We have had very many Eminent Proofs of "your Loyalty and good Affection to us, parti- "cularly in all your Proceedings in the laſt Seſ- "ſion, for which We return you Our hearty "Thanks. And ſeeing We have demanded "nothing of you upon this Occaſion, but what "is both neceſſary for your Preſervation againſt "the Deſigns or Attempts of your Enemies, and "for promoting the Welfare and Advantage of "the Nation; Therefore We doubt not but you "will act with Unanimity and Diſpatch, ſo as "all that comes before you may be concluded to "the mutual Satisfaction of Us and Our People. "And aſſuring you of Our Royal Favour "and Protection, We bid you heartily fare- "well.

After the Reading of this Letter, the Lord High Commiſſioner made a Speech, as did likewiſe the Lord Marchmont, Lord High Chancellor; which done, the Houſe adjourned to the 24*th*.

The Parliament was but juſt met again, when there came a ſharp Repreſentation to them from the Council General of the African and Indian Company, containing a tedious Rehearſal of their Loſſes, Diſappointments and Grievances: Which Repreſentation was back'd by an Addreſs from the Shire of Haddington: Importing, "That "after a long and expenſive War, they expected "to have enjoy'd the Bleſſing of a happily con- "cluded Peace, by the Re-eſtabliſhment of their "Foreign Trade, Encouragement of Home Ma-

1700. "Manufactures, Employing the Poor, in Improvement of their Native Product, and the "leſſening of their publick Burdens; but that "inſtead thereof, to their unſpeakable Loſs, "and almoſt ruin of the Nation, they found "their Trade Abroad ſenſibly Decay'd, and their "Coin carried out, by the Importation of Commodities from Places where theirs were Prohibited; That their Woollen and other Manufactures at Home received not that Encouragement which the Good of the Country required; And more eſpecially that their Company Trading to Africa and the Indies met "with ſo much Oppoſition from Abroad, and "got ſo little Support at Home, that after ſo "great a Loſs of Men, and Expence of Treaſure, it was too probable that their Settlement "in Caledonia would fall a Second time, under the "ſame unlucky Circumſtances as at Firſt, if "not prevented. That yet, after all thoſe "Hardſhips the Nation groan'd under, numerous Forces were kept on Foot, which occaſion'd them in times of Peace heavy and "unneceſſary Taxes, while their much Wealthier Neighbours were Disbanding their "Troops. All which Calamities they could "not but look upon as the Effect of the Diſpleaſure of Almighty God, for the Immoralities that every where abounded amongſt all "Ranks and Degrees of Men, to the Diſhonour "of God, and their Holy Religion, the Debauching the Spirits, and Corrupting the "Manners of the People.

There were likewiſe at the ſame time, ſeveral other Addreſſes and Petitions preſented to the Parliament, complaining of many general and particular Grievances, and praying for Redreſs thereof; after Reading of all which, a Motion being made and preſt that the Parliament ſhould Reſolve, That the Colony of Caledonia in Darien, was a Legal and Rightful Settlement in the Terms of the Act of Parliament, 1695. And that the Parliament would maintain and ſupport the ſame; His Majeſty's High Commiſſioner, fearing the Conſequences of this Vote, which was likely to be carried in the Affirmative, did immediately Adjourn the Parliament for Three Days; and at their next Meeting, Adjourned it further for Twenty Days. Whereupon the Plurality of the Members met that very Evening, and Sign'd an Addreſs to His Majeſty, wherein they Complain'd, of their having been interrupted by a ſudden Adjournment, while they were Debating a Motion concerning their Colony at Darien, which they conceiv'd was not agreeable to the 40th. Act of the 11th. Parliament of King James VI. wherein it is enacted, That nothing ſhould be done or commanded, which might directly or indirectly prejudice the Liberty of Free Voting, and Reaſoning of the Eſtates of Parliament. That by a ſubſequent Adjournment of Twenty Days, the Parliament was not permitted to come to any Reſolution in the preſſing Concerns of the Nation, which they could not think conſiſtent with that Article of their Claim of Right, whereby it was declared, That for the Redreſs of all Grievances, of ſtrengthning and preſerving the Laws, Parliaments ought to be frequently Call'd and allow'd to Sit, and the Freedom of Speech and Debate ſecur'd to the Members. Wherefore they earneſtly intreated His Majeſty, that he would be pleaſed to allow his Parliament to meet on the Day to which it was then Adjourn'd; and to Sit as long as might be neceſſary for Redreſſing the Grievances of the Nation.

This Addreſs being Preſented and Read to the King, His Majeſty ſaid He would Conſider of it. And at a Second Audience, the Lord Roſs one of the Commiſſioners in the Name of the reſt, Addreſſing himſelf to the King to this purpoſe: 1700. "That they were come by His Appointment to "receive His Anſwer to the Addreſs, which "they Preſented from the Loyal Members of "His Parliament of Scotland;" His Majeſty told them, "That he could give no Anſwer at that "time to their Petition; but they ſhould know "his Intentions in Scotland.

The Addreſſers finding that the Parliament was further Adjourn'd by Proclamation, and not knowing how ſoon it might be allowed to Sit, fram'd the Draught of a Second National Addreſs, to be Sign'd by the ſeveral Shires and Boroughs throughout the Kingdom: But while the ſame was carried on, His Majeſty Writ a Letter Directed to the Duke of Queensbury, and the Privy Council, which Letter was Publiſh'd in the manner of a Proclamation, and wherein the King Declar'd, "That if it had been poſſi-"ble for Him to have Agreed to the Reſolve "offer'd to aſſert the Right of the African Com-"panies Colony in America, though that me-"thod ſeem'd to Him unneceſſary, yet His Ma-"jeſty had from the beginning readily done it, "at the earneſt deſires of His Miniſters, and for "His Peoples Satisfaction, all other Conſidera-"tions ſet apart; but ſince that things were "much chang'd, His Majeſty being truly Sorry "for the Nation's Loſs, and moſt willing to "grant what might be needful for the relief and "eaſe of the Kingdom; He aſſured them, that "He would be ſo ready to Concur with His Par-"liament in every thing that could be reaſona-"bly expected of Him, for Aiding and Sup-"porting their Intereſts, and repairing their "Loſſes, that His good Subjects ſhould have "juſt Grounds to be ſenſible of his Hearty In-"clinations to advance the Wealth and Proſpe-"rity of that His Majeſty's Ancient Kingdom. "That His Majeſty was confident that that De-"claration would be ſatisfying to all good Men, "who would certainly be careful both of their "own Preſervation, and of the Honour and In-"tereſt of the Government, and not ſuffer "themſelves to be miſ-led, nor give any Advan-"tage to Enemies and ill-deſigning Perſons, "ready to catch hold of any opportunity, as "their Practices did too manifeſtly witneſs. "Concluding, That His Majeſty's neceſſary Ab-"ſence had occaſion'd the late Adjournment, "but as ſoon as God ſhould bring him back, "he was fully reſolv'd His Parliament ſhould "meet.

Death of the Duke of Glouceſter.

The King had not been many Weeks in Holland, when He received the Melancholy and ſurprizing News of the Death of the Duke of Glouceſter, which was in great meaſure occaſion'd by the over-heating of himſelf in the Solemn Obſervance of his Birth-day, Wedneſday, July the 24*th.* After the Ceremony was over, his Highneſs found himſelf fatigu'd and indiſpoſed; the next Day he complained of his Throat, and of a Sickneſs in his Stomach. All Friday he was Hot and Feveriſh. On Saturday Morning after taking away a little Blood, he thought himſelf better; but in the Evening, his Fever appearing more violent, a Bliſter was appli'd to him, and other proper Remedies adminiſtred. The ſame Day a Raſh appear'd on his Skin, which increaſing on Sunday, more Bliſters were laid on. In the Afternoon the Fever growing ſtronger, his Highneſs went into a Delirium, which laſted with his Life. He paſſed the Night as he did the preceeding, in ſhort broken Sleeps, and incoherent Talk. On Monday the Bliſters having taken Effect, and the Pulſe mending, the Phyſicians that attended him, thought it probable his Highneſs might recover; But about Eleven 1700. Eleven at Night his Highneſs was on the ſudden ſeiz'd with a Difficult Breathing, and could ſwallow nothing down, inſomuch that he expir'd before Midnight, being ten Years and five Days old.

Never was ſo great a Loſs ſo little lamented: Which may be aſcribed to the Different Parties that divided England; two of which, I mean the Jacobites and Republicans, look'd upon that Hopeful Young Prince as a future Obſtacle to their Reſpective Deſigns. Grief, upon this ſad Occaſion, ſeem'd to be confin'd within the Palace of St. James's, and to center in a more ſenſible manner, in the Royal Breaſts of the Princeſs and Prince of Denmark, who mourn'd not only for themſelves, but for the whole Nation. The Duke of Glouceſter was a Prince, whoſe Tender Conſtitution bended under the Weight of his Manly Soul; and was too much haraſs'd by the Vivacity of his Genius, to be of long Duration. He was ſcarce Seven Years old, when he underſtood the Terms of Fortification and Navigation, knew all the different Parts of a Strong Place, and a Ship of War, and could Marſhal a Company of Boys, who had voluntarily Liſted themſelves to attend him. He had early ſuck'd in his Mother's Piety, and was always attentive to Prayers; but he had a particular Averſeneſs to Dancing, and all Womaniſh Exerciſes; his only Delights being in Martial Sports and Hunting: In a Word, he was too forward to arrive at Maturity.

The King had ever expreſs'd a great Love for the Duke of Glouceſter, and was certainly very much affected by his Untimely Death. But not to dwell any longer upon this Afflicting Subject, His Majeſty was about this time waited on at Loo, by the Biſhop of Oſnabrug, Brother to the Duke of Lorrain; and gave Audience to the Preſident de la Tour, Envoy Extraordinary from the Duke of Savoy; and the Earl of Jerſey's going over to attend His Majeſty, occaſion'd various Speculations. In September His Majeſty was waited upon at Breda by the Duke of Bavaria; at the Grave by the Electoral Prince of Brandenburgh, and the Electoreſs Dowager of Hanover; who alſo accompanied His Majeſty to the Hague; where we may reaſonably ſuppoſe, conſidering the State of the Royal Family of England at that Juncture, by the Death of the Duke of Glouceſter, the Buſineſs of the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line was ſo far concerted, as to have it laid before the Parliament at their next Seſſions.

Wars in the North.

A League had been made between the Kings of Denmark and Poland, with the Czar of Muſcovy, to cruſh the Young King of Sweden with their United Force, and kindle a Violent War in the North. Whilſt the Poles ſat down before Riga in Livonia, the King of Denmark attack'd the Duke of Holſtein, the Brother-in-Law, and Confederate of the King of Sweden; and under Pretence of having ſome Forts demoliſhed, proceeded to ſubdue his whole Countrey, and laid Siege to Tonningen; tho' both without Succeſs. Several Princes and States concern'd themſelves in making up this Breach, but none ſo particularly as England and Holland; who finding an Amicable Mediation would not do, His Majeſty thought fit to ſend a Squadron of thirty Engliſh and Dutch Men of War into the Sound, beſides Fire-Ships and Bomb-Veſſels. This Squadron arriv'd at the Mouth of the Sound on the 20*th* of July; and about the ſame time the Fleet of Sweden put to Sea; whereupon the Daniſh Fleet quitted the Sound; and preſenly after the Conjunction of the Swedes with the Confederates, near Landſcroon, beyond the Iſle of Vere, they retir'd in ſome Confuſion, for fear of being attack'd under the Caſtle of Copenhagen.

The Confederates made a ſhew of Bombing that City, not with deſign to do it any Damage, though they might have laid it in Aſhes, but only to incline the King of Denmark to a Peace, which was much haſtened by the Deſcent of the Swediſh Troops headed by their King, in the Iſle of Zeeland. For His Daniſh Majeſty being coop'd up in Holſtein, by ſome Swediſh Frigats cruiſing on that Coaſt, and therefore unable to ſave his Capital City otherwiſe than by a Treaty; the Negotiations were reaſſum'd, and effectually carried on at Travendal, within a Mile of Segeburg, in Holſtein, where both the Daniſh and Confederate Armies lay; ſo that after a Debate of Six Days, the Peace was at length ſign'd on the 18*th* of Auguſt, between Denmark, Sweden, and the Duke of Holſtein, with the excluſion of Muſcovy and Poland. 1700.

Some Days before, Lieutenant-General Bannier, who commanded in the Town of Tonningen, when it was lately beſieged by the Danes, waited upon His Majeſty at Loo, being ſent by the Duke of Holſtein, in acknowledgment of His Majeſty's Protection; and about Six Weeks after, the King of Poland's Reſident at the Hague preſented a Memorial to the States-General, full of Aſſurances of Friendſhip from the King his Maſter, and acquainting them, That what induc'd Him to put off the Bombarding of Riga, when every thing was in readineſs for executing that Deſign, was chiefly the conſideration of the Loſs which divers Merchants, Subjects of the King of England, and the States-General, would have ſuffer'd thereby. His Majeſty having writ to the Czar of Muſcovy, upon the Occaſion of the Differences between Him and the Crown of Sweden, to preſs Him to an Accommodation, and offer His Mediation: And having likewiſe diſpatced ſeveral Important Affairs at the Hague, His Majeſty embark'd for England on the 17*th* of October (O. S.) ſafely landed at Harwich the next Day, din'd at Sir Iſaac Rebow's at Colcheſter on the 19*th*. lay at Chelmsford that Night, and on the 20*th* came to Hampton-Court. Four Days after, the Parliament of England was further prorogued to the 21*ſt* of September following.

Parliament in Scotland.

In the Interim, to conclude the Affairs of Scotland, to prepare for the meeting of that Parliament, on October 28. His Majeſty ſent this Letter to them from Loo.

"ready to give Our Assent to all other Laws
"that shall be brought in for the farther clear-
"ing and securing Property and Civil Rights,
"strengthening and facilitating the Administra-
"tion of Justice, restraining and punishing of "Crimes, and the preserving of the Peace and
"Quietness of the Kingdom; so that nothing
"shall be wanting on Our Parts to make Our "People both Happy and Contented.

"'Tis truly Our Regret, That We could not "agree to the asserting of the Right of the "Company's Colony in Darien; and you may "be very confident, if it had not been for In-
"vincible Reasons, the pressing Desires of all
"Our Ministers, with the Inclination of Our
"Good Subjects therein concern'd, had undoub-
"tedly prevail'd: But since we were, and are
"fully satisfied that Our yielding in that Matter
"had infallibly disturb'd the General Peace of "Christendom, and brought inevitably upon that
"Our Ancient Kingdom a heavy War, wherein
"We could expect no Assistance; and that now
"the State of that Affair is quite alter'd, We "doubt not but you will rest satisfied with these
"Plain Reasons.

"We are heartily sorry for the Company's
"Loss, in what hath happen'd; but We being
"most willing that the Company's Losses be re-
"paired, are ready to concur in any New Pro-
"ject or Design that shall be reasonably propos'd
"for the Good and Advantage of the Kingdom:
"We are most confident, the Wisdom of a Parli-
"ament will no longer stop upon this Obstructi-
"on. Having then this Happy Opportunity "for the promoting of the Good and Welfare of "the Kingdom, you will certainly lay hold upon
"it; and seeing you cannot but take notice of
"the Designs and Practices of Persons disaffect-
"ed both to Our Government, and to Your
"Peace; and how watchful and ready Our Ene-
"mies are, as well at Home as Abroad, and de-
"sirous of nothing more, than that Differences
"may fall in amongst us, We are persuaded you
"will be no less careful to avoid them. All that
"We demand, is, That you would provide Pro-
"per and Competent Supplies for such Forces as
"shall be necessary for the Kingdom's Security,
"and to maintain it in its present Happy Settle-
"ment.

We have continued the Duke of Queensbury to
"be our Commissioner, for representing Us in
"this Session of Parliament, as a Person of whose
"Ability and Fidelity We have made full Proof,
"and are assured will be to you acceptable; and
"therefore you are to give him full Credit: And
"We expect that in all Things you will proceed
"with that Wisdom, Calmness and Unanimity,
"as that this Session may be concluded to Our "Mutual Satisfaction, and to the Joy of all Our "Good Subjects. And so We bid you heartily
"farewell.

It must be observed, that during the Interval of the Two Sessions of Parliament, came the Melancholy News to Scotland, of their Peoples having abandoned, or rather surrender'd their New Settlement at Darien, which occasi-on'd the Company to represent to the Parliament, on the first Day of their Sessions, 1700.

"That for want of due Protection Abroad, some "Persons had been encourag'd to break in upon
"their Privileges even at Home." This Representation was back'd by a National Address, importing, "That they had formerly petition'd
"His Majesty for the Meeting of a Parliament
"to support and assert their Company's Trading
"to Africa, and the Indies; which the said Parlia-
"ment declar'd by an Unanimous Address on the "5th of August, 1698, to be their own and the "whole Nation's Concern: And His Majesty
"having been graciously pleased to allow the "Parliament to meet again on the 21st of May,
"1700. they could not but then express their "Sorrow for the unexpected Adjournment
"thereof, without their being permitted
"to do any thing towards the end of their "Meeting.

"That they did in all humble manner concur
"with the Dutiful Address then lately presented
"to His Majesty, from the Plurality of Mem-
"bers of Parliament, representing the Prejudices
"arising to the pressing Concerns of the Nation
"from that Adjournment, and to the Rights and "Liberties of Parliament, from the Manner of
"it. And that it was to their unexpressible Re-
"gret, that His Majesty did seem to be prevail'd
"upon by the Misrepresentations of Evil Coun-
"sellors, to issue out Proclamations, further ad-
"journing the Parliament from Time to Time,
"whilst not only their said Company stood in
"need of the Countenance, Support, and Pro-
"tection promis'd to it by His Majesty in Par"liament; and more especially upon the Misfor-
"tunes that had then lately befallen it, by the "Success of Enemies against its Colony of Cale-
"donia; and whilst the Nation it self remained
"under the pressure of such Grievances as could "only be redress'd in Parliament.

"That to the end His Majesty might have
"a just View thereof, they humbly represented
"to Him, how indispensibly necessary it
"was,

"That the Protestant Religion be secur'd against
"the Growth of Popery, Immorality, and Pro-
"phaneness. That Freedom and Independency
"of that ancient Kingdom, and the Nation's
"Right and Title to Caledonia, as holding of his "Majesty's Crown of Scotland, be Asserted and "Supported. That the good Inclinations of "His Majesty and Successors of Scotland, be
"preserv'd from Foreign Influence, as well as
"from the Misrepresentations and pernicious Coun-
"sels of unnatural Countrymen. That the fre-
"quency and sitting of Parliaments be secur'd and
"ascertained pursuant to the Claim of Right.
"That dangerous Influences upon the Freedom
"of Parliaments, either by Gratuities, Pensions,
"and Farms of any Branch of the Revenue, and
"the disposing of any part of the Revenue, or
"annexed Property of the Crown, otherwise
"than according to Law, for the necessary Sup-
"port of the Government, be preserv'd. That
"the publick Credit be restored, and an Enqui-
"ry made into the application of the Funds,
"laid on, and appointed by Parliament, for the "Support of the Government, and payment of "the Army. That the Security of the Nation
"and Government be settled in a duly regulated
"National Force, instead of a Standing Army,
"so burthensome to the Country, and dangerous
"to its Liberties. That the manner of applying
"the Security, which they had by the Claim of
"Right for the personal Freedom of the Subject

1700. "againſt long and arbitrary Impriſonment, as "well as againſt purſuits upon old and obſolete "Laws, be eſpecially declar'd. That the Trade "of the Nation be encourag'd and advanc'd, by "duly regulating its Export and Import, by diſ- "charging prejudicial Branches thereof, by fix- "ing their Current Money, by encouraging "Manufactures, by employing the Poor; and "more eſpecially by countenancing and aſſiſting "their ſaid Company, in the Proſecution of its "lawful Undertakings: And that all ſuch Arti- "cles of Grievances preſented to His Majeſty "by the Eſtates of that Kingdom, in the Year "1699. as had not been redreſſed; together "with ſuch other Grievances as the Parliament "ſhould at the meeting thereof, find the Nation "aggrieved with, be redreſſed in Parliament.

"That His Majeſty having by His Royal Let- "ter of the 29*th* of May 1699. been graciouſly "pleas'd to declare, and give full Aſſurance to "their Repreſentatives in the meeting of the "Eſtates, which ſettled the Crown and Royal "Dignity of that Realm on His Majeſty, That "they ſhould always find His Majeſty ready to "Protect them, and to aſſiſt the Eſtates in mak- "ing ſuch Laws as might ſecure their Religion, "Liberties and Properties; and to prevent and "redreſs whatſoever might be juſtly grievous to "them. That His Majeſty would never believe "that the true Intereſt of His People and the "Crown could be oppoſite: And that His Ma- "jeſty would always account it His greateſt Pre- "rogative to Aſſent to ſuch Laws as might pro- "mote Peace and Wealth in this Kingdom.

"They therefore reckon'd it their Duty hum- "bly to deſire and aſſuredly to expect, that His "Majeſty would be graciouſly pleas'd to ſatisfy "the longing Deſires and earneſt Expectations "of His People, by allowing His Parliament to "meet as ſoon as poſſible; and when met, to ſit "till they had fully deliberated upon and came to "ſolid Reſolutions on the great and weighty "Concerns of the Nation; and grant ſuch In- "ſtructions to His Commiſſioners as might em- "power him to paſs ſuch Acts as the great Coun- "ſel of the Nation might think moſt conducive "to the true Honour of His Majeſty and Go- "vernment, the Welfare of that Realm, both as "to its Religious and Civil Intereſts, and to the "full quieting of the Minds of all His Majeſty's "good People". To this Addreſs which was preſented to the King on the 16*th* of November, by the Lord Yeſter, with ſome other Commiſ- ſioners, His Majeſty made Anſwer: "That He "could not take further Notice of it, ſeeing the "Parliament was then met, and He had made "then a Declaration of His Mind for the good "of His People, wherewith He hop'd all His "faithful Subjects would be ſatisfied.

Wiſer Meaſures in Scotland.

The Parliament of Scotland having ſat near Three Months, amidſt Heats and threatning Feuds about the Miſcarriage of their Settlement at Darien: By the prudent Temper of the King, and the good Conduct of His High Commiſſioner, they came at laſt to this cool and honeſt Reſolution, 21*ſt*. January; That in Conſideration of their great Deliverance by His Majeſty, and in that, next under God, their Safety and Happineſs depended wholly on the Preſervation of his Majeſty's Perſon, and the Security of His Government, they would ſtand by and Support both His Majeſty and His Government to the utmoſt of their Power; and maintain ſuch Forces as ſhould be requiſite for thoſe ends. In purſuance of this good Diſpoſition, the Lord High Commiſ- ſioner ſoon after gave the Royal Aſſent to an Act for keeping on Foot Three Thouſand Men till the 1*ſt* of December, 1702. And to another, for a Land Tax to maintain thoſe Troops. Which done, he communicated the King's Letter; where- in it was deſired, He might have Eleven hundred Men on His own Account, to the firſt of June following; which was readily complied with; and then they were Prorogued to the 6*th* of May. 1700.

"I. The Peace re-eſtabliſhed by the Treaty "at Ryſwick, between His moſt Chriſtian Maje- "ſty, His Britannick Majeſty, and the Lords the "States General of the United Provinces, their "Heirs and Succeſſors, their Kingdoms, States "and Subjects, ſhall be Firm and Conſtant; and

1700. "their Majeſties, and the States General, ſhall "reciprocally contribute to the utmoſt of their "Power, to the Advantage and Benefit of the "one and the other.

"II. In regard the Principal End which His "moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, His Majeſty of Great "Britain, and the ſaid Lords the States General "propoſe to themſelves, is to maintain the Ge-"neral Tranquility of Europe, they cannot but "be greatly grieved to ſee, that the Condition "of the King of Spain's Health has continued "for ſome time ſo extreamly languiſhing, that "there is nothing more to be fear'd than the "Death of that Prince; tho' they cannot think "of that Event without Affliction, by reaſon of "the ſincere and real Friendſhip they have for "him: They have in the mean time deem'd it "ſo much the more neceſſary to foreſee, that "His Catholick Majeſty not having any Chil-"dren, the Vacancy of the Succeſſion will in-"fallibly raiſe a new War, if the moſt Chriſtian "King makes good His Pretenſions, and the "Claims of Monſeigneur the Dauphin, and his "Poſterity, to the whole Succeſſion of Spain; "and that the Emperor will alſo ſupport His "Pretenſions, and thoſe of the King of the Ro-"mans, and the Arch-Duke Charles, his Second "Son, or of His other Children, Males or Fe-"males, to the ſaid Inheritance.

"III. And in regard the Two Lords the "Kings, and the Lords the States-General, de-"ſire above all things the Preſervation of the "Publick Repoſe, and to avoid a new War in "Europe, by an Accommodation of ſuch Diſ-"putes and Differences as may ariſe by reaſon of "the ſaid Succeſſion, or out of a Jealouſie of "thoſe too many Dominions being united under "one and the ſame Prince, they have thought fit "to take Meaſures before-hand, requiſite to pre-"vent the Misfortunes which the ſaid Accident "of that King's Dying without Iſſue may pro-"duce.

"IV. To this purpoſe, it is Accorded and A-"greed, That if the ſaid Accident ſhould hap-"pen, the Moſt Chriſtian King, as well in his "own Name, as in the Name of Monſeigneur "the Dauphin, His Children, Male or Female, "Heirs and Succeſſors, Born, or to be Born; "as alſo my ſaid Lord the Dauphin, for himſelf, "his Children, Male or Female, Heirs or Suc-"ceſſors, Born, or to be Born, ſhall hold them-"ſelves ſatisfied, as they do by theſe Preſents "hold themſelves ſatisfied; That Monſeigneur "the Dauphin ſhall have for his Share, in full "Propriety, Poſſeſſion, Plenary Extinction of "all his Pretenſions to the Succeſſion of Spain, "to Enjoy for Him, his Heirs, Succeſſors, De-"ſcendants, Male or Female, Born, or to be "Born, to Perpetuity, without being ever mo-"leſted, under any pretence whatever of Right "or Pretenſion, even by Reſignation, Appeal, "Revolt, or any other way whatever, on the "part of the Emperor, the King of the Romans, "the moſt Serene Arch-Duke Charles his Second "Son, the Arch-Dutcheſſes, and his other Chil-"dren, Male or Female, Deſcendants, Heirs "and Succeſſors, Born, or to be Born; the King-"doms of Naples and Sicily, in the ſame manner "as the Spaniards poſſeſs 'em at preſent; all Pla-"ces depending upon the Monarchy of Spain, "upon the Coaſt of Toſcany, and Iſlands adja-"cent, comprized under the Names of Sancto "Stephano, Porto Horcole, Orbitello, Talamone, Porto "Longo, Piombino, in the ſame manner as the "Spaniards hold 'em at preſent; the City and "Marquiſate of Final, in the ſame manner as "the Spaniards now enjoy 'em; the Province of "Guipuſcoa, namely, the City of Fontarabie, and "St. Sebaſtian, ſeated in the ſaid Province, and 1700.
"eſpecially the Port du Paſſage, with what is com-"prehended therein; with this Reſtriction only, "That if there be any Places depending upon "the ſaid Province, which are ſeated beyond "the Pyreneans, and other Mountains of Navarre, "Alava, or Biſcay, in the Province of Guipuſcoa, "they ſhall remain to France; and the Paſſages "of the ſaid Mountains, and the ſaid Mountains "which are between the ſaid Provinces of Gui-"puſcoa, Navarre, Alava, and Biſcay, to which "they ſhall appertain, ſhall be divided between "France and Spain; ſo that there ſhall remain as "much of the ſaid Mountains and Paſſages to "France on her ſide, as ſhall remain to Spain on "her ſide. The whole, with the Fortifications, "Ammunition, and Proviſion, Powder, Bullets, "Cannon, Gallies and Chiorms, which ſhall be-"long to the King of Spain at the time of his "Deceaſe without Iſſue, to be annexed to the "Kingdoms, Places, Iſles, and Provinces, which "are to compoſe Monſeigneur the Dauphin's Share. "Nevertheleſs, be it underſtood, That the Gal-"lies, Chiorms, and other Effects belonging to "the King of Spain, throughout the Kingdom "of Spain, and other Dominions, which fall to "the moſt Serene Arch-Duke's ſhare, ſhall re-"main to him; thoſe that belong to the King-"doms of Naples and Sicily, before they deſcend "to Monſeigneur the Dauphin, as already has been "agreed. Moreover, the Territories of Mon-"ſeigneur the Duke of Lorrain; that is to ſay, "the Dutchies of Lorrain and Barr, as Duke "Charles IV. of that Name poſſeſs'd 'em, and "ſuch as were reſtor'd by the Treaty of Ryſwick, "ſhall be relinquiſh'd and ſet over to Monſeigneur "the Dauphin, his Children, and Heirs and Suc-"ceſſors Males, Born, or to be Born, in full "Propriety and Plenary Poſſeſſion, inſtead of "the Dutchy of Milan, which ſhall be relin-"quiſh'd and ſet over in Exchange to the ſaid "Duke of Lorrain, his Children, Male and Fe-"male, Heirs, Deſcendants, Succeſſors, Born, "or to be Born, in full Propriety and Plenary "Poſſeſſion, who will not refuſe ſo advantage-"ous a Share; underſtanding withal that the "County of Bitche ſhall belong to the Prince of "Vaudemont, who ſhall re-enter into the Lands "which he formerly enjoy'd, which have, or "ought to be Surrendred to him by virtue of the "Treaty of Ryſwick. In conſideration of which "Kingdoms, Iſlands, Provinces, and Places, the "ſaid moſt Chriſtian King, as well in his own "Name, as in the Name of Monſeigneur the "Dauphin, his Children, Male or Female, Heirs "or Succeſſors, Born, or to be Born; who has "alſo given for that Effect His full Power to the "Sieur Count de Tallard, and the Sieur Count de "Briord, promiſe and engage to renounce upon "the Vacancy of the ſaid Spaniſh Succceſſion, "as in that Caſe they now renounce by theſe "Preſents, all Rights and Pretenſions to the ſaid "Crown of Spain, and all other Kingdoms, "Iſlands, Dominions and Places, which at this "preſent depend upon it, excepting what is decla-"red above to be their Share. And of all this "they ſhall cauſe to be drawn up ſolemn Acts, "in the ſtrongeſt and moſt Authentick Form that "may be; which ſhall be deliver'd at the time "of the Exchange of the Ratifications of this "preſent Treaty, to the King of Great Britain, "and the Lords the States General.

"V. All the Cities, Places, and Ports, Situa-"ted in the Kingdoms and Provinces which are "to compoſe the Share of the ſaid Monſeigneur "the Dauphin, ſhall be preſerv'd, without being "demoliſh'd.

1700. "VI. The ſaid Crown of Spain, and the other "Kingdoms, Iſlands, Dominions, Countries, and "Places, which the Catholick King poſſeſſes at "preſent, as well within as without Europe, ſhall "be given and relinquiſh'd to the moſt Serene "Arch-Duke Charles, the Emperor's Second Son, "except what was declar'd in the IVth. Article, "which compoſes Monſeigneur the Dauphin's ſhare, "and the Dutchy of Milan, in purſuance of the "ſaid IVth. Article, in full Propriety and Plena-"ry Poſſeſſion, as his Share; and in Extinction "of all his Pretenſions to the ſaid Succeſſion of "Spain; to be enjoy'd by him, and his Heirs and "Succeſſors, born or to be born, to perpetuity, "never to be moleſted, upon any pretence what-"ever of Rights and Pretenſions, directly and "indirectly, whether by Ceſſion, Appeal, Re-"volt, or any other way, on the part of the "moſt Chriſtian King, my ſaid Lord the Dau-"phin, or his Children, Male or Female, his "Heirs and Succeſſors, born or to be born. In "the lieu of which Crown of Spain, and other "Kingdoms and Dominions, Countries and Pla-"ces which depend upon it, the Emperor, as "well in his own Name, as in the Names of the "King of the Romans, the moſt Serene Arch-"Duke Charles his Second Son, the Arch-Dut-"cheſſes his Daughters, his Children, their Chil-"dren, Male or Female, their Heirs, Deſcen-"dants or Succeſſors, born or to be born, ſhall "hold themſelves ſatisfied, That the moſt Se-"rene Arch-Duke Charles ſhall have in Extincti-"on of all other their Pretenſions to the Succeſ-"ſion of Spain, the Reſignation made as above. "The ſaid Emperor as well in his own Name, "as in the Names of the King of the Romans, "and the moſt Serene Arch-Duke Charles his "Second Son, the Arch-Dutcheſſes his Daugh-"ters, their Children, Male and Female, their "Heirs and Succeſſors; as alſo the King of the "Romans in His own Name, ſhall at the time "when they ſhall enter into the preſent Treaty, "and ratifie it, and the ſaid Arch-Duke Charles "when he comes of Age, renounce all other "Rights and Pretenſions to the Kingdoms, "Iſlands, Dominions, Countries, and Places, "which compoſe the Share and Portions aſſign-"ed, as above, to Monſeigneur the Dauphin, and "to him who ſhall have the Dutchy of Milan in "Exchange for what ſhall be given to Monſeig-"neur the Dauphin: And that of all theſe things "there ſhall ſpeedily be drawn up ſolemn Acts "in the beſt and moſt Authentick Form that "may be; that is to ſay, the Emperor, and "the King of the Romans, at the time when they "ſhall ratify the preſent Treaty, and the Arch-"Duke when he ſhall be of Age, which ſhall be "deliver'd to His Britannick Majeſty, and the "Lords the States-General.

"VII. Immediately after the Exchange of "the Ratifications of the preſent Treaty, it ſhall "be imparted to the Emperor, who ſhall be in-"vited to enter into it: But if within Three "Months after, to reckon from the Day of the "ſaid Communication and Invitation, or from "the Day that the ſaid Catholick King ſhall hap-"pen to die; if it ſhould ſo fall out, within the "Term of Three Months, His Imperial Maje-"ſty, or the King of the Romans, ſhall refuſe to "enter into it, and to agree to the Share aſſign'd "the Arch-Duke; the Two Lords the Kings, "and the Lords the States-General, ſhall agree "upon a Prince to whom the Share ſhall be gi-"ven. And in caſe, that notwithſtanding the "preſent Agreement, the ſaid moſt Serene Duke "will take Poſſeſſion of the Portion that ſhall "fall to him, before he had accepted the preſent "Treaty, or the Portion aſſigned to Monſeig-"neur the Dauphin, or to him who ſhall have 1700. "the Dutchy of Milan in Exchange, as is above-"mentioned; the ſaid Lords the Kings, and the "Lords the States-General, by Virtue of this "Convention ſhall hinder him with all their "Force.

"VIII. The moſt Serene Arch-Duke ſhall not "paſs into Spain, nor into the Dutchy of Milan, "during the Life of His Catholick Majeſty, but "by common Conſent, and no otherwiſe.

"IX. If the moſt Serene Arch-Duke happens "to die without Iſſue, whether before or after "the Death of the Catholick King; the Share "which is above aſſign'd him by the Sixth Article "of this Treaty, ſhall paſs to ſuch Child of the "Emperor, Male or Female, (except the King "of the Romans) to whom His Imperial Maje-"ſty ſhall think fit to aſſign it. And in caſe His "Imperial Majeſty happens to die before ſuch "Aſſignation, it may be made by the King of "the Romans. But all this upon Condition, That "the ſaid Partition ſhall never be re-united, nor "belong to the Perſon of Him who ſhall be Em-"peror, or King of the Romans; or who ſhall be "both the one and the other, either by Succeſ-"ſion, Will, Contract of Marriage, Donation, "Exchange, Ceſſion, Appeal, Revolt, or other "way. And in like manner, the Share of the "moſt Serene Arch-Duke ſhall never be united, "nor belong to the Perſon of Him who ſhall be "King of France, or Dauphin, or both together; "whether by Succeſſion, Will, Contract of Mar-"riage, Donation, Exchange, Ceſſion, Appeal, "Revolt, or any other way whatever.

"X. The King of Spain deceaſing without Iſ-"ſue, and the ſaid Accident coming to paſs, the "ſaid Lords the Kings, and the States-General, "oblige themſelves to leave the whole Succeſſi-"on in the ſame Condition it ſhall then be, "without Seizure of the whole, or any part, di-"rectly or indirectly: But every Prince ſhall "immediately take Poſſeſſion of what is aſſign'd "him for his Share, when he ſhall for his own "part have given Satisfaction upon the Fourth "and Sixth Articles preceding this. And if he "finds therein any Difficulty, the Two Lords "the Kings, and the Lords the States-General, "to the end that every one may be put into his "Share according to the Agreement, and that it "may have its full Effect, engage themſelves to "give requiſite Succour and Aſſiſtance of Men "and Shipping, by Land and Sea, by Force to "conſtrain thoſe that ſhall oppoſe themſelves a-"gainſt the ſaid Agreement.

"XI. If the ſaid Lords the Kings, or the "States-General, ſhall be Attack'd by any one "whatever, by reaſon of this Agreement or the "Execution of it; they ſhall mutually aſſiſt each "other with all their Forces, and ſhall make "themſelves Guarantees of the punctual Execu-"tion of the ſaid Treaty, and the Renunciati-"ons made in purſuance thereof.

"XII. All Kings, Princes and States, who "will enter thereinto, ſhall be admitted by this "preſent Treaty; and it ſhall be lawful for the "Two Lords the Kings, the States-General, and "for every one of them in particular, to requeſt "and invite whom they ſhall think fit into the "preſent Treaty, and likewiſe to be Guarantees "of the Execution of the ſaid Treaty and Re-"nunciations therein contained.

"XIII. And for the greater Security of the "Repoſe of Europe, the ſaid Kings, Princes and "States, ſhall not only be invited to be Guaran-"tees of the ſaid Execution of this preſent Trea-"ty, and of the Validity of the ſaid Renuncia-"tions, as above-mention'd; but if any one of "thoſe Princes, in whoſe Favour the ſaid Partitions

1700. " tions are made, ſhall go about to trouble the " Methods ſettled by the ſaid Treaty, to attempt " new Enterprizes contrary to it, and ſo to ag- " grandize themſelves to the Prejudice of each " other, under any pretence whatever; it ſhall be " deem'd to be the Duty of the ſaid Guaranty, to " extend it ſelf in that Caſe; ſo that the Kings, " Princes and States, who promiſe it, ſhall be " bound to employ their Forces in Oppoſition " to the ſaid Enterprizes, and to maintain all " things in the Condition contain'd in the ſaid " Articles.

" XIV. That if any Prince, whoever he be, " ſhall oppoſe taking Poſſeſſion of the Shares a- " greed, the ſaid Lords the Kings, and the States- " General, ſhall be obliged to aſſiſt each other " againſt the ſaid Oppoſition, and to hinder it " with all their Forces. And there ſhall be an " Agreement made, preſently after the Signing " of this preſent Treaty, touching the Proportion " which every one is to contribute, as well by Sea " as Land.

" XV. The preſent Treaty, and all other Acts " done in Purſuance of it, or which may have " any Reference to it; and particularly the So- " lemn Acts which His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, " and Monſeigneur the Dauphin, are oblig'd to " perform by Virtue of the Fourth Article above- " written, ſhall be regiſter'd in the Parliament of " Paris according to their Form and Tenor, and " according to the uſual Cuſtom; to be in force " according to the Conditions therein contain'd; " ſo ſoon as the Emperor ſhall be enter'd into the " preſent Treaty, or at the end of Three Months " which are allow'd for that purpoſe, if He does " not enter into it ſooner. " XVI. The Ratifications of the Two Lords " the Kings, and the Lords the States-General, " ſhall be all Three exchang'd at the ſame time " at London, within the ſpace of Three Weeks; " to reckon from the Day that the ſaid Lords the " States-General ſhall have Sign'd, and ſooner if " it may be done." Done and Signed at London, March the 15*th*. N. S. 1700. by Us the Plenipotentiaries of France and England, and of the Lords the States-General: It being agreed, That the Signature of this preſent Treaty ſhall be made in ſuch manner. In Faith of which, We have Sign'd this preſent Treaty with our Hands, and ſet hereto the Seals of our Arms.

Diſadvantages of this Treaty.

France was the firſt Party that made this Treaty Publick, being then in Earneſt with it: The other contracting Powers propoſed it to ſeveral Princes and States for their Acceptance and Guaranty. But the thing ſeem'd ſtrange, and it does not appear that any but the immediate Authors would come into it. As for the Emperor, He thought himſelf aggriev'd by it, as diſinheriting the Auſtrian Family of their Claim of Succeſſion to the Crown of Spain. The great Ends which the Engliſh and Dutch had in it were certainly the Peace and Balance of Europe, and forming a Barrier in the Netherlands, to ſecure Holland and the Empire: There is no reaſon to queſtion the Sincerity, and in ſuch a juncture even the Wiſdom of King William in this Tranſaction. But a Suſpicion lies hard upon the French King, that he meant it for an Amuſement only to the Allies, and for an Argument of drawing in the Spaniards more effectually to deſire his Grandſon for their Sole Monarch: For it is certain that the Miniſters of France in the Court of Spain made uſe of this Partition to incenſe the Grandees againſt the Indignity of tearing their Monarchy in pieces; and made it a convincing and prevalent Argument to obtain a Will for declaring the Duke of Anjou a univerſal Heir. This Memorable Will being the Management of the Prime Miniſter Cardinal Portacarero, upon a reſult of the Intriegues of the French Ambaſſador the Marquis de Harcourt, was Sign'd by the Crazy and Half-Dead King of Spain on the Second of October, who within a Month after Expired, on November the Firſt. N. S. He was Born the 6*th*. of November, 1661. and had Succeeded his Father Philip IV. in 1666. 1700.

King of Spain's Will.

Immediately upon this Prince's Death, the Will was open'd in the preſence of the Spaniſh Court, and a Copy of it was diſpatch'd by the appointed Regents to the King of France. The Dutch Envoy at Madrid had ſent Intelligence of this Intreigue to the Lord Mancheſter, then Ambaſſador at the Court of France: Upon which his Excellency, who was ever watchful on the French Proceedings, deſired a Private Audience, wherein he preſt to know what His Majeſty intended to do in this Conjuncture; putting him in mind of his Solemn Engagement to the King his Maſter. To this the French King anſwered, " That he would not take a final Reſolution, " till his Excellency had an Anſwer to his Diſ- " patches to England, which he deſired he would " not Communicate to the Dutch Ambaſſador." However, to carry on the Diſſimulation and the Project, other Conſiderations prevail'd, and His Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty ſoon after declared His Acceptance of the ſaid Will, without Conſulting thoſe Allies with whom He had ſo lately concluded a Treaty of Partition. So that on November the 16*th*. N. S. the Duke of Anjou in His Grandfather's Court was declared and ſaluted King of Spain: Beſides which, two remarkable Inſtruments were drawn up, contrary to the meaning of the Will, to preſerve his Title to the Crown of France, in caſe his Elder Brother Died without Inheritable Iſſue. This plainly ſhew'd, that the Houſe of Bourbon aim'd at the Union of the two Crowns, as a greater ſtep to the Univerſal Monarchy.

Artifices of France.

Count Briord the French Ambaſſador in Holland was labouring to put a Colour upon this courſe Proceeding of His Maſter: He told Mr. Stanhop the Engliſh Envoy there, by way of ſounding, " That he found his Maſter had ac- " cepted the Will; but he was inform'd the " Engliſh did not like it; and therefore he ſhould " be glad to know his Thoughts upon it." Mr. Stanhope gravely reply'd, that ſuch a Queſtion was too weighty for an Extempore Anſwer: But (ſays he) I hear you have communicated it to the Penſioner Heinſius; pray, what does he think of it? The Penſioner, reply'd the French Ambaſſador, told me, he would impart it to the States. And ſo will I (ſaid Mr. Stanhope) to the King my Maſter.

1700. ſter. Not long after, Count Briord preſented a Memorial to the States, repreſenting the inſuperable Difficulties of the Partition, which if adher'd to muſt be the cauſe of Univerſal War; and therefore His Maſter had choſe rather to anſwer the end of that Treaty, which was to preſerve the Peace and Tranquility of Europe. Soon after this, Count Briord at his Publick Audience, after he had delivered His Maſter's Letter to the States, made this Harangue to them.

Harangue of the French Miniſter.

My Lords,

"I Come to give your Lordſhips new Aſſurances of the King my Maſter's conſtant Amity, and his Sincere Deſire to obſerve Inviolably the laſt Peace. All the ſteps His Majeſty has trod ſince it was concluded, may convince the whole World, that he has no other Deſigns, than to maintain the Publick Tranquility; of which His Majeſty thought He had given a convincing Proof in accepting the Deceaſed King of Spain's Will. In a Word, he confirms that Equilibrium ſo long wiſh'd for over all Europe; and His Union with the Crown of Spain will only ſerve to ſettle Peace over all Chriſtendom. And this is the only Aim which He propoſed to himſelf in renouncing ſo great Advantages to His Crown.

"My Lords, His Majeſty hopes, That your Lordſhips, convinc'd of this Truth, will correſpond with ſentiments ſo favourable to the Publick Good, and that they will contribute to the Preſervation of ſo great a Bleſſing as that of Peace. No body doubts but that it is the Fountain of all Bleſſings; and your Republick of all the Potentates in Europe, has the greateſt reaſon to preſerve it; and it is at preſent ſo well eſtabliſh'd, that you have now no more to do, but to enjoy the Effects of your long Labours and infinite Expences. 'Tis by the means of this Peace that you will uphold this Flouriſhing State, and enlarge that Trade which you have extended to the Extremities of the Earth. Your ſincere Union with His Majeſty will be the moſt ſolid foundation of the Continuance of this Peace; and your Puiſſance is ſo well known to all the World, that no body can ſuſpect that any other Motives but the Publick Good engage you to deſire Peace.

"The ſituation of your Republick is ſuch, as enables it not only to preſerve Peace at Home, but to ſecure it to the Greateſt Part of the States of Europe. That you may attain to ſo deſir'd a Bleſſing, you have no more to do than to baniſh all ill-grounded Suſpicions, and anticipated Fears, and to ſtop your Ears againſt the ſollicitations of the Maligners of the King's Glory. Recal to mind, My Lords, that happy time, when by your Union with France, and by a perfect Correſpondence, both Parties laboured mutually to procure to themſelves all manner of Advantages. It lies in your Lordſhips power to reſtore all things to the ſame Condition. By ſuch a Conduct you will engage the King to continue that Good Will of His, which you your ſelves acknowledged to be ſo precious in your Eſteem. His Majeſty demands no more for the Price of His Friendſhip, but that you will concur with him in the maintenance of this Peace, ſo beneficial, and ſo much deſired by all the Provinces.

"It would be to no Purpoſe, My Lords, for me to enlarge upon the Advantages of the Peace. This Aſſembly, which is compoſed of Perſons ſo Wiſe, ſo Conſummate in the Management of Affairs, and ſo Zealous for the Publick Good, has queſtionleſs no other Deſigns, nor any other Intentions than to promote ſo great a Bleſſing. But a Man of my Profeſſion is not accuſtom'd to long Speeches. I conclude then, proteſting to your Lordſhips, that I ſhall always endeavour to prove more by Deeds than Words, that never any Miniſter came into theſe Provinces with better Intentions; and that I have for this Illuſtrious Aſſembly, all that Veneration which they juſtly Merit; and that I ſhall always have a perfect Honour for all the particular Members that Compoſe it. 1700.

The Force as well as Fraud of France.

This Speech and the preceeding Memorial, however ſoft and ſmooth, would have had but little effect on their High and Mightineſſes, had not the French at the ſame time over-run the Spaniſh Netherlands, and by Stratagem ſeiz'd ſeveral ſtrong Towns, partly Gariſon'd by Dutch; whereby the States were brought under a Neceſſity of acknowledging the Duke of Anjou's Title to Spain, to get their Soldiers again, who nevertheleſs were not without difficulty ſuffer'd to return. King William in His own Heart was incens'd at this violent Breach of the French Faith and Honour; though He muſt forbear to ſhew His Reſentment, till He ſhould be in a better condition of demanding Satisfaction. In the mean time, when Count Tallard (after His Return from Paris, whither he went every Year from Holland, to Acquaint His Maſter with the Negotiations) came to wait on His Majeſty at Kenſington; the King then looking out at a Window, contented Himſelf to ſay to him, Monſieur l' Ambaſſadeur, le Tems eſt bien change. By which Expreſſion His Majeſty meant not only the Alteration of the Weather, but chiefly the change of Time, and Circumſtances of Things. And the Ambaſſador ſoon perceiv'd a greater Alteration in the King's Countenance and Reception of him; and therefore on February 3. he took his Publick Audience of Leave of His Majeſty, and ſoon after ſet out for France, to return no more till he was brought over a Priſoner of War. In his room one Monſieur Pouſſin was appointed to ſtay, but with no better Character than that of Secretary.

New Parliament in England.

Within few days after His Majeſty's Return from Holland, the Parliament met at Weſtminſter on October 24. and was further Prorogued to the 21*ſt*. of November following. His Majeſty had broke off with them in ſilence the laſt Seſſion, and was not much inclin'd to meet them again: And therefore on November 21*ſt*. the Parliament was further Prorogued to January 15. and in the mean time was Diſſolved by Proclamation, dated 19. December, and a New Parliament called to begin at Weſtminſter, February 6.

He conferred the Honour of Knighthood upon Robert Beachcroft, Eſq; one of the Sheriffs. On November 5. His Majeſty was pleaſed in Council to deliver His Privy Seal into the Cuſtody of Ford Earl of Tankerville; and to admit Sir Charles Hedges to be one of His Principal Secretaries of State, and Privy Counſellor. The next day the New Call of Serjeants, Sir Joſeph Jekyll of the Middle-Temple, Knight, Chief Juſtice of Cheſter; John Green of Lincolns-Inn, Eſq; Charles Whiteacre, Thomas Gibbons, Philip Neve, Nicholas Hooper, James Munday, John Prat, James Selby, Thomas Carthew, of the Inner-Temple, Eſquires; Thomas Barry, John Hook, Lawrence Agar, and John Smith, of Grays-Inn, Eſquiers; John Keen, Henry Turner, of Lincolns-Inn, Eſquires; Robert Tracy, and William Hall, of the Middle-

Before the meeting of a New Parliament, Charles Mountague, Esq; having contracted some Envy and some Hatred by his prevailing Interest at Court, and his long Ascendant in the House of Commons, obtain'd now the Favour of removing to the House of Lords, being Created a Baron of England, by the Stile and Title of Baron of Halifax, in the County of York. The Reasons of his Advancement were expresst in his Patent.

A new Ministry.

To sweeten the Humours and Measures of the New Parliament, the King was willing to oblige those Men, who were more eminently distinguished by the Name of the Church-Party, who had thought themselves neglected. And therefore on Dec. 12. His Majesty in Council was pleased to declare the Right Honourable Lawrence Earl of Rochester, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; and Sidney Lord Godolphin, first Commissioner of the Treasury, in the room of Mr. Mountague, now Lord Halifax, who was made Auditor of the Exchequer.

The Parliament, according to the Writs of Summons, met at Westminster on February 6. and was Prorogued to Monday February 10. when the King came to the House of Peers, and sending for the Commons, signified to them by the Lord Keeper, That they should forthwith proceed to the choice of a fit Person to be their Speaker, and present him to His Majesty. The next day the Commons returning to their House made choice of Robert Harley, Esq; who was the next day presented and approved by the King; after which, His Majesty made this Speech to Both Houses.

Mr. Harley Speaker.

1700.

King's Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"OUR great Misfortune in the Loss of the Duke of Glocester, hath made it absolutely Necessary, that there should be a further Provision for the Succession to the Crown in the Protestant Line, after Me and the Princess. The Happiness of the Nation, and the Security of Our Religion, which is Our chiefest Concern, seems so much to depend upon this, that I cannot doubt but it will meet with a general Concurrence: And I earnestly recommend it to your early and effectual Consideration.

"The Death of the late King of Spain, with the Declaration of His Successor to that Monarchy, has made so great an Alteration in the Affairs Abroad, that I must desire you very maturely to Consider their present State; and I make no doubt but your Resolutions thereupon will be such, as shall be most conducing to the Interest and Safety of England, the Preservation of the Protestant Religion in general, and the Peace of all Europe.

"These things are of such Weight, that I have thought them most proper for the Consideration of a New Parliament, to have the more immediate Sense of the Kingdom in so great a Conjuncture.

"I must desire of you, Gentlemen of the House of Commons, such Supplies as you shall judge necessary for the Service of the Current Year; and I must particularly put you in Mind of the Deficiencies and Publick Debts occasioned by the late War, that are yet unprovided for.

"I am obliged further to recommend to you, That you would inspect the Condition of the Fleet, and consider what Repairs or Augmentations may be requisite for the Navy, which is the great Bulwark of the English Nation, and ought in this Conjuncture most especially to be put in a good Condition; and that you would also consider what is proper for the better Security of those Places where the Ships are laid up in Winter.

"The Regulation and Improvement of Our Trade, is of so Publick Concern, that I hope it will ever have your Serious Thoughts; and if you can find proper Means of setting the Poor at Work, you will ease your selves of a very great Burthen; and at the same time add so many useful Hands to be imployed in Our Manufactures, and other Publick Occasions.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I hope there will be such an Agreement and Vigor in the Resolutions you shall take upon the Important Matters now before you, as may make it appear We are firmly United among Our selves; and in My Opinion nothing may contribute more to Our Safety at Home, or to Our being Considerable Abroad.

Proceedings in the H. of Commons.

The Commons spent the Two succeeding days in qualifying themselves; and on the 13*th* began with the Business of Bribery in Elections, which was a matter of long Debates and Censures. On the 14*th*, upon Reading His Majesty's Speech, they came to this expedient Resolution; "That "they would stand by and support His Majesty "and His Government, and take such effectual Measures, as may best conduce to the Interest and "Safety of England, the Preservation of the "Protestant Religion, and the Peace of Europe." This Resolution was presented to His Majesty by the whole House, on February 17*th* and the King gave them this Gracious Answer.

Commons Addr. and King's Answer.

I thank you for this Address, and your ready Concurrence to those great Ends therein mentioned, which I take 1700. I take to be extremely Important to the Honour and Safety of England; and I assure you, I shall never propose any thing but what is for our common Advantage and Security. Having this Occasion, I think it proper to Acquaint you, That yesterday I received a Memorial from the Envoy Extraordinary of the States General; a Translation whereof I leave with you: As to the first Part of it I think it necessary to ask your Advice; and as to the latter Part I desire your Assistance.

Opening of a War with France.

Upon a Report of this Answer, the Commons immediately Resolved, "That an Humble Address be made to His Majesty, by such Members as are of the Privy Council, that He will please to cause the Treaty between England and the States General of the Third of March, 1677. and all the Renewals thereof since that time, to be laid before the House." Which His Majesty commanded to be done by Mr. Secretary Hedges. And the House was so well satisfied, that on February 20. they Resolved, "That an Humble Address be made to his Majesty, that He will please to enter into such Negotiations, in concert with the States General of the United Provinces, and other Potentates, as may most effectually conduce to the mutual Safety of these Kingdoms, and the States General, and the Preservation of the Peace of Europe: And giving Him Assurances of Support and Assistance, in Performance of the Treaty made with the States General the Third of March, 1677." This Address was presented by the whole House on Friday 21. February. And His Majesty gave this acceptable Answer.

Second Address and Answer.

Gentlemen, I thank you heartily for the Advice you have given Me, and your Unanimous Resolution to Support and Assist Me in making good the Treaty mentioned in your Address; And I will immediately order My Ministers abroad to enter into Negotiations in concert with the States General, and other Potentates, for the Attaining of those Great Ends which you desire. Nothing can more effectually conduce to our Security, than the Unanimity and Vigor you have shew'd on this Occasion: And I shall always endeavour on My Part, to Preserve and Increase this mutual Trust and Confidence between Us.

On the 17*th* of February. Mr. Secretary Vernon had acquainted the House of Commons, That he was commanded by His Majesty to communicate to them a Letter, which came very providentially to his Hands out of France: Being a Letter from the Earl of Melfort to his Brother the Earl of Perth. And he delivered a Copy in at the Table, and the Original to Mr. Speaker: The Copy was read, and ran thus.

Letter of the E. of Melfort.

My deareſt Brother,

"Since I promised to put in Writing what we "had not time to talk fully of, I am set down to "it in the Morning that my Letter may be ready for the Messenger, if any call. I told all "that I had heard at Versailles, and the favourable Audience I had of Madam Maintenon; for "which, I beg it of you to return my most humble Thanks to the Queen, and beg her to be "so Good, as to thank Madam Maintenon, and "know of her what can be done in that Matter: It will be a great Charity in the Queen. "I told you among other Things, the great Fleet "the King intends to put out this Summer; the "Order being given, and the Money ready, the "Stores full, and every one concern'd Active in "their Stations. There is no doubt but this Fleet "will be Master of the Sea for some time, if "not for all the Summer, because the Dutch dare "not stir till the English be ready; and they have "long Debates yet, before they can be in a Condition to Act, if they have the Will; and 'tis "a Question if they will have it at all. The King never had so favourable a Conjuncture, if He can persuade this King that His Affairs are really in the Circumstances they are in; but there is the Difficulty. The King and Queen have more Authority with the King and with Madam de Maintenon, than any other in the World can have; but that is not all, there should be some one acceptable to the Ministers, who should lay before them those Proofs Their Majesties cannot enter into the Detail of; and explain the Reasons, make Plans and Memoirs by Their Majesties Approbation, to convince them of the necessity, and shew the easiness of Restoring the King, the Glory it brings their Kingdom, and the Advantage to Religion: How this will be done, Their Majesties are wise enough to consider, and I think it is not a Subject fit for me to enter upon; but their Friends in general, who know not the half of what I know in this Matter, think that it will not be well done by a Protestant Minister, lazy in his Temper, an Enemy to France by his Inclination, tainted with Commonwealth Principles, and against the King's returning by any other Power than that of the People of England, and upon Capitulation and Terms, which is suspected of giving Aid to the Compounders, if not worse. 1700.

"That Mr. Carrill is qualified, no body doubts, but in Society with the other; these who must be Instrumental, will not trust him as they ought; so that so long as the other is within distance of penetrating the Affairs, they will never be secure: And yet the King has no such Game to play, as by these very Persons who are thus diffident; namely, the true Church of England Party, the Catholicks, and the Earl of Arran; and I shall say something of every one of them.

"The King cannot but be sensible, that the true Church of England Party, and their principal Head, now the Bishop of Norwich, has been silent for a long time; and Their Majesties may remember, what weight the Court of France laid upon their joining the King (I mean the Non-swearing Clergy) in case of a Landing: Therefore all Arts should be used without delay, to get them to enter into a Correspondence again, and every Impediment ought to be removed, I say, without exception. And tho' sometimes it is of hard digestion for Sovereigns, who ought to be obeyed without reserve, to yield to the Humours of Subjects, yet Prudence should teach them, when they cannot, without injuring their Affairs, do what they would, do what they can; and remember the Fable of the Dog, who lost the Substance by the Shadow. Assurances from the Non-Jurors, the soundest and most venerable Part of the English Church, would be of great use at this time, to persuade to undertake this great Affair; for besides their own Example at a Landing, and their Preaching and Writing to the People, that their Religion was in no Danger, it is most certain they know better than any other can do, what the Church of England in general would do for the King's Service; and they being to run all the hazard, would be better believed at the French Court than any other, as I found by Experience.

"As to the Catholicks, and other Associates with them, unfortunately for the King, they were thought to have too much Inclination for me, and so have been reckoned as useless to the King: And I must beg leave to say, that Undertaking was the best Feather in His Wing, and was most justly thought so by Him, and the Court of France too, even to that degree, that 1700. "that they pretended, if this and the other Article concerning the Clergy, could be made appear, they would concur with the King to Invade England: They conſiſted of ſeven Regiments of Horſe and Dragoons; their Arms, Trumpets, Kettle-Drums, Standards, &c. were all ready, and are yet in ſurety; their Men were all Liſted, and their Officers Choſen, and they had Twenty Horſes to a Troop; which Troops lying at a diſtance, in a Horſe Country, Twenty Horſes would ſoon have mounted the reſt. Thoſe who could not divine the Greatneſs and Uſe of the Undertaking, blamed the Raſhneſs of it; and even ſome Churchmen have not been diſapproven, for endeavouring undutifully (becauſe contrary to the King's Written Orders) to break the Deſign; but I deſire you now, for all this, to believe that you have not ſuch another Argument to uſe to the Court of France as this: And if you can make it appear, as it might have been ſome Years ago, I ſhould have very good hopes of this Summer's Work; nay, let the King have what other Hopes, even Promiſes you pleaſe, from the Court of France, this is to be put into the Circumſtances it was in: For if there will ever be a Landing in England to purpoſe, it muſt be before they can be Armed; and they cannot be Armed before the Parliament come to a Reſolution concerning the War; and conſidering the few Troops in England, ſuppoſe theſe Men to be no better than Militia, what a Diverſion would it be? It is not neceſſary for me to ſay any more of this Article, till I know whether their Majeſties have as good an Opinion of this Undertaking as I have; if ſo, I ſhall ſhew what I think is to be done in it; if otherwiſe, I ſave the Pains. As to the Earl of Arran, it would be of great uſe to have an Underſtanding with him: He will have none where —— can pry. His All is at ſtake, and he ought to be wary with whom he ventures to deal. I think it better for the King's Service that the Court Party prevailed in the manner they have done in the Parliament of Scotland, than that the Country Party ſhould have got their Will: Oppoſition ſwells the Waters to a Flood; and ſo long as the Country Party is not diſcouraged, they gain more Ground in the Kingdom, than they loſe in the Goverment; ſo that the Diſaffection to the Government will increaſe; and one may judge of the Nation in general, which is of another Temper than this pretended Parliament, or rather Presbyterian Rabble, in repreſenting the Nation: For ſince even in it there is ſuch a ſtruggle againſt the Government, what would there be in a Free Parliament: Which the Prince of Orange durſt never hazard to call: The Nation then, at leaſt a great part of it, being diſaffected to this Government, it is of the laſt Conſequence that the Earl of Arran may know what to do in Caſe of an Invaſion of England, or in caſe he and his Friends be obliged for ſelf-preſervation to riſe in their own Defence. The Army, who are and ever were well-Affected, are to be gained by Money; and a little goes a great way with them; The disbanded Troops would be Engaged, and the Officers are well inclin'd; The Places of Strength would be ſecured, and ſuch as can be put in defence (without Expences) Fortified. To do all this, at leaſt ſuch a Part of them as can be begun with, a ſmall Sum will ſerve, and He ought to have hopes of it and of the Command.

"Theſe being only Heads to be diſcourſed of, and much to be ſaid of every Part, it is not to be thought that this Letter can carry a final Concluſion; for it may be, upon diſcourſe, I might change my Mind, or be more confirmed in it, and ſee farther. This makes me inſiſt again to you upon Two Things, as appearing to me abſolutely neceſſary to put Things upon a right Foot. The firſt is, the removing of all Impediments out of the way, and ſending all ſuſpected Perſons to Champaign or Burgundy, according to their Guilt. And the ſecond is of the laſt Uſe both to Their Majeſties and the Prince; which is, the Eſtabliſhing of ſuch a Number, under no Qualification, to talk of Their Affairs in Their Majeſties Preſence; with whom we can freely converſe, and propoſe what may be for Their Majeſties Service. 1700.

"As for the firſt, it will be for the King's Reputation, both at the Courts of Rome, France, and with all His true Friends in England, for many Reaſons. —— As for the ſecond, it is according to Scripture; In the multitude of Counſellors there is ſafety. Nothing is ſo dangerous, as to determine what one will do, and then hear Reaſons againſt it, and imitate the deaf Adder, who hearkens not to the voice of the Charmer, let him charm never ſo ſweetly. Reaſons againſt a Reſolution taken, offend; and the more force they have, they offend the more; whilſt before the Reſolution be taken, Reaſon has its Effect, and the Determinations are not the Effect of Humour and Faction, but of Prudence and Juſtice. If any thing I fail, I'll ſwear it is want of Underſtanding, and not of Will: And I beg that Their Majeſties may be perſwaded, that it is no Humour nor Vanity, but Their Service I have in my View. Who am,

My Deareſt Brother,
moſt humbly Yours.

The Letter wiſely deſpiſed in both Houſes.

This Letter was alſo communicated by His Majeſty's Order to the Houſe of Lords; but neither they nor the Commons would do it the Honour to take any particular notice of it. Only it ſerved for the juſter Alarm, to ſecure the Government againſt the reſtleſs Endeavours of the Papiſts and Jacobites; and it brought in a ſeaſonable Information, That there were great Quantities of Arms and other Warlike Proviſions, made and kept concealed by Papiſts, and other diſaffected Perſons reſorting and meeting together in and about London and Weſtminſter. Upon which, His Majeſty iſſued out his Proclamation on February the 26*th*, "For all ſuch ſuſpected Perſons to repair to their reſpective Places of Abode; and for putting the Laws in Execution againſt all Papiſts and reputed Papiſts, and all other Offenders; who, by reaſon of their Converſation, Diſcourſe, or other Demeanor, ſhall be ſuſpected not to be well-affected to the Government.

Addreſs of the Lords.

To excite a greater Caution againſt the common Enemy, the Houſe of Lords made a Dutiful Addreſs to His Majeſty, wherein they declar'd, "their thankful Acknowledgments to Him for the Concern He had expreſs'd in His Speech, for the Proteſtant Religion; and His Care for its future Preſervation, by recommending to their Conſideration a further Proviſion for the Succeſſion to the Crown in the Proteſtant Line. That they were highly ſenſible of the Weight of thoſe Things, which His Majeſty was pleaſed further to recommend to them; and therefore they humbly deſired, He would be pleaſed to Order all the Treaties He had made ſince the late War, to be laid before them, that they might be enabled to give their mutual Advice, when they ſhould be informed of 1700. "all those matters, necessary to direct their "Judgments. Then they humbly desired Him "to enter into Alliances with all those Princes "and States, who were willing to unite for the "Preservation of the Balance of Europe; and "assured His Majesty that they should readily "concur in such Methods, as might effectually "conduce to the Honour and Safety of England, "the Preservation of the Protestant Religion, "and the Peace of Europe. Then they humbly "return'd their further Thanks to His Majesty "for communicating the Letter of the Lord "Melfort, and desired him to search and seize "all such Persons as were thought to be in a "Readiness to disturb the Government. In the "mean time, they humbly desire, that His Ma-"jesty would give such Order for the speedy "Fitting out of the Fleet, as He in His great "Wisdom should think necessary in this Con-"juncture, for the Defence of His Majesty "and the Kingdom." His Majesty thanked the Lords for their Address, and for the Concern they express'd in Relation to the common Security both at Home and Abroad; and told them, He would give the necessary Orders for those things they desired of Him, and take care for fitting out such Ships as in that Conjuncture should be necessary for their Common Safety.

Proceedings of the Commons.

The Commons took pains in examining the Publick Accounts, and enquiring into those of the Commissioners of Prizes. They Resolved on the 28*th* of February, That John Parkhurst Esq; and John Paschal Esq; Two of those Commissioners, had been guilty of a Neglect of their Duty in the said Office, and of a Contempt of the Act of Parliament made for the execution of it. And therefore Ordered, that they should be both committed Prisoners to the Tower of London.

Care of the Protestant Succession.

On Consideration of that part of His Majesty's Speech, which related to the Succession, the Commons Resolved, (3. March) That for the Preserving the Peace and Happiness of this Kingdom, and the Security of the Protestant Religion by Law Established, it is absolutely Necessary, a further Declaration be made of the Limitation and Succession of the Crown, in the Protestant Line, after His Majesty, and the Princess, and the Heirs of their Bodies respectively. And, that farther Provision be first made for Security of the Rights and Liberties of the People. On March the 12*th*. Mr. Conyers Reported the further Resolutions of the Committee appointed for that purpose; and the House did then Agree and Resolve, 1. That all things relating to the well-Governing of this Kingdom, which are properly Cognizable in the Privy Council, shall be Transacted there, and all Resolutions taken thereupon shall be Signed by the Privy Council. 2. That no Person whatsoever, that is not a Native of England, Scotland or Ireland, or the Dominions thereunto belonging; or who is not Born of English Parents beyond the Seas (although such Person be Naturalized or made Denizon) shall be capable of any Grant of Lands, Tenements or Hereditaments from the Crown, to himself, or any other in Trust for him. 3. That upon the further Limitation of the Crown, in case the same shall hereafter come to any Person not being a Native of this Kingdom of England, this Nation be not obliged to engage in any War for the Defence of any Dominion or Territories not belonging to the Crown of England, without the consent of Parliament. 4. That whosoever shall hereafter come to the Possession of this Crown, shall join in Communion with the Church of England as by Law Established.

And of Rights and Liberties.

5. That no Pardon be Pleadable to any Impeachment in Parliament. 6. That no Person who shall hereafter come to the Possession of this Crown, shall go out of the Dominions of England, Scotland or Ireland, without Consent of Parliament. 7. That no Person who has any Office under the King, or receives a Pension from the Crown, shall be capable of serving as a Member of the House of Commons. 8. That further Provision be made for the confirming of all Laws and Statutes for the Securing our Religion, and the Rights and Liberties of the People. 9. That Judges Commissions be made Quam diu se bene gesserint, and their Salaries ascertained and established; but upon the Address of either House of Parliament, it may be Lawful to remove them. 10. That the Princess Sophia, Dutchess-Dowager of Hanover, be declared the Next in Succession to the Crown of England in the Protestant Line, after His Majesty and the Princess, and the Heirs of their Bodies respectively; and that the further Limitation of the Crown be to the said Princess Sophia and the Heirs of her Body, being Protestants. 11. That a Bill be brought in upon the said Resolutions. In this Case, it was obvious to observe, that People may come in to the same Measures upon a very different View. Some no doubt might fall into such Limitations upon a true Regard to the Security of the Church, and the Liberties of Posterity. Others might come in with a meaning to condemn the present Administration; and to provide for such future Conveniencies as they seemed now to want. Some might think it a step toward coming nearer to a beloved Commonwealth. And even others might imagine that so to clog and embaras the Succession, might indirectly prevent the Settlement of it.

Foreign Princes offended.

This Affair was a great Subject of Discourse and Alarm abroad; those Popish Princes who were descended from the Blood-Royal of England, and were more nearly related to the Crown than the Princess Sophia, were offended at being struck off from their remote Hopes and presumptive Right. But the Person more immediately concern'd, as being nighest in Blood after the King and the Princess Anne, was the Dutchess of Savoy, Daughter to the late Dutchess of Orleance, and therefore Grand-Daughter to King Charles I. who therefore ordered the Savoy Ambassador Count Maffey, to make a Protestation of her Right, to this effect. "That Anne "of Orleance, Dutchess of Savoy, &c. Princess of "the Blood-Royal of England, by the Royal "Princess of Great Britain, Henrietta her Mother, "put so high a Value upon that Prerogative, "that she gladly made use of the opportunity "that then offered, to set it forth before the "Eyes of the whole English Nation, as an Evi-"dence she drew from thence, of having a "Right to that August Throne. That there-"fore being Informed that it had been Resolved "in that Parliament to settle the Order of the "Succession, she represented to the King and "Parliament, that being the only Daughter "of the late Princess Royal, Henrietta her Mo-"ther, she was the next in Succession after His "Majesty William III. and the Princess Anne "of Denmark, according to the Laws and Cu-"stoms of England, who always preferred the "nearest to the remotest Line. That her Title "being thus notoriously known and indisputable, "stood in need of no farther Proof. However "that she thought fit to Protest against all Re-"solutions and Decisions contrary thereunto, "in the best and most effectual manner, that "might be practised in such a Case; wherein she Protestation of the Dutchess of Savoy.

1700. "she complied rather with Custom, than Ne-
"cessity, because she had so great an Idea of
"the Wisdom and Justice of the King and Par"liament, that she had no Cause to fear they "would do any thing Prejudicial to her and
"her Children." But without taking notice of this Protestation, the Commons went on with the Bill of Succession, and the King and His Ministers were sensible of the Necessity of it.

The Circulation of Exchequer Bills to supply the want of Specie Money, was very expedient at this Juncture; and therefore on Thursday the 13*th.* of March, His Majesty came for this only purpose to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to An Act for Renewing the Bills of Credit, commonly called Exchequer Bills.

His Majesty being very Solicitous to defend the States of Holland from the Insults and Approaches that were made upon them by the French in Flanders; and if possible, to restore and preserve a better Balance of Europe, was carrying on a firm Alliance abroad against the Common Enemy; and therefore sent this Message Sign'd by Himself, delivered to the House of Commons by Mr. Secretary Hedges, and Read by the Speaker, March 18.

King's Message to the Commons.

William R.

His Majesty having directed Mr. Stanhope, his Envoy Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary at the Hague, to enter into Negotiations in Concert with the States-General of the United Provinces, and other Potentates, for the Mutual Security of England and Holland, and the Preservation of the Peace of Europe, according to an Address of this House to that effect: And the said Mr. Stanhope having transmitted to His Majesty Copies of the Demands made by Himself and the Deputies of the States upon that Subject, to the French Ambassador there, His Majesty has thought fit to communicate the same to you. It being His Majesty's Gracious Intention, to acquaint you from time to time with the State and Progress of those Negotiations, into which He has entred pursuant to your Address above-mentioned. Kensington the 17*th.* of March, 1700.

When this Message was taken into Consideration of the Commons on the 21*st.* of March, they began with the great Obstruction to it, the Treaty of Partition: And after Reading the said Message, the Proposals made to the French Ambassador by Mr. Stanhope, and the Resolutions of the States General for Treating with Monsieur D' Avaux, they Resolved, That the Treaty of Partition be Read; and after Reading of it, they proceeded to this Resolution, That an Humble Address be presented to His Majesty, to return the Thanks of this House for His Gracious Message, wherein He is pleased to communicate His Royal Intentions to acquaint this House from time to time with the State and Progress of those Negotiations into which His Majesty has entred pursuant to the Address of this House. And also to lay before His Majesty the ill Consequences of the Treaty of Partition (passed under the Great Seal of England, during the Sitting of Parliament, and without the Advice of the same) to this Kingdom and the Peace of Europe, whereby such large Territories of the King of Spain's Dominions were to be delivered up to the French King. When this Address was presented to the King, He did somewhat resent the Unkindness of it; and thought there was much more Reason to complain of the perfidious Breach of the Treaty, than of the Making of it. However, to decline the entring into any Defence of it, he gave this prudent Answer,

Treaty of Partition.

1700.

Address and King's Answer.

Gentlemen,

I Am glad you are pleased with My Communicating to you the State of the Negotiations I have entred into, pursuant to your Address; I shall continue to inform you of the Progress that shall be made in them; and be always willing to receive your Advice thereupon; being fully perswaded, that nothing can contribute more effectually to the Happiness of this Kingdom, and the Peace of Europe, than the Concurrence of the Parliament in all my Negotiations, and a good Understanding between Me and My People.

Lords Address against the Partition.

The House of Lords had before fell on this unhappy Subject of the Partition-Treaty, and represented their Dislike of it to His Majesty, in an Address on March the 20*th.* to this effect, "That they having Read and Considered the "Treaty of the 21*st.* of February, or the 3*d.* "of March, 1700. made with the French King, "together with the Separate and Secret Articles, "which he had been pleased to communicate "to them, did most humbly represent to Him, "That to their great Sorrow, they found the "Matters thereof to have been of very Ill Con-"sequence to the Peace and Safety of Europe; "for, that besides the Occasion it might have "given the late King of Spain, to have made "His Will in favour of the Duke of Anjou, if "that Treaty had Effect; the Prejudice to "His Majesty and His Subjects, and indeed to "all Europe, by the Addition of Sicily, Naples, "several Ports of the Mediterranean, the Pro-"vince of Guipuscoa and the Dutchy of Lorrain, "had been not only very great, but contrary to "the Pretence of the Treaty it self, which was "to prevent any Umbrage that might have "been taken by uniting so many States and "Dominions under one Head. That by all the "Informations they had had of that fatal Trea-"ty, they could not find that the Verbal Orders "and Instructions (if any were given to His "Majesty's Plenipotentiaries) were ever con-"sidered in any of his Majesty's Councils; or "that the Draught of that Treaty had ever "been laid before His Majesty at any Meeting "of his Council, much less that it was advised "or approved of by any Council, or Com-"mittee of Council: Wherefore they thought "themselves bound in Duty to His Majesty, and "Justice to their Country, most humbly to be-"seech Him, that for the Future He would be "pleased to require and admit, in all Matters "of Importance, the Advice of His Natural-"born Subjects, whose known Probity and "Fortunes might make him and his People a "just Assurance of their Fidelity to his Service; "and that in order thereunto, he would be "pleased to constitute a Council of such Per-"sons to whom His Majesty might be pleased "to impart all Affairs, both at home and "abroad, which might any way concern Him "and His Dominions. For as Interest and Na-"tural Affection to their Country would in-"cline them to wish the Welfare and Prosperity "of it much more than others, who had no such "Ties upon them; and as their Experience and "Knowledge of their Country, would also "render them more capable than Strangers, of "advising his Majesty in the true Interests of it; "so they were confident, that after such large "and repeated Demonstrations of His Subjects "Duty and Affection, His Majesty could not "doubt of their Zeal in His Service, nor want "the knowledge of Persons fit to be employed "in all His most Secret and Arduous Affairs. "And that since it appeared the French King's 1700. "accepting of the King of Spain's Will, was "a manifeſt Violation of that Treaty, they "humbly adviſed His Majeſty in future Treaties with that Prince, to proceed with ſuch "Caution, as might carry a real Security.

His Majeſty having received the Lords Addreſs, Anſwered, It contain'd Matters of very great Moment; and that he would always take care that all Treaties he made, ſhould be for the Honour and Safety of England.

Debate for Concurrence of the Commons.

Before this Addreſs was actually preſented, a Motion was made to ſend to the Commons for their Concurrence; and theſe Reaſons were urg'd for it by ſome of the Lords, "That the "laſt Clauſe in the Addreſs did neceſſarily imply a War, and that a very long one, by "Reaſon of the Extent, (unintelligible at leaſt to "them) of a real Security, and the great Improbability of obtaining any Terms of that "kind; and ſince that neceſſarily implied great "Supplies, which could not be granted without "the Commons, they look'd upon their Concurrence in the Addreſs to be abſolutely Neceſſary; and that it was improper for them to "deſire that of the King, which, for want of "ſuch Concurrence of the Commons, they "conceived His Majeſty would not think Fit "or Prudent for Him to grant them. That "they were of Opinion, all the other parts of "the Addreſs, were very fit to be communicated to the Commons; for upon the Succeſs "of it depended the future Happineſs of the "Nation: And as they could not doubt of the "Commons readineſs to join in any proper "Meaſures towards it, ſo they thought their "Concurrence therein would highly contribute "towards the obtaining of a Gracious Anſwer "from His Majeſty; and they could not but think "it reaſonable, that the Advice of the whole Nation aſſembled in Parliament ſhould be made "known to the King upon ſuch an Occaſion.

"It was urged farther, That their Lordſhips "having deſired the Commons to Permit Mr. Secretary Vernon, a Member of their Houſe, to "come to a Committee of Lords, in order to "be informed by him of ſome Matters relating to the Treaty of Partition, they apprehended that the Commons might think it "extraordinary, and not ſuitable to the good "Correſpondence which was highly neceſſary "between the Two Houſes, not to acquaint "them with the things which had come to their "Knowledge, partly by the Information of "their own Members: And that having been "otherwiſe Informed of ſome Tranſactions relating to that Treaty, between the Earl of "Portland, and Mr. Secretary Vernon, by Letters, "of which they had not received a full Account, they thought it might be very uſeful "to the Publick, to communicate that Addreſs "to the Commons, who had a better Opportunity than their Lordſhips, of enquiring into "that Matter, which ſeem'd to be yet in the "Dark, and which their own Members might "help to explain to them.

But the major part of the Lords were againſt the Communicating of this Addreſs to the Commons, and left them to make a like Separate Addreſs, for a double Regret to His Majeſty.

Honours.

The King had been pleaſed on December the 30*th.* to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon John Meres Eſq; Eldeſt Son of Sir Thomas Meres; and on February the 2*d.* to confer the Dignity of a Baronet of this Kingdom upon Nicholas Vannacker of London, Eſq; And before the Sitting of the Parliament, His Majeſty had writ this Letter of Congratulation to the Elector of Brandenburgh, upon his taking the Title and Prerogatives of King of Pruſſia. 1700.

State of Religion.

In the View of Religion this Year, we ought to condole the Unhappy Diſpute that now began, about the Form and Manner of holding a Convocation. For the occaſion of this Conteſt, we muſt go back to the latter End of the Reign of King James II. when our Biſhops and Clergy being ſadly ſenſible, that the Papiſts hop'd to compaſs their Deſigns, by dividing of Proteſtants, began to apply friendly to their Diſſenting Brethren; and to invite them with more Tenderneſs into the Boſom of the Church, they offered at ſome Healing Methods; and to teſtify their Sincerity in it, they made a Publick Declaration to that Prince, that They were willing to come to ſuch a Temper. But as that Prince, conſidering his Deſigns, had no Reaſon to deſire it; ſo His Unhappy Reign gave no Leiſure to effect it. When the Revolution had Sav'd all our Rights and Liberties, every Body then remembred how Archbiſhop Sancroft, and other Prelates, with the moſt Eminent Divines (eſpecially of London) had been engag'd in ſome Amicable Deſigns, which they hoped the preſent Juncture might facilitate and bring to Perfection. To this Deſirable End, Their Majeſties in the Diſputes in Convocation.

Beginning of this unhappy Controverſy.

First

1700. First Year of Their Reign did commiſſionate the moſt Learned of the Biſhops, and others of the Chief Clergy, to prepare for a Convocation, ſuch Improvements and Alterations in our Liturgy and Canons, as they ſhould judge Expedient for the Edification and good Government of the Church, and for reconciling the more reaſonable Diſſenters. The Commiſſioners labour'd in this excellent Work with great Judgment, Temper and Application; and had prepared ſuch a Modeſt Plan of Union, as very well deſerved the Conſideration of the Prelates and Clergy Synodically Aſſembled, before whom it was to be Laid, and Submitted to their Debates and Deciſions, to be afterward confirm'd by King and Parliament. But in the mean time, an Opinion was induſtriouſly propagated among the Clergy, that the Deſign of Reconciling was only to Overthrow the Eſtabliſhed Church. Hence, upon the Opening of that Convocation in 1689. the Majority of the Clergy were prejudic'd againſt any Accommodation to be had with the Diſſenters: and choſe a Prolocutor on purpoſe to oppoſe it; ſo as the Biſhop of London, then Preſident of the Convocation, could do nothing in that matter, but connive at their treating of him with ſome Indignity, which he did not deſerve from them.

Convocation Prorogu'd.

The Majority of the Lower Houſe having thus publickly declared their Averſion to the Scheme intended to be laid before them, without ſignifying their deſire to enter upon any other Buſineſs; and rather expreſſing their Reſolution to do nothing: His Majeſty (accordingly to the practice of King Charles II.) order'd this Convocation to be regularly Prorogued. And in every other Seſſion of Parliament, a Convocation was Summon'd and in being with it, which for want of proper Buſineſs was Continued and Prorogued by the Preſident, and left always in a Capacity and Readineſs to come together, upon any Exigence of Church or State that required their Counſel or Aſſiſtance; though no ſuch Exigence did happen for ſeveral Years together. But what was thus deſign'd for the Eaſe of the Clergy, in not obliging them to a fruitleſs and expenſive Attendance, when there was no occaſion to juſtify their Abſence from the Duty of their Cures; did by degrees give a Handle of Complaint, as if they were debarr'd from the Rights and Liberties of Meeting and Acting in Convocation.

Murmurs and Diſcontents of the Clergy.

Theſe Murmurs of Reſtraint and Hardſhip, were privately fomented among thoſe of the Clergy who were Non-Jurors; and among thoſe who complied with the Government, without ſatisfying their own Expectations in it. Theſe Diſcontents did unhappily move the Lower Clergy to raiſe new Diſputes of Privilege and Independence on the Archbiſhop and Biſhops in Convocation; and to labour to bring themſelves to be ſuch a Spiritual Houſe of Commons, as, if their Pretenſions could prevail, would very much endanger the Peace of Church and State. Under this diſpoſition, the Convocation of the Prelates and Clergy of the Province of Canterbury, by the Archbiſhops Mandate in purſuance of the King's Writ, met in the Church of St. Paul, London, on Monday, February the 10*th*; where after the Litany in the Latin Tongue, and an Eloquent Sermon in the ſame Language, deliver'd by Dr. Haley Dean of Chicheſter, and the Hymn Sung, O pray for the Peace of Jeruſalem, &c. The Archbiſhop followed by his Suffragans went out of the Choir, and proceeded to the Chapter Houſe; where after Reading the Royal Writ, and the Certificatory of the Biſhop of London for Executing the Archiepiſcopal Mandate; his Grace in a Latin Speech admoniſhed the Lower Clergy then preſent, to retire and chuſe a Prolocutor, and preſent him on Friday the 21*ſt* Inſtant. They Elected Dr. Hooper Dean of Canterbury, who on the ſaid appointed Day was preſented to the Archbiſhop and Biſhops by Dr. Jane Dean of Glouceſter, and was Approved and Confirmed in uſual manner. In the next Seſſion, February the 25*th*. when the Archbiſhop's Schedule of Prorogation was brought down to the Lower Houſe, which was legally to determine every Seſſion, in Contempt of it they continued Sitting, and proceeded in ſome Debates of no Moment; after which, the Prolocutor intimated an Adjournment by conſent of the Houſe to meet again in Henry VII. Chappel, inſtead of the Prorogation to meet in the Jeruſalem Chamber as by the Schedule, which expreſly included the whole Body of the Convocation, and left no pretence to ſeparate Adjournments in either Houſe. The Archbiſhop and a far greater part of his Suffragans look'd on this Proceeding of the Lower Houſe as a Declaration of ſetting up for a Separate Intereſt and Power, that would break the Union of a Provincial Synod, and prevent the good Correſpondence of both Houſes, and ſo fruſtrate the common Methods of doing any Buſineſs. Hence in the Fourth Seſſion, February the 28*th*. the Prolocutor and Clergy did not attend his Grace and their Lordſhips in the Synodical Place, the Jeruſalem-Chamber; which was interpreted to be a Second Contempt of the Authority of the Preſident, and the Obligation of his Inſtrument, the Schedule Proroguing and continuing the whole Body of Prelates and Clergy. 1700.

So the Archbiſhop ſent for the Prolocutor, and with conſent of his Brethren put theſe Two Queſtions to Him, 1. Whether the Lower Houſe of Convocation did Sit, after they were Prorogued by his Grace on the 25th. Day of this Inſtant Month February ? 2. Whether they did meet this Morning, without attending in this Place, to which they were Prorogued? Upon ſome Diſcourſe concerning theſe Queſtions, the Prolocutor ſaid, That the Lower Houſe was preparing ſomewhat to lay before his Grace and the Upper Houſe, concerning the Methods of Prorogation, and ſome other things of Form. His Grace Anſwer'd, That he and his Brethren were ready to receive whatſoever ſhould be offer'd by them, and would conſider of it, and do upon it what ſhould appear to them to be Juſt and Right: but in the mean time he and his Brethren thought fit to continue the uſual Practice.

Accordingly, that the Phraſe of Proroguing in hunc locum might admit of no Diſpute, it was in the Schedule of this Day expreſly ſpecified, in hunc locum, vulgo vocat. Jeruſalem Chamber; to which the Lower Houſe ſubmitted with a Salvo Jure; and at the next Seſſion, March the 6*th*. the Prolocutor, accompanied with ſeveral Members, paid Attendance upon his Grace and their Lordſhips in Jeruſalem Chamber, according to the Form of the laſt Schedule; and being ſoon diſmiſt went to their own Houſe; from whence in a little time they carried up this Report of a Committee appointed to ſearch the Convocation-Books, for Directions concerning the Prorogations of this Houſe, made on Thurſday the Sixth day of March, 1700.

Firſt, We find that the common Uſage of this Houſe has been to continue Sitting, till the Prolocutor did Prorogue or Adjourn, or intimate the Adjournment or Prorogation thereof, either Perſonally, or by ſome Member of this Houſe, thereunto deputed by him: And in both theſe Caſes (as we conceive) with the conſent of this Houſe. And we alſo find by ſome Inſtances, that this Houſe did not always Prorogue and Adjourn to the ſame Day with the Upper Houſe.

Secondly, We find the like common Uſage by this Houſe to have been, that when in the Upper Houſe the Convocation was Prorogued or Adjourned by the Words in hunc locum, this Houſe did meet apart from the ſame, at the ſame particular Place where it Sat laſt. And when the Convocation was Prorogued or Adjourn'd to ſome other General Place, viz. St. Paul's and Lambeth, then alſo this Houſe did Aſſemble in a ſeparate Place diſtinctly from their Lordſhips. And farther we find no footſteps of Evidence to conclude, that it was ever the Practice of this Houſe to attend their Lordſhips before this Houſe did Meet and Sit purſuant to their former Adjournment. But when this Houſe hath Firſt Met and Sat, it hath been the conſtant Practice to attend their Lordſhips with Buſineſs of their own Motion, or when they were called up to their Lordſhips by a ſpecial Meſſenger.

The Archbiſhop and his Brethren thought it their Right to expect and to receive a direct Anſwer, in matters of Fact, to the Two Queſtions propoſed to the Prolocutor; and wonder'd to find no notice taken of them. However, his Grace with conſent of his Brethren, order'd this Paper to be Read, though it was intitled, A Report of the Committee, and did not run, as it ſhould have done, in the Name of the Houſe; and then referr'd the examination of it to a Committee of Biſhops. In the mean while, his Grace deliver'd to the Prolocutor, the Form of an Humble Addreſs to His Majeſty, and propoſed to him the Conſent of the Lower Houſe, which was given without Amendment, only they propoſed that it might be Reformed Churches inſtead of Reformed Religion; and with the alteration of that Word, it was preſented to His Majeſty at Kenſington on Monday March the 10*th.* by the Archbiſhop in the Name of himſelf, his Suffragans, and the Reſt of the Clergy.

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,

Addreſs of Convocation.

" We your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal " Subjects, the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and the " reſt of the Clergy of the Province of Can- " terbury, being in Obedience to your Majeſty's " Summons Aſſembled in Convocation, do take " this opportunity to preſent our humble Thanks " to your Majeſty, for the conſtant Protection " and Favour which the Church of England, by " Law Eſtabliſhed, has received from you ever " ſince your happy Acceſſion to the Crown.

" We do alſo thankfully Acknowledge your " Majeſty's Pious Concern for the Reformed " Churches in General; beſeeching Almighty " God, that as He hath made your Majeſty His " chief Inſtrument in the Preſervation of them " hitherto, ſo he would ſtill Bleſs your Majeſty's " Endeavours for their farther Security againſt " the imminent Dangers wherewith they are " threatned at this time. 1700.

" And we humbly crave leave to give your " Majeſty all poſſible Aſſurance of our ſtedfaſt " Fidelity and Affection to your Sacred Perſon " and Government, which we ſhall always " teſtify, by maintaining the Supremacy as " Eſtabliſhed by the Laws of this Realm, and " the Articles and Canons of our Church; by " promoting True Religion and Loyalty among " Your People committed to our Charge; and by " our earneſt Prayers to God for your Majeſty's " long Life and proſperous Reign over us.

To which his Majeſty was pleaſed to return the following moſt Gracious Anſwer.

My Lords and the reſt of the Clergy,

" I Am very well pleaſed with the Affectionate " Senſe you expreſs of the conſtant Pro- " tection I have ſhewn to the Church of Eng- " land as by Law Eſtabliſhed. I aſſure you I " ſhall always continue to deſerve your Thanks in " this particular.

" Your good Will to the Reform'd Churches " Abroad, and Tenderneſs for ſuch of them " as may be in Danger, is alſo very agreeable " to me.

" I likewiſe thank you for your Promiſes of " maintaining my Supremacy according to " Law, beyond which I will never extend it. " I never doubted of the Fidelity and Loyalty " of the Church of England to me.

" I make no queſtion of your Zealous En- " deavours to promote Religion, Virtue and " Piety among the People committed to your " Charge. And I ſhall be ever ready to con- " tribute what is proper to be done on my part, " to make your good Intentions in that kind " more Succeſsful, as being the great Concern " of us all.

In the next Seſſion, Thurſday the 20*th.* of March, the Prolocutor brought up this Humble Repreſentation of the Lower Houſe of Convocation to the moſt Reverend his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Right Reverend the Biſhops his Suffragans of the Upper Houſe, praying their Lordſhips Concurrence with theſe Reſolutions hereunto annexed (which have been unanimouſly agreed to by the Lower Houſe) together with their Advice and Directions what effectual Courſes may be taken to ſuppreſs the Book mentioned in the ſaid Reſolutions, and all other Pernicious Books already Written againſt the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion; and to prevent the Publication of the like for the future.

Repreſentation of the Lower Houſe.

The Report of the Committee appointed for the Examination of Books lately Publiſhed againſt the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion as to part of the Matter to them refered, made on Thurſday the 20th Day of March, in the Year of our Lord Juxta &c. 1700. as follows, viz.

" Upon the peruſal of the Book and Sche- " dule hereunto annext, laid before this Com- " mittee by Mr. Vice-Chancellor of Oxford, " on Tueſday the 11*th.* Day of this Inſtant " March, this Committee came to the follow- " ing Reſolutions (Nemine Contradicente) here- " upon, viz.

Reſolved,

1700.

Resolved First,

"That in the Judgment of this Committee, "the said Book is a Book of Pernicious Prin- "ciples, of dangerous Consequence to the "Christian Religion, written on a Design (as "we conceive) and tending to Subvert the "Fundamental Articles of Christian Faith.

Resolved Secondly,

"That in the Judgment of this Committee, "the Positions extracted out of the said Book, "and therewith hereunto annext, are, together "with divers others of the like Nature therein "contained, Pernicious, Dangerous, and Scan- "dalous Positions, and destructive of the Chri- "stian Faith.

Resolved Thirdly,

"That to Prevent the Growth of these and "the like Pernicious Principles, it is the Opi- "nion of this Committee, that some speedy "Course ought to be taken for Suppressing this "and all other Books of the like mischievous "Nature and Tendency.

Resolved Fourthly,

"That in order thereunto, it is also the Opi- "nion of this Committee, That an Humble Re- "presentation of the Premises be forthwith laid "by this House before the Lords the Bishops of "the Upper House, Praying their Lordships "Concurrence with these Resolutions; together "with their Advice and Directions, what ef- "fectual course may be taken, to Suppress these "and all other Pernicious Books already Writ- "ten against the Truth of the Christian Reli- "gion, and to prevent the Publication of the "like for the future.

A Schedule of Positions extracted out of the Book herewith annext, Entitled Christianity not Mysterious, and bearing the Name of J. Toland; Printed at London, in Octavo, Anno Dom. 1696. In which the Author expressly says as follows.

In the following Session held Saturday March 22. the Archbishop produced a certain Printed Book Entitled, Essays upon the Balance of Power; and after the Reading of a certain Paragraph in the 40*th.* Page, the said President and his Suffragans agreed, that the following Paper should be fixt over several Doors in Westminster-Abby. 1700.

March, 22. 1700.

Whereas this day a Book entitled, Essays upon I. The Balance of Power. II. The Right of Making War, Peace and Alliances. III. Universal Monarchy, &c. was brought into the Jerusalem Chamber, where his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the rest of the Suffragan Bishops of his Province were Assembled in Convocation: In the 40*th* Page of which Book are these Words; Are not a great many of us able to point out to several Persons, whom nothing has recommended to Places of highest Trust, and often to Rich BENEFICES and DIGNITIES, but the open Enmity which they have almost from their Cradles, profest to the Divinity of Christ:

It is desired by the said Archbishop and Bishops, That the Author himself, whoever he be, or any one of the great many to whom he refers, would Point out to the particular Persons, whom he or they know to be liable to that Charge, that they may be Proceeded against in a Judicial Way; which will be esteemed a great Service to the Church: otherwise the above-mentioned Passage must be look'd upon as a PUBLICK SCANDAL.

1701. Proceedings in Parliament, About the Treaty of Partition.

We left the Two Houses Debating, or rather Declaiming on the Treaty of Partition. When the Motion of it began in the House of Peers, many of the Lords directly charg'd it upon the Earl of Portland. His Lordship excused himself, by saying, that the Duke of L ——, the Earls of P——, I—— and M——, the Lords, S —, L—— and H——, and Mr. Vernon, had their share in that Negotiation, as well as himself. Whereupon the Peers whom his Lordship had named, did readily acknowledge that they had indeed seen the Rough Draught of the Treaty; but that the Earl of Portland had drawn it up himself in French; and as for their part, they had neither given nor refused their Consent to it; because the Treaty was never communicated to the Privy Council. Upon this occasion, some Peers had spoke very reflectingly of the King of France; the Earl of R. took them up, and said, That all Men ought to speak respectfully of Crown'd Heads; and that this Duty was more particularly incumbent on the Peers of a Kingdom, who derive all their Honour and Lustre from the Crown. This was back'd by another Earl, who said, That the King of France was not only to be Respected, but likewise to be Feared. To whom another Member of that Illustrious Assembly replied, that He hoped no Man in England needed to be Afraid of the French King; much less the Peer who Spoke last, who he doubted was too much a Friend to that Monarch to fear any thing from Him. And in the House of Commons they talked over this Matter with more extraordinary Warmth; and some Members gave themselves a Loose in reflecting upon His Majesty, beyond all the Bounds of Duty and Decency; intimating how the Combination for dividing another Man's Kingdom might be compared to an Action on the High-way; with some other Expressions too Gross to be Related.

Memorial of Mr. Stanhope at the Hague.

In the mean time, Mr. Stanhope, His Majesty's Envoy at the Hague, delivered in a Memorial to the French Ambassador the Count d' Avaux, importing, That the King his Master, and the States-General, having on the 25*th* of March, 1700. concluded a Treaty of Partition with the French, to prevent a New War, which they had

all

1701. all the Reaſon to fear, in caſe the King of Spain Died without Iſſue. And that among other things, the principal Aim of the Contractors was to preſerve Peace, and particularly in thoſe Parts: But the French King had found it convenient to accept the Will of the late King of Spain, and ſo to depart entirely from the Partition agreed upon: However, the King of England ought not to loſe the Effect of that Treaty, which was the General Peace and Tranquility, and his own particular Security; for which He muſt demand an Equivalent to Himſelf and the States in theſe following Articles.

I. That for preſerving the Peace and General Tranquility, wherein conſiſted a great part of the particular Security of the King of Great Britain's Kingdoms; the Emperor ſhould be invited to enter into the Negotiation, and reaſonable Content and Satisfaction given him upon his Pretenſions to the Spaniſh Succeſſion, which the Partition Treaty had Regulated; and that the Emperor ſhould be admitted and included in the Treaty the King of England and States ſhould make with the French King and Crown of Spain.

II. That the French King by a ſhort and limited Time ſhould withdraw all his Troops out of the Spaniſh Netherlands, and ſend no more thither for the future; but that the ſame ſhould be Gariſon'd by the Troops of Walloons, or of the Netherlands Subject to Spain, except in the Places reſerved for Security; but that it ſhould be Lawful for England and Holland to ſend their Forces for the Defence of the Netherlands when lawfully requir'd.

III. That for the particular Security of England, Oſtend and Newport, with all their Forts, Fortifications, &c. ſhould be Guarded only by Engliſh Troops.

IV. That the King of England might Augment, Leſſen or Change the ſaid Gariſons as he pleaſed, and ſend thither what Ammunition, Proviſion, Arms, and Materials for Fortifications he thought fit.

V. That His Majeſty ſhould have full Power over the ſaid Places, yet without Prejudice to the Rights and Revenues of the Crown of Spain.

VI. That he ſhould be free to Repair or Improve the Fortifications, as He judged moſt convenient.

VII. That no Places or Provinces belonging any where to Spain, ſhould be any ways Alienated or given away to France, or Submitted to the Power of the French King.

VIII. That the King of England's Subjects ſhould have the ſame Privileges and Immunites within the Spaniſh Dominions, as well in as out of Europe, as before the King of Spain's Death, except otherwiſe agreed on by a Treaty.

IX. That all the Treaties of Peace and Trade between England and Spain ſhould be Renew'd.

X. That the Engliſh Subjects ſhould be upon the ſame Foot, in reſpect to Privilege of Trade, as the French, in any of the Spaniſh Dominions.

XI. That France and Spain ſhould ſolemnly engage to obſerve theſe Points.

XII. That the Treaty to be made upon this Occaſion ſhould have the Guarrantee of the Potentates deſired by the Contractors.

Memorial from the Dutch.

This Memorial was the ſame day ſeconded by another from the Dutch, much in the ſame Terms; only inſtead of Newport and Oſtend, which the King of England demanded, the States required to have the Cities and Fortreſſes of Venlo, Ruremond, Stevenwaerds, Luxemburg, Namur, Charleroy, Mons, Dendermond, Damme and St. Denys, with all their Appurtenances. But the French Ambaſſador was inſtructed by his Maſter, and ſupported by an Army, to give no other Anſwer, but a pretence of keeping to the Peace of Ryſwick, though the French Seizure of the Crown of Spain had perfectly vacated the Ends of that Peace. Upon this dallying of the Count d'Avaux, King William, with ſome Indignation at it, ſent this Meſſage to the Houſe of Commons by Mr. Secretary Hedges.

William R.

King's Meſſage to the Commons.

His Majeſty having received an Account from Mr. Stanhope, his Envoy Extraordinary at the Hague, that the French Ambaſſador there had declared to the Penſionary, that the King his Maſter had no other Anſwer to return to the Demands made by the States-General of the United Provinces, than that he is ready to Renew and Confirm the Treaty of Ryſwick, it being all the Security the States are to expect; and that he has no Orders to give any Anſwer to His Majeſty's ſaid Envoy; but if His Majeſty has any thing to Demand, it may be done by his Ambaſſador at Paris, or to the French Miniſter at London; and that he has no Commiſſion to Treat with any but the States. And His Majeſty having alſo received Two Reſolutions of the States, and a Memorial from their Envoy here, relating to the Ships they are ſending to join His Majeſty's Fleet, and the Succours they deſire may be haſtened to them, by Virtue of the Treaty made the Third of March One Thouſand Six Hundred Seventy Seven: His Majeſty has thought fit to communicate the whole to this Houſe, that they may be particularly inform'd of the preſent State of Affairs Abroad, where the Negotiations ſeem to be at an End, by the poſitive Anſwer the French Ambaſſador has given to the States: Which His Majeſty recommends to the Serious Conſideration of this Houſe, as a Matter of the greateſt Weight and Conſequence; and deſires that they will give His Majeſty ſuch Advice thereupon, as may be for our own Security, and that of the States-General, and the Peace of Europe. Kenſington, the Thirty Firſt Day of March, One Thouſand Seven Hundred and One.

It was a very gracious Condeſcenſion in the King thus to admit the Commons into a Share in the Rights of Peace and War: But the Supplies on which this Affair muſt depend, made it Neceſſary to do more than had been generally practiſed by former Princes. When this Meſſage was taken into the Conſideration of the Houſe, They Reſolved, Nemine contradicente, April 2. "That the Humble Advice of this "Houſe be given to His Majeſty, to deſire, that "His Majeſty will be pleaſed to carry on the "Negotiations in concert with the States-Ge-"neral, and take ſuch Meaſures therein as may "moſt conduce to their Security; And that His "Majeſty will purſue the Treaty made with "the States-General, the Third of March 167[illegible] "And to Aſſure His Majeſty, that this Houſe "will effectually Enable Him to Support the "ſaid Treaty of 1677." When this Reſolution of Advice was preſented to His Majeſty, Mr. Secretary Hedges Reported His Majeſty's Anſwer to this effect. That according to the Advice of the Houſe of Commons, His Majeſty has given Order to His Envoy Extraordinary at the Hague, to carry on the Negotiations in concert with the States-General, and to take ſuch Meaſures therein, as Reſolutions of the Commons.

1701. as may most conduce to their Security. His Majesty thanks you for the Assurance you have given, that this House will effectually enable Him to Support the Treaty of 1677. and will pursue the same as you Advise. He does not doubt, but the Readiness you have shewn upon this Occasion, will very much contribute to the obtaining such a Security as is desired.

King William foresaw, that France would never yield up any part of the Spanish Monarchy by fair Means; but considering at the same time the unwillingness of the Commons to enter into a New War, which manifestly appear'd by their Slowness in making effectual Provision for the English Auxiliaries, which according to the Treaty of 1677. were to be sent to Holland; His Majesty thought it Prudence to keep the matter in Suspence by a faint Negotiation with the French, which both the Earl of Manchester at Paris, and Mr. Stanhope at the Hague managed with great caution and dexterity. And the better to cover the Delays of Treating, His Majesty acknowledged the Duke of Anjou for King of Spain in this Congratulatory Letter.

King William's Letter to the King of Spain.

Most Serene and Potent Prince, Our Dear Brother and Ally.

"WE have received your Majesty's Letter "of the Twenty Fourth of March "last, which has been very acceptable to us upon "many Accounts: First, Because they brought "us notice of your safe Arrival into your King- "dom of Spain, and of your coming to the "Possession of it, and taking upon your self "the Government of the Dominions thereunto "belonging; and in the Second place, because "they have made it plain to us, that your Ma- "jesty hath a Mind to continue and keep In- "violably that most ancient Alliance which is "between the Two Crowns: Indeed We ha- "ving willingly embraced this Occasion, both "to Congratulate your Majesty's happy Exal- "tation to the Spanish Throne, and to shew "you how much Esteem we have for your Ma- "jesty, and how much we desire to make it "appear to you, that our Inclination doth most "readily prompt us to endeavour what we can, "that the mutual Conjunction of Friendship "and Alliance between us, may be confirm'd "and knit faster, and the common Good of the "Two Nations may daily more and more "Flourish and be promoted; which we hope "also will redound to the Publick Benefit and "Good of all Europe: What remains, is to "commend and commit your Majesty to the "Care and Protection of Almighty God.

Given at our Palace at Kensington, the Seventeenth day of April, 1701. and in the Thirteenth Year of the Reign of your Majesty's most Loving Brother and Ally. Sign'd

Gulielmus Rex.

Mr. Stanhope having received an Express of His Majesty's Recognition of the King of Spain, he Complimented the Spanish Ambassador thereupon, while Monsieur d' Avaux the French Minister at the Hague presented an amusing Memorial to the States; setting forth, "That "having transmitted their Resolution of the "First of April to his Master, wherein they "desired the Negotiations might be resumed in "Conjunction with the King of England's En- "voy, for maintaining the Peace of Europe, "and providing for their own particular Secu- "rity; and that their Lordships having at the "same time declared, they wished nothing so "much, as that those Negotiations might be "brought to a speedy and good Conclusion "with his Master; to whom he had given an "Account of the Answer he gave their "Lordships concerning the Admittance of the "English Envoy, and he had entirely approved "the same, and was pleased with the Assuran- "ces given by their Lordships of the desire "they had to preserve the Peace. And as his "Majesty continued in the Resolution of main- "taining the Publick Tranquility, he would "consent to every Expedient that might con- "duce towards securing the common Good "and Repose of Christendom; and that in "order thereunto, his Majesty had no sooner "been acquainted with their Lordships Design "of renewing the Conferences, but he had "commanded his Ambassador to resume the "same, and continue at the Hague.

Memorial of D' Avaux at the Hague.

Notwithstanding this specious Declaration, the Design of the French Politicks was still to keep out the English Envoy, and to engage the States to Treat separately. The Dutch Deputies presently apprehended their Meaning by the Ambiguity of the Memorial, and therefore prest Count D' Avaux to explain himself; Letting him know at the same time, that the States would not enter into any Negotiation with France, but in Conjunction with England, their Interests in this Case being Inseparable: And they must insist upon a positive Answer to that Point; especially now that His Britannick Majesty's owning the King of Spain, had removed the principal Objection that was before insisted on, against Treating with the Ministers of England. The French Ambassador, to procrastinate his Answer, desired time to send for new Instructions to Court, which they appeared no way forward to send him; their design being to draw the Business into a Negative Delay; which gave them opportunity to Strengthen themselves daily on the Frontiers of Holland, and to secure the Milaneze against the Efforts of a Veterane Imperial Army, headed by Prince Eugene of Savoy, a Brave and Experienced General, who was surmounting incredible Difficulties to penetrate into Italy.

Intrigues of the French.

The Commons of England not content with their Address to the King against the Treaty of Partition, proceeded to shew their Abhorrence of it, in a manner that seemed to affect our Peace at Home, more than to prepare for a War Abroad. For on April the 1st. they Resolved, That William Earl of Portland by Negotiating and Concluding the Treaty of Partition, (which was destructive to the Trade of this Kingdom, and dangerous to the Peace of Europe) is Guilty, and shall be Impeached, of High Crimes and Misdemeanors. And they Ordered Sir John Leveson Gower to go up to the Lords and at their Bar to Impeach the said Earl, and to acquaint their Lordships, that they will in due time exhibit particular Articles against him. And then desired a Conference with the Lords upon Matters relating to the Treaty of Partition; at which Conference the Commons delivered this Paper to the Lords.

Impeaching of the Earl of Portland.

"It appearing by your Lordships Journal, that "your Lordships have received Information "of some Transactions between the Earl of "Portland and Mr. Secretary Vernon, relating to "the Partition of the Spanish Monarchy, the "Commons having the said Matter under their "Consideration, desire your Lordships will "be pleased to communicate to the Commons "what Informations your Lordships have had "of any Transactions relating to any Nego- "tiations or Treaties of Partition of the Spanish "Monarchy, by Letters or otherwise. And 1701. "the Commons are fully Aſſured, that your "Lordſhips will readily concur in aſſiſting them "in this Enquiry, which they conceive abſo- "lutely Neceſſary for the Safety and Honour "of this Kingdom, and the Preſervation of the "Peace of Europe.

The Lords ordered the Two Latin Commiſſi- ons of Powers Granted to the Earls of Portland and Jerſey, for Negotiating the ſaid Treaties, One Dated the 1ſt. of July, 1699. the Other on the 2d. of January, 1700. as alſo a private Paper of the Lord Portland's, running thus.

"At the beginning of the Summer of the "Year 99. when I was in Holland, at my Coun- "try-Houſe, and when the King would have "me be concerned in the Negotiation of this "Treaty with the Emperor, the French King, "and the States; Being very unwilling to med- "dle with Buſineſs again, from which I was "Retired, before I would engage my ſelf I ad- "viſed with my Friends in Holland, and Writ "into England to Mr. Secretary Vernon, as my "particular Friend, Whether it was Adviſable "for me to engage in any Buſineſs again? To "which Mr. Vernon Anſwered in Subſtance, "That this would not Engage me but for a "little while: That I being upon the Place, "and generally acquainted with the Foreign "Miniſters, it would be eaſier for the King, "and properer for me to be employed in it, "than any Body elſe, that muſt be otherwiſe "ſent for on purpoſe.

Impeachment of the Lord Somers.

The next Perſon whom the Commons in- tended to call upon, was John Lord Somers, late Lord Chancellor of England, on whoſe Judg- ment and Fidelity the King had very much Relied. His Lordſhip being ſenſible of the Storm that was coming on, deſired the Earl of Portland, with Leave of the Houſe, to declare if he pleaſed, whether the Lord Somers's Name was mentioned in the Letter he received from Mr. Secretary Vernon? The Earl of Portland ſtood up and declared, "That if he had re- "membred any ſuch thing in the Letter, and "had not inſerted it in the Paper which he "had delivered to the Houſe, he ſhould have "thought he had deceived the Houſe." On April the 14th. the Lord Somers ſent in an In- formation to the Houſe of Commons, that Having heard the Houſe was upon a Debate concern- ing him, he deſired that he might be admitted in and Heard: This was granted, and a Chair was ſet by the Serjeant, a little within the Bar on the Left-Hand; then the Serjeant had direc- tions to acquaint the Lord Somers, that he might come in; and the Door being Open'd, his Lord- ſhip came in, and Mr. Speaker acquainted his Lordſhip, that he might Repoſe himſelf in the Chair provided for him; and his Lordſhip was heard what he had to offer to the Houſe, which he did with great Plainneſs and Preſence of Mind: but when his Lordſhip withdrew, the Houſe came to this Reſolution, That John Lord Somers, by adviſing His Majeſty in the Year 1698. to the Treaty for Partition of the Spaniſh Monarchy, whereby large Territories of the King of Spain's Dominions were to be de- livered up to France, is Guilty of a High Crime and Miſdeamenor. And they Ordered Mr. Har- court to go up to the Lords, and at their Bar to Impeach him; and to acquaint their Lord- ſhips, that the Houſe will in due time exhibit particular Articles againſt him. And immedi- ately after, they Reſolved, that Edward Earl of Orford, and Charles Lord Halliſax, be for the ſame Reaſons Impeached of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors. The Lord Somers had deli- vered into the Houſe of Commons a Copy of the Letter which he had ſent to His Majeſty, in Anſwer to One from His Majeſty upon oc- caſion of that Treaty; Both which are fit to be inſerted. 1701.

At Loo, $\frac{16}{26}$. of Auguſt, 1698.

King William's Let- ter to the Lord Somers.

"I Imparted to you before I left England, "that in France there was expreſs'd to my Lord "Portland ſome Inclination to come to an A- "greement with us, concerning the Succeſſion "of the King of Spain; ſince which, Count "Tallard has mentioned it to me, and has made "Propoſitions, the Particulars of which my "Lord Portland will Write to Vernon, to whom "I have given Orders not to Communicate "them to any other beſides your Self, and to "leave to your Judgment to whom elſe you "would think proper to Impart them; to the "end that I might know your Opinion upon "ſo Important an Affair, and which requires "the greateſt Secreſy. If it be fit this Nego- "tiation ſhould be carried on, there is no time "to be loſt, and you will ſend me the full "Powers under the Great Seal, with the Names "in Blank to Treat with Count Tallard. I be- "lieve that this may be done Secretly, that "none but you and Vernon, and thoſe to whom "you ſhall have Communicated it, may have "knowledge of it; ſo that the Clerks who are "to Write the Warrant and the full Powers, "may not know what it is. According to all "Intelligence the King of Spain cannot outlive "the Month of October, and the leaſt Accident "may carry him off every Day. I received "Yeſterday your Letter of the 9th. Since my "Lord Wharton can't at this Time leave England, "I muſt think of ſome other to ſend Ambaſſa- "dor into Spain; if you can think of any one "proper, let me know it, and be always aſſur'd "of my Friendſhip.

William R.

The Lord Somers's Anſwer.

Tunbridge-Wells, 28 Aug. 1698. O. S.

SIR,

Lord Somer's Anſwer to the King.

"Having your Majeſty's Permiſſion to try if "the Waters would contribute to the Re-eſta- "bliſhment of my Health, I was juſt got to "this Place when I had the Honour of your "Commands; I thought the beſt way of exe- "cuting them would be to communicate to my "Lord Orford, Mr. Mountague, and the Duke "of Shrewsbury (who before I left London, had "agreed upon a Meeting about that Time) the "Subject of my Lord Portland's Letter; at the "ſame time letting them know how ſtrictly "your Majeſty required that it ſhould remain "an abſolute Secret.

"Since that time, Mr. Mountague, and Mr. Se- "cretary are come down hither; and upon the "whole Diſcourſe Three Things have princi- "pally occurred, to be humbly ſuggeſted to "your Majeſty.

"Firſt, That the Entertaining a Propoſal "of this Nature, ſeems to be attended with "very many Ill Conſequences, if the Fren h "did not act a ſincere Part; but we were "ſoon at eaſe, as to any apprehenſion of this "ſort, being fully aſſured your Majeſty would "not act but with the utmoſt Nicety, in an "Affair wherein the Glory and Safety of Europe "were ſo highly concerned.

"The

1701. "The Second Thing conſidered, was the very "ill Proſpect of what was like to happen upon "the Death of the King of Spain, in caſe no- "thing was done previouſly towards the pro- "viding againg that Accident, which ſeem'd "probably to be very near: The King of France "having ſo great a Force in ſuch a Readineſs, "that he was in a condition to take Poſſeſſion "of Spain, before any other Prince could be "able to make a Stand. Your Majeſty is the "beſt Judge whether this be the Caſe, who are "ſo perfectly inform'd of the Circumſtances of "Parts abroad.

"But ſo far as relates to England, it would be "want of Duty not to give your Majeſty this "clear Account, that there is a Deadneſs and "want of Spirit in the Nation, univerſally ſo, "as not at all to be diſpoſed to the thought "of entring into a new War; and that they "ſeem to be tired out with Taxes to a Degree "beyond what was diſcerned, till it appeard "upon the Occaſion of the late Elections. This "is the Truth of the Fact, upon which your "Majeſty will determine what Reſolutions are "proper to be taken.

"That which remain'd, was the Conſidera- "tion what would be the Condition of Europe, "if the Propoſal took Place: Of this we "thought our ſelves little capable of judging, "but it ſeemed that if Sicily was in the French "Hands they will be entirely Maſters of the "Levant Trade; that if they were poſſeſt of "Final, and thoſe other Sea-Ports on that ſide, "whereby Milan would be entirely ſhut out "from Relief by Sea, or any other Commerce, "that Dutchy would be of little ſignification "in the Hands of any Prince; and that if the "King of France had Poſſeſſion of that Part of "Guipuſcoa, which is mentioned in the Propo- "ſal, beſides the Ports he would have in the "Ocean, it does ſeem he would have as eaſie a "way of Invading Spain on that ſide, as he "now has on the ſide of Catalonia.

"But it is not to be hoped that France will "quit its Pretences to ſo great a Succeſſion, "without conſiderable Advantages; and we "are all aſſured, your Majeſty will reduce the "Terms as low as can be done, and make them, "as far as is poſſible in the preſent Circum- "ſtances of Things, ſuch as may be ſome "Foundation for the future Quiet of Chriſtendon; "which all your Subjects cannot but be convinced "is your true Aim. If it could be brought to "paſs that England might be ſome way a Gainer "by this Tranſaction, whether it was by the "Elector of Bavaria (who is the Gainer by "your Majeſty's Interpoſition in this Treaty) "his coming to an Agreement to let us into "ſome Trade to the Spaniſh Plantations, or in "any other manner, it would wonderfully en- "dear your Majeſty to your Engliſh Subjects.

"It does not appear, in caſe this Negotiati- "on ſhould proceed, what is to be done on "your part, in order to make it take place: "Whether any more be required than the Eng- "liſh and Dutch ſhould ſit ſtill, and France it ſelf "to ſee it Executed. If that be ſo, what Se- "curity ought to be expected, that if by our "being Neuters the French be Succeſsful, they "will confine themſelves to the Terms of the "Treaty, and not attempt to make further Ad- "vantages of their Succeſs?

"I humbly beg your Majeſty's Pardon that "theſe Thoughts are ſo ill put together: "Theſe Waters are known to diſcompoſe and "diſturb the Head, ſo as almoſt totally to diſ- "able one from Writing: I ſhould be extreamly "troubled if my abſence from London has de- "layed the diſpatch of the Commiſſion one "Day. You will be pleaſed to obſerve, that "Two Perſons (as the Commiſſion is Drawn) "muſt be Named in it, but the Powers may be "executed by either of them. I ſuppoſe your "Majeſty will not think it proper to Name "Commiſſioners that are not Engliſh, or Na- "turalized, in an Affair of this Nature.

"I pray God give your Majeſty Honour and "Succeſs in all your Undertakings. I am "with the utmoſt Duty and Reſpect,

Sir, Your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and moſt Obedient Subject and Servant.

P. S. The Commiſſion is Wrote by Mr. Secretary, and I have had it Sealed in ſuch a manner, that no Creature has the leaſt knowledge of the thing, beſides the Perſons nam'd.

The Commons in purſuance of Reſolutions taken the 15*th* of April, did on the 23*d* preſent this Addreſs to the King.

Addreſs of the Commons to the King.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

"We your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal "Subjects, the Commons in Parliament aſſem- "bled, do humbly crave leave to repreſent to "your Majeſty the great ſatisfaction we have "from our late Enquiry concerning the Treaty "of Partition, made in the Year 1698. (on which "the Treaty in 1699 was founded) to ſee your "Majeſty's great Care of your People and "this Nation, in not entring into that Nego- "tiation without the Advice of your Engliſh "Counſellors; and finding that John Lord So- "mers, on whoſe Judgment your Majeſty did "chiefly rely in that ſo important Affair, did "in concert with Edward Earl of Orford, and "Charles Lord Halifax, adviſe your Majeſty to "enter into that Treaty of ſo dangerous Con- "ſequence to the Trade and Welfare of this "Nation; and who, to avoid the Cenſure "which might juſtly be apprehended to fall "on thoſe who Adviſed the ſame, endeavour'd "to inſinuate, that your Majeſty without the "Advice of your Council entred into that "Treaty, and under your Sacred Name to ſeek "protection for what themſelves had ſo Adviſed: "Of which Treatment of your Majeſty we "cannot but have a juſt Reſentment: And that "they may be no longer able to Deceive your "Majeſty and Abuſe your People; we do hum- "bly beſeech your Majeſty, that you will be "pleaſed to Remove John Lord Somers, Edward "Earl of Orford, and Charles Lord Halifax, from "your Council and Preſence for ever; as alſo "William Earl of Portland, who Tranſacted "theſe Treaties, ſo unjuſt in their own Nature, "and ſo fatal in their Conſequences to this "Nation, and the Peace of Europe. And we "humbly crave Leave upon this Occaſion to "repeat our Aſſurances to your Majeſty, That "we will always ſtand by and Support your "Majeſty to the utmoſt of our Power, againſt "all your Enemies both at Home and Abroad.

The King diſpleaſed yet gives a

His Majeſty could not but be very uneaſy at this ſevere dealing with His Counſels and His Miniſters; when he knew the Error, if any, was a miſtake of Judgment only, and that rather of his own, than of any Employed by him. However he kept his Temper, and gave this Gracious Anſwer.

Gracious Anſwer.

"I am willing to take all occaſions of thank- "ing you very heartily for the Aſſurances you "have frequently given Me, and now repeat, "of Standing by and Supporting Me againſt "all 1701. "all our Enemies both at Home and Abroad; "towards which, nothing in My Opinion can "contribute so much as a good Correspondence "between Me and My People. And therefore "you may depend upon it, that I will employ "none in my Service; but such as shall be "thought most likely to improve that mutual "Trust and Confidence between Us, which is "so Necessary in this Conjuncture, both for our "own Security, and the Defence and Preserva- "tion of our Allies.

Addres's of the Lords against these Proceedings.

The House of Lords was alarm'd at the Addres's of the Commons, and did apprehend it to be an Ill Precedent for Persons to be Censur'd, before they were Tried. And therefore they interpos'd with this Counter-Addres's to His Majesty.

"We Your Majesty's most Loyal and Dutiful "Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in "Parliament Assembled, beg Leave to Repre- "sent to Your Majesty, That the House of "Commons have severally Impeach'd at the Bar "of our House, William Earl of Portland, John "Lord Somers, Edward Earl of Orford, and "Charles Lord Halifax, of High Crimes and "Misdemeanors. And they having acquainted "Us, that they will in due time exhibit particu- "lar Articles against the said Lords, and make "good the same; We do most humbly beseech "Your Majesty, that Your Majesty will be plea- "sed not to pass any Censure upon them, until "they are Tried upon the said Impeachments, "and Judgment be given according to the Usage "of Parliament, and the Laws of the Land.

The Dutch prepare for War.

In the mean time, two or three fruitless Conferences passed at the Hague; wherein the French Minister was still attempting to draw in the States to treat Alone, without the Concurrence of the English; which they would by no means consent to. His Majesty in mutual Kindness, did all that lay in His Power to assist them; for which End He had sent the three Scotch Regiments retained in His own Pay in that Kingdom, over into Holland. When the States had procured all possible Supplies and Reinforcements by their Money and Interest from Princes Abroad, and had exerted their Powers to the utmost at Home, they wrote a Letter to His Majesty, to inform Him how Matters stood with them, and to desire the Troops to be sent over to their Assistance without delay, as stipulated by the Treaty of 1677. Upon which, His Majesty on May the 8*th*. sent this Message to the House of Commons by Mr. Secretary Hedges.

The King's Message to the Commons

William R.

"His Majesty having lately received an Ac- "count from Mr. Stanhope, of the present Posture "of Affairs in Holland, and likewise a Letter "from the States-General, which is of the great- "est Importance: And His Majesty, who has "so perfect a knowledge of their Country, be- "ing entirely convinced of the Hardships of "their present Condition, and the great Pres- "sures they now lie under, which are particu- "larly expressed in the abovementioned Letter, "has thought it absolutely necessary to commu- "nicate the same to this House; that the Expe- "ctations the States have of present Assistance "from His Majesty, may more fully appear. "And His Majesty does not doubt, but this "House will be so justly sensible of those im- "mediate Dangers to which they stand expos'd, "as to take the same into their most serious and "effectual Consideration; it being most evi- "dent, that the Safety of England, as well as "the very Being of Holland, does very much de- "pend upon your Resolutions in this Matter."

This Message was the next Day taken into the Consideration of the Commons; and they unanimously Resolv'd, That this House will effectually Assist His Majesty to Support His Allies, in maintaining the Liberty of Europe; and will immediately provide Succours for the States-General, according to the Treaty of the 3d. of March, 1677. This Resolution was presented to His Majesty by the whole House on Saturday, May the 10*th*. and His Majesty expres's'd his Satisfaction in these Words: 1701. Resolution of the Commons.

Gentlemen,

"I return you My hearty Thanks for the rea- "dy Assurances you give Me of Providing im- "mediate Succours for the States-General, and "for the Zeal you express for the Common "Cause: I know nothing that can be more ef- "fectual for its Support, both at Home and A- "broad, than the unanimous Concurrence which "you have shewed upon this Occasion. And it "will be a particular Satisfaction to Me in my "Time, to revive the Glory which the English "Nation has formerly had, of Maintaining the "Liberty and Balance of Europe." Satisfaction of the King.

The King had likewise communicated the Letter from the States, to the House of Lords, who on that Occasion presented this Addres's on May the 14*th*.

"We Your Majesty's most Dutiful and Loyal "Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in "Parliament Assembled, return Your Majesty "our most humble Thanks, for communicating "to Us the Letter from the States-General to "Your Majesty. It gives us an opportunity "(with great Satisfaction) to repeat to Your "Majesty the Assurances of our Duty, and Zeal "for Your Service. And we take this Occasion "further to assure Your Majesty, we are very "sensible of the great and imminent Danger to "which the States-General are at present expos'd. "And we do perfectly agree with them, in be- "lieving, That their Safety and ours are so in- "separably united, that whatsoever is Ruin to "the one, must be Fatal to the other. Addres's of the Lords.

"And we humbly desire Your Majesty will be "pleased, not only to make good all the Arti- "cles of any former Treaty to the States-Gene- "ral, but that You will enter into a strict League, "Offensive and Defensive, with them, for our "Common Preservation: And that you will in- "vite into it all Princes and States, who are "concern'd in the present visible Danger, ari- "sing from the Union of France and Spain.

"And we further desire Your Majesty, That "You will be pleased to enter into such Allian- "ces with the Emperor, as Your Majesty shall "think fit, pursuant to the Ends of the Treaty "of 1689. Towards all which, we assure Your "Majesty of our hearty and sincere Assistance: "not doubting, but whenever Your Majesty shall "be obliged to engage for the Defence of Your "Allies, and the securing the Liberty and Qui- "et of Europe, Almighty God will protect Your "Sacred Person in so Righteous a Cause. And "that the Unanimity, Wealth, and Courage of "Your Subjects will carry Your Majesty with "Honour and Success thro' all the Difficulties of "a Just War.

"And in the last Place, with great Grief, we "take Leave humbly to represent to Your Ma- "jesty, That the Dangers to which Your King- "doms and Your Allies have been expos'd, are "chiefly owing to the Fatal Councils that pre- "vented Your Majesty's sooner Meeting Your "People in Parliament.

To which His Majesty was pleased to return His Gracious Answer in the ensuing Terms.

My

1701. The King's Answer.

My LORDS,

I thank you for the Expreſſions you make of your Duty, and Zeal to My Service, and the Concern you ſhew for the Imminent Danger to which the States-General are at preſent expoſed. I ſhall take into Conſideration your Deſires to Me of entring into New Meaſures with them, and other Princes and States for Our Common Preſervation: And you may be ſure it ſhall be always my Care to make ſuch Alliances with Our Neighbours, as may tend to Our own, and their greater Security; which will be the moſt effectual Means to raiſe the Honour of the Engliſh Nation in Our Days, to the Reputation it hath maintain'd in any former Times.

The Nation by this time began to be in a high Ferment, and the People generally diſlik'd the Proceedings of the Commons. A bold Teſtimony of it was given in the County of Kent, where a Petition was drawn up in this Form.

Kentiſh Petition.

The Humble Petition of the Gentlemen, Juſtices of the Peace, Grand Jury, and other Freeholders, at the General Quarter Seſſions of the Peace, holden at Maidſtone, the 29th of April, in the Thirteenth Year of the Reign of Our Sovereign Lord William III. over England, &c.

" We the Gentlemen, Juſtices of the Peace, " Grand Jury, and other Freeholders, at the Ge- " neral Quarter Seſſions at Maidſtone in Kent, " deeply concern'd at the dangerous Eſtate of " this Kingdom, and of all Europe; and conſi- " dering that the Fate of us and our Poſterity " depends upon the Wiſdom of our Repreſenta- " tives in Parliament, think our ſelves bound in " Duty humbly to lay before this Honourable " Houſe the Conſequence in this Conjuncture, of " your ſpeedy Reſolution, and moſt ſincere En- " deavour to anſwer the great Truſt repos'd in " you by your Country.

" And in regard, that from the Experience of " all Ages it is manifeſt, no Nation can be great " or happy without Union; We hope, that " no Pretence whatſoever ſhall be able to create " a Miſunderſtanding among our ſelves, or the " leaſt diſtruſt of his moſt Sacred Majeſty; whoſe " great Actions for this Nation are writ in the " Hearts of his Subjects, and can never without " the blackeſt Ingratitude be forgot.

" We moſt humbly Implore this Honourable Houſe " to have regard to the Voice of the People, that our " Religion and Safety may be effectually provi- " ded for; that your Loyal Addreſſes may be " turned into Bills of Supply; and that his moſt " Sacred Majeſty (whoſe Propitious and Unble- " miſh'd Reign over us we pray God long to con- " tinue) may be enabled powerfully to aſſiſt his " Allies before it is too late.

Signed by the Deputy Lieutenants there preſent, above 20 Juſtices of the Peace, all the Grand-Jury, and other Freeholders, then there.

And your Petitioners ſhall ever pray, &c.

The Petitioners committed.

This Petition was boldly delivered to the Houſe on May 8th, and Mr. William Colepeper, Mr. Thomas Colepeper, Mr. David Polehill, Mr. Juſtinian Champney, and Mr. William Hamilton, being called in, own'd the Petition at the Bar, and their Hands to the ſame. Then they withdrew, and the Petition being Read, the Houſe Reſolved, That the ſaid Petition was Scandalous, Inſolent and Seditious, tending to deſtroy the Conſtitution of Parliaments, and to Subvert the Eſtabliſhed Government of theſe Realms. And then Ordered, " That all " thoſe Gentlemen ſhould be taken into Cuſtody, " as Guilty of promoting the ſaid Petition."

1701.

And on May 14. the Houſe being Informed, that Mr. Thomas Colepeper had made his Eſcape; and that the Reſt of the Perſons committed did behave themſelves diſorderly; the Serjeant was called in, who acquainted the Houſe, That the ſaid Mr. Colepeper had upon Saturday laſt made his Eſcape, and that ſome of the others had threatned, and he was apprehenſive of Force to reſcue them; and prayed the direction of the Houſe concerning them: Whereupon the Houſe ordered them to be delivered Priſoners to the Gate-houſe; and agreed to Addreſs his Majeſty to iſſue his Proclamation for apprehending Mr. Colepeper; and for putting out of the Commiſſions of Peace and Lieutenancy ſuch of the others as were in any of the ſaid Commiſſions. But Mr. Colepeper made a voluntary Surrender of himſelf, and was confin'd with his Neighbours.

Libel called Legion.

This Impriſonment of the Kentiſh Petitioners did but inflame thoſe People who were before warm'd againſt the Proceedings of the Commons. And it gave occaſion to a Libel, Entitled, A Memorial from the Gentlemen, Freeholders, and Inhabitants of the Counties of —— in Behalf of themſelves and many Thouſands of the good People of England. This was ſent to the Speaker in a very Inſolent Letter, charging and commanding him in the Name of Two hundred thouſand Engliſh Men to deliver it to the Houſe of Commons. It began with a Preamble falling into this Maxim, Whatever Power is above Law, is Burdenſome and Tyrannical, and may be reduc'd by Extrajudicial Methods. Then it charg'd the Houſe with illegal aud unwarrantable Practices in XV Particulars; of which the Three firſt were as followeth: I. To raiſe Funds for Money, and declare by borrowing Clauſes, that whoſoever advances Money on thoſe Funds, ſhall be reimburſt out of the next Aids, if the Funds fall ſhort; and then give ſubſequent Funds, without transferring the Deficiency of the former, is a horrible Cheat on the Subject who lent the Money, a Breach of Publick Faith, and deſtructive to the Honour and Credit of Parliaments. II. To Impriſon Men who are not your own Members, by no Proceedings but a Vote of your own Houſe, and to continue them in Cuſtody ſine die, is Illegal, a notorious Breach of the Liberty of the People; ſetting up a Diſpenſing Power in the Houſe of Commons, which your Fathers never pretended to; bidding Defiance to the Habeas Corpus Act, which is the Bulwark of Perſonal Liberty; deſtructive of the Laws, and betraying the Truſt repoſed in you. The King being at the ſame time obliged to ask you Leave to continue in Cuſtody the horrid Aſſaſſinators of his Perſon. III. Committing to Cuſtody thoſe Gentlemen, who at the Command of the People (whoſe Servants you are) came in a Peaceable way to put you in mind of your Duty, is Illegal and Injurious; deſtructive of the Subjects Liberty of Petitioning for Redreſs of Grievances, which has by all Parliaments before you, been acknowledged to be their undoubted Right. After the enumerating 12 other Particulars, the Memorial proceeds to a Claim of Right, under Seven Heads; of which the Three former run thus: We do hereby Claim and Declare, I. That it is the undoubted Right of the People of England, in caſe their Repreſentatives in Parliament do not proceed according to their Duty and the People's Intereſt, to inform them of their Diſlike, diſown their Actions, and to direct them to ſuch things as they think fit, either by Petition, Addreſs, Propoſal, Memorial, or any other peaceable Way. II. That the Houſe of Commons ſeparately, and otherwiſe than by Bill legally paſs'd into an Act, have no legal Power to ſuſpend or diſpenſe with the Laws of the Land, any more than the King has by his Prerogative. III. That the Houſe of Commons have no legal Power to impriſon any Perſon, or commit them to Cuſtody of Serjeants, or otherwiſe (their own Members excepted) but ought

to

1701. to Addreſs the King to cauſe any Perſon on good Grounds to be Apprehended; which Perſon ſo apprehended, ought to have the Benefit of the Habeas Corpus Act, and be fairly brought to Trial by due courſe of Law. —— After other Claims, it concludes, Thus, Gentlemen, you have your Duty laid before you, which 'tis hop'd you will think of: But if you continue to neglect it, you may expect to be treated according to the Reſentments of an Injur'd Nation; for Engliſhmen are no more to be Slaves to Parliaments, than to Kings. Our Name is Legion, and We are Many.

A Number of prudent ſober Men, who did not approve of the wording or way of ſending this Memorial, were apt to think the Subject Matter of it for the moſt part True and Reaſonable: and the very Court of Aldermen and Common-Council of the City of London were very near to the coming in to ſome publick Declaration of the ſame effect, though more Modeſtly to be Expreſs'd. The Commons were extreamly Incens'd at the Legion Paper, but would not deſcend to a particular Cenſure of it. It was thought ſufficient, that a Complaint was made to the Houſe, of Endeavours to raiſe Tumults and Seditions, in order to diſturb the Publick Affairs; and a Committee was appointed to draw up an Addreſs to be preſented to His Majeſty, humbly to lay before Him the Endeavours of ſeveral ill-diſpoſed Perſons, to raiſe Tumults and Seditions in the Kingdom; and humbly to beſeech His Majeſty, that He will provide for the Publick Peace and Security.

Difference between the two Houſes upon the matter of Impeachment.

To return to the unhappy Difference between the Two Houſes, in the Caſe of the Impeach'd Lords; the Houſe of Peers ſeemed to think that their Members had been Impeached by the Commons without a ſerious intention to proſecute the Charge againſt them. And therefore on May the 5*th.* their Lordſhips ſent this quickning Meſſage to the Commons, by Sir Robert Legard, and Sir Richard Holford.

Mr. Speaker,

The Lords have commanded us to acquaint this Houſe, that they having on the Firſt Day of April laſt, ſent up to their Lordſhips an Impeachment againſt William Earl of Portland, of high Crimes and Miſdemeanors; And having alſo on the Fifteenth Day of the ſame Month ſeverally Impeached John Lord Somers, Edward Earl of Orford, and Charles Lord Halifax, of high Crimes and Miſdemeanors: Their Lordſhips think themſelves obliged to put this Houſe in mind, that as yet no particular Articles have been exhibited againſt the ſaid Lords; which, after Impeachments have been ſo long depending, is due in Juſtice to the Perſons concerned, and agreeable to the Methods of Parliament in ſuch Caſes.

The Commons, aſhamed to be upbraided with Delay in a Matter wherein they had appeared ſo forward, ſent Anſwer, that the Articles againſt the Lords Impeached were preparing, and in a ſhort time ſhould be ſent up to the Houſe of Lords. So on May the 9*th.* to begin their own way, the Commons by Colonel Bierly ſent up Articles againſt Edward Earl of Orford, in Maintenance of their Impeachment.

Articles of Impeachment againſt the Earl of Orford.

I. That in a Long and Expenſive War, the ſaid Earl always preferring his private Intereſt to the good of the Publick, in violation of his Duty and Truſt, had procured from His Majeſty One or more Grant or Grants of ſeveral Manors, Meſſuages, &c. and alſo Exorbitant Sums of Money. —— To which the Earl Anſwered, That he having for ſeveral Years rendred to His Majeſty his utmoſt Service and Duty, as a good and Loyal Subject, His Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed upon ſeveral occaſions to take notice of the ſame; and out of His wonted Bounty and his free Will, was pleaſed to give to the ſaid Earl Two Grants, One a Reverſionary Grant for Years, of ſome Houſes; the other a Grant of the Remainder of a Groſs Sum amounting to about 2000 l. a Year for Five Years. 1701.

II. That in breach of the Truſt repoſed in him, whilſt he was Commander in Chief of the Navy Royal of England, in or near the Streights of Gibraltar; He did receive great Sums of the Publick Money, which he converted to his own Private Uſe, and Unlawfully procured a Privy Seal to diſcharge him from Accounting to the Publick for the ſame. —— To which he Anſwered, by denying the ſaid Facts, and ſaying, That he did make up and upon Oath paſs his Accounts for the Moneys impreſt to him, and hath his quietus eſt in due courſe of Law upon the ſame.

III. That he did receive from the King of Spain and others conſiderable Sums of Money, and great quantities of Wine, Oil, and other Proviſions for the Fleet, for which he ought to have Accounted, but he converted the ſame to his own Uſe: And for ſecuring himſelf from rendring any Account, he poſſeſt divers great Offices inconſiſtent, and deſigned as Checks one upon the other. — To which the Earl Anſwer'd, That whatever he received from the King of Spain, or any others for the Fleet, was duly delivered and diſtributed amongſt the Officers and Seamen; and he denies that he did enjoy any Offices inconſiſtent, or which ought to be Checks one upon the other.

IV. That he hath clandeſtinely, contrary to the Law of Nations, Sold and Diſpoſed of ſeveral Veſſels, taken under pretence of Prize, without Condemnation or Judicial Proceedings, and converted the Money to his own uſe. —— To which he Anſwered, by denying the Fact, and ſaying, That he did from time to time give Orders, that the Prizes taken ſhould be carefully preſerved without Imbezzlement, and duly proceeded againſt, and the Product anſwered as the Law directs.

V. That he preſiding in the Commiſſion for executing the Office of Lord High Admiral of England, had diſcouraged and rejected the Requeſt and Propoſal of the Company Trading to the Eaſt-Indies, for Suppreſſing Piracies in the South-Seas; and had procured a Commiſſion for one William Kidd, who had committed divers Piracies and Depredations on the High-Seas, being thereto encouraged through the hopes of being Protected by the High Station and Intereſt of the ſaid Earl. —— To which he Anſwered, That he did never diſcourage or reject the Company's Requeſt, unleſs it were by telling them, that the Admiralty by Law could not grant the ſame: And as to the matter of Kidd, his Commiſſion was according to Law, and his Expedition intended for the Publick Good and Service; and if he have committed any Piracies, is anſwerable for the ſame, he never being Ordered or Encouraged by the ſaid Earl ſo to do.

VI. That while the Kingdom was under an Apprehenſion of an immediate Invaſion from France, he preferring his hopes of Gain to himſelf, to the ſafety of the Publick, did order Captain Steward, Commander of the Ship Dutcheſs, to deliver over and put on Board the ſaid Kidd a great number of Able Seamen, to the prejudice of the Publick Security, and to the endangering the ſaid Ship the Dutcheſs, if it had been Attacked by the Enemy. —— To which he Anſwered, 1701. Answered, That the Men taken from on Board the Dutchess, were but some of the very Persons that were just before taken from on Board of Captain Kidd, and returned by their own consent again, not being above Twenty in Number, and that, when all Fears of an Invasion were over and at an end.

VII. That during the War, he did by Misrepresentations, procure a Grant or Order for His Majesty's Ship the Dolphin, then Fitted out, Mann'd and Equipt for the Service of the Publick, to be employed in a Private Voyage and Undertaking, for the Advantage of himself and others concerned with him. — To which he Answered, That what was done therein, was done after the Peace concluded, and by His Majesty's Command, at the Instance and Request of other Persons, and not of the said Earl, but contrary to his Opinion.

VIII. That during the time of his Commanding the Navy Royal, he did through Neglect, and in Contempt of Orders, unnecessarily hazard and expose the Navy, and lose the opportunities of Taking or Destroying the French Ships, and suffer them to return safe into their own Harbours. — To which he Answered, That he is not Guilty of any Neglect or Omission of his Duty herein, nor did expect in this Particular to be charged therewith, considering his Faithful Services rendred against the French Fleet.

IX. That he did in Concert with other False and Evil Counsellors, Advise our Sovereign Lord the King, in the Year 1698. to enter into one Treaty for dividing the Monarchy and Dominions of Spain; in pursuance whereof in 1699. one other Treaty was entred into to the like purpose. Both which Treaties were prejudicial to the Interest of the Protestant Religion, &c. — To which he Answered, He does deny, that he did advise His Majesty to enter into the Treaty of Partition; but so far as he was any ways acquainted therewith, he Objected to, and gave his Opinion against the same.

X. That he was one of the Lords Justices, First Commissioner in the Admiralty, Commander in Chief of the Navy, one of His Majesty's Privy Council, and Treasurer of His Majesty's Navy, or in some or one of the Stations, during the time that all and every the Crimes before set forth were done and Committed. — To which he Answered, That His Majesty was pleased to intrust him in the several Offices and Stations, which he had discharged with Loyalty, Faithfulness, and Zeal to His Majesty and His People.

On May the 19*th.* the Commons by Mr. Harcourt sent up Articles of Impeachment against John Lord Somers.

Articles against the Lord Somers.

I. That well knowing the most apparent Evil Consequences, as well as the Injustice of the Partition of the Spanish Monarchy, he did advise His Majesty to enter into a Treaty for it; and did so far encourage and promote the same, that the said Treaty was concluded and ratified in 1698. under the Great Seal of England, then in Custody of the said Lord Somers. — To which his Lordship Answered, in a full and plain Account of all the Steps of that Treaty, referring himself to the Letters on that Subject between His Majesty and him (before-recited), wherein, as he conceived, he had fully and faithfully discharged his Trust, and the Duty incumbent on him.

II. That for the more effectual carrying on the said Treaty, Commissions were prepared, amended, enlarged or altered by the said Lord Somers, without any Lawful Warrant for his so doing; whereunto, without communicating the same to the Rest of the then Lords Justices of England, or advising with the Privy Council, did presume to affix the Great Seal of England, with a Blank for Commissioners Names to be afterwards inserted. 1701.

III. That having affix'd the Great Seal without Lawful Warrant, in hopes of concealing that Evil and most Dangerous Practice, after he had settled the said Commissions, he used his endeavour to procure a Warrant to be transmitted to Him for affixing the Great Seal, that it might not be known, but that he had it in due time. — To which Second and Third Articles he Answer'd, That having received his Majesty's express Commands to send to his Majesty full Powers under the Great Seal, for negotiating the said Treaty, with Blanks for his Majesty's Commissioners Names, he thought it sufficient Warrant for him so to do. And that he did afterwards desire His Majesty that a particular Warrant for Signing the said Commission might be Signed and Returned; not that he doubted His Majesty's said Letter to be a sufficient Warrant, but for that such Warrant would be more proper to be produced if occasion should require.

IV. That contrary to his Duty he affixed the Great Seal of England to the Ratification of the said Treaty in 1698. not having communicated the same to the rest of the then Lords Justices, or advised with the Privy Council, leaving one entire Blank Sheet, and many other Blanks in the said Ratification, with an Intent to be afterwards filled up by other Persons beyond the Seas. — To which he answered, That Mr. Secretary Vernon having prepared by His Majesty's Commands the Instruments for Ratification, with Blanks therein, he did affix the Great Seal, with he conceives and is advised he might lawfully do, not communicating the same, because he had his Majesty's Command that the said Treaty should be kept Secret.

V. That in the Year 1699. another Treaty of Partition was concluded and ratified under the Great Seal, then in the custody of the said Lord Somers; Dishonourable to His Majesty, highly Injurious to the Interest of the Protestant Religion, &c. — To which he Answered, That a Draught of the said Treaty being read over in the presence of divers of the Lords of the Privy Council, he the said Lord Somers as well as others then present, did make several Objections; but they were informed by His Majesty's Plenipotentiaries for Transacting this Treaty, who were also then present, that the said Treaty was so far perfected, that nothing could be altered therein; and His Majesty afterwards by Warrant so requiring, he did affix the Great Seal, being as he conceives obliged to do it.

VI. That whereas by the Laws and Usages of this Realm, all Commissions under the Great Seal, for the making any Treaty or Alliance, ought to be Inrolled and entred on Record in the Court of Chancery; He the said Lord Somers not minding the Duty of his Office, did not in any manner Inroll or enter on Record any of the said Commissions or Ratifications. — To which he Answered, He conceives it was not incumbent upon him as Lord Chancellor to see the Commissions or Ratifications Inrolled; but the Care of Inrolling the same, if necessary, doth belong to the Prothonotary of the Court of Chancery.

VII. That the said Lord Somers, contrary to his Oath as Lord Chancellor of England, did pass many great, unreasonable and exorbitant Grants, under the Great Seal, of divers Mannors, Lordships, &c. belonging to the Crown of England; and did advise, promote, and procure divers like Grants of the late Forfeited Estates in Ireland, in Contempt of the Advice of the Commons of England. — To which he Answer'd, 1701. swered, He doth acknowledge he did paſs ſeveral Grants, &c. but the ſame were regularly paſſed through the proper Offices, and brought with ſufficient Warrants for the Great Seal; and believes more conſiderable Grants have paſſed in the like number of Years in moſt of his Predeceſſors Times.

VIII. That he did not only receive and enjoy the Fees, Profits, and Perquiſites belonging to the Great Seal, but had received an Annual Penſion from the Crown, of 4000 l. and had further begged and procured for his own Benefit many great, unreaſonable and exorbitant Grants of Revenues belonging to the Crown of England. —— To which he Anſwered, That the Annual Penſion or Allowance of 4000 l. had been allowed to ſeveral of his Predeceſſors; but denies he did ever Beg or uſe any Means to procure any Grant whatſoever for his own Benefit; but what his Majeſty was pleaſed to give him, proceeded from His Majeſty's own Motion, and of His meer Bounty, and as His Majeſty was pleaſed to declare upon that Occaſion, as an Evidence of the gracious Acceptation of the ſaid Lord Somers's Zealous Endeavours for his Service.

IX. That in order to procure a Grant of the ſaid Fee-Farm Rents, he did enter into ſeveral Treaties, and had many Communications with the Auditor of the Rates, and with the Clerk of the Truſtees for Sale of the ſaid Rents, and contracted and agreed with them, as a Reward for their Diſcovery, one full fourth Part of all ſuch Rents ſo Diſcover'd.

X. That notwithſtanding the ſaid pretended Contracts, there was not any Sum of Money really Paid, but the Contracts and Payments were colourably and fraudulently contrived in deceit of his Majeſty, and Eluſion of the Acts of Parliament. —— To which Ninth and Tenth Articles, he Anſwered, That after His Majeſty had given directions to the Lords of the Treaſury for granting Fee-Farm Rents to the Benefit of him and his Heirs; His Majeſty's intended Bounty would have been loſt, without Information could be gained of ſuch particular Rents: And therefore Application was made to the ſaid Auditor and Clerk, as the moſt likely to give Information therein; but they did refuſe to give any account of ſuch Rents, unleſs they might have near a Fourth Part for ſo doing; which the ſaid Lord Somers did, as he conceives he Lawfully might, comply with. And there was not any Sum of Money Paid as the Conſideration of the Grants of the ſaid Rents, but the Contracts were made, and the Payment diſcharged, without any Deceit of His Majeſty, or Eluſion of the Acts of Parliament.

XI. That many Rents ſtanding in Charge for Payment of Penſions, Stipends, Salaries, Annuities, Alms and Allowances for Schools, Churches, Bridges, &c. and many Quit-Rents of Mannors united and annext to the Caſtle of Windſor for Support of the ſame, and Maintenance of the Officers, Servants and Attendants in the ſaid Caſtle, were conveyed by the ſaid Truſtees, through the Direction and Power of the ſaid Lord Somers, contrary to the true Intent and Meaning of the ſaid Acts of Parliament, to the great Vexation and Oppreſſion of many of His Majeſty's good Subjects, and creating many new and unreaſonable Charges on other Revenues of the Crown. —— To which he Anſwerd, That ſome things might be inſerted by miſtaken Informations, and not out of any Deſign; He denies that as to his Knowledge or Belief, any of the ſaid Rents were ever united or annexed to the Caſtle of Windſor, for any purpoſe whatſoever; or that any Oppreſſion or Vexation hath hapned; and little or no new Charge to the Crown.

XII. That by the direction of the ſaid Lord Somers, the Perſons in whoſe Names the Purchaſes were made, did ſurrender ſeveral of the ſaid Rents to them granted, amounting to the yearly Value of 347 l. 11 s. 5 d. on ſuggeſtion of wrong Conveyance; and procured other Rents of the yearly Value of 391 l. 3 d. to be allowed by way of Reprize, as if the ſaid Rents ſo ſurrendred had been really and bona fide Purchaſed. —— To which he Anſwered, That the Truſtees for Sale of the Fee-Farm Rents, by Warrant of the Commiſſioners of the Treaſury, did Grant divers other Rents amounting to 391 l. in Lieu and Reprize of the 347 l. having appeared to be granted before, or not grantable by the ſaid Truſtees, or not leviable on Surrenders of ſuch Rents; which he conceives might be and was Lawfully done. 1701.

XIII. That in the Year 1695. the ſaid Lord Somers, being then Lord Keeper, procured a Commiſſion to be granted to one William Kidd, a Perſon of Evil Fame and Reputation, and ſince that time convicted of Piracy; and in a Grant from His Majeſty, of Ships, Veſſels and Goods to be taken by the ſaid William Kidd, unto Richard Earl of Bellamont, Edmund Harriſon Merchant, Samuel Newton Gent. and others, the Name of the ſaid Samuel Newton was uſed in Truſt, and for the only Benefit and Advantage of the ſaid Lord Somers. —— To which he Anſwered, That the ſaid William Kidd had from His Majeſty a Commiſſion for preventing the Piracy of Others, and to Apprehend certain Pirates, and bring them to a Legal Tryal; the granting of which Commiſſion was then apprehended to be neceſſary for the preſervation of Trade and Navigation. He does admit there was a Grant to the Earl of Bellamont, Edmond Harriſon, and Samuel Newton, who was named by and in truſt for the ſaid Lord Somers, of Ships and Goods taken by the ſaid William Kidd, with account to be duly made to the Uſe of His Majeſty, of a clear Tenth Part, whereby the Publick might have received Benefit, had the ſaid Kidd Faithfully diſcharged the Truſt, which he failing to do, the Owners of the ſaid Ship have loſt all their Expences.

XIV. That as Lord Chancellor, he had in ſeveral Cauſes depending before him, by many extraordinary Methods, and unwarrantable Practices, for ſeveral Years, delayed Proceedings in the ſaid Cauſes; and by colour of his Office, had made divers Arbitrary and Illegal Orders, and had of his own Authority reverſed Judgments given in the Court of Exchequer, without calling the Barons before him: And had declared and affirmed in Publick Places of Judicature, that particular Subjects might have Rights and Intereſts, without any Remedy for recovery of the ſame, unleſs by Petition to the Perſon of the King only, or to that effect: Which Poſition was highly dangerous to the Legal Conſtitution of this Kingdom, and abſolutely deſtructive to the Property of the Subject. —— To which he Anſwered, That he did not delay any Proceedings longer, or otherwiſe, than as the Circumſtances and Juſtice of each Cauſe required; nor did he ever make any Arbitrary or Illegal Order, or ever reverſe any Judgment given in the Court of Exchequer, otherwiſe than as is warranted and allowed by the Law: Nor did ever deliver any Poſition whatſoever, dangerous to the Legal Conſtitution, or deſtructive to the Property of the Subjects.

A Copy of the Lord Somers's Anſwer was with great Diſpatch delivered to the Commons on May the 24*th.* In the mean time, on the 21*ſt.* the Lords had ſent down this Meſſage.

Mr.

1701. Mr. Speaker,

The Lords command us to acquaint this Houſe, That their Lordſhips having been deſired by the Earl of Orford, that a Day may be appointed for his ſpeedy Tryal, their Lordſhips finding no Iſſue joined by Replication of this Houſe, think fit to give Notice thereof to this Houſe.

They alſo command us to acquaint this Houſe, That they having on the firſt of April laſt ſent up an Impeachment to their Lordſhips againſt William Earl of Portland, for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors; and having alſo, on the 15th. of the ſame Month Impeached Charles Lord Halifax, for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors; and there being as yet no particular Articles exhibited againſt the ſaid Lords; their Lordſhips think themſelves obliged to put this Houſe in mind thereof; which after Impeachments have ſo long depended is a hardſhip to the Perſons concerned, and not agreeable to the uſual Methods and Proceedings of Parliaments in ſuch Caſes.

Replication of the Commons to the Earl of Orford.

The Commons prepared this Replication to my Lord of Orford's Anſwer.

The Commons have conſider'd the Anſwer of Edward Earl of Orford, to the Articles of Impeachment exhibited againſt him by the Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes aſſembled in Parliament, and do aver their Charge of high Crimes and Miſdemeanors againſt him to be true, and that the ſaid Earl is guilty in ſuch manner as he ſtands accuſed and impeached; and that the Commons will be ready to prove their Charge againſt him, at ſuch convenient time as ſhall be appointed for that Purpoſe.

And on the Thirty firſt they ſent this Anſwer to the Lords.

Their Anſwer to the Lords.

In Anſwer to your Lordſhips Meſſage of the 21ſt. inſtant, the Commons have prepared a Replication to the Earl of Orford's Anſwer to the Articles of Impeachment of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, exhibited againſt him; and at preſent defer bringing it up to your Lordſhips, becauſe in the Tryal of the ſeveral Impeachments now depending, the Commons think it moſt proper from the Nature of the Evidence that will be given at the ſaid Tryals, to begin with the Tryal of the Impeachment of John Lord Somers, of High Crimes and Miſdemeanours.

And as to your Lordſhips other Meſſage, the Commons take it to be without Precedent, and Unparliamentary: They, as Proſecutors, having a Liberty to exhibit their Articles of Impeachment in due time, of which they who are to prepare them, are the proper Judges; and therefore, for your Lordſhips to aſſert, that having not yet exhibited particular Articles againſt William Earl of Portland, and Charles Lord Halifax, is a hardſhip to them, and not agreeable to the uſual Methods and Proceedings in Parliament in ſuch Caſes, does, as they conceive, tend to the Breach of that good Correſpondence betwixt the Two Houſes, which ought to be mutually preſerved.

Day appointed for Trial of the Earl of Orford.

On the ſame day, 31. May, Sir John Hoskyns and Sir Robert Legard brought this Meſſage to the Commons. Mr. Speaker, The Lords have commanded us to acquaint this Houſe, that their Lordſhips have appointed Monday the 9th day of June next, for the Tryal of Edward Earl of Orford, upon the Articles brought up againſt him by this Houſe, in Weſtminſter-Hall, and that this Houſe may reply, if they think fit.

They have alſo commanded us to acquaint this Houſe, That this Houſe having, on the firſt Day of April laſt, ſent up to their Lordſhips an Impeachment againſt William Earl of Portland, for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors; and having alſo, on the 15th. Day of the ſame Month, Impeached Charles Lord Halifax for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors; and there being as yet no particular Articles exhibited againſt the ſaid Lords, their Lordſhips think themſelves obliged to put this Houſe in mind thereof; which after Impeachments have ſo long depended, is a hardſhip to the Perſons concerned, and not agreeable to the uſual Methods of Parliament in ſuch Caſes.

Anſwer of the Commons.

The Commons on the Fifth of June, returned this Anſwer.

The Commons, on Conſideration of your Lordſhips Meſſage to them of the 31ſt of May, concerning the Earl of Orford, think it their undoubted Right, when ſeveral Perſons ſtand Impeached before your Lordſhips, to bring to Tryal ſuch of them in the firſt place, as the Commons apprehend from the Nature of the Evidence ought firſt to be proceeded againſt, to the Intent all ſuch Offenders may in due time be brought to Juſtice; and that no Day ought to be appointed by your Lordſhips for the Tryal of any Impeachment by the Commons, without ſome previous ſignification to your Lordſhips from the Commons, of their being ready to proceed thereon.

The Commons could not receive this Meſſage from your Lordſhips without the greateſt ſurprize; your Lordſhips proceedings in this Caſe, being neither warranted by proceedings, nor (as the Commons conceive) conſiſtent with the Methods of Juſtice, or with Reaſon: Wherefore the Commons cannot agree to the Day appointed by your Lordſhips for the Tryal of the Earl of Orford.

As to your Lordſhips Meſſage at the ſame time, relating to the Earl of Portland, and Charles Lord Halifax, the Commons take the ſame to be without Precedent, and unparliamentary; and conceive your Lordſhips frequent Repetition thereof, in a ſhort time after the Commons had tranſmitted to your Lordſhips their Articles againſt Two of the Impeached Lords, and were daily preparing their Articles againſt the others, manifeſtly tends to the delay of Juſtice, in obſtructing the Tryals of the Impeach'd Lords, by introducing Diſputes in breach of that good Correſpondence between the Two Houſes, which ought inviolably to be preſerved.

In the mean time the Lords on the Fourth, accoſted them with another Meſſage to this purpoſe.

Meſſage from the Lords.

Mr. Speaker,

" The Lords do think fit, upon Occaſion of " the Meſſage from this Houſe of the 31ſt. of " May, to acquaint this Houſe, That having " been deſired by the Lord Somers, that a Day " may be appointed for his ſpeedy Tryal, " and their Lordſhips finding no Iſſue joined " by Replication of the Houſe of Commons, " judge it proper to give them notice thereof, " that the Commons may reply if they think " fit. And at the ſame time, their Lordſhips let " the Commons know, that they will proceed " to the Tryal of any of the Impeached Lords, " whom the Commons ſhall be firſt ready to " begin with, ſo as there may be no occaſion " taken from thence for any unreaſonable De- " lay in the Proſecution of any of them: And " further to acquaint them, having ſearched " their own Journals, they do not find, that " after a general Impeachment, there has ever " been ſo long a delay of bringing up the par- " ticular Articles of Impeachment Sitting the " Parliament: And therefore the Lords do " think they had reaſon to aſſert, that it was " a hardſhip to the Two Lords concerned (eſ- " pecially when their Lordſhips had put the " Houſe of Commons in mind of exhibiting " ſuch Articles) and not agreeable to the " uſual Proceedings in Parliament. And as the " Lords do not controvert what Right the Com- " mons may have, of Impeaching in general " Terms if they pleaſe, ſo the Lords, in whom " the Judicature does entirely reſide, think them- " ſelves obliged to aſſert, that the Right of " limiting a convenient Time for bringing the " particular Charge before them, for the avoid- " ing delay in Juſtice, is lodged in them.

1701. "The Lords hope, the Commons on their "part will be as careful not to do any thing "that may tend to the Interruption of the "good Correſpondence between the Two "Houſes, as the Lords ſhall ever be on their "part; and the beſt way to preſerve that, is, "for neither of the Two Houſes to exceed "thoſe Limits which the Law and Cuſtom of "Parliament have already eſtabliſhed.

The Commons hereupon, June the Sixth, deſir'd a Conference with the Lords upon the Subject-Matter of the ſaid Meſſage; at which Mr. Harcourt delivered himſelf in this Manner.

Conference. "The Commons have deſired this Conference, "upon your Lordſhips Meſſage of the Fourth "of June, in order to preſerve a good Corre- "ſpondence with your Lordſhips, which will al- "ways be the Endeavour of the Commons, and "is at this time particularly neceſſary, in order "to bring the Impeached Lords to a ſpeedy "Trial. And becauſe the Meſſages which your "Lordſhips have thought fit to ſend to the Com- "mons, and the Anſwers thereunto, ſeem not "to tend toward expediting the Trials, which "the Commons ſo much deſire, but may rather "furniſh Matter of Diſpute between the Two "Houſes, the Commons therefore chuſe to "follow the Methods formerly uſed with good "Succeſs upon the like Occaſion; and for the "more ſpeedy and eaſy Adjuſting and Prevent- "ing any Differences which have already hap- "pened, or may ariſe, previous to or upon thoſe "Trials, the Commons do propoſe to your "Lordſhips, That a Committee of both Houſes "be nominated, to conſider of the moſt proper "Ways and Methods of proceeding on Impeach- "ments, according to the Uſage of Parliaments "in ſuch Caſes.

The Conference being ended, the Lords, on the Ninth, ſent the following Meſſage to the Commons.

Meſſage from the Lords. "In Anſwer to the Meſſage of the Houſe of "Commons of the Fourth Inſtant, the Lords "ſay by their Meſſage ſent on the Third, where- "in they declare themſelves ready to proceed to "the Trial of any of the Impeached Lords, "whom the Commons ſhall be firſt ready to be- "gin with, they have given a full Proof of their "Willingneſs to comply with the Commons in "any thing which may appear reaſonable, in "order to the ſpeedy determining of the Im- "peachments now depending; and therefore, as "the Lords conceive the Commons had no Oc- "caſion to begin any Diſpute on that Head, "ſo their Lordſhips decline entring into a Con- "troverſie, which ſeems to them to be of no "uſe at preſent.

"The Lords think themſelves obliged to aſ- "ſert their undoubted Right to appoint a Day "for the Trial of any Impeachment depending "before them, if they ſee good Cauſe for it, "without any previous Signification from the "Commons of their being ready to proceed; "which Right is warranted by many Prece- "dents, as well as conſonant to Juſtice and Rea- "ſon. And their Lordſhips, according to the "Example of their Anceſtors, will always uſe "that Right, with a Regard to the equal and "impartial Adminiſtration of Juſtice, and with "a due Care to prevent unreaſonable Delays.

"This being the Caſe, the Lords cannot but "wonder that the Commons, without any Foun- "dation for it, ſhould make uſe of Expreſſions, "which, as their Lordſhips conceive, have ne- "ver been uſed before by one Houſe of Parlia- "ment to another, and which if the like were "returned, muſt neceſſarily deſtroy all good "Correſpondence between the Two Houſes.

"The laſt part of the Commons Meſſage be- 1701. "ing in effect, a Repetition only of their for- "mer of the 21*ſt.* of May, to which the Lords "have already return'd a full Anſwer, their "Lordſhips think it not requiſite to ſay any more, "than that they cannot apprehend with what "Colour their calling upon the Houſe of Com- "mons to ſend up Articles againſt Two Lords, "whom the Commons have ſo long Impeached "in General Terms, can be ſaid to tend to the "Delay of Juſtice. And therefore, as the Lords "think the Commons ought to have forborn "that Reflection, ſo their Lordſhips, in ſay- "ing no more upon the Occaſion of this Meſ- "ſage of the Commons, think they have given "a convincing Proof of their Moderation, and "of their ſincere Deſire of preſerving a good "Correſpondence between the Two Houſes; "which is ſo neceſſary for the publick Security, "as well as doing Right upon the Impeach- "ments.

The Commons Anſwer'd them next Day to this Effect: Anſwer of the Commons.

"The Commons, in hopes of avoiding all "Interruptions and Delays in proceeding againſt "the Impeach'd Lords, and the many Inconve- "niencies which might ariſe thereby, having "propoſed to your Lordſhips at a Conference, "That a Committee of both Houſes might be "nominated, to conſider of the moſt proper "Ways and Methods of proceeding on Impeach- "ments; think they might juſtly have expected "your Lordſhips Compliance with their ſaid "Propoſition, inſtead of your Lordſhips An- "ſwer to their Meſſage of the Fourth Inſtant, "which they Yeſterday received. In which An- "ſwer of your Lordſhips, though many Mat- "ters of great Exception are contained, a ſuita- "ble Reply whereunto would inevitably deſtroy "all good Correſpondence between the Two "Houſes; yet the Commons, from an earneſt "Deſire to preſerve the ſame, as well as to give "the moſt convincing Proof of their Modera- "tion, and to ſhew their Readineſs to bring the "Impeached Lords to ſpeedy Juſtice, at preſent "inſiſt only on their Propoſition, of Both Houſes "to ſettle and adjuſt the neceſſary Preliminaries "to the Trials; particularly, Whether the Im- "peached Lords ſhall appear on their Trials at "your Lordſhips Bar as Criminals? Whether, "being under Accuſations for the ſame Crimes, "they are to ſit as Judges on each others Trials "for thoſe Crimes, or can Vote in their own "Caſes, as we find by your Lordſhips Journal, "ſince their being Impeached, they have been "admitted to do? Which Matters, and ſome o- "thers, being neceſſary to be adjuſted, the "Commons cannot but inſiſt on a Committee of "Both Houſes to be appointed for that Purpoſe. "The departing from which, would be giving "up the Rights of the Commons of England, "known by unqueſtionable Precedents, and the "Uſage of Parliament, and making all Im- "peachments, (the greateſt Bulwark of the Laws "and Liberties of England) impracticable for "the future."

The Lords hereupon enter'd into a Debate, Whether they ſhould appoint a Committee, in purſuance of the Commons Deſire; and having carried it in the Negative, yet deſir'd a preſent Conference with them, which was managed by the Duke of Devonſhire, who acquainted them: Debate the Lords.

"That the Lords have deſir'd this Conference, "upon Occaſion of the laſt Conference, in or- "der to preſerve a good Correſpondence with "the Houſe of Commons, which they ſhall al- "ways endeavour. Conference with the Commons.

"As

1701. "As to the late Meſſages between the Two "Houſes, their Lordſhips are well aſſur'd, that "on their part nothing has paſſed but what was "agreeable to the Methods of Parliament, and "proper to preſerve that good Underſtanding "between Both Houſes, which is neceſſary for "the carrying on of the Publick Buſineſs.

"As to the Propoſal of the Commons, That a "Committee of Both Houſes ſhould be appoint-"ed, to conſider of the Ways and Methods of "Proceedings on Impeachments, their Lordſhips "cannot agree to it.

Reaſons for not appointing a Committee. "I. Becauſe they do not find that ever ſuch "a Committee was appointed on Occaſion of "Impeachments for Miſdemeanors; and their "Lordſhips think themſelves obliged to be ex-"treamly Cautious in admitting any thing new "in Matters relating to Judicature.

"II. That although a Committee of this na-"ture was agreed to upon the Impeachments of "the Earl of Danby, and the Five Popiſh Lords, "for High Treaſon, yet it was upon Occaſion of "ſeveral Conſiderable Queſtions and Difficulties "which did then ariſe. And their Lordſhips do "not find that the ſucceſs in that Inſtance was "ſuch, as ſhould encourage the purſuing the "ſame Methods again, though in the like Caſe: "The Lords obſerving, that after much time "ſpent at that Committee, the Diſputes were ſo "far from being there adjuſted, that they occa-"ſion'd an abrupt Concluſion of a Seſſion of "Parliament.

"III. Their Lordſhips are of Opinion, that "the Methods of Proceedings on Impeach-"ments for Miſdemeanors, are ſo well ſet-"tled by the uſage of Parliaments, that they "do not foreſee any Difficulties likely to hap-"pen; at leaſt none have been yet ſtarted to "them: And all the Preliminaries in the Caſe "of Stephen Goudett, and others, (which was "the laſt Inſtance of Impeachment for Miſde-"meanors) were eaſily ſettled and agreed to, "without any ſuch Committee.

"IV. The Lords cannot but obſerve, that "this Propoſal of the Commons comes ſo very "late, that their Lordſhips can expect no other "Fruit of ſuch a Committee, but the prevent-"ing the Tryals during this Seſſion.

"The Lords aſſure the Commons, That in "caſe any Difficulties ſhall ariſe in the progreſs "of theſe Tryals, (which their Lordſhips do "not foreſee) they will be ready to comply "with the Commons in removing them, as far "as Juſtice, and the uſage of Parliament will "admit.

The Commons on the 11*th.* deſired a free Conference on the Subject-Matter of the laſt; and at the ſame time drew up an Anſwer to their Lordſhips other Meſſage, on Monday, about their appointing Friday 13*th.* for the Tryal of the Lord Somers; which was to this Effect.

Free Conference. "The Commons, on Monday laſt, (which "was the 9*th*) received a Meſſage from your "Lordſhips, That your Lordſhips had appointed "the Trial of John Lord Somers upon Friday "next, on their Impeachment againſt him; in "which, they obſerve your Lordſhips have not "nominated any Place for his Trial, though "your Lordſhips thought fit to make that Mat-"ter on the laſt Impeachment for Miſdemeanor, "the Subject of a long Debate.

"And they cannot but take Notice, That "your Lordſhips have taken as long a time to "give your Anſwer to the Commons Deſire of "a Committee of Both Houſes, deliver'd at a "Conference on Friday laſt, as you are pleaſed "to allow the Commons to have of the day ap-"pointed by your Lordſhips for the ſaid Trial. 1701.

"Your Lordſhips appointing ſo ſhort a Day, "eſpecially whilſt the Propoſition made to your "Lordſhips for a Committee of Both Houſes "was undetermined, the Commons take to be "ſuch a Hardſhip to them, and ſuch an Indul-"gence to the Perſon Accuſed, as is not to be "parrallel'd in any Parliamentary Proceeding.

"The Commons muſt likewiſe acquaint your "Lordſhips, That their Experience of the Inter-"ruption of a former Trial on an Impeachment "for Miſdemeanors, for want of ſettling the "Preliminaries between the Two Houſes, obli-"ges them to inſiſt on a Committee of Both "Houſes, for preventing the like Interruption.

"And they conceive 'twould be very prepoſte-"rous for them to enter upon the Tryal of any "of theſe Lords, till your Lordſhips diſcover "ſome Inclination to make the Proceeding there-"upon practicable; and therefore they think "they have Reaſon to inſiſt upon another Day "to be appointed for the Trial of the Lord So-"mers. And the Commons doubt not but to ſa-"tiſfy your Lordſhips at a Free Conference, of "the Neceſſity of having a Committee of Both "Houſes, before they can proceed upon the ſaid "Tryal.

After which His Majeſty made this Speech, to expedite the Diſpatch of Affairs, with as much Importunity as was decent for Him to uſe.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech. "I Return you My hearty Thanks for the "Care you have taken to Eſtabliſh the Succeſſion to the Crown in the Proteſtant Line: "And I muſt not loſe this Occaſion of Acquainting you, that I am likewiſe extreamly ſenſible of your repeated Aſſurances of ſupporting "Me in ſuch Alliances as ſhall be moſt proper "for the Preſervation of the Liberty of Europe, "and for the Security of England and Holland. "Your ready Compliance with My Deſires, as "to the Succors for the States-General, is alſo "a great Satisfaction to Me, as well as a great "Advantage to the Common Cauſe. And as I "have nothing ſo much at Heart, as the Preſervation of the Liberty of Europe, and the "Honour and Intereſt of England, ſo I make no "Doubt of Attaining thoſe great Ends, by the "Bleſſing of God, and the Continuance of "your chearful Concurrence.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"The Seaſon of the Year makes it neceſſary "to have a ſpeedy Receſs; and the Poſture of "Affairs Abroad does abſolutely require My "Preſence, for the Encouragement of Our Allies, and for the Perfecting of ſuch Alliances "as may be moſt effectual for the Common Intereſt: And therefore I muſt recommend a "Diſpatch of the Publick Buſineſs, eſpecially "of thoſe Matters which are of the greateſt "Importance.

1701.

The Commons were willing to interpret this Speech, as an Approbation of their Proceedings in reſpect of their Conteſt with the Lords; and therefore agreed upon this Addreſs to His Majeſty.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

Addreſs of the Commons. We Your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Commons in Parliament Aſſembled, do with all imaginable Chearfulneſs, return Your Majeſty our moſt humble Thanks for Your moſt Gracious Speech from the Throne, in which Your Majeſty is pleaſed to expreſs Your Royal Approbation of the Proceedings of Your Commons. And we do further unanimouſly aſſure Your Majeſty, That we will be ready on all Occaſions to aſſiſt Your Majeſty in Supporting ſuch Alliances as Your Majeſty ſhall think fit to make in Conjunction with the Emperor and the States-General, for the Preſervation of the Liberties of Europe, the Proſperity and Peace of England, and for reducing the Exorbitant Power of France.

When this Addreſs was preſented on Friday, June 13th. the King gave this Anſwer, to molify and to oblige in the wiſeſt Manner. Gentlemen, I thank you heartily for the Unanimous Aſſurances You have given me of your Readineſs to Aſſiſt Me, in Supporting ſuch Alliances as I ſhall make in Conjunction with the Emperor and the States-General. It will be a good Encouragement to them, to find the Senſe of this Kingdom ſo fully Expreſſed on this Occaſion, and will likewiſe contribute moſt effectually to the obtaining thoſe great Ends you have now mentioned, on which the Happineſs of Europe does ſo much depend.

King's Anſwer.

But to return again to the Conteſts between the Two Houſes. The Lords on the ſame Day the King made this Speech, had ſent this Meſſage to the Commons by Dr. Newton and Mr. Gery.

Conteſts between the Two Houſes. "In Anſwer to the Meſſage from the Houſe "of Commons of the Tenth Inſtant, the Lords "ſay, That although they take it to be Unparliamentary in many Particulars, yet, to ſhew "their real Deſire of avoiding Diſputes, and removing all Pretence of delaying the Trials of "the Impeached Lords, they will only take notice of that part of their Meſſage, wherein "the Commons propoſe ſome Things as Difficulties in reſpect of the Tryals; which Matters relating wholly to their Judicature, and "to their Rights and Privileges, as Peers, they "think fit to acquaint the Commons with the "following Reſolutions of the Houſe of Lords.

I. That no Lord of Parliament, Impeached for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, and coming to his Tryal, ſhall, upon his Tryal, be without the Bar.

II. That no Lord of Parliament, Impeached of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, can be precluded from 1701. from Voting on any Occaſion, except in his own Tryal.

" Their Lordſhips further take Notice of a " Miſtake in Point of Fact alledged in the Meſ- " ſage of the Commons; it no way appearing " upon their Journals, that the Lords Impeach- " ed have Voted in their own Caſe.

" The Lords being well aſſured, that all the " Steps that have been taken by them in relation " to theſe Impeachments, are warranted by the " Practice of their Anceſtors, and the Uſage of " Parliament. have Reaſon to expect the Tryals " ſhall proceed without delay.

Alſo, That they are commanded by the Lords to acquaint this Houſe, That,

" In Anſwer to the Meſſage of the Houſe of " Commons Yeſterday, the Lords ſay, That " they cannot give a greater Evidence of their " ſincere and hearty Deſires of avoiding all Dif- " ferences with the Houſe of Commons, and of " proceeding on the Tryals of the Impeach- " ments, than by not taking notice of the ſeve- " ral juſt Exceptions, to which that Meſſage is " liable, both as to the Matter and the Expreſ- " ſions.

" The Lords have nothing farther from their " Thoughts, than the going about to do any " thing which might have the leaſt appearance " of Hardſhip with relation to the Commons.

" But the Anſwer of the Lord Somers to the " Articles exhibited againſt him, having been " ſent down to the Commons on the 24*th.* of " May laſt, and they having by their Meſſage of " the 21*ſt.* of May, ſignified to their Lordſhips " their Intention of beginning with the Tryal " of his Impeachment in the firſt place:

" The Lords, conſidering how far the Seſſion " is advanced, thought it reaſonable to appoint " the 13*th.* Inſtant for the ſaid Tryal, their Lord- " ſhips finding ſeveral Precedents of appointing " Tryals on Impeachments within a ſhorter time.

" The Lords alſo think it incumbent upon " them, to diſpatch the Tryals of all the Im- " peach'd Lords before the Riſing of the Parlia- " ment. This is what Juſtice requires, and can- " not be look'd upon as a Matter of Indulgen- " cy: Nevertheleſs, that the Commons may ſee " how deſirous their Lordſhips are to comply " with them in any thing which may be con- " ſiſtent with Juſtice, they have appointed the " Tryal of Impeachment againſt John Lord " Somers, on Tueſday the 17*th.* of this inſtant " June, at Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon, " in the Houſe of Lords, which will be then " ſitting in Weſtminſter-Hall.

" That they were commanded by the Lords " to acquaint this Houſe, That the Lords do a- " gree to a free Conference with the Commons, " as deſired; and do appoint to Morrow at One " a Clock in the Painted Chamber.

Anſwer of the Commons.

The Commons on the 13*th.* made theſe Anſwers to them.

" The Houſe of Commons find greater Rea- " ſon to inſiſt upon their Propoſal of a Com- " mittee of Both Houſes, from the Two Meſſa- " ges received Yeſterday from your Lordſhips; " for their Ambiguity and Uncertainty do ſhew " the Methods of former Parliaments to be the " moſt proper Way for Diſpatch of Buſineſs.

" The Commons have been obliged to employ " that Time in conſidering how to anſwer your " Lordſhips Meſſages, which otherwiſe would " have been ſpent in preparing for the Lord So- " mers's Tryal; ſo that the Delay muſt be char- " ged where the Occaſion ariſeth. And the " Commons having deſir'd a Committee of " Both Houſes, to adjuſt the Preliminaries of " the Tryals, cannot but think it ſtrange your " Lordſhips ſhould come to Reſolutions upon " Two of thoſe Points, while the Propoſal of " the Houſe of Commons is under Debate at " Conferences between the Two Houſes; the " Commons having other Difficulties to propoſe, " which concern them as Proſecutors, and all " future Impeachments. 1701.

" And though the Commons have the Subject " of your Lordſhips Reſolutions, with other " Things to be debated at a Committee of both " Houſes; yet they cannot but obſerve, that " your Lordſhips ſecond Reſolution is no direct " Anſwer to the Commons Propoſal; which " was, Whether Peers, Impeached of the ſame " Crimes, ſhall Vote for each other upon their " Tryal for the ſame Crimes. And the Com- " mons cannot believe, that any ſuch Rule can " be laid down in plain Words, where there is " a due Regard to Juſtice.

" And as to what your Lordſhips obſerve, " That there is a Miſtake in Point of Fact al- " ledged by the Commons; The Houſe may " take notice of the Caution uſed by your Lord- " ſhips, in wording that part of your Meſſage; " for they know your Lordſhips are too well " acquainted with the Truth of the Fact, to af- " firm that the Impeached Lords did not Vote " in their own Caſes; and though the appear- " ing or not appearing upon your Lordſhips " Journal, does not make it more or leſs agree- " able to the Rules of Juſtice, yet the Com- " mons cannot but add this further Obſervation " from your Lordſhips Journal; That the Im- " peached Lords Preſence is not only recorded " when thoſe Votes paſſed, but they alſo find " ſome of them appointed of Committees for " preparing and drawing up the Meſſages and " Anſwers to the Houſe of Commons; which " they do not think has been the beſt Expedient " for preſerving a good Correſpondence be- " tween the Two Houſes, or adjuſting what will " be neceſſary upon theſe Tryals: And there- " fore the Commons cannot think it agreeable " to the Rules of Parliament, for them to ap- " pear at the Tryal, till all neceſſary Prelimi- " naries are firſt ſettled with your Lordſhips.

Report of the Conference.

Then the Commons went to the Conference with the Lords, and Mr. Harcourt reported the Matter thereof, and the Words which the Lord Haverſham had ſpoke thereat; which he read in his Place, and afterwards delivered in at the Clerks Table, where the ſame was read, and is as followeth; viz.

" That the Managers appointed by this Houſe " met the Lords at the Free Conference, the " Subject-Matter whereof was opened by " Mr. Harcourt, and immediately afterwards fur- " ther argued by Sir Bartholomew Shower.

" It was inſiſted on by each of them, That " the Reaſons offered by their Lordſhips at the " laſt Conference, were not ſufficient for their " Lordſhips diſagreeing to a Committee of Both " Houſes, deſired by the Commons at the firſt " Conference.

" That notwithſtanding thoſe Reaſons, the " Commons ſtill thought a Committee of Both " Houſes abſolutely neceſſary for adjuſting and " preventing ſuch Differences as had happen'd, " or might ariſe previous to, or upon the Try- " als; and therefore inſiſted, that ſuch a Com- " mittee ſhould be appointed before the Com- " mons could proceed on any Tryal.

" 'Twas urged as one Reaſon for ſuch a Com- " mittee, That many Difficulties might happen " whereby the Tryals might be obſtructed, if " the Preliminaries ſhould not be firſt adjuſted: " As one Inſtance, That Point of ſeveral Lords " being under Impeachments of the ſame

" Crimes,

1701. "Crimes, Voting on each others Tryals, was "mentioned.

"The Lord Steward firſt replied, and nothing "was offered by his Grace, but what was mate- "rial and pertinent to the Matter in Queſtion, "and agreeable to the Method of Parliament "in free Conferences.

"That John Lord Haverſham ſpoke immedi- "ately after; and in his Lordſhip's Diſcourſe, "uſed theſe or the like Expreſſions.

Speech of the Lord Haverſham.

One Thing there is, though I cannot ſpeak it, becauſe I am bound up by the Orders of the Houſe: Yet I muſt have ſome Anſwer; This is as to the Lords Voting in their own Caſe; it requires an Anſwer, though I cannot go into the Debate of it. The Commons themſelves have made this Precedent; for in theſe Impeachments they have allowed Men guilty of the ſame Crimes, to Vote in their own Houſe; and therefore we have not made any Diſtinction in Our Houſe, that ſome ſhould Vote, and ſome not. The Lords have ſo high an Opinion of the Juſtice of the Houſe of Commons, that they hope Juſtice ſhall never be made uſe of as a Mask for any Deſign. And therefore give me Leave to ſay, (though I am not to argue it) 'tis a plain Demonſtration, that the Commons think theſe Lords Innocent; and I think the Propoſition is undeniable; for there are ſeveral Lords in the ſame Crimes, in the ſame Facts, there is no Diſtinction. And the Commons leave ſome of theſe Men at the Head of Affairs near the King's Perſon, to do any Miſchief if their Perſons were inclined to it; and Impeach others, when they are both alike Guilty, and concern'd in the ſame Facts. This is a Thing I was in hopes I ſhould never have heard aſſerted, when the Beginning of it was from the Houſe of Commons.

Theſe Expreſſions were inſtantly objected to by Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave; and the Managers took them to be ſo great an Aſperſion on the Honour of this Houſe, that they thought themſelves obliged in Duty immediately to withdraw from the free Conference.

As the Managers were withdrawing, his Grace my Lord Steward ſpoke to the Effect following; That he hoped they would not think that that Lord had any Authority from the Houſe of Lords, to uſe any ſuch Expreſſions towards the Commons.

Reſolved, That John Lord Haverſham hath at the free Conference this Day uttered moſt ſcandalous Reproaches and falſe Expreſſions, highly reflecting upon the Honour and Juſtice of the Houſe of Commons, and tending to the making a Breach in the good Correſpondence between the Lords and Commons, and to the interrupting the publick Juſtice of the Nation, by delaying the Proceedings on Impeachments.

Reſolved, That John Lord Haverſham be charged before the Lords, for the Words ſpoken by the ſaid Lord this Day at the free Conference: And that the Lords be deſir'd to proceed in Juſtice againſt the ſaid Lord Haverſham, and to inflict ſuch Puniſhment upon the ſaid Lord as ſo high an Offence againſt the Houſe of Commons does deſerve.

Ordered, That Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave do carry the ſaid Charge and Reſolution to the Lords.

A Meſſage from the Lords by Doctor Newton and Mr. Gery.

Mr. Speaker,

The Lords having been informed by their Managers, that ſome Interruption happened at the free Conference, which their Lordſhips are concerned at; becauſe they wiſh that nothing ſhould interrupt the publick Buſineſs, do deſire the Commons would come again preſently to the ſaid free Conference; which they do not doubt, will prove the beſt Expedient to prevent the Inconvenience of a Miſunderſtanding upon what has paſt.

Next day which was Saturday the 14th. came another Meſſage from the Lords, importing:

That upon Occaſion of their laſt Meſſage Yeſterday, in order to continue a good Correſpondence between the Two Houſes, their Lordſhips did immediately appoint a Committee to State the matter of the free Conference, and alſo to inſpect Precedents of what has happened of the like Nature; and that the publick Buſineſs may receive no Interruption, the Time deſired by their Lordſhips for renewing the free Conference being elapſed, their Lordſhips deſire a preſent free Conference in the Painted Chamber upon the Subject-Matter of the laſt free Conference. 1701.

Upon which the Commons came to the following Reſolutions.

That an Anſwer be returned to the Lords, That the Commons are extreamly deſirous to preſerve a good Correſpondence between the Two Houſes, and to expedite the Tryals of the Impeached Lords; but do conceive 'tis not conſiſtent with the Honour of the Commons to renew the Free Conference, until they have received Reparation, by their Lordſhips doing Juſtice upon John Lord Haverſham, for the Indignity he Yeſterday offered to the Houſe of Commons.

Articles againſt the Lord Halifax.

On the ſame day, Saturday 14. June, Mr Bruges reported, that he had carried the Articles of Impeachment againſt Charles Lord Hallifax to the Lords, which were,

I. That whereas it was the continued Senſe of the Commons of England, that it was highly reaſonable that the forfeited Eſtates of Rebels and Traitors in Ireland ſhould be applied in eaſe of his Majeſty's Faithful Subjects of the Kingdom of England, the ſaid Lord Halifax preſumed to adviſe, paſs, or direct the paſſing a Grant to Thomas Railton Eſq; in Truſt for himſelf, of ſeveral Debts, Intereſts, &c. amounting to 13000 l. or thereabouts, accruing to His Majeſty from Attainders, Outlawries, or other Forfeitures in Ireland. — To which he Anſwered, That he did accept the ſaid Grant, as it was Lawful for him to do, without breach of his Duty, and the Truſt repoſed in him; which Grant hath ſince been taken away by Act of Parliament, and he hath not made clear thereof, as yet, above 400 l.

II. That he has not repaid into the Receit of His Majeſty's Exchequer in Ireland the Sum of 1000 l. which he had actually received to his own uſe, out of the Profits of the forementioned Grant, which he ought to have ſo repaid, by vertue of the Act for granting an Aid to His Majeſty, by Sale of the Forfeited Eſtates in Ireland. — To which he Anſwered, That he g ve direction, after the ſaid Act Paſſed, to his Agents in Ireland, to do, in relation to the Money received, as ſhould be adviſed by Council there; by whom his Agents were adviſed, that the ſaid Money's being received out of the mean Profits, which were remitted by that Act, were not within the firſt mentioned Clauſe in the ſaid Act.

III. That in the time of a Tedious and Expenſive War, he did adviſe, procure, and aſſent, not only to the paſſing of divers Grants to others, but did obtain and accept of ſeveral beneficial ones for himſelf; which Practices were a moſt notorious Abuſe of His Majeſty's Goodneſs, &c. — To which he Anſwered, That he ſerved His Majeſty Faithfully in his Stations, and His Majeſty graciouſly accepted of his Service; and as a mark of His Royal Favour, did make for his Benefit, ſuch Grants as are mentioned in the precedent and ſubſequent Articles, and none other. And as to other Perſons, he only in conjunction with the other Commiſſioners, did Sign ſeveral Warrants and Dockets for ſuch Grants, as His Majeſty was pleaſed to direct.

IV. Whereas by Common Law, and other Statutes, the King's Foreſts ſhould be preſerved, the ſaid Lord Halifax not regarding the Laws and Ordinances of this Realm, nor his Duty

to

1701. to His Majeſty and the Publick, had procured a Grant to Henry Segar, Gent. in Truſt for himſelf, of the Sum of 1400*l.* of ſcrubbed Beech, Birch, Holly, &c. under colour whereof, Sapling Oaks, and many Tuns of well grown Timber had been Cut and Fallen, and ſold and diſpoſed for his benefit. — To which he Anſwered, That His Majeſty out of his Grace and Favour, did grant in Truſt for him the Sum of 2000 l. per Ann. to be raiſed by the Fall of Scrub-Beach, Birch, &c. for the ſpace of Seven Years, which Grant was not prejudicial to any Timber growing in the ſaid Foreſt. And if any Abuſe were in Cutting the Wood, he conceives he is not anſwerable for the ſame, it being done by the Direction of His Majeſty's Surveyor-General, and other His Majeſty's Officers.

V. That he the ſaid Lord Halifax did Grant or procure to be Granted, to his Brother Chriſtopher Mountague, Eſq; the Place and Office of Auditor of the Receipts, and Writer of the Tallies, in Truſt for himſelf; ſo that he the ſaid Lord was in effect, at the ſame time, one of the Commiſſioners of the Treaſury, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Auditor of the Receipts, and Writer of the Tallies, and enjoyed the Profits of the ſaid ſeveral Offices, which were manifeſtly inconſiſtent, and ought to have been a Check to each other. — To which he Anſwered, That the Grant of the ſaid Office was done at his Deſire and Requeſt, becauſe he intended in a ſhort time after to leave his own Employment and Places in the Treaſury, and to obtain a ſurrender from his ſaid Brother of the ſaid Office, and procure a Grant thereof to himſelf, which has been ſince done, and he conceives was Lawful for him to do.

VI. That the ſaid Lord Halifax, well knowing the moſt apparent Evil Conſequences, as well as the Injuſtice of the Partition of the Spaniſh Monarchy, did yet adviſe His Majeſty to enter into a Treaty for it, and did encourage and promote the ſame. — To which he Anſwered, That he never did adviſe His Majeſty to enter into or make the ſaid Treaty, or was ever conſulted upon any Clauſe or Article thereof: But when the ſaid Matter was diſcourſed at Tunbridge-Wells, he made ſeveral Objections to the ſame.

On Monday June the 16*th.* The Lords ſent a Meſſage to acquaint the Houſe of Commons, That the Lords taking into their Care the Ordering of the Tryal of John Lord Somers, on Tueſday the 17th. of June Inſtant, at Ten of the Clock in Weſtminſter-Hall, have prepared ſome Notes and Rules to be obſerved at the ſaid Tryal, which the Lords have thought fit to communicate to this Houſe, viz.

Rules for Trial of the Impeached Lords.

"That the whole Impeachment is to be "Read, and then the Anſwer; which being "done, the Lord Keeper is to tell the Com- "mons, That now they may go on with their "Evidence.

"Then the Lord Keeper is to declare, That "now the Court is proceeding to hear the "Evidence, and deſire the Peers to give At- "tention.

"If any of the Peers, or the Members of "the Houſe of Commons, that manage the "Evidence, or the Lord Impeached, do deſire "to have any Queſtion asked, they muſt de- "ſire the Lord Keeper to ask the ſame.

"If any Doubt doth ariſe at the Trial, no "Debate is to be in the Court, but the Queſtion "ſuſpended to be Debated in this Houſe.

"The Members of the Houſe of Commons "to be there before the Peers come.

"None to be Covered at the Trial but the "Peers.

1701. "That ſuch Peers at the Tryal of the Im- "peached Lord, who at the Inſtance of the "ſaid Lord, or of the Commons, ſhall be ad- "mitted Witneſſes, are to be Sworn at the "Clerks Table, and the Lord Keeper to Ad- "miniſter the Oath, and to deliver their Evi- "dence in their own Places.

"Thoſe Witneſſes that are Commoners, are "to be Sworn at the Bar by the Clerk, and are "to deliver their Evidence there.

"The Impeached Lords may croſs-Examine "Witneſſes, Viva Voce.

Reaſons of the Commons againſt proceeding to the Trial of the Lord Somers.

But the Commons appointed a Committee to conſider of the Reaſons why they cannot proceed to the Trial of the Lord Somers. Which Reaſons were the next Day Reported by Mr. Harcourt, and were as follow:

"The Commons in this whole Proceeding "againſt the Impeached Lords, have acted with "all imaginable Zeal to bring them to a ſpeedy "Tryal; and they doubt not but it will ap- "pear, by comparing their Proceedings with "all others upon the like Occaſion, That the "Houſe of Commons have nothing to blame "themſelves for, but that they have not ex- "preſſed the Reſentment their Anceſtors have "juſtly ſhewed upon much leſs Attempts which "have been made upon their Power of Im- "peachments.

"The Commons, on the 31*ſt.* of May, ac- "quainted your Lordſhips, that they thought it "proper from the Nature of the Evidence, to "proceed in the firſt Place upon the Trial of "the Lord Somers. Upon the firſt Intimation "from your Lordſhips ſome Days afterwards, "That you would proceed to the Trial of the "Impeached Lords, whom the Commons ſhould "be firſt ready to begin with, notwithſtanding "your Lordſhips had before thought fit to ap- "point which Impeachment ſhould be firſt "Tried, and affix a Day for ſuch Trial, with- "out conſulting the Commons, who are the "Proſecutors:

"The Commons determine to expedite the Try- "als to the utmoſt of their Power, in hopes of "attaining that End: And for the more ſpeedy "and eaſie adjuſting and preventing any Diffe- "rences, which had happened, or might ariſe "previous to or upon theſe Tryals, propoſed to "your Lordſhips at a Conference the moſt Par- "liamentary and Effectual Method for that Pur- "poſe, and that which in no manner intrenched "upon your Lordſhips Judicature, That a Com- "mitte of both Houſes ſhould be nominated, "to conſider of the moſt proper Ways and Me- "thods of Proceeding upon Impeachments ac- "cording to the Uſage of Parliament.

"In the next Meſſage to the Commons upon "Monday the 9*th.* of June; your Lordſhips "thought fit, without taking the leaſt Notice of "this Propoſition, to appoint the Friday then fol- "lowing for the Tryal of the ſaid Lord Somers; "whereunto, as well as to many other Meſſages "and Proceedings of your Lordſhips upon this "Occaſion, the Houſe of Commons might have "juſtly taken very great Exceptions; yet, as an "Evidence of their Moderation, and to ſhew "their Readineſs to bring the Impeached Lords "to ſpeedy Juſtice, the Commons inſiſted only "on their Propoſition for a Committee of both "Houſes to ſettle and adjuſt the neceſſary Pre- "liminaries to the Tryal; particularly, Whether "the Impeached Lords ſhould appear on their "Tryal at your Lordſhips Bar as Crimi- "nals? Whether being under Accuſations of the "the ſame Crimes, they ſhould ſit as Judges on "each other's Tryal for thoſe Crimes, or ſhould "Vote in their own Caſes, as 'tis Notorious they "have 1701. "have been permitted by your Lordſhips to do, "in many Inſtances which might be given; to "which Particulars your Lordſhips have not yet "given a direct Anſwer, though put in mind "thereof by the Commons.

"Your Lordſhips at a Conference, having offered ſome Reaſons why you could not agree to "a Committee of both Houſes to Adjuſt the neceſſary Preliminaries, the Commons thereupon "deſired a Free Conference, and your Lordſhips agreed thereunto; at which 'tis well known "to many of your Lordſhips, who were then "preſent, what moſt ſcandalous Reproaches and "falſe Expreſſions, highly Reflecting upon the "Honour and Juſtice of the Houſe of Commons, were uttered by John Lord Haverſham, "whereby the Commons were under a Neceſſity of withdrawing from the ſaid Free Conference; for which Offence, the Commons "have, with all due Regard to your Lordſhips, "prayed your Lordſhips Juſtice againſt the Lord "Haverſham; but have as yet received no manner of ſatisfaction.

"The Commons reſtrain themſelves from enumerating your Lordſhips very many Irregular and Unparliamentary Proceedings upon "this Occaſion; but think it is what they owe "to Publick Juſtice, and all the Commons of "England whom they repreſent, to declare ſome "few of thoſe Reaſons, why they peremptorily "refuſe to proceed to the Tryal of the Lord Somers on the Sevententh of June.

"Firſt, Becauſe your Lordſhips have not yet "agreed, That a Commmittee of both Houſes "ſhould be appointed, for ſettling the neceſſary "Preliminaries; a Method never until this time "denied by the Houſe of Lords, whenſoever "the Commons have thought it neceſſary to deſire the ſame.

"Secondly, Should the Commons (which they "never will do) be contented to give up "thoſe Rights which have been tranſmitted to "them from their Anceſtors, and are of abſolute Neceſſity to their Proceedings on Impeachments; yet whilſt they have any regard to Publick Juſtice, they never can appear as Proſecutors before your Lordſhips, till your Lordſhips have firſt given them ſatisfaction that "Lords Impeached of the ſame Crimes ſhall not "ſit as Judges on each others Tryals for thoſe "Crimes.

"Thirdly, Becauſe the Commons have as yet "received no Reparation for the great Indignity "offered to them at the Free Conference by the "Lord Haverſham, the Commons are far from "any Inclination, and cannot be ſuppoſed "to be under any Neceſſity of delaying the "Tryal of the Lord Somers: There is not "any Article exhibited by them in Maintenance of their Impeachment againſt the Lord "Somers, for the Proof whereof they have not "full and undeniable Evidence; which they will "be ready to produce, as ſoon as your Lordſhips "ſhall have done Juſtice upon the Lord Haverſham; and the neceſſary Preliminaries in order to the ſaid Tryal, ſhall be ſettled by a Committee of both Houſes.

"The Commons think it unneceſſary to obſerve "to your Lordſhips, that moſt of the Articles "whereof the Lord Somers ſtands Impeached, "will appear to your Lordſhips to be undoubtedly true, from Matters of Record, as well as "by the Confeſſion of the ſaid Lord Somers, "in his Anſwer to the ſaid Articles; to which "the Commons doubt not but your Lordſhips "will have a due regard, when his Tryal ſhall "regularly proceed.

The Lords ſent their Anſwer to this Meſſage, on Friday June the 20*th*. in theſe Words. 1701.

Anſwer of the Lords.

"The Lords in Anſwer to the Meſſage of "the Commons of the 17*th*. Inſtant, ſay, The "the only true way of determining which of "the Two Houſes has acted with the greateſt "Sincerity, in order to bring the Impeached "Lords to their Trials, is to look back upon the "reſpective Proceedings.

"The Lords do not well underſtand what "the Commons mean by that Reſentment which "they ſpeak of in their Meſſage: Their Lordſhips own the Houſe of Commons have a "Right of Impeaching: And the Lords have "undoubted Power of doing Juſtice upon thoſe "Impeachments, by bringing them to Trial, "and Condemning or Acquitting the Parties "in a reaſonable Time. This Power is derived "to them from their Anceſtors, which they "will not ſuffer to be wreſted from them by "any Pretences whatſoever.

"Their Lordſhips cannot but wonder, that "the Commons ſhould not have propoſed a "Committee of both Houſes much ſooner, if "they thought it ſo neceſſary for the bringing "on the Trials; no mention being of ſuch a "Committee from the Firſt of April to the "Sixth of June, although during that Interval "their Delays were frequently complained of "by the Houſe of Lords.

"The manner in which the Commons demand this Committee, the Lords look upon "as a direct Invading of their Judicature; and "therefore, as there never was a Committee of "both Houſes yielded to by the Lords in caſe "of any Impeachment for High Crimes and "Miſdemeanors; ſo their Lordſhips do inſiſt, "that they will make no new Precedent upon "this Occaſion. Many Impeachments for Miſdemeanors have in all Times been determined without ſuch a Committee: And if now "the Commons think fit, by any unpreſidented "Demand, to form an Excuſe for not proſecuting their Impeachments, it is demonſtrable where the Obſtruction lies.

"As to the Preliminaries which the Commons mention in particular, as proper to be "ſettled at ſuch a Committee, they have received the Reſolutions of the Houſe of Lords "therein, by their Meſſage of the 12*th*. Inſtant; from which (being matters entirely "relating to their Judicature) their Lordſhips "cannot depart.

"As to the laſt Pretence the Commons would "make to ſhelter the delaying the Trials, from "ſome Expreſſions which fell from the Lord "Haverſham at the Free Conference, at which "Offence was taken, their Lordſhips will only "obſerve,

"Firſt, That they have omitted nothing "which might give the Commons all reaſonable ſatisfaction, of their purpoſe to do them "Juſtice in that matter, ſo far as is conſiſtent "with doing Juſtice to that Lord; and alſo "to preſerve all good Correſpondence with "them; as appears by the ſeveral ſteps they "have taken.

"Secondly, That this Buſineſs has no Relation "to the Trial of the Impeached Lords, and "therefore their Lordſhips cannot imagine why "the Commons ſhould make Satisfaction and "Reparation againſt the Lord Haverſham a "neceſſary Condition for the going on with "the Trials, and at the ſame time find no "Difficulties in proceeding on other Buſineſs.

In the mean time, on Tueſday June the 17*th*. The Lords proceeded to the Trial of John Lord Somers in Weſtminſter-Hall, where this Proclamation

Trial of John Lord Somers.

1701. tion first was made. Whereas a Charge of High Crimes and Misdemeanors has been Exhibited by the House of Commons, in the Name of themselves and all the Commons of England, against John Lord Somers; All Persons concerned are to take notice that he now stands upon his Trial, and they may now come forth, in order to make good the said Charge. Then the House Adjourned to the said Hall; and being Seated, after Proclamation for Silence, the Articles against John Lord Somers were Read, and also his Lordship's Answer to them. Then the Lord Keeper declared the House was ready to hear the Evidence against him. The Lord Somers moved to have his Counsel heard. After long Debate, and hearing the Judges to several Questions asked them by the Lords, this Question was proposed, That John Lord Somers be Acquitted of the Articles of Impeachment against him, Exhibited by the House of Commons, and all things therein contained, and that the said Impeachment be dismissed. When the Lord Keeper had asked every Lord, Whether Content or not? He declared the Majority was for Acquitting. Then the Lords Adjourned to the House above, and made the following Order. It was Considered, Ordered, and Adjudged by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Assembled, That John Lord Somers shall be, and is hereby Acquitted of the Articles of Impeachment against him, Exhibited by the House of Commons, and all things therein contained, and that the said Impeachment shall be, and is hereby Dismissed.

Honourably Acquitted.

Remonstrance of the Commons.

The Commons to justify their Refusal of appearing at the said Tryal, did Resolve on June the 20*th.* "That the Lords have refused Justice "to the Commons upon the Impeachment a- "gainst the Lord Somers, by denying them a "Committee of Both Houses, which was desi- "red by the Commons as the proper and only "Method of settling the necessary Preliminaries, "in order to the proceeding to the Tryal of the "said Lord Somers with effect; and afterwards "by proceeding to a pretended Tryal of the said "Lord, which could tend only to protect him "from Justice by colour of an Illegal Acquittal. "Against which Proceedings of the Lords, the "Commons do solemnly protest, as being re- "pugnant to the Rules of Justice, and therefore "null and void. That the House of Lords, by "the pretended Tryal of John Lord Somers, "have endeavoured to overturn the Right of "Impeachments lodged in the House of Com- "mons by the ancient Constitution of this King- "dom, for the Safety and Protection of the "Commons against the Power of Great Men; "and have made an Invasion upon the Liber- "ties of the Subject, by laying a Foundation of "Impunity for the greatest Offenders. That all "the ill Consequences which may at this time "attend the Delay of the Supplies given by the "Commons for the preserving the publick Peace, "and maintaining the Balance of Europe, by "supporting our Allies against the Power of "France, are to be imputed to those, who, to "procure an Indemnity for their own enormous "Crimes, have used their utmost Endeavours "to make a Breach between the two Houses.

Answer of the Lords.

The Lords the same Day sent this Answer to that Message. The Lords do acquaint the Commons, that they might have known by the Records of the House of Lords, That the Lords had proceeded to the Tryal of the Lord Somers on Tuesday last, being the Day appointed; and the Commons not appearing to maintain their Articles against the said Lord, the Lords had by Judgment of their House acquitted him of the Articles of Impeachment against him exhibited by the House of Commons, and all things therein contained, and had dismissed the said Impeachment.

And the Lords had appointed Monday next for the Tryal of the Earl of Orford, on which Day they would proceed on the said Tryal. 1701.

The Commons still pressing for a Committee of both Houses, which their Lordships could never consent to for the Reasons already given, their Lordships could infer nothing from their persisting in this Demand, than that they never designed to bring any of their Impeachments to a Tryal.

As to the Lord Haversham, his Answer was now before the House of Commons, and the Lords resolved to do Justice in that Matter.

The same Day the Commons had a Copy given them of the Lord Haversham's Answer to the Charge against him; which being extraordinary, deserves to be inserted in this Place.

Answer of the Lord Haversham to a Complaint of the Commons.

"The said Lord Haversham, saving to himself "all Advantages of Exception to the said "Charge, and of not being prejudiced by any "want of Form in this Answer; and also saving "to himself all Rights and Privileges belong- "ing to him as one of the Peers of this Realm, for "Answer to the said Charge, saith, That on the "Sixth Day of June, 1701. the Commons, by a Mes- "sage sent to the Lords, desired a Conference upon "their Message to the Commons of the Fourth of "June: In which Conference they proposed to "the Lords, That a Committee of Both Houses "might be nominated, to consider of the most "proper Ways and Methods of Proceeding in "the Impeachments of the Lords, according to "the Usage of Parliaments. That on the 10*th.* "of June, the Lords desired another Conference "with the Commons, in which they delivered "them their Reasons why they could not agree "to the Appointing of such Committee; (viz.) "First, That they could not find that ever such "a Committee was appointed on Occasion of "Impeachments for Misdemeanors, and their "Obligation to be curious in admitting any thing "new relating to Judicature. Secondly, That al- "though a Committee of this Nature was agreed "to, upon the Impeachments of the Earl of "Danby, and the Five Popish Lords for High- "Treason; yet the Success in that Instance was "not such as should encourage the pursuing of "the same Method, though in the like Case; "and that, after so much time spent in the Com- "mittee, the Disputes were so far from being "there adjusted, that they occasioned the abrupt "Conclusion of a Session of Parliament. Third- "ly, That the Methods of Proceedings for Mis- "demeanors are so well settled by the Usage of "Parliament, that no Difficulties were likely to "happen, nor none had been stated to them; "and that all the Preliminaries in the Case of "Stephen Goudett, and others, (which was the "last Instance of Impeachments for Misdemea- "nors) were easily settled and agreed to, with- "out any such Committee. Fourthly, That the "Proposal of the Commons came so very late, "that no other Fruit could be expected of such "a Committee, but the preventing of the Try- "als during this Session. Whereupon the Com- "mons on the 12*th.* of June, desired of the "Lords a Free Conference, on the Subject-Mat- "ter of the last Conference. That the Lords, "on the 12*th.* of June came to Two Resolutions "in relation to the Lords Impeached. First, That "no Lord of Parliament, Impeached of High Crimes "and Misdemeanors, and coming to his Tryal, shall, "upon his Trial, be without the Bar. Secondly, "That no Lord of Parliament, Impeached for High "Crimes and Misdemeanors, can be precluded from "Voting on any Occasion, except in his own Tryal. "And by Messengers of their own, the Lords "acquainted the Commons with the said two "Resolutions; and also that they agreed to a "Free Conference with the Commons, and ap- "poin-

1701. "ted the next Day. That upon the 30*th.* of "June Mr. Harcourt, one of the Managers, be-"gan the Free Conference on the part of the "Commons, and Argued upon the Four Rea-"ſons given by the Lords, why they could not "agree to the appointing a Committee of both "Houſes; and principally relied upon the In-"ſtance in the Caſe of the Popiſh Lords, and "inſiſted upon the delay that the not agreeing "to the Nomination of ſuch a Committee "would neceſſarily occaſion, whereby the Lords "Tryals, and the Juſtice due to the Nation, "would be retarded. And departing from the "Subject-Matter of the ſaid Conference (which "was, Whether it were requiſite to appoint, or "not appoint ſuch a Committee) the ſaid Ma-"nager diſcourſed upon the latter of the Re-"ſolutions of the Lords, communicated to the "Commons, and ſaid, That he wiſhed the Lords "had ſent down their Reaſons, as well as their "Reſolutions; which Words ſeemed to the ſaid "Lord Haverſham, to carry therein an Impli-"cation, as if the ſaid Reſolution could have "no Reaſon to juſtifie it. That Sir Bartholomew "Shower, another Manager for the Commons, "obſerved the ſame method of Diſcourſe; and "having Argued on the Lords Reaſons, de-"parted from the Subject-Matter of the Free "Conference, and inveighing againſt the Man-"ner of the Lords Judicature, aſſerted by their "Reſolutions, ſaid, That it was abhorrent to "Juſtice. Which Expreſſions being Foreign "(as the ſaid Lord Haverſham apprehended) "to the Subject-Matter of the ſaid Free Con-"ference, which was, Whether ſuch Commit-"tee of both Houſes ſhould be appointed or "not; the ſaid Lord being appointed by the "Lords for one of the Managers of the ſaid "Free Conference on their Behalf, in Vindica-"tion of the Honour and Juſtice of the Houſe "of Peers, and of their Judicature and Reſo-"lutions, in Anſwer to what had been ſaid by "the Managers for the Commons, he ſpoke to "the Effect following:

Gentlemen, I ſhall begin what I have to ſay, as that worthy Member who opened this Conference, That there is nothing the Lords more deſire than to keep a good Correſpondence, which is ſo neceſſary to the Safety of the Nation, and the Diſpatch of Publick Buſineſs; and nothing they have more carefully avoided, than what might create a Miſunderſtanding between the Two Houſes. A greater Inſtance of which could not be given, than the Meſſages my Lords return'd to ſome the Commons had ſent them up; in which they took care to expreſs themſelves ſo cautiouſly, that no Heat might ariſe from any Expreſſion of theirs. And as to what the worthy Members mentioned, in relation to Delay, the repeated Remembrances ſent the Commons, with relation to the ſending up the Articles againſt the Impeached Lords, are a ſufficient Inſtance how deſirous they are that theſe Matters ſhould proceed. And the Lords have this ſatisfaction, that it is not on their part that the Trials are not in a greater forwardneſs; they cannot but look upon it as a great Hardſhip that they ſhould lie under long Delays on Impeachments. Perſons may be Incapable; Facts may be Forgotten; Evidences may be laid out of the Way; Witneſſes may Die, and many other like Accidents may happen. The Inſtance the Worthy Members give of the Popiſh Lords, as it is a Crime of another Nature, and not fully to the Point, ſo it ſeems to make againſt what it was brought for. For the Worthy Members ſay, there was but one of the Lords brought to Juſtice, though Four more (as I take it) were Accuſed. And can any Man believe that the Commons have a mind to bring only one of theſe Lords to Trial? It is inconſiſtent with the Opinion that every Body muſt have of their Juſtice. And as to the Point of Judicature, it were very hard upon the Lords, that no Perſon ſhould be brought to Trial, till the Judicature of the Houſe be ſo firſt. The Judicature of the Lords is their Peculiar, and hath in former Ages been ſacred with the Commons themſelves. And this Houſe, perhaps, hath as much Reaſon to be jealous, and careful of it, as any other Houſe ever had; eſpecially when one ſingle Precedent is ſo urged and inſiſted upon. One thing there is which a Worthy Member mentioned, though I cannot ſpeak to it at large, becauſe I think my ſelf bound up by the Reſolutions of the Houſe; yet it muſt have ſome Anſwer; That is, as to the Lords Voting in their own Caſe; it requires an Anſwer, though I cannot enter into the Debate of it. The Commons themſelves have made this Precedent; for in theſe Impeachments they have allowed Men, equally concerned in the ſame Facts, to Vote in their own Houſe; and we have not made the Diſtinction in ours, that ſome ſhould Vote and ſome not. The Lords have ſo high an Opinion of the Houſe of Commons, that they believe Juſtice ſhall never be made uſe of as a Mask for any Deſign. And therefore give me leave to ſay, though I am not to argue it, 'tis to me a plain Demonſtration, that the Commons think thoſe Lords innocent; and I think the Propoſition is undeniable, for when there are ſeveral Lords in the ſame Circumſtances, in the ſame Facts, there is no Diſtinction; and the Commons leave ſome of theſe Men at the Head of Affairs, near the King's Perſon, to do any Miſchief, if they were inclined to it; it looks as if they thought them all Innocent. This was a thing I was in hopes I ſhould never have heard aſſerted, when the Beginning of it was from the Houſe of Commons.

"The ſaid Lord being here Interrupted, "he deſired to be heard out, and that his "Words might be taken down in Writing. But "the Managers for the Commons broke up, "and departed, refuſing to hear any Expla-"nation. Now the ſaid Lord, as to any im-"plicit Charge of a Deſign to reflect on, or "diſhonour the Houſe of Commons, denies "any ſuch Deſign or Intention; having, "for many Years, had the Honour to Sit in "the Houſe of Commons, and having ever had "an Honourable and Reſpectful Senſe thereof: "But the ſaid Lord was led to expreſs himſelf "in the manner aforeſaid, for the Reaſons "aforeſaid, and takes himſelf to be juſtified "therein, by the Facts and Reaſons following.

"That the Nature of that Conference was, "That it ſhould be Free; the Occaſion of it, "Becauſe either Houſe apprehended the other "to be in an Error; and the End of it, That "each ſide might urge ſuch Facts as are True, "and ſuch Reaſons as are forcible to convince.

"That one Article of the Impeachment againſt "John Lord Somers, was, That the Treaty of "Partition of 1699. was Ratified under the "Great Seal, which then was in the Cuſtody "of the ſame Lord, then Lord Chancellor of "England; That the Commons on the 1ſt. of "April, 1701. Reſolved, That the Earl of "Portland by Negotiating and Concluding, the "Treaty of Partition, was Guilty of a High "Crime and Miſdemeanor; and purſuant "thereto lodged an Impeachment againſt him "in the Houſe of Peers; which Vote and Im-"peachment could not have Reference to any "Treaty, other than the Treaty of Partition "of 1699. the Treaty of 1698. not being be-"fore the Houſe of Commons, till after the "time of that Vote and Impeachment; and "yet the Earl of Jerſey, who then was Secre-"tary of State, and a Privy Councellor, and "actually Sign'd the ſaid Treaty of 1699. as a

"Pleni-

1701. "Plenipotentiary with the Lord Portland, ſtands "Unimpeached, and continues at the Head of "Affairs, being Lord-Chamberlain, near His "Majeſty's Perſon, and in His Preſence and "Councils (without Complaint:) That the "Earl of Orford, and the Lords Somers and Hal-"lifax, are ſeverally Impeached for Adviſing "the Treaty of Partition, of 1698. and yet "Mr. Secretary Vernon, who then was Secretary "of State, and a Privy Counſellor, and acted "in the Promoting of the Treaty of Partition "of 1698. ſtands Unimpeached, and ſtill con-"tinues one of the Principal Secretaries of "State; and Sir Joſeph Williamſon who then was "a Privy Counſellor, and Tranſacted and Sign'd "the Treaty of Partition of 1698. as a Pleni-"potentiary, ſtands Unimpeached. That the "Lord Halifax is Impeached, for that he being "a Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, aſſented to "the Paſſing of divers Grants from the Crown "to ſeveral Perſons, of Lands in Ireland; and "yet Sir Edward Seymour, Sir Stephen Fox, and "Mr. Pelham, who being ſeverally Lords Com-"miſſioners of the Treaſury, did ſeverally As-"ſent to the Paſſing of divers like Grants from "His Majeſty, of Lands in Ireland, ſtand Un-"impeached. That in the Impeachments againſt "the Earl of Orford and Lord Somers, one of "the Articles againſt them is for procuring a "Commiſſion to Captain William Kidd, and "likewiſe a Grant under the Great Seal, of the "Ships and Goods of certain Perſons therein "named, to certain Perſons in Truſt for them; "and yet other Lords equally concerned in pro-"curing the ſaid Commiſſion and Grant, ſtand "Unimpeached. That the ſaid Mr. Secretary "Vernon, Sir Edward Seymour, Sir Stephen Fox, and "Mr. Pelham, notwithſtanding their being Par-"ties in the ſame Facts, charged in the ſaid "reſpective Impeachments, have been permit-"ted to Sit and Vote in the Houſe of Com-"mons, touching the Impeachments and the "Matters thereof. That theſe Facts being True "and publickly known, the Conſequences re-"ſulting therefrom (as the ſaid Lord Haverſham "apprehended) are undeniable, viz. That the "doing of the ſame thing, by Two Perſons in "equal Circumſtances, cannot be a Crime in "one and not in another. That the Commons "had no Reaſon to inſiſt, That the Lords "ſhould not permit that in their Members, "which the Commons had firſt permitted, and "continued to permit, and ſo begun the Firſt "Precedent in their own Members. That it "muſt be thought, that the Impeached Lords "(notwithſtrnding the Facts alledged in the "Impeachment) are Innocent of Danger to "the King, when the Lord Jerſey and Mr. Se-"cretary Vernon, who were reſpectively con-"cerned in the Partition Treaties, are permit-"ted without Complaint, to be at the Head of "Affairs, and in the King's Preſence, and of "His Councils, as not Dangerous; That the "Word Innocent, uſed in the Words ſpoken by "the ſaid Lord Haverſham, can extend no farther "than to ſuch matters as were done by the Im-"peached Lords, of the ſame Nature with "what was done by thoſe Unimpeached. All "which Facts being true, and the Conſequen-"ces obvious, the ſaid Lord being ready to "prove the ſame; He inſiſts that the Words "ſpoken by him at the ſaid Free Conference, "were not Scandalous or Reproachful, nor "Falſe, or Reflecting on the Honour or Juſtice "of the Houſe of Commons; but were ſpoken "upon a juſt Occaſion, given in Anſwer to "ſeveral Expreſſions that fell from the Mana-"gers for the Commons, remote, as he con-"ceives, from the Matter in Queſtion, and re- 1701.
"flecting on the Honour and Juſtice of the "Houſe of Peers; and in Maintenance and De-"fence of the Lords Reſolution and Judi-"cature, and conformable to the Duty he owes "to the ſaid Houſe. And the ſaid Lord humbly "demands the Judgment of this Honourable "Houſe therein. And the ſaid Lord Haverſham "denies, that he ſpoke the Words ſpecified in "the ſaid Charge, in ſuch Manner and Form, "as the ſame are therein ſet down. And ha-"ving thus given a true Account of this Matter, "and it being true and indiſputable, that ſome "Lords in this Houſe, equally concerned in "Facts, for which other Lords are Impeached "by the Houſe of Commons, are ſtill near the "King's Perſon, in the greateſt Places of Truſt "and Honour, and Unimpeached; and alſo, "That ſeveral Members of the Houſe of Com-"mons, equally concerned in the ſame Facts, "for which ſome of the Lords are Impeached, "do however remain Unimpeached; The ſaid "Lord thinks, ſuch a Truth could never have "been more properly ſpoken, in the Mainte-"nance and Defence of your Lordſhips Judi-"cature, and Reſolutions; and inſiſteth, That "what he ſaid at the Free Conference, was "not any Scandalous Reproach, or Falſe Ex-"preſſion, or any ways tending to make a "Breach in the good Correſpondence between "the Lords and Commons, or to the Interrupt-"ing the Publick Juſtice of the Nation, by de-"laying the Proceedings on the Impeachments, "as in the ſaid Charge alledged; but agreeable "to Truth, in Diſcharge of his Duty, and in "the Defence of the undoubted Right and Ju-"dicature of this Houſe. Haverſham.

Conteſt betwixt the Two Houſes.

The Commons on Friday 20. after the ſend-ing and receiving the foremention'd Meſſages, Ordered, That no Member ſhould preſume to appear on Monday next at the pretended Tryal of the Earl of Orford, upon Pain of incurring the utmoſt Diſpleaſure of the Houſe; and then Ad-journ'd to Tueſday Morning. But the Lords con-tinued ſitting, and on the 21ſt. Reſolved, That un-leſs the Commons Charge againſt the Lord Haver-ſham, were preſented by them with effect before the end of that Seſſion, the Lords would declare and Ad-judge him wholly Innocent of the Charge.

On Monday, June 23. It was Reſolved by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, That the Reſolutions of the Houſe of Commons in their Votes of the 20th Inſtant, con-tained moſt unjuſt Reflections on the Honour and Juſtice of the Houſe of Peers, and were contri-ved to cover their affected and unreaſonable De-lays in Proſecuting the Impeached Lords: And did manifeſtly tend to the Deſtruction of the Ju-dicature of the Lords, to the rendring Tryals and Impeachments impracticable for the future, and to the ſubverting the Conſtitution of the Engliſh Government; and therefore whatever ill Conſe-quences might ariſe from the ſo long deferring the Supplies of this Year's Service, were to be at-tributed to the fatal Counſel of the putting off the meeting of a Parliament ſo long, and to the unneceſſary Delays of the Houſe of Com-mons.

Tryal of the Earl of Orford.

Then the Lords adjourn'd to Weſtminſter-Hall, and after two Proclamations made for ſilence and Proſecution, the Articles of Impeachment againſt Edward E. of Orford were read, and alſo his Lord-ſhip's Anſwer to the ſaid Articles; and after ta-king the ſame Methods as in the Tryal of the Lord Somers, His Lordſhip by unanimous Votes was Acquitted of the Articles, and the Impeach-ment was diſmiſſed.

His Lord-ſhip ho-nourably acquitted.

1701. On Tuesday June 24. being the last day of the Session of this Parliament, this Order was made by the Lords.

Order of the Lords. "The House of Commons not having presented their Charge which they brought up against John Lord Haversham for Words spoken by him at a free Conference the 13th. instant, the said Charge is hereby dismissed. The Earl of Portland being Impeached by the House of Commons of high Crimes and Misdemeanors, the first day of April last, the Impeachment is hereby dismissed, there being no Articles exhibited against him. The House of Commons having impeached Charles Lord Halifax of High Crimes and Misdemeanors on the 15*th.* day of April last, and on the 14*th.* day of this instant June exhibited Articles against him, to which He having Answered, and no further Prosecution thereupon, the said Impeachment and Articles are hereby dismissed. At the same time their Lordships dismissed an old Impeachment against the Duke of Leeds.

Bill for stating the Publick Accounts. The Affair of the Impeached Lords had so much divided Both Houses, that the Correspondence was almost broken off or interrupted with continual Disagreements. Hence the Commons having pass'd a Bill for appointing Commissioners to Take, State, and Examine the Publick Accounts, the Lords made some Amendments to it, which the Commons would by no means allow; and drew up these Reasons for their Disagreement, to be offered to the Lords at a Conference.

Reasons of the Commons. "The Commons do disagree to the first Amendment made by the Lords, because it is notorious That many Millions of Money have been given to His Majesty by the Commons, for the Service of the Publick, which remain yet unaccounted for, to the great Dissatisfaction of the good People of England, who cheerfully contributed to those Supplies. And their Lordships first Amendment prevents any Account being taken of those Moneys by the Commissioners appointed by the Commons for that purpose.

"The Commons do disagree to the second Amendment made by the Lords, because John Parkhurst and John Pascall Esquires, have for several Years been Commissioners of the Prizes taken during the late War, and are accountable for great Sums of Money arising thereby, which ought to be applied to the Use of the Publick. That the said John Parkhurst and John Pascall were frequently pressed to Account for the same by the late Commissioners appointed by Act of Parliament; but by many Artifices and Evasions delayed and avoided giving any such Account as was required by the said Commissioners. That the Clause to which their Lordships have disagreed by their second Amendment, requires them to Account before the 1*st.* of September next, but by their Lordships Amendment they are exempted from giving any such Account, which is highly unreasonable.

"The Commons do disagree to the Third Amendment, because their Lordships have in a Clause directed the Commons to allow and certify a pretended Debt to Colonel Baldwin Layton; whereas the disposition as well as granting of Money by Act of Parliament, hath ever been in the House of Commons; and this Amendment relating to the disposal of Money, does intrench upon that Right.

"The Commons do disagree to the Fourth Amendment; because it is notorious, That Edward Whitaker, mentioned in the Rider left out by their Lordships, hath by Colour of his Impeachment, as Sollicitor to the Admiralty, received the Sum of Five and twenty thousand Pounds and upwards of Publick Moneys, without producing any just or reasonable Vouchers for the Expence thereof; and therefore ought to be accountable for the same. 1701.

"And that by reason of their Lordships disagreeing to the several Parts of this Bill, the Supplies provided by the Commons for paying the Arrears of the Army, must of necessity be ineffectual till another Session of Parliament.

To interrupt these fatal Disputes between the two Houses, it was the greatest Wisdom of His Majesty first to take no Notice of them, and then to put a more speedy End to this Session; and therefore on the said Tuesday, June 24. the King came to the House of Peers, and sent for the Commons to attend him; when Mr. Speaker upon presenting the Money-Bills, deliver'd himself to His Majesty in this Speech.

Speaker's Speech to the King.

SIR,

'Tis with great Joy and Satisfaction that I attend Your Majesty at this time, since Your Commons have comply'd with all Your Majesty was pleased to desire at their Meeting. They have passed the Bill of Succession, which hath settled the Crown in a Protestant Line, and continued the Liberty of England which Your Majesty hath restored and preserved. They have passed a Bill for taking away those Privileges which might have proved burthensome and oppressive to Your Subjects. They have given Your Majesty those Supplies which are more than ever were given in a time of Peace, to enable Your Majesty when You are Abroad to Support Your Allies, procure either a lasting Peace, or to preserve the Liberties of Europe by a necessary War.

Then His Majesty gave the Royal Assent to,

Acts passed. 1. An Act for Granting to His Majesty an Aid for Defraying the Expence of His Navy, Guards and Garisons for one Year, and for other Necessary Occasions. 2. An Act for Granting to His Majesty several Duties upon Low-Wines, or Spirits of the first Extraction; and continuing several Additional Duties upon Coffee, Tea, Chocolate, Spices and Pictures; and certain Impositions upon Hawkers, Pedlars, and Petty-Chapmen, and the Duty of Fifteen Pounds per Cent upon Muslins; and for Improving the Duties upon Japanned and Lacquered Goods, and for continuing the Coinage-Duty for the several Terms and Purposes therein mentioned. 3. An Act for Appropriating Three thousand Seven hundred Pounds Weekly, out of certain Branches of Excise, for Publick Uses, and for making a Provision for the Service of His Majesty's Houshold and Family, and other His Necessary Occasions. 4. An Act to enable His Majesty to make Leases and Copies of Offices, Lands and Hereditaments, parcel of His Dutchy of Cornwall, or annexed to the same, and for Confirmation of Leases already made. 5. An Act to enable Sir Thomas Stanley, Baronet, to Charge certain Manners and Lands in the County of Lancaster, with Three thousand Pounds, for Payment of his Sisters Portions, and his Debts. 6. An Act for Sale of the Estate of James Deane, and for Securing the Moneys raised thereby for the Benefit of himself and Family, according to the Settlement thereof. 7. An Act for Naturalizing Peter Bagwel, Daniel Senault, and others. 8. An Act for Naturalizing Gasper Gordoso, Harman Van't Weede, and others. 9. An Act to Enable Richard Bigg to Charge part of his Estate in the Counties of Hertford and Bedford, with the Payment of his Debts. And afterwards made this Speech to Both Houses.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech. "THE Session being now come to a Conclusion, I must return you My hearty Thanks for the great Zeal you have expressed

"for

1701. "for the Publick Service, and your ready Compliance with thoſe things which I recommended to you at the opening of this Parliament. "And I muſt thank you, Gentlemen of the Houſe "of Commons in particular, both for your Diſpatch of thoſe neceſſary Supplies which you "have granted for the Publick Occaſions, and "for the Encouragements you have given Me "to enter into Alliances for the Preſervation of "the Liberty of Europe, and the Support of the "Confederacy; in which, as it ſhall be My "Care, not to put the Nation to any unneceſſa-"ry Expence, ſo I make no doubt that whatſo-"ever ſhall be done during your Receſs, for the "Advantage of the Common Cauſe in this Mat-"ter, will have your Approbation at Our Meet-"ing again in the Winter.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I ſhall conclude with Recommending to "you all, the Diſcharge of your Duties in your "reſpective Counties; that the Peace of the "Kingdom may be ſecured by your Vigilance "and Care in your ſeveral Stations.

Then the Lord Keeper (by His Majeſty's Command) Prorogued the Parliament until Thurſday the Seventh Day of Auguſt next.

Thus ended this memorable Seſſion.

Honours and Preferments.

On March 27. His Majeſty had appointed Thomas Earl of Pembroke, Lord Preſident of the Council, to be Firſt Lord Commiſſioner of the Admiralty, in the room of John Earl of Bridgwater, who died on March 19. much lamented for a juſt and good Man, a Faithful Friend, and a Wiſe Counſellor. On the ſame day Henry Boyle, Eſq; Chancellor and Under-Treaſurer of His Majeſty's Exchequer, was Sworn of the Privy-Council; and Thomas Pelham, Eſq; was made one of the Lords Commiſſioners of the Treaſury. On April 2. Henry Howard Duke of Norfolk died a Sudden Death: He had been bred a Roman-Catholick, but leaving the Church of Rome about the time of the Popiſh Plot, he ever ſince continued ſtedfaſt to the Church of England, and was a Zealous Promoter of the Revolution. His Place of Earl-Marſhal was conferr'd upon the Earl of Carliſle, during the Minority of his Nephew my Lord Thomas Howard's Eldeſt Son, who ſucceeded him in his Honour and in his Eſtate, if at the Age of Eighteen he ſhould conform to the Rights of the Church of England. Within the ſame Month died Francis Lord Carrington, Robert Earl of Lindſey, and Theophilus Earl of Huntingdon; the latter a great Enemy to the Government, and for that Reaſon to his own Son. On April 3. His Majeſty conferred the Dignity of a Baronet of this Kingdom upon Samuel Moyer of Pitſey-Hall, in the County of Eſſex, Eſq;. On April 26. the King appointed Sir George Rook to be Admiral and Commander in Chief of His Majeſty's Fleet this Summer, which lay at Spithead; and on May 3. was joined by Admiral Allemond and Admiral Callemburg, with 5 Dutch Men of War. On May 23. Captain William Kidd, and three other Pirates lately Condemned at the Admiralty-Seſſions at the Old-Baily, were Executed at Execution-Dock. At the beginning of this Year, the Count de Wratiſlaw came Envoy Extraordinary from the Emperor, and the Baron de Spanheim Envoy Extraordinary from the King of Pruſſia; and Hadgi Muſtapha Aga, Envoy from the Baſhaw and Government of Tripoli. On June 1. His Majeſty upon a ſenſe of His own declining Health, was pleaſed to declare John Earl of Marlborough to be General of the Foot, and Commander in Chief of His Majeſty's Forces in Holland. On June 18. His Electoral Highneſs of Hannover, and the Duke of Queensbury were Elected Knights of the Garter, in a Chapter held at Kenſington. On June 19. Robert Earl of Lindſey Lord Great Chamberlain of England, and Charles Earl of Carliſle, Earl-Marſhal of England during the Minority of the Duke of Norfolk, were Sworn of the Privy-Council. 1701.

Other Honours and great Offices.

Within four Days after the Parliament roſe, the King declared in Council, That the Publick Affairs requiring His going over into Holland for a ſhort time, He had appointed the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Lord Keeper, the Earl of Pembroke, the Duke of Devonſhire, the Duke of Somerſet, the Earl of Jerſey, and the Lord Godolphin, to be Lords Juſtices of England, for the Adminiſtration of the Government during His Majeſty's Abſence. At the ſame time the Duke of Somerſet was Sworn of the Privy-Council. At the ſame time His Majeſty was pleaſed to appoint the Earl of Marlborough to be His Ambaſſador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary for the Negotiations at the Hague; and to Conſtitute Edward Southwell, Chriſtopher Muſgrave, and James Vernon, Jun. Eſq; Commiſſioners for Executing the Office of Keeper of His Majeſty's Privy-Seal, vacant by the Death of the Right Honourable Ford late Earl of Tankerville, who died on June 25. being ſucceeded in the Barony Werke by his Brother the Honourable Ralph Gray, Governor of Barbadoes. In the ſame Evening His Majeſty appointed Sir Thomas Trevor, Kt. His Attorney-General, to be Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, in the place of Sir George Treby, deceas'd; and Edward Northey of the Middle-Temple, Eſq; to be Attorney-General. And when on the ſame Day the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen had waited on His Majeſty to take Leave of Him, His Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to accept that Demonſtration of their Loyalty and Affection, and conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Peter Floyer, Eſq; Alderman, and one of the Sheriffs Elect for the Year enſuing. On June 28. His Majeſty conferr'd the like Honour of Knighthood upon the Sieur Benjamin Pontle of Amſterdam, in conſideration of his good Services.

The King goes to Holland.

On Monday-Morning, June 30. the King went from Hampton-Court, and lay that Night at Canterbury, and the next Day about Noon Embark'd at Margate in a Yatcht, with a Convoy under Command of Rear-Admiral Munden, on whom His Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on Board the Yatcht in Margate-Road. He arriv'd in the Maeſe on Thurſday Morning, and went that Night to the Hague. The next Day he receiv'd the Compliments of the Ambaſſadors, and other Foreign Miniſters; as alſo of the Courts of Juſtice, and of the Council of Brabant; and in the Afternoon he went to the Aſſembly of the States-General, to whom he Addreſs'd himſelf in this Manner.

His Speech to the States-General.

High and Mighty Lords,

"I always come into this Country with Joy, "but more eſpecially in this dangerous Con-"juncture of Affairs, becauſe I foreſee My Pre-"ſence will be neceſſary for the Service of the "State. I was in hopes, and deſir'd to have "paſs'd the reſt of my Days in Repoſe and "Peace; and after the End of my Days, to "have left this State in a quiet and flouriſhing "Condition. To which End I have always la-"bour'd, particularly after the Concluſion of the "laſt Peace: But ſince there have happen'd ſuch "great Alterations in the Affairs of Europe, that "we know not what will be the Diſpoſal of "Divine Providence concerning them: Never-"theleſs, I can ſincerely aſſure your High Pow-"ſances, that whether Affairs may be accom-1701. "modated without coming to further Embroilments, or whether we must be obliged to take "Arms again, I persist in the same Affection, "and the same Zeal which I ever had for the "Service and Prosperity of these Provinces; "and will contribute as far as lies in my Power, "whatever may tend to advance the Welfare "of this State, the Maintenance of their Liberties and Religion, and their particular Security, as well as that of Europe. I am overjoyed to find all things still in a quiet Condition; which next to the Blessing of the Almighty, must be ascribed to the Speedy and unanimous Resolution of your High Puissances, to put your selves in a Posture of Defence. I am perswaded, that the respective "Confederates will contribute strenuously towards it; which I look upon as the only "Means to prevent a War; or in Case of a "Rupture, to defend the State from the Danger "that threatens it. Tis a great Satisfaction to "me, that I can assure your High Puissances, "not only of my Affection, but of the whole "English Nation; and that they are ready to "assist this State, and strongly to contribute towards their Defence, and to whatever may "tend to the common Security: And this is "what your High Puissances may be fully convinced of. I hope the Great God will Bless "the Means which you have made use of, "either by way of Negotiation, or by Force of "Arms, in case of a Rupture, to attain the "End proposed; that is to say, reasonable Security for the Common Cause, and particularly the Preservation of this State in their "Liberties and Religion. There is nothing "which I wish with more Fervency; and I will "contribute towards it whatever lies in my "Power. This is what I thought necessary to "say at present, only that I desire the Continuance of your High Puissances Affection "and Amity.

"modated

Answer of the States. To this their High and Mightinesses return'd an Answer to this Effect. "That they thank'd "His Majesty with all their Hearts, for the "Honour he had done them to come again into their Assembly; and at the same time testified their unexpressible Joy to see his happy "Arrival. That they were sensible how much "His Majesty's Presence was necessary among "them, in such a Thorny Conjuncture, to settle Affairs in a good Condition, and so to "preserve them, with the Assistance of God, "out of the great Confidence which they all "had, from the highest to the Lowest, in His "Majesty's Prudence and surpassing Abilities. "That they were extreamly obliged to His Majesty, and most heartily thanked Him for His "persevering in His kind Inclinations for their "Repose and Tranquility. That they were "fully convinced, that since the last Treaty of "Peace, His Majesty's Care and Application "had tended to the Preservation of the said "Peace, and the publick Tranquility. That "they were overjoy'd that their Conduct, since "the strange Mutations in General Affairs, had "met with His Majesty's Approbation. And "in regard the State was in so much danger, "that their Religion and Liberties lay at Stake, "they are resolved to use all possible Means for "the Preservation of those inestimable Pledges. "That they could not omit to thank His Majesty for His Assurances, not only in His own, "but in the Name of the English Nation, in "favour of themselves and the Common Cause; "well knowing how much they might rely upon "a People, whose Courage and Valour had "gained so much Reputation in the World. "That they were always of Opinion, that their "Interests were inseperable from those of England. In the mean time, they most ardently "besought the Almighty to Bless His Majesty "and His Counsels, and to grant Him long "Life, Health and Strength, that He might be "able to contiuue His Cares for the Publick "Good, and the Welfare of His own Kingdoms "and their State: Assuring Him of their Perseverance in that Amity and high Esteem "which they have always had, and ever shall "be bound to have of His Majesty, so long "as their State endures. 1701.

After this, His Majesty went to view the Frontier Garisons; and returning to the Hague, He found that on the 26*th* Instant Monsieur D' Avaux had delivered a Letter from the King of France, accompanied with a Memorial of His own, to notify the Recalling of the Ambassador. The Letter was this.

To our most Dear Great Friends and Allies.

Most Dear, Great Friends,
Allies and Confederates.

Letter of the French King to the States. WE have thought fit to recall the Count D' Avaux, our Ambassador Extraordinary to you, seeing the little Fruit those Conferences have produced which you have desired of us, and which you have since often Interrupted. We are not the less inclined to the Establishing of the Peace: As he will further declare his Intentions to you before his Departure. Nothing remains for us, but to assure you, That it still depends on you to receive Marks of our Ancient Friendship for your Republick, and of our Desire to give you Proofs thereof, upon all Occasions: So we pray God, that he may have you, Most Dear, Great Friends, Allies and Confederates, in his Holy Keeping.

Given at Versailles the 18th of July, 1701.

Your Good Friend, Ally and Confederate,
LEWIS.
Colbert.

The Memorial which accompanied this Letter, contained in substance.

Memorial of the Count D' Avaux. "That his Excellency was in Hopes, that "their Lordships would have had that Confidence in his Master's Affection, and his Desires of Peace, that would have dissipated those "vain Fears, which the Advancement of his "Grandson to the Throne of Spain had infused "into them, and that he should have returned "to the King his Master, with the satisfaction "of having been employ'd in preventing the "new Troubles that threatned Europe. Which "hope was confirm'd, when, by their acknowledging the Lawful Rights of the King of "Spain, they Wrote to Congratulate Him, and "seem'd thereby to disown the Injustice of Foreign Pretensions, whatever they might persist in demanding for themselves. So that all "things seemed to be in a fair way towards the "settling of Peace, when the Proposals made "by your High Puissances, and the King of "England's Envoy, gave occasion to judge, that "War rather than Peace would be the Fruit of "that strict Union, which the Conformity of "Proposals denoted between that Prince and "your High Puissances. They protested, That "their excessive Demands, were the effect of "a Just Fear, grounded on the King's Power. "But if that Fear, so lively expreſt in their Letter to the King of Great Britain, during the "Sitting of the Parliament were real, and that "they had no other end in representing them, "than to prevent them; the Means of doing it "were in their own Hands; there was no "need of making all those Preparations for the "greatest 1701. "greateſt War. That their Lordſhips had de-

"ſired the Conferences, and it depended upon
"them to render them uſeful. But their Lord-
"ſhips had again delayed the Concluſion of "them, by demanding the Admiſſion of the "King of England's Envoy into the Conferen-
"ces. Which if he oppoſed for ſome time,
"'twas out of his ſincere Deſire to remove all
"Obſtacles, which the Enemies to Peace are con-
"tinually laying in the Way. Nor did His Ma-
"jeſty believe their Lordſhips would ſo eaſily
"have inſiſted upon the pretended Satisfaction
"to be given to the Emperor, confounding the
"Intereſts of other Princes with their own, and
"ſet themſelves up for Arbitrators between the "Houſes of France and Auſtria; that ſo Wiſe a
"Republick ſhould, in Favour of the Houſe of
"Auſtria againſt France, reſolve to break theſe
"Treaties, which they had look'd upon as the "Confirmation and Seal of their Sovereignty;
"that they ſhould engage themſelves, at the
"Expence of their Provinces, their Countries,
"and their Wealth, to Support Foreign Inte-
"reſts, when a little before they had acted
"quite the contrary, by Acknowledging the "King of Spain.

"That his Excellency ſhould abuſe his Maſter,
"ſhould he write to him that any Succeſs was to "be expected from the Conferences. That his
"Maſter had too diſcerning a Judgment, after
"the King of Great Britain's Envoy had decla-
"red, That his Maſter would never depart from
"the Intereſt of the Emperor; that he would
"not enter into any Propoſals of Accommoda-
"tion, unleſs Satisfaction were given to that
"Prince: That the Ties between their Lord-
"ſhips and the King of England were too ſtrict,
"and had too well made known their blind Sub-
"miſſion to the Sentiments of that Monarch,
"and no doubt that they had already taken a
"Reſolution to make the ſame Declaration to
"the moſt Chriſtian King's Ambaſſador. In"deed, they had done it already before-hand, by
"declaring that their Commiſſioners ſhould not
"continue the Conference without the Inter-
"vention of the Engliſh Envoy: So that if he
"exclude himſelf, the Conferences were ſuſpen-
"ded; and therefore it would be to no purpoſe
"for the moſt Chriſtian King's Ambaſſador,
"ſent only for the ſake of thoſe Conferences,
"to continue any longer at the Hague. Where,
"if he has not the ſatisfaction to fulfil His Ma-
"jeſty's Intentions in eſtabliſhing a durable Peace
"between him and the United Provinces, yet it
"will be ſome Conſolation to him, that he had
"made known His Majeſty's Deſire to contri-
"bute whatever depends on him, to prevent a
"Rupture of the Publick Peace. That he has "taken Arms in the Defence of his Grandſon
"only; and that if it had been his Deſign to
"make new Conqueſts, he might have done it
"when his Forces, upon the Frontiers of their
"Republick, afforded him the Means to have "made his Advantage of their Weakneſs. At "length his Excellency wiſhes, that their Lord-
"ſhips, convinced by His Majeſty's Conduct of "the Sincerity of his Intentions, would while it
"was yet time, take ſuch Reſolutions as might
"be conformable to their true Intereſts."

To which the States-General return'd an Anſwer, which was on the 1ſt. of Auguſt, N. S. deliver'd to the Ambaſſador, to this Effect.

Anſwer of the States.

"That they were obliged to the moſt Chriſti-
"an King, for ſending hither the Count d' A-
"vaux as his Ambaſſador Extraordinary: They
"wiſh'd ſufficient Means might have been found
"in the Conference to have obtain'd a General
"Peace, and Reaſonable Security for themſelves,
"and that he had tarried till that had been done, 1701.
"They were troubled he ſhould be recall'd before
"thoſe things were effected; and ſo much the
"more, that the Cauſe of it ſhould be imputed
"to their Conduct. That upon His moſt Chri-
"ſtian Majeſty's ſignifying to them, that he ac"cepted the Will of the late King of Spain in-
"ſtead of the Treaty of Partition, they gave
"him their Reaſons why they could not come
"to a ſpeedier Reſolution in that Affair: And,
"as ſoon as their Conſtitution would allow it,
"they offered to enter into a Conference with
"any that His Majeſty ſhould think fit to ap-
"point. That they appointed Deputies accor-
"dingly to treat with the Count d' Avaux; and
"in Compliance with His Majeſty, own'd the "new King of Spain, that they might remove
"all Occaſions of Delays, and give a convin-
"cing Proof of their Deſire to preſerve the "Grand Peace. They cannot apprehend how
"they ſhould obſtruct the ſame by the Interven-
"tion of the King of Great Britain, who was
"one of thoſe concerned in the Treaty of Par-
"tition, or by the Intervention of any other
"Potentate that has an Intereſt in preſerving
"the General Peace. That they had not there-
"by owned the Juſtice or Injuſtice of the Pre-
"tenſions of a third Party, nor ſeparated their
"Intereſts from any who are concern'd in the "General Peace. That ſince His Majeſty's Mi-
"niſters had repreſented to them, that the End
"of the Treaty of Partition might be as well
"obtain'd by the Acceptation of the Will, they
"deſir'd the Count d' Avaux might make Pro-
"poſals for the General Peace, and their parti"cular Security; and he excuſing himſelf, and
"deſiring Propoſals from them, they had, in "Concert with His Majeſty of Great Britain, de-
"liver'd him Propoſals. They cannot compre-
"hend why the Effect of that Union betwixt
"them and the ſaid King, ſhould be rather War
"than Peace, ſince His Majeſty of Great Britain
"has on all Occaſions given ſufficient Proofs of "His Inclinations to Peace. That they were
"ſtrictly united with him by Alliances many "Years ago, for their mutual Security: That
"he was one of the chiefeſt Parties in the Trea-
"ty of Partition; and that they declared be"fore their Propoſals were communicated, they "thought his Conſent neceſſary, as well for
"theſe Reaſons, as for his private Relation to "their Republick; and no Objection was then
"raiſed againſt it. They were ſorry the King
"of France had returned no Anſwer to their
"Propoſals; which, though they had heard to
"be called Exceſſive, no body had undertaken
"to prove them ſuch. That the General Peace
"could not be preſerved, without Satisfa"ction to the Emperor, whoſe Pretenſions were
"ſo far own'd by the King of France himſelf in
"the Treaty of Partition, that it was agreed
"how the ſame ſhould be ſatisfied: That there-
"fore there was nothing in this Article of their
"Propoſal that could be called Exceſſive; and
"what they had demanded for their own Secu"rity, was not equal to what they had before
"the Death of the late King of Spain, or to
"what they had acquired by the Treaty of Par-
"tition. That their Forces were not grounded
"alone on their own private Sentiments, but on
"the Opinion of their Allies, who had not ſcru-
"pled to ſend them the Aſſiſtance they were "obliged to by their Alliances. That had it
"been in their Power to rid themſelves out of "their Difficulties, without Arming, ſeeking
"new Alliances, and drowning their Country,
"they would certainly have done it. That the "Difficulties raiſed about admitting the Engliſh
"Envoy

1701. "Envoy, was not from them, but from the "Count d' Avaux, and not chargeable upon "them, for the Reasons before-mentioned. "That the King of France had Reason to think "they would insist on Satisfaction to the Empe- "ror, seeing that was the first of their Propo- "sals, which the King of France himself thought "just and necessary. That they had given no "Cause to think that they presumed to set up "as Umpires betwixt France and Austria, or to "determine which of the Two last Kings of "Spain had a Right to alter the Laws of the "Succession to that Crown; but desired His "Majesty to remember, that he himself, as "well as the King of Great Britain and the "States, thought a War would be unavoidable, "if upon the Death of the late King of Spain, "either he or the Emperor should insist upon "the Pretensions of their Families to the Suc- "cession; and therefore they entred into the "Treaty of Partition. That their Owning the "King of Spain could not be judged to be a "Step contrary to this, since it did not hinder "giving reasonable Satisfaction to the Emperor. "And the King of France ought to be convinc'd "that they would do nothing to the Detriment "of their Provinces, Commerce or Riches, but "what was absolutely necessary to their Preser- "vation. They had done nothing that could "be construed a Breach of the Treaties, which "confirm'd and seal'd their Sovereignty, and "did not well apprehend the Meaning of that "Assertion: Their Provinces were always Free "and Sovereign; their Ancestors spent their "Lives and Fortunes to assert their Freedom, "and they resolv'd to do the like. They were "sorry to hear that the Count d' Avaux expect- "ed no Success from the Conferences, because "of the English Envoy's declaring that Satisfa- "ction must be given to the Emperor. They "own'd, that the King of Great Britain and "they thought it reasonable to treat of Satisfa- "ction to that Prince; and that the Emperor "should, in order thereunto, be invited into the "Negotiation. The States did not blindly fol- "low the King of Great Britain's Sentiments, "but had a great Deference for his Advice, be- "cause they were persuaded He is wholly inclined "to preserve the Peace, and convinc'd he seeks no- "thing but the Welfare of their Republick. "That if the Conferences were suspended upon "that Account, they should look upon it as a "great Misfortune: But if the King of France "had thought fit to let them continue, and to "allow Satisfaction to the Emperor, they had "hopes of a good Conclusion. They had been "obliged indeed, to Arm, but did not begin to "do it, till they saw their Barriers in the Spanish "Netherlands, that had cost them so much Blood "and Treasure, possess'd by French Troops, their "own Forces detained, and great Preparations "of War made there. Their Jealousie was be- "sides considerably increased by the strict Uni- "on that appeared every Day between France "and Spain; though the Treaty of Partition "was made for this, among other Reasons, to "prevent Jealousies from the Union of too ma- "ny States. That they had endeavour'd by all "possible Means to preserve Friendship, but if "they must contrary to their own Inclination "enter into a War, they have no Cause to "blame themselves for it, and therefore hop'd "that God would protect them.

Return of the Count d' Avaux.

Thus all the Pretensions of the French to give the States a reasonable Security, went off with the Count D' Avaux; who yet was willing to retire without any open Breach, and there- fore took his Leave of the States in very obliging Terms, accepted from them the Present of a Gold Chain and Medal, and left his Secretary behind, under a Shew of renewing the Negotia- tions, when he had made a Report of them to his Master. But the States understood the Art- ful Recess of the Ambassador; and therefore daily augmented their Army with the Troops arrived from Ireland, and with other Auxiliary Forces, and were indefatigably at work on the Fortifications of their Frontiers; so as the Peo- ple seem'd now no more to fear than to love the French. To strengthen the Alliances, his Maje- sty sent the Earl of Galloway to treat with the Elector Palatine, and the Elector of Cologne; the Earl of Maclesfeld to the Courts of Hanover and the Duke of Cell; Sir Robert Sutton to Venice, &c.

1701.

Inclinati- ons of the People for a new Par- liament.

In England the People were in an uneasy Sus- pence between Peace and War; and as much, between the continuance of the present Parlia- ment and the expectance of a new one. Some Addresses did insinuate the Desire of a Dissolu- tion: One from the County of York concluded thus; And we humbly beg leave further to assure Your Majesty, That whenever the Dissolution of this present or any other Parliament shall happen, either by virtue of the Triennial Bill, or Prerogative Royal, we will from time to time make it our constant Endeavour to elect such Persons as shall be in the true Interest of Your Majesty and these Kingdoms. One from the High Sheriff, Gentlemen of the Grand Jury, and Ju- stices of the Peace for the County of Cumberland, ended to the same effect; We humbly beg leave further to assure Your Majesty, That upon all Occasions of Elections, we will constantly endeavour to chuse such Representatives, as shall manifest their Affection to Your Person, and their Zeal to the Church and State, as by Law established. And yet another Ad- dress from another Set of Men in the very same County of Cumberland, was made to run in a di- rect Opposition; while "they crave leave to give "His Majesty the Assurance of their Unanimous "and Hearty Concurrence with their Represen- "tatives in Parliament; who they do not doubt "will give His Majesty such fresh Testimonies "of their firm Loyalty at the next Attendance "on His Majesty in the approaching Winter, as "becomes the Representatives of a most obedi- "ent and dutiful People." And indeed some Persons did imagine that the very Members did instruct the People to address for the Continuance of their Power in Parliament: For an Address from Exeter, said to be signed at the Assizes there by all the Grand Jury, and by their Foreman Sir John Pole delivered in open Court to Mr. Ju- stice Blencoe, concluded thus; We have not Confi- dence to think we can direct His Majesty, or His Great Council the Parliament: We acquiesce in every thing they have done, and should be extremely concern- ed that any Device should be set on foot to divide this Nation in the Reign of the Best of Kings, and when we have the best House of Commons, except that which brought His Majesty to the Throne.

The truth is, these Popular Addresses for or against the Continuance of a Parliament, were a very ill Precedent, and therefore not counte- nanc'd by the King; who yet was always dispo- sed to take his general Measures from the pre- vailing Inclinations of the People. But to solve this Difficulty, another unforeseen Accident now happen'd, which gave Things quite another Turn, and produced Addresses from all Parts, of the most unanimous Adherence to His Maje- sty, and of an Abhorrence to the last degree of the French King: We mean the Death of the late King James; who after above Twelve Years Second Exile, and several unsuccessful Attempts of Restoration, and even many Contempts and Neglects of the French King, was so broken with Resentments and Sorrows, that on Sept. 4. O. S. he

Death of K. James.

1701. he fell into a Lethargy at St. Germains, and was thought to be immediately dead; but He recovered some part of his Senses, and lay in Maze and Confusion till Saturday, Sept. 6. when He expir'd between Three and Four that Afternoon. Upon his Decease, the French King presently declared the Young pretended Prince of Wales to be King of England, Scotland, and Ireland. It was supposed this Matter was concerted between the French King and King James, upon the last Indisposition of King William; that in case He died, the Other's Absolute Title should be set up again, either in his own Person, or in his surviving Heir. Others believ'd it a Dying Request of the Unfortunate King James, which the French Monarch in his last Visit to Him, thought it Humanity to grant. Though many Persons did infer, that it was no Point of Honour in the French King, but Self-Interest and Revenge, to affront King William, and to keep up a Jacobite Party in England, where Divisions must be his only Hopes. Some of the wisest Men look'd upon this Action as a Rant, and a prodigal sort of Madness, rather than the effect of mature and sedate Counsels: And therefore it was opposed by a Majority of that very Junto whom the King pretended to advise with on this occasion; and among others, they say, by the very Dauphin himself; because they saw the necessity of a War depending on it, which had not otherwise come to any speedy Crisis. King William was a Prince of too much Spirit to digest such an Indignity; and the People of England had such a universal Belief of the Spuriousness of the Prince of Wales, and such a Detestation to have a King imposed by Lewis the Great, especially at a time when the Succession was just settled in a Protestant Line, that it serv'd only to animate an effectual War against France.

The French King declares for the pretended Prince of Wales.

K. William resents this Indignity.

Accordingly, His Majesty was no sooner inform'd of this Insolent Step taken by the Court of France, but he forthwith dispatch'd a Courier to the King of Sweden (as Guarantee of the Treaty of Reswick) to give him an Account of the manifest Violation of it. On the same day His Majesty sent an Express to my Lord Manchester, His Ambassador in France, to come directly away, without taking Leave. My Lord having received his Orders, sent the following Letter to M. de Torcy, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

The King recalls his Ambassador from France.

My Lord,

Lord Manchester's Letter.

The King my Master being informed, That His Most Christian Majesty has acknowledged another King of Great Britain, thinks that His Glory and Honour permits him no more to have an Ambassador near the King your Master; and has sent me Orders to depart immediately; whereof I do my self the Honour to acquaint you by this Letter; and withal to assure you, that I am, &c.

Hereupon the French King, who was then at Fontainbleau, assembled his Council; and after Two or Three Days this Answer was returned.

My Lord,

M. de Torcy's Answer.

I have nothing more to add to what I had the Honour to tell you Eight Days ago, of the sincere Desire the King has always had, to preserve with the King your Master the Peace confirmed by the Treaty of Reswick. I pray you only, as to me in particular, to be persuaded, that in what Place soever you be, you will have none that shall be with more Sincerity than I shall be all my Life-time, Your &c.

My Lord hereupon having obtained his Passports, made haste to leave that Intriguing Court: And before 23. Sept. Notice was given by His Majesty's Command, to Monsieur Poussin the French Secretary here, That he should forthwith depart out of England. Before his departure, one thing happen'd, that made a noise of Jealousies and Fears: Three Gentlemen, Members of the House of Commons, Mr. Anthony Hammond, Mr. John Tredenham, and Dr. Charles Davenant, were found at Supper with him at the Blue Posts a Night or two before he went off: This gave an Alarm of Secret Correspondence; and though they excused themselves upon Accident and common Civility, yet the World open'd their mouths against them, and left them the Name of Poussineers, as a Blot and Reproach that was not easily wiped off.

M. Poussin commanded to leave England.

1701.

In the mean time, the Nation as well as His Majesty began to resent this Indignity offered by the French King: The City of London set the good Example in this Address presented to the Lords Justices, containing their Declaration of Abhorrence in these Words:

Great Sir,

Address of the City of London.

"We are deeply sensible how much we are in Du- "ty bound highly to resent that great Indignity and "Affront offered to Your most Sacred Majesty "by the French King, in giving the Title of King "of England, Scotland, and Ireland, to the "pretended Prince of Wales, contrary to Your "Majesty's most Just and Lawful Title, and to "the several Acts of Parliament for settling the "Succession to the Crown in the Protestant "Line.

"By this it is apparent he designs, as much "as in him lies, to dethrone Your Majesty, to "extirpate the Protestant Religion out of these "Your Majesty's Kingdoms, and to invade our "Liberties and Properties; for the maintaining "whereof Your Majesty hath signaliz'd Your "Zeal, by the often hazarding Your precious "Life.

We therefore, Your Majesty's most Loyal Subjects, do sincerely, unanimously, and chearfully, assure Your Majesty, That we will at all Times, and upon all Occasions, exert the utmost of our Abilities, and contribute whatever lies in our Power, for the Preservation of Your Person (whom God long preserve), and the Defence of Your Just Rights, in opposition to all Invaders of Your Crown and Dignity.

The King much pleas'd with this Address.

This Address being transmitted to the King in Holland, His Majesty was very well pleased with this Expression of the Loyalty and Affection of the City; and order'd their Excellencies the Lords Justices, as by his special Direction, to acquaint the Lord Mayor and Aldermen with the great Satisfaction He received in it: Which their Excellencies signified to the Aldermen on October 14. And next day the Lord Mayor summon'd the Common-Council to meet, to communicate to them His Majesty's most Gracious Acceptance of their Address. According to this Precedent, numerous Addresses came from all Parts of the Kingdom, with like Expressions of Detestation of the Perfidiousness of the French King, and Assurances of asserting and defending His Majesty's undoubted Right and Title to the Imperial Crown of these Kingdoms, against the pretended Prince of Wales and all his Adherents: And several Corporations express'd themselves to this effect, That if Occasion should require, they would make Choice of such Persons to represent them in Parliament, as they had good Reason to believe, would readily go into all such Measures as might effectually conduce to the Ends of supporting and defending His Majesty's Person and Government, and the Succession in the Protestant Line.

General Alliance made by the King.

His Majesty, when He had perfected the Alliances He was making abroad, and especially that between England, Holland, and the Empire, which was concluded about the middle of Sep-

1701. tember, began to prepare for His Return; but under that Intention He was detain'd at the Hague above a Month, very much indiſpoſed, tho' it was kept very private: For the very News of His Sickneſs would have been a dreadful Obſtruction to the Intereſts of Europe; and if His Death had happened at that time, it muſt have occaſion'd in England and other Parts unſpeakable Confuſion. His Majeſty however began to make His Illneſs a Preſage of His not having long to live: And therefore, upon a Diſcourſe concerning the Succeſs and brave Actions of the King of Sweden, in the North, againſt the Poles and Saxons; and of Prince Eugene, in Italy, againſt the French; He fetch'd a ſort of languiſhing Sigh, and ſaid; It was a fine thing to be a Young Man. It is moſt certain, His Majeſty from this time was very ſenſible of His declining State; and He was pleaſed to tell my Lord Portland this Winter in his Garden at Hampton-Court, That He found Himſelf ſo weak, that He could not expect to live another Summer: But charged him at the ſame time to ſay nothing of it till He was dead.

His Majeſty detain'd by Sickneſs.

Soon after His Majeſty's Arrival, the Parliament was Prorogued till the 13*th* of November, and ſoon after Diſſolv'd by a Proclamation importing the Reaſons of it to be, in this extraordinary Juncture, to give the People Opportunity of chuſing ſuch Perſons to repreſent them in Parliament, as they ſhould judge moſt likely to bring to effect their juſt and pious Purpoſes; of ſhewing a Reſentment of the Injuſtice and Indignity offer'd by the late Proceedings of the French King; and of expreſſing an Affection to His Majeſty's Perſon and Government; and of doing all things which can be deſir'd from good Engliſhmen and Proteſtants; and therefore to call a New Parliament on Tueſday the 30*th* of December next. The Elections went on with unhappy but not unuſual Conteſts. The City of London, and Borough of Southwark, having choſen by great Majority very Worthy Perſons to be their Repreſentatives, they deliver'd Papers of Inſtructions to them, that deſerve to be remembred. That from the City to their Members ran thus:

Parliament diſſolv'd.

New Parliament called.

Inſtructions to Members elected.

Gentlemen,

" We earneſtly deſire and charge you our Repreſentatives, that in the approaching Parliament you heartily purſue the Engagements made to his Majeſty in the Addreſs of this City, and other Loyal Addreſſes from all Parts of the Kingdom. To this purpoſe we expect, that to the utmoſt of your Power, and without loſs of Time, you endeavour to put His Majeſty into a Condition to maintain his undoubted Right and Title to the Crown, and to vindicate His and the Nation's Honour. To enable Him in this Critical Juncture, to provide for the Security of His Kingdoms; to appear at the Head of the Proteſtant Intereſt; to make good His Alliances, and in Conjunction with His Allies, ſo to reduce the French King, that it may be no longer in his Power to diſturb and oppreſs the reſt of Europe. In order to theſe good Ends, we deſire You diligently to labour to preſerve an entire good Correſpondence between the Two Houſes of Parliament, and hinder the purſuing of private Piques and Animoſities; to take care of our Trade, ſupport publick Credit, make good the Deficiencies, and to have ſpecial Regard to the Royal Navy. And ſo God proſper Your Undertakings.

That from the Borough of Southwark was drawn by ſo peculiar a Hand, and gives ſo conciſe a Recapitulation of the Affairs of Europe, that 'tis more remarkable than the other.

Gentlemen,

" It is notorious, that for more than Forty Years the French King hath affected Univerſal Monarchy; that he has conſtantly purſued the ſame by all the Methods of Violence, Rapine and Injuſtice; and that he has no otherwiſe regarded his Oaths, Treaties and Religion, than as ſo many Solemn Cheats to catch and enſnare all that have depended on him.

" To enable himſelf to Marry the Infanta of Spain, he, by Oath, renounced any Title to that Crown for all the Iſſue of that Marriage; yet he hath made the Invalidity of that Renunciation the Ground of every one of his Wars with the King of Spain.

" By the Pyrenæan Treaty he ſtipulated with the King, to give no Aſſiſtance to his Enemy the King of Portugal, yet preſently after diſpatch'd ſo many Troops to the Aſſiſtance of that Prince, as reduced the Spaniſh Monarchy to a Degree of Weakneſs, from which it hath never ſince recover'd.

" He lull'd the Spaniard aſleep with repeated Promiſes of Friendſhip; and then, without giving him any time to prepare for his Defence, carried his Conqueſts over the greateſt part of Flanders; and was prevented only by the Triple Alliance of England, Holland, and the King of Sweden, from reducing the remainder of that Province.

" To the everlaſting Diſhonour of the late King Charles II. he diſengaged that Prince from ſo neceſſary an Alliance, and preſently after Invaded the Seven United Provinces with all his Forces; and could give no better Reaſon for a bloody War, which reduced thoſe flouriſhing States almoſt to utter Ruin, than that he had been ill ſatisfied with their Conduct.

" To break a powerful Confederacy againſt him, he made the Peace of Nimeguen; by which Conceſſion was made to him of almoſt all his Conqueſts in that War, and immediately after Invaded the Empire himſelf, to aſſiſt his Infidel Confederate.

" The Peace of Ryſwick gave an End to that War, and a Balance to Europe, till the French King by Colour of a Will ſurreptitiouſly gained from the late King of Spain, in favour of the Duke of Anjou, has poſſeſt himſelf of the Spaniſh Monarchy, contrary to his own Renunciation, and the Pyrenæan Treaty. Flanders and Milan he hath inveſted with his own Troops, while the Duke of Anjou is forced to govern the reſt of that Monarchy, as Vice-Roy to his Grand-Father, both to obtain his Support, and for fear of being excluded from a better Kingdom.

" He has exalted himſelf upon this good Succeſs, and hath already named a Vice-Roy for more Countries, by giving the Title of His Majeſty's Kingdoms to the Pretended Prince of Wales. Our Condition muſt be very miſerable, if we are to be governed by the Diſcretion of a King, who hath deſtroy'd the Proteſtants of his own Kingdoms by the Sword, Fire and Gallies; we cannot hope to be us'd with greater Tenderneſs than his own Subjects.

" Nevertheleſs, we cannot doubt but his repeated ill Succeſſes in Italy, the vaſt Debts of his Crown, increaſed by his prodigious Expences among his Confederate Princes, will oblige him to offer a Treaty, that he may ſave by a Peace a conſiderable ſhare of the Spaniſh Monarchy, rather than loſe the whole by a War. And we had Reaſon to be afraid that the Diviſion of the Two Houſes of Parliament,

1701. "ment, the Animoſities of thoſe Men that have "oppoſed the Settlement, the Recognition and "Aſſociation, and the great Authority of "others, who in former Reigns had always "given Countenance for the French Invaſions, "might oblige His Majeſty to hearken to ſuch a "Peace as France would pleaſe to give him

"But we hope, Gentlemen, that the Diſſo- "lution of the Parliament has put an End to the "Diviſion of the Two Houſes; and we have "that Aſſurance of your Integrity and Mode- "ration, that you will do nothing to revive the "ſame Diviſion. It is indeed very popular, and "very juſt, to be ſevere with ſuch Miniſters as "have betrayed the Commonwealth: But when "the Lords, ſo conſiderable a Part of the Legi- "ſlative Power, have eſpouſed the Innocency "of any Perſon, We hope you will either give "Credit to their Authority, or defer your Re- "ſentments during our Common Danger. We "are aſſured that you will neither join with the "Enemies of the King, nor with the Advocates "of France, to hang upon the Wheels of the "Government.

"We beſeech you, Gentlemen, not to be a- "muſed with the Offers of any Treaties from "the French King, or for the ſake thereof, to "defer any Supplies that ſhall be convenient, "before he ſhall have given entire ſatisfaction to "the Emperor for his Right to the Spaniſh Mo- "narchy, and to His Majeſty for the Affront put "upon Him and his People, by giving the Title "of his Kingdoms to the Pretended Prince of "Wales. We hope you will be ready upon all "Occaſions to Addreſs the King, that he will "never enter into any Treaty with France, "which ſhall not effectually ſecure to his Peo- "ple their Religion and Commerce.

"We beſeech you, Gentlemen, that ſetting "aſide all other Buſineſs, you will be ſo early, "and ſo liberal in your Supplies to His Majeſty, "to ſupport his Great Alliances, that France "may have no Hopes, nor her Enemies any "Fears of the Neutrality of England: That "other Princes, like thoſe of Savoy, Portugal, and "Cologn, may not make ſeparate Treaties for "themſelves with the common Enemy of Eu- "rope.

"We beſeech you, Gentlemen, to be careful "of the Credit of the Government, and to join "your Votes with ſuch as ſhall be for the moſt "ſpeedy and moſt eaſie Methods of raiſing Mo- "ney; that the Blame of Buying every thing "for the King at expenſive Prices, may not be "caſt upon the Miniſters, which has been moſt "juſtly due to the Diſtance or Inſufficiency of "thoſe Funds which Parliaments have given.

Above all, Gentlemen, we conjure you to be moſt tender of the Perſon of His Majeſty, to endeavour that no Indignity may be offered to a Prince, Born for the Good of Europe; to diſtinguiſh between one that ſits upon his Throne, and ſends Generals Abroad to make Slaughters and Deſolation among his Neighbours, and a King who has ſo liberally and ſo generouſly expoſed his Life for the Liberty of his Country againſt this common Enemy.

Since the Receſs of the laſt Parliament ſome few Titles and Places had been thus diſpoſed. Honours and Preferments. On September 1ſt. His Majeſty was pleaſed to Confer the Dignity of a Baronet upon John Thornicroft of Milcomb, in the County of Oxon, Eſq;. On November 22. His Majeſty was pleas'd to grant to the Earl of Radnor, the Office of Steward of the Dutchy of Cornwall, and of Warden and Steward of the Stannaries, and of Rider and Maſter of His Majeſty's Foreſts and Chaces of Dartmore, in the room of John Earl of Bath deceaſed; and to appoint the Earl of Rivers to be Lord Lieutenant of the County of Lancaſter, in the room of Charles Earl of Macclesfield deceaſed; who ſoon after his Return from an Embaſſy to the Court of Hanover, died on November 5. ordering by Will all his juſt Debts to be ſatisfied; and leaving moſt part of his Perſonal Eſtate to his Kinſman, the Lord Mohun, thinking his Hereditary Eſtate and Honours to be ſufficient for his Brother Fitſon Gerrard. On 27. December His Majeſty was pleaſed to conſtitute Charles Earl of Carliſle firſt Lord Commiſſioner of his Majeſty's Treaſury. And at the beginning of the Parliament, the more wiſely to Balance the Publick Counſels and Intereſts; on January 1ſt. the Earl of Radnor was Sworn of the Privy Council; On January 4*th.* the Earl of Manchester was conſtituted one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State; On January 8*th.* the Earl of Burlington was admitted into the Privy Council; and to compleat the choice of able Miniſters, the King with an admirable Sagacity on January 18. appointed the Earl of Pembroke to be Lord High Admiral of England and Ireland, and the Dominions thereunto belonging, while the Duke of Somerſet ſucceeded him as Lord Preſident of the Privy Council.

On the appointed day, 30*th. December*, the Parliament met, and the King came to the Houſe of Peers, and ſent for the Commons; to whom the Lord Keeper ſignified his Majeſty's Pleaſure, that they ſhould forthwith proceed to the choice of a Speaker, and preſent him next Morning: The Competition was between Mr. Harley and Sir Thomas Littleton, to which latter the King and Court inclin'd; but the former was elected by a Majority of Fourteen Votes; who being the next day preſented and approved, His Majeſty made this Memorable Speech to Both Houſes. Meeting of the New Parliament.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I Promiſe My Self you are met together full "of the juſt Senſe of Our common Danger "of Europe, and that Reſentment of the late "Proceeding of the French King, which has been "ſo fully and univerſally expreſt in the Loyal "and Seaſonable Addreſſes of My People. King's Speech,

"The Owning and Setting up the Pretended "Prince of Wales for King of England, is not "only the higheſt Indignity offered to Me and "the whole Nation, but does ſo nearly concern "every Man, who has a Regard for the Prote- "ſtant Religion, or the preſent and future Qui- "et and Happineſs of your Country, that I need "not Preſs you to lay it ſeriouſly to Heart, and "to conſider what further effectual Means may "be uſed for ſecuring the Succeſſion of the "Crown in the Proteſtant Line, and Extinguiſh- "ing the Hopes of all Pretenders, and their "open or Secret Abettors.

"By the French King's placing his Grandſon "on the Throne of Spain, he is in a Condition "to oppreſs the reſt of Europe, unleſs ſpeedy "and effectual Meaſures be taken. Under this "pretence, he is become the real Maſter of the "whole Spaniſh Monarchy; he has made it to be "entirely depending on France, and diſpoſes of "it as of his own Dominions, and by that means "he has ſurrounded his Neighbours in ſuch a "manner, that though the Name of Peace may "be ſaid to continue, yet they are put to the "Expence and Inconveniences of War.

"This muſt affect England in the neareſt and "moſt ſenſible Manner, in reſpect to our Trade, "which will ſoon become precarious in all the "valuable Branches of it; in reſpect to our "Peace and Safety at Home, which we cannot "hope ſhould long continue; and in reſpect to 1701. "that part which England ought to take in the "Preſervation of the Liberty of Europe.

"In order to obviate the general Calamity "with which the reſt of Chriſtendom is threatned "by this Exorbitant Power of France, I have "concluded ſeveral Alliances, according to the "Encouragement given Me by Both Houſes of "Parliament; which I will direct ſhall be laid "before you, and which I do not doubt you "will enable Me to make good.

"There are ſome other Treaties ſtill depend- "ing, that ſhall be likewiſe communicated to "you as ſoon as they are perfected.

"It is fit I ſhould tell you, the Eyes of all "Europe are upon this Parliament, all Matters "are at a ſtand till your Reſolutions are known, "and therefore no Time ought to be loſt.

"You have yet an opportunity, by God's "Bleſſing, to ſecure to you and your Poſterity "the quiet Enjoyment of your Religion and Li- "berties, if you are not wanting to your ſelves, "but will exert the Ancient Vigor of the Eng- "liſh Nation: But I tell you plainly My Opinion "is, If you do not lay hold on this Occaſion, "you have no Reaſon to hope for another.

"In order to do your part, it will be neceſſary "to have a great Strength at Sea, and to pro- "vide for the Security of our Ships in Harbour; "and alſo that there be ſuch a Force at Land as "is expected in proportion to the Forces of Our "Allies.

"Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

"I do recommend theſe Matters to you with "that Concern and Earneſtneſs which their Im- "portance requires: At the ſame time I cannot "but preſs you to take Care of the Publick Cre- "dit, which cannot be preſerved but by keep- "ing ſacred that Maxim, That they ſhall never "be Loſers, who truſt to a Parliamentary Secu- "rity.

"It is always with Regret when I do ask Aids "of my People; but you will obſerve, that I "deſire nothing which relates to any Perſonal "Expence of Mine; I am only preſſing you to "do all you can for your own Safety and Ho- "nour at ſo Critical and Dangerous a Time; "and am willing that what is given ſhall be "wholly appropriated to the Purpoſes for which "it is intended.

"And ſince I am ſpeaking on this Head, I "think it proper to put you in mind, That du- "ring the late War I ordered the Accounts to "be laid Yearly before the Parliament, and alſo "gave my Aſſent to ſeveral Bills for Taking the "Publick Accounts, that My Subjects might have "Satisfaction how the Money given for the War "was applied; and I am willing that Matter "may be put in any further way of Examina- "tion; that it may appear whether there were "any Miſapplications and Miſmanagements, or "whether the Debt that remains upon us has "really ariſen from the Shortneſs of the Supplies, "or the Deficiency of the Funds.

"I have already told you how neceſſary Diſ- "patch will be for carrying on that great Pub- "lick Buſineſs, whereon Our Safety, and all that "is Valuable to Us depends. I hope, what "Time can be ſpared, will be employed about "thoſe other very deſirable Things, which I "have ſo often recommended from the Throne; "I mean, the Forming ſome good Bills for Em- "ploying the Poor, for Encouraging Trade, "and the further Suppreſſing of Vice.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I hope you are come together, determined "to avoid all manner of Diſputes and Differen- "ces, and reſolved to act with a general and "hearty Concurrence, for promoting the Com- "mon Cauſe; which alone can make this a 1701. "happy Seſſion.

"I ſhould think it as great a Bleſſing as could "befal England, if I could obſerve you as much "inclined to lay aſide thoſe Unhappy Fatal A- "nimoſities, which Divide and Weaken you, "as I am diſpoſed to make all My Subjects ſafe "and eaſy, as to any, even the higheſt Offences "committed againſt Me.

"Let Me conjure you to diſappoint the only "Hopes of Our Enemies, by your Unanimity. "I have ſhewn, and will always ſhew, how de- "ſirous I am to be the Common Father of all "My People: Do you in like manner lay aſide "Parties and Diviſions; Let there be no other "Diſtinction heard of among Us for the future, "but of thoſe who are for the Proteſtant Reli- "gion and the preſent Eſtabliſhment, and of "thoſe who mean a Popiſh Prince and a French "Government.

"I will only add this, If you do in good ear- "neſt deſire to ſee England hold the Balance of "Europe, and to be indeed at the Head of the "Proteſtant Intereſt, it will appear by your "right improving the preſent Opportunity.

This Wiſe and Affectionate Speech was ex- tremely grateful to Both Houſes, and they were very Unanimous in their Thanks for it. The Lords began the New Year with this ſeaſonable Preſent.

Die Jovis 1. Januarii, 1701.

"We Your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal Addreſs of the Lords. "Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in "Parliament aſſembled, did hear, with all ima- "ginable Satisfaction, Your Majeſty's moſt Gra- "cious Speech to Both Your Houſes of Parlia- "ment; for which we return Your Majeſty "our moſt humble and hearty Thanks. And "tho' the ſeveral Particulars which Your Ma- "jeſty was pleaſed to recommend to us, are of "the higheſt Importance; and that we will loſe "no time in proceeding to the Conſideration of "them, with great Duty to Your Majeſty; "Yet we cannot defer expreſſing our juſt Re- "ſentments of the Proceedings of the French "King, in Owning and Setting up the pretend- "ed Prince of Wales for King of England, and "other Your Majeſty's Realms and Dominions: "Which we take to be the higheſt Indignity that "can be offered to Your Sacred Majeſty, and "this Kingdom. And we do aſſure Your Maje- "ſty, we are ſo ſenſible thereof, that we are re- "ſolved to Aſſiſt Your Majeſty to the utmoſt of "our Power, in defending Your Sacred Perſon "and Government from all Attempts whatſoe- "ver, that ſhall be made either from Your open "or ſecret Enemies. And that no Enemies to "our Religion and Country, may ever hope to "proſper in their Attempts againſt Us, when, "to our great Unhappineſs, it ſhall pleaſe God "to deprive us of Your Majeſty's Protection, "We do further declare our Reſolutions to Aſſiſt "and Defend, to the utmoſt of our Power, "againſt the pretended Prince of Wales, and all "other Pretenders whatſoever, every Perſon and "Perſons who have Right to Succeed to the "Crown of theſe Realms, by Virtue of the "Two Acts of Parliament, entitled, An Act "declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject, "and ſettling the Succeſſion of the Crown; and An "Act for the further Limitation of the Crown, and "better Securing the Rights and Liberties of the Sub- "ject. And we conclude with our earneſt "Prayers to Almighty God, for Your Maje- "ſty's long and happy Reign over us.

To

1701. To this Addreſs His Majeſty made an agreeable Anſwer.

The King's Anſwer.

My Lords,

"I heartily thank you for your very ſeaſonable Addreſs, and for all your kind Expreſſions "of Duty to Me in it. I recommend to you "to take into your ſpeedy Conſideration the "other Matters mentioned in my Speech, and "doubt not but that your Reſolutions will be for "the Honour and Safety of the Kingdom.

On the 5*th.* of January the Commons preſented their Addreſs in this agreeable Form.

Addreſs of the Commons.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

"We Your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal "Subjects the Commons of England in Parliament Aſſembled, do return our moſt humble "and hearty Thanks to Your Majeſty for Your "moſt Gracious Speech from the Throne; and "humbly crave Leave to aſſure Your Majeſty, "That this Houſe will ſupport and defend Your "Majeſty's lawful and rightful Title to the "Crown of theſe Realms, againſt the Pretended Prince of Wales, and all his open and ſecret Abettors and Adherents, and all other "Your Majeſty's Enemies whatſoever. And we "will enable Your Majeſty to ſhew Your juſt "Reſentment of the Affront and Indignity offered to Your Majeſty and this Nation by the "French King, in taking upon him to declare "the Pretended Prince of Wales King of England, Scotland and Ireland: And we are firmly "and unanimouſly Reſolved to maintain and ſupport the Succeſſion to the Imperial Crown of "this Realm, and the Dominions and Territories thereunto belonging, in the Proteſtant "Line, as the ſame is ſettled by an Act declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject, "and ſettling the Succeſſion of the Crown, and "farther provided for by an Act of the laſt Parliament, entituled, An Act for the farther Limitation of the Crown, and better ſecuring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject. And for the better effecting the ſame, we will, to the utmoſt "of our Power, enable Your Majeſty to make "good all thoſe Alliances Your Majeſty has "made, or ſhall make, purſuant to the Addreſſes "and Advice of Your moſt Dutiful and Loyal "Commons of the laſt Parliament, for the preſerving the Liberties of Europe, and reducing "the Exorbitant Power of France.

King's Anſwer.

To which His Majeſty gave this grateful Anſwer. Gentlemen, I give you My hearty Thanks for this Addreſs, which I look upon as a good Omen for the Seſſion. The Unanimity with which it paſſed adds greatly to the Satisfaction I receive from it; ſo good a Step at your firſt Entrance upon Buſineſs, cannot but raiſe the Hopes of all who wiſh well to England, and to the Common Cauſe. I can deſire no more of you than to proceed as you have begun; and I depend upon it. For when I conſider how chearfully and univerſally you concurr'd in this Addreſs, I cannot doubt but every one of you will ſincerely endeavour to make it effectual in all the Parts of it.

The Lords had taken into ſeaſonable Conſideration the dangerous State of Europe, more eſpecially ariſing from the Duke of Anjou's poſſeſſing the Crown of Spain, which made in effect a Conjunction with France, and ſo muſt inevitably overthrow the Balance of Power, unleſs timely prevented by ſtrong Alliances of other States and Princes: And therefore on Jan. 6. their Lordſhips addreſs'd the King a ſecond time in theſe clear Words.

Second Addreſs of the Lords.

"We Your Majeſty's moſt Loyal and Dutiful "Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in "Parliament Aſſembled, are highly ſenſible of "what we owe to Almighty God, for the great "Deliverance he hath wrought for us by Your "Majeſty. We are highly ſenſible of his Mercies in preſerving You hitherto, in ſo many "publick and private Dangers to which Your "Sacred Perſon hath been expoſed; and we "hope the ſame Providence will carry Your "Majeſty through the great Work, (which "ſeems reſerv'd for you) the reducing the Exorbitant Power of France, and maintaining the "Balance of Europe.

1701.

"All true Engliſhmen, ſince the Decay of the "Spaniſh Monarchy, have ever taken it for "granted, that the Security of their Religion, "Liberty and Property, that their Honour, their "Wealth, and their Trade, depend chiefly upon the proper Meaſures to be taken from time "to time in Parliament againſt the Growing "Power of France: But it is their peculiar Bleſſing in Your Majeſty's Reign, to have a Prince "upon the Throne, who not only agrees with "them in this Opinion, but who, in the frequent Parliaments Aſſembled, is ever Reminding them of this their greateſt Concern; and "who to compleat their Happineſs, is always "ready, with the hazard of his Perſon, to ſupport his Subjects and Allies againſt their Common Enemy.

"And we eſteem it a further good Fortune, "in the time of publick Danger, That the "French King has taken thoſe Meaſures, which "will make it impoſſible for him to impoſe any "more upon the World, by Treaties ſo often "Violated: Neither can he hope any longer to "Cover his Ambitious Deſigns, or Juſtifie his "Uſurpations under the ſpecious Pretences of "Peace.

"Your Majeſty hath ſo juſtly repreſented the "Danger to which Europe is expoſed, by the "French King's placing his Grandſon on the "Throne of Spain; Your Majeſty is ſo juſtly "ſenſible, that under that pretence he is become Abſolute Maſter of the whole Spaniſh "Monarchy; and we are all ſo well apprized of "the dangerous Conſequence of this bold Attempt, that we think it moſt proper to aſſure "Your Majeſty in Your own Words, That we "are under the higheſt Impatience, that ſpeedy "and effectual Meaſures may be taken againſt "the undoubted Ambition of the French King.

"And as the Placing his Grandſon upon the "Throne of Spain is viſibly to the whole World, "the Cauſe of all thoſe Dangers mentioned in "Your Majeſty's Speech, and of the Breach of "the Balance of Power in Europe, which the "People of England are ſo deeply engaged to "Preſerve; ſo we humbly conceive the Remedy is as apparent as the Diſeaſe; and that "Your Majeſty, Your Subjects and Allies, can "never be ſafe and ſecure, till the Houſe of Auſtria be Reſtored to their Rights, and the Invader of the Spaniſh Monarchy brought to "Reaſon.

"To Conclude, Sir, As we humbly Addreſs'd "to Your Majeſty laſt Parliament to enter into "Alliances with the Emperor, the States of "Holland, and all other Princes and States, willing to Unite againſt the Power of France; ſo "we take the Liberty at this time to aſſure You, "we are all Willing and Zealous to lay hold of "this Opportunity, which the Bleſſing of God, "and Your Majeſty's Care, have put into our "Hands; Reſolving to make our utmoſt Efforts "for our own Security, and the Support of our "Allies; deſiring of Your Majeſty to reſt aſſured, That no time ſhall be loſt, nor any "thing wanting on our Part, which may Anſwer "the Reaſonable Expectation of our Friends "Abroad; not doubting but to ſupport the Re-1701. "putation of the Engliſh Name, when Engaged "under ſo Great a Prince, in the Glorious Cauſe "of Maintaining the Liberty of Europe.

"putation

Anſwer of His Majeſty.

His Majeſty return'd this good Anſwer. My Lords, I am extreamly pleaſed to find the juſt Sentiments you have of the preſent State of Affairs, and your Readineſs to do your Part in this great Conjuncture. I hope your joint Endeavours will be ſucceſsful for reſtoring the Balance of Europe, and Eſtabliſhing our Common Security.

State of Europe laid before the Commons.

To bring the Houſe of Commons into more effectual Meaſures for Eſpouſing and Supporting the Cauſe of a new War, the King commanded Mr. Secretary Vernon to lay before them the Copies of the Treaties of the Grand Alliance. 1. Treaty between the King of Denmark and the States-General, 15 June, 1701. 2. Secret Articles of Treaty with Denmark, 15 June, 1701. 3. Treaty between the Emperor, His Majeſty, and the States-General, 7 Sept. 1701. 4. A Convention between the King of England, the King of Sweden, and the States-General, 26 September, 1701. 5. Treaty between the King and the States-General, 11 November, 1701. All which were ſo well approved, that the Houſe immediately Reſolved on the 7*th.* of January, that a Supply be Granted to His Majeſty: And that whoſoever ſhall advance or lend into His Majeſty's Exchequer the Sum of Six hundred thouſand Pounds for the Service of the Fleet, ſhall be repaid the ſame with Intereſt at Six per Cent, out of the firſt Aids to be granted this Seſſion. And that whoſoever ſhall advance the further Sum of Fifty thouſand Pounds for the Subſiſtence of the Guards and Gariſons, ſhall be repaid in like manner. Then they took the State of the Navy into Conſideration, and ordered the Commiſſioners of the Admiralty to lay before that Houſe a State of the Fleet, and Condition of each reſpective Ship, and Place where they are; with a State of the Debt of the Navy, and an Eſtimate of what is neceſſary for the Extra-Repairs of it. And to encourage the People with the hopes of making good all former Deficiencies, they ordered an Account of the Debts of the Nation unprovided for, both Principal and Intereſt, to be laid before them. And further to juſtifie the Diſpoſal of Publick Funds, they ordered the Speaker to write to two of the Truſtees for the Forfeited Eſtates in Ireland, to attend the Houſe, and lay before them a full Account of their Proceedings in Execution of that Act. And what gave the greateſt Life and Spirit to a War Abroad, and Unity at Home, on Jan. 9*th.* they reſolved Nemine Contradicente, That Leave be given to bring in a Bill for a further Security of His Majeſty's Perſon, and the Succeſſion of the Crown in the Proteſtant Line, and Extinguiſhing the Hopes of the Pretended Prince of Wales, and all other Pretenders, and their open and ſecret Abettors. And on the next Day they farther Reſolved, "That an Humble Addreſs be "preſented to His Majeſty, that He will be gra- "ciouſly pleaſed to take care, that it be an Ar- "ticle in the ſeveral Treaties of Alliance with "His Majeſty and other Potentates, That no "Peace ſhall be made with France, until His Maje- "ſty and the Nation have Reparation for the great "Indignity offered by the French King, in owning "and Declaring the Pretended Prince of Wales King "of England, Scotland, and Ireland." To which the King gave a chearful Anſwer, That He would take Care of what they deſired. They Agreed at the ſame time, That the Proportion of Land-Forces to act in Conjunction with the Forces of the Allies, for making good the Alliances, be Forty thouſand Men, and Forty thouſand more for Sea-Service.

Reſolutions of the Commons.

Happy Proceedings.

They proceeded to a Bill for the Attainder of the pretended Prince of Wales. The Lords were intent upon the ſame Meaſures, and paſt a Bill for the Security of His Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and for maintaining the Succeſſion of the Crown, according to the two late Acts of Parliament; which they ſent down to the Commons, who after twice Reading let it lye upon their Table, as thinking their own depending Bills more effectual. Yet the chief of thoſe Bills, that for the further Security of His Majeſty's Perſon, &c. was likely to have been weakened, by an Inſtruction to the Committee, that they take Care that the Oath in the ſaid Bill mentioned be Voluntary. But the Queſtion being put upon this Offer, it paſs'd in the Negative. And on Jan. 22. they gave a much better Inſtruction to the ſaid Committee, That they do take care to make it equally Penal to compaſs or imagine the Death of Her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs Anne of Denmark, as it is to compaſs and imagine the Death of the King's Eldeſt Son and Heir, by the Statute of 25 Ed. III. The Houſe had a Multiplicity of other Buſineſs before them; as, the Produce of Cuſtoms; the Quakers Bill; the Forfeitures in Ireland; the more effectual Puniſhing of Vagrants; the Number, and Charge, and Condition of the Forces, to be fill'd up and rais'd for Sea and Land; the Affair of the Abuſes committed in the King's Brewhouſe at St. Catherine's; the Apothecaries Bill; the Care of Regulating Collections; the Examination of Shams and Stories told by William Fuller; and of a Letter ſent to the Speaker from one Dr. Stringer, pretending the Diſcovery of a Plot againſt the Government; with other intervening Affairs that were enough to retard the more important Buſineſs of the Nation; wherein notwithſtanding, they proceeded with a very vigorous Application. On Febr. 3. they Reſolved, That a Sum not exceeding Three hundred Fifty two thouſand Pounds be Granted to His Majeſty, for the Maintaining of Guards and Gariſons, and for providing for Officers upon Half-pay. And to quicken the Allies, as well as to ſupport the King, they Reſolved at the ſame time, "That an Humble Addreſs be "preſented to His Majeſty, that He will be "graciouſly pleaſed to interpoſe with His Allies, "that they may increaſe their Quota's of Land- "Forces to be put on Board the Fleet, in pro- "portion to the Numbers His Majeſty ſhall have "on Board His Fleet." To which His Majeſty was pleaſed to Anſwer, He would do it. When they had ſettled the Sums appropriated to the ſeveral Uſes of the War, on Febr. 7. they agreed on another Addreſs to the King, "That He "would be graciouſly pleaſed to provide for the "Half-pay Officers in the firſt place, in the Re- "cruits and Levies to be now made." To which He Anſwered, That it was always His Intention.

His Majeſty to encourage the Diſpatch of the Publick Affairs, came to the Houſe of Peers on Tueſday, Feb. 10. and gave the Royal Aſſent to a Bill which had formerly miſcarried, entituled, An Act for reviving and continuing an Act entituled an Act for the appointing Commiſſioners to take, Examine and Determine the Debts due to the Army, Navy, and the Tranſport-Service; and alſo an Account of Prizes taken during the late War.

Acts paſſed.

The Commons were diſpoſed to aſſert their own Privileges, as well as to conſult the common Good; and therefore on the controverted Election at Maidſton, between Thomas Bliſſe and Thomas Colepepper, Eſquires, they reſolved, That the latter had been Guilty of Corrupt, Scandalous, and Indirect Practices, in endeavouring to procure himſelf to be elected a Burgeſs; and being one of the Inſtruments in promoting and pre-

Commons aſſert their Privileges.

1701. preſenting the Scandalous, Inſolent, and Seditious Petition, commonly called the Kentiſh Petition, to the laſt Houſe of Commons, was guilty of promoting a Scandalous, Villanous and Groundleſs Reflection upon the ſaid Houſe of Commons, by aſperſing the Members with receiving French Money, or being in the Intereſt of France; for which Offence he ſhould be committed to Newgate, and His Majeſty's Attorney-General ſhould proſecute him for the ſaid Crimes.

Under this Indignation, they Reſolved on Febr. 26. that agreeable to the Opinions of a Committee appointed to conſider of the Rights, Liberties and Privileges of the Houſe of Commons, That to aſſert that the Houſe of Commons is not the only Repreſentative of the Commons of England, tends to the Subverſion of the Rights and Privileges of the Houſe of Commons, and the Fundamental Conſtitution of the Government of this Kingdom. 2. That to aſſert, that the Houſe of Commons have no power of Commitment, but of their own Members, tends to the Subverſion of the Conſtitution of the Houſe of Commons. 3. That to Print or Publiſh any Books or Libels reflecting upon the Proceedings of the Houſe of Commons, or any Member thereof, for, or relating to his Service therein, is a high Violation of the Rights and Privileges of the Houſe of Commons. 4. That it is the undoubted Right of the People of England, to Petition or Addreſs to the King for the Calling, Sitting, or Diſſolving of Parliaments, and for the Redreſſing of Grievances. 5. That it is the undoubted Right of every Subject of England, under any Accuſation, either by Impeachment or otherwiſe, to be brought to a ſpeedy Tryal, in order to be Acquitted or Condemned. And indeed, if every Vote of any Body of Men can create a Privilege to 'em, it is a great Favour to other Bodies and Perſons, that they are but ſhort and modeſt in thoſe Votes and Reſolutions.

His Majeſty was very ſenſible that the Proteſtant Succeſſion would not be ſo eaſily ſettled in Scotland, where it might be retarded on purpoſe for a Claim to an Independence on the Crown of England; and that nothing was more ſeaſonable at this Juncture than a Union of the Two Kingdoms; to which effect his Majeſty in a hearty Concern for the Common Good, writes this Letter to the Houſe of Commons, being diſabled from coming to the Houſe of Peers by his late Fall.

William R.

"HIS Majeſty being at preſent hindred, "by an unhappy Accident, from coming "in Perſon to his Parliament, is pleaſed to ſig- "nify to the Houſe of Commons by Meſſage, "what he deſigned to have ſpoken to Both Hou- "ſes from the Throne. His Majeſty in the firſt "Year of his Reign did acquaint the Parliament, "That Commiſſioners were authoriz'd in Scot- "land to Treat with ſuch Commiſſioners as "ſhould be appointed in England, of proper "Terms for Uniting the Two Kingdoms, and "at the ſame time expreſſed his great Deſire of "ſuch an Union: His Majeſty is fully ſatisfied, "that nothing can more contribute to the pre- "ſent and future Security and Happineſs of Eng- "land and Scotland, than a firm and entire Uni- "on between them; and he cannot but hope, "that upon a due Conſideration of our preſent "Circumſtances, there will be found a general "Diſpoſition to this Union. His Majeſty would "eſteem it a peculiar Felicity, if, during his "Reign, ſome happy Expedient for making Both "Kingdoms One, might take place; and is there- "fore extreamly deſirous, that a Treaty for that 1701. "purpoſe might be ſet on Foot; and does in the "moſt earneſt manner recommend this Affair to "the Conſideration of the Houſe.

His Majeſty's Misfortune and Indiſpoſition.

The Commons appointed firſt one and then another day to conſider of this Meſſage, but the ſhortneſs of his Majeſty's Life prevented their coming to any Reſolution; for his Majeſty being in a very infirm State of Health, was ſtill willing to continue his uſual Diverſions of Hunting; So on February 21. riding out from Kenſington to Hunt near Hampton Court, as he was putting his Horſe to the Gallop, the Horſe fell, and his Majeſty in the Fall broke his Right Collar Bone. Upon this fatal Accident, his Majeſty was carried to Hampton-Court, where the Bone was dexterouſly ſet by Monſieur Ronjat, Serjeant Surgeon to the King, who having felt his Majeſty's Pulſe told him he was Feveriſh, and that any other Perſon in his Condition would be let Blood; as for that, reply'd the King, I have now and then had a Hand-ake, and ſome ſhivering Fits this Fortnight, and had this very Morning a Pain in my Hand before I went out a Hunting. In the Afternoon the King finding himſelf eaſy, contrary to Advice, return'd to Kenſington, and ſlept almoſt all the way in his Coach: He came to Kenſington about Nine at Night, with his Right Arm tied up; and as he enter'd the Great Bed-Chamber he ſaw Dr. Bidloo, to whom he ſpake in this Manner: I have got a hurt in my Arm, pray come and ſee it. Soon after, he continued to this Effect; I was Riding in the Park at Noon, and while I endeavour'd to make the Horſe change his Walking into a Gallop, he fell upon his Knees: Upon that I meant to raiſe him with the Bridle, but he fell forwards to one ſide, and ſo I fell with my Right Shoulder upon the Ground. 'Tis a ſtrange thing, for it happen'd upon a ſmooth level Ground. Ronjat (his Majeſty's Surgeon) ſays, There's a little Bone broken; and indeed I feel ſome Pain towards my Back. At the ſame time he pointed with his Left hand to the Shoulder-blade, ſaying, There, there. Dr. Bidloo finding his Pulſe in good order, diſſuaded him from Bleeding, and after viewing the affected part, gave his Majeſty to know, that the Right Channel Bone was broke obliquely a little below its Juncture with the Shoulder-blade. Then his Majeſty ask'd, Is it was well ſet? And the Doctor anſwering, No; he ſaid to Mr. Ronjat, his Surgeon, Juſtify your ſelf, Monſieur Ronjat, Is it well ſet? Mr. Ronjat made anſwer, That it was well ſet; but that the jolting of the Coach, and the looſening of the Bandage had occaſion'd that Diſunion. After the Fracture was taken care of, his Majeſty went to Bed, and ſlept the whole Night ſo ſound, that the Gentlemen who ſat up with him, ſaid, they did not hear him complain ſo much as once.

His Majeſty ſeem'd in a fair way of doing well, till on Sunday, March 1ſt. a Defluxion fell upon his Knee, which was a great Pain and Weakneſs to him, and thought to be a very ill Symptom; he took it as a warning for the Diſpatch of Publick Affairs; and therefore the next Morning this Meſſage was ſent from the Houſe of Peers to the Commons. Mr. Speaker, The King hath granted a Commiſſion under the Great Seal, for paſſing the Royal Aſſent to thoſe Bills which have been agreed to by Both Houſes of Parliament; and the Lords Commiſſioned by the King do deſire that this Houſe would preſently come up with their Speaker, to be preſent at the Paſſing thereof. Then Mr. Speaker with the Houſe went up; and the Lord Keeper acquainted Both Houſes, That his Majeſty by an unhappy Accident had been prevented from coming in Perſon, and had Granted a Commiſſion to ſeveral Peers for paſſing the Bills therein mentioned; and

The King grants a Commiſſion to paſs ſome Bills.

1701. and that the Royal Aſſent was given by Commiſſion to theſe following Bills: 1. An Act for the Attainder of the Pretended Prince of Wales of High Treaſon. 2. An Act for Puniſhing Officers and Soldiers who ſhall Mutiny or Deſert in England and Ireland. 3. An Act for continuing an Act Entituled, An Act that the Solemn Affirmation and Declaration of the People called Quakers ſhall be accepted inſtead of an Oath in the uſual Form. 4. An Act for Naturalizing Charlelotte, the Wife of Hugh Boſcawen, Eſq;

Acts paſſed.

On Wedneſday, March 4. His Majeſty ſeem'd ſo well recover'd of the Lameneſs in his Knee, that he took ſeveral Turns in the Gallery at Kenſington; but at length finding himſelf tir'd and faint, he ſat down on a Couch and fell aſleep, which probably occaſion'd that Shivering Fit which ſoon after ſeiz'd him, and which turn'd to a Fever, accompany'd with Vomiting and a Looſeneſs: Thereupon the King thought fit to ſend for Sir Thomas Millington, who attended him to the laſt Moment, as did alſo Sir Richard Blackmore, Dr. Hutton, Dr. Hanes, Dr. Browne, Dr. Lawrence, Sir Theodore Colladon, Dr. Bidloo, and others of that Faculty. Theſe Learned Phyſicians Adminiſtred ſeveral Remedies to his Majeſty that gave him great Relief, and he continued indifferent well till Friday 6th. when his Vomiting and Looſeneſs return'd ſo violent upon him, that he refus'd to take any Suſtenance till Two of the Clock on Saturday Morning, when he ſupp'd a Cup full of Chocolate, that ſtaid with him; ſoon after they gave him a gentle ſleeping Draught to compoſe him, which had that good effect that he reſted for Three Hours after: In the Forenoon he ſupp'd ſome Broth and a Cordial, and found himſelf ſomewhat eaſier, tho' exceſſive Weak. His Mind was ſo fixt upon the Publick Intereſt, that he immediately order'd another Commiſſion, for Paſſing thoſe Bills that were ready for his Aſſent; and becauſe he was now ſo weak, that he could not write his own Name, a Stamp was prepar'd by which he Sign'd the Commiſſion. The Earl of Albermarle arriv'd at Kenſington from Holland about Five-a-Clock this Saturday Morning, and immediately went to wait on the King; who being willing at that time to be retir'd, bid his Lordſhip go and take ſome Reſt, and come to him ſome Hours after. The Earl attending accordingly, the King call'd him to one ſide of the Bed, where his Lordſhip gave him an Account of the Poſture of Affairs in Holland, at which His Majeſty ſeem'd well pleaſed. The King had order'd the Two Houſes to Adjourn till Six a Clock this Evening; when being met, the Royal Aſſent was given by Commiſſion to theſe Bills: 1. An Act for granting an Aid to His Majeſty, by laying Duties upon Malt, Mum, Cyder, and Perry. 2. An Act for the further Security of His Majeſty's Perſon, and the Succeſſion of the Crown in the Proteſtant Line, and extinguiſhing the Hopes of the pretended Prince of Wales, and all other Pretenders, and their open and ſecret Abettors. 3. An Act for enabling Lionel Earl of Orrery in the Kingdom of Ireland, by Sale of certain Lands and Tenements, to raiſe Money for Payment of his Debts, and ſettle other Lands to the Uſes and Purpoſes in that Act mentioned.

King's laſt Illneſs.

Acts paſſed by Commiſſion.

On Saturday Night an extraordinary Council was call'd, before whom the Phyſicians appear'd frequently, and at laſt acquainted them by Sir Thomas Millington, That all their Hopes, under God, depended upon the Uſe of thoſe Remedies they had already preſcribed, and upon His Majeſty's taking ſome little Suſtenance. Upon this the Duke of Devonſhire and ſeveral other Noblemen, deſir'd Dr. Bidloo to preſs His Majeſty to take ſomething: Accordingly, Dr. Bidloo ſpoke to Him in Dutch, and His Majeſty made Anſwer, Lift me up, and I'll take as much as I can of what is thought proper. Then He took ſome of Rawley's Cordial, with the Cordial Julep, and ſoon after ſome hot Claret. About the ſame time he thank'd Bidloo for the great Care he had taken of His Perſon; adding to this effect, If you and the other Learned Phyſicians have done all that your Art can do for my Relief, but finding all Means ineffectual, I ſubmit. About Three a Clock on Sunday Morning he call'd again for Dr. Bidloo, and complain'd to him, That He had had a bad Night, and could not ſleep: Upon that He ſat up, and lean'd on him, ſaying, I could ſleep in this Poſture, ſit nearer Me, and hold Me ſo for a little time. In this Poſture He ſlept about half an Hour, and when He awak'd, ſaid, You can bear Me up no longer. Then He was held up by Mr. Freeman on the Right Side, and Mr. Sewell on the Left, both of 'em having Pillows in their Arms. Soon after, the Phyſicians gave Notice, they were apprehenſive His Majeſty had not long to live: The Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who attended him in thoſe Extremes with his Prayers and proper Exhortations, adminiſtred the Sacrament to Him about Five in the Morning, which His Majeſty received with firm Attention, and very grave Devotion. The Lords of the Privy-Council, with many of the Nobility and Gentry, attended in the adjoining Apartments, and ſeveral of 'em were call'd in at times, to whom His Majeſty ſpoke a little, and then they withdrew. Amidſt all their Tears, His Majeſty did not betray the leaſt Concern or Fear of Death, but labour'd to ſpeak with Eaſe and Chearfulneſs; and particularly when he talk'd a little to the Lord Overkirk, He rais'd His Voice in a diſtinguiſhing Manner: He took Leave of all of 'em with a great deal of Satisfaction, and deliver'd to the Lord Albemarle the Keys of His Cloſet and Scriptore, telling him, He knew what to do with 'em. After Seven a Clock He took Bidloo by the Hand, and breathing with great Difficulty, He ask'd him, If this could laſt long? The Doctor anſwering, No; He ask'd again, How long? To which the Doctor replied, An Hour, or an Hour and half; though you may be ſnatch'd away in the twinkling of an eye. After that, while the Doctor was feeling His Pulſe, His Majeſty took him again by the Hand, ſaying, I do not dye yet; hold Me faſt. Having taken a little of the Cordial Potion, he faintly enquir'd for the Earl of Portland, who immediately came to Him, and placed his Ear as near as he could to His Majeſty's Mouth; but though His Majeſty's Lips were ſeen to move, his Lordſhip was not able to hear any diſtinct articulate Sound. About Eight a Clock, His Majeſty ſitting on his Bed in his Night-Gown, and in the Arms of Mr. Sewell, one of the Pages of the Back-Stairs, He lean'd a little backwards towards the Left, and ſhutting His Eyes, Expir'd with two or three ſoft Gaſps. As ſoon as the Breath was out of His Royal Body, the Lords Lexington and Scarborough, who were then in Waiting, order'd Monſier Ronjat to pull from the King's Left Arm a Black Ribbon, which tied next to His Skin a Gold Ring with ſome Hair of the late Queen Mary.

The King's Death.

Two Days after, the Royal Body was open'd; and the Phyſicians and Surgeons ſummon'd by the Privy-Council to aſſiſt at and examine the Diſſection, made this Report.

Report of the Phyſicians upon Diſſection.

1. Upon the viewing the Body before the Diſſection, the following Appearances were remarkable: The Body in general was much emaciated: Both the Legs up to the Knees, and a little higher, as alſo the Right Hand and Arm, as far as the Elbow, were conſiderably ſwell'd: There

Report of the Phyſicians.

1701. There was likewiſe on the Left Thigh near the Hip, a Bladder full of Water, as big as a ſmall Pullet's Egg, reſembling a Blain.

2. Upon opening the Belly, the Guts were found of a livid Colour, and the Blood contained in their Veſſels black. The Gut called Ileon had in ſome places the Marks of a ſlight Inflamation. The Stomach, Pancreas, Meſentery, Liver, Gall, Bladder, Spleen, and Kidneys, were all ſound, and without Fault.

3. In the Thorax or Cheſt, we obſerv'd, That the Right Side of the Lungs adher'd to the Pleura, and the Left much more: From which, upon Separation, there iſſued forth a quantity of purulent or frothy Serum. The Upper Lobe on the Left Side of the Lungs, and the part of the Pleura next to it, were inflam'd to a degree of Mortification: And this we look upon as the Immediate Cauſe of the King's Death. From the Ventricles of the Heart, and the greater Blood-Veſſels ariſing out of them, were taken ſeveral large, tough, fleſh-like Subſtances, of the kind call'd Polypus. The Heart it ſelf was of the ſmaller ſize, but firm and ſtrong.

4. Upon laying bare the Right Collar-Bone, we found it had been broken near the Shoulder, and well ſet. Some extravaſated Blood was lodg'd above and below the Fracture.

5. The Brain was perfectly ſound, and without any ſign of Diſtemper.

6. 'Tis very rare to find a Body with ſo little Blood as was ſeen in this: There being more found in his Lungs, than in all the Parts beſides put together.

Interment of His Royal Body.

The Royal Body having been Embalm'd, and for ſome time lain in State at Kenſington, the private Interment in a Method adjuſted by the Lords of the Privy Council, was perform'd on Sunday Night the 12*th* of April, in a Solemn Proceſſion from the Palace at Kenſington to the Collegiate Church of St. Peter's Weſtminſter, where the Royal Corps was laid into a Vault in Henry the VII*th*'s Chappel: And after the Office of Burial perform'd by the Dean of Weſtminſter, and an Anthem ſung by the Choir, Clarenceux King of Arms concluded in theſe Words, Thus it hath pleaſed Almighty God to take out of this Tranſitory Life to his Divine Mercy, the late moſt High, moſt Excellent, and moſt Mighty Monarch, William the Third, by the Grace of God King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, and Sovereign of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter. Let us beſeech Almighty God to bleſs and preſerve with long Life, Wealth, and Honour, and all Worldly Happineſs, the moſt High, Moſt Excellent, and moſt Mighty Princeſs, our Sovereign Lady Anne, now by the Grace of God Queen of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, and Sovereign of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter. God ſave Queen Anne. This being done, the ſeveral White Staff Officers of his late Majeſty's Houſhold broke their White Staffs, and threw them into the Vault or Grave.

Towards the beginning of May, the laſt Will which His Majeſty had made in the Year 1695, and depoſited in the Hands of Monſieur Schuylemberg, was open'd in the Preſence of Mr. Stanhope and M. Smettau, Envoys from the Queen of Great Britain and the King of Pruſſia, and before the Agents of the Prince of Frieſland, Anhalt, and divers others, with ſeveral Members of the Council of State, and ſome Commiſſioners appointed by the Court of Juſtice in Holland. The Copy of it follows: 1701.

His Majeſty's Laſt Will and Teſtament.

"We William by the Grace of God King of "Great Britain, Prince of Orange, &c. Conſider- "ing the Infirmity and Mortality of Man, the "Certainty of Death, and the Uncertainty of "the Time and Hour of it, have thought fit and "reſolv'd, before We leave this Earthly Vale, to "diſpoſe of the Temporal Goods which it hath "pleaſed God to give us, as well Feodal as Al- "lodial, by Virtue of a Grant from the States "of Holland and Weſt-Frieſland, bearing Date, "June the 15*th*. 1673. Recommending firſt "our Immortal Soul into the Merciful Hands of "God, and of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, and "our Mortal Body to the Earth; Revoking, "Cancelling and Annulling by theſe preſents, "all Teſtaments, Codicils, or other Diſpoſals, "which we have hitherto made or executed; "it being our Deſire that neither they, nor any "of them ſhould be valid, or in any wiſe take "Effect. But diſpoſing thus anew, We declare "that we have named and appointed, as by theſe "Preſents we do name and appoint, our Couſin "the Prince Friſon of Naſſaw, eldeſt Son of "Prince Caſſimur of Naſſaw, at preſent Stadt- "holder of Friſeland, our ſole and univerſal Heir "of all our Eſtates, as well Feodal as Allodial, "which we ſhall leave at the Day of our "Death, reſerving to our ſelves to appoint him "ſuch Guardians as we ſhall hereafter think "fit.

"We farther declare, that we reſerve to our "Selves the Power of Bequeathing under our "Hand and Private Sign Manual, ſuch Lega- "cies and Gifts, as we ſhall hereafter think fit; "Willing and Deſiring, that whether they be "Written by Us only, and Sign'd by Us, or "Written by another, and Sign'd by Us, they "may have the ſame Force and Validity as if "they were particularly Inſerted and Expreſs'd in "our Will. We declare all that is abovewrit- "ten, to be our Laſt Will and Teſtament; de- "ſiring that it may have, and take Effect, either "as Teſtament, Codicil, Donation becauſe of "Death, or in any other manner that may "render it moſt Valid and Effectual, notwith- "ſtanding any Neglects or Miſtakes that may "be committed in it, which We deſire may be "rectified and made good in the beſt manner "that is poſſible.

"Naming and Appointing for Executors, "of this our Laſt Will and Teſtament, the "States General of the United Provinces; De- "ſiring them to Accept of it, and to be pleaſed "to Execute this Our Laſt Will and Teſtament. "In Witneſs whereof, We have cauſed theſe Pre- "ſents to be Written, and have Signed them "with Our Hand and Sign Manual, and Seal'd "them with our Seal. At the Hague, October "the 18*th*. 1695.

The Seal of His Majeſty was put on the ſide of it, Impreſſed on Black Wax.

The Subſcription was as follows.

To Day being the 19*th of* October 1695. Before me Adrian Van Stervelt, Publick Notary with Allowance of the Court of Holland, and Reſiding at the Hague, in the preſence of the undernamed Witneſſes, Appear'd William III. by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, Prince of Orange, &c. being known to me the ſaid Notary, and being in 1701. perfect Health of Body, exhibited to me the ſaid Notary, this preſent Paper, Seal'd in Four Places with His Majeſty's Seal, and ſow'd with Black Silk, and ſaid that in it was contain'd the Laſt Will and Teſtament of His Majeſty, and deſir'd that it ſhould take Effect as ſuch, tho' all the Forms requiſite might not have been Obſerved.

This was done and paſſed at the Hague, in the Preſence of William Earl of Portland, and William de Schuylembourg, who were deſir'd to be Witneſſes to it, and who, together with His Majeſty and Me the ſaid Notary, Sign'd theſe Preſents, the Day and Year above-written.

It was Sign'd William, KING. Portland, William de Schuylembourg. And lower, in the Preſence of me Adrian Van Stervelt, Notary.

It agrees with the Original, Sign'd,
P. Van Aſſendelft.

By a Codicil Annex'd to this Will, the Lordſhip of Breevort, and 200000 Gilders were given as a Legacy to the Earl of Albemarle.

His Majeſty's Death was moſt reſpectfully Condol'd by the Queen, in this Declaration made at Her firſt ſitting in the Privy-Council at St. James's on March 8.

My Lords,

The Queen Condoles the Death of His late Majeſty.

I am extreamly ſenſible of the General Misfortune to theſe Kingdoms, in the unſpeakable Loſs of the King, and of the great Weight and Burden it brings in particular to My Self; which nothing would encourage Me to undergo, but the great Concern I have for the Preſervation of Our Religion, and the Laws and Liberties of My Country. All theſe being as Dear to Me, as they can be to any Perſon whatſoever, you may depend upon it, That no Pains nor Diligence ſhall be wanting on my Part to Defend and Support them; to Maintain the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line, and the Government in Church and State, as it is by Law Eſtabliſh'd.

I think it proper, upon this Occaſion of My firſt ſpeaking to you, to declare My own Opinion of the Importance of carrying on all the Preparations We are making to oppoſe the Great Power of France: And I ſhall loſe no Time in giving Our Allies all Aſſurances, That nothing ſhall be wanting on My Part, to purſue the true Intereſt of England, together with Theirs, for the Support of the Common Cauſe.

In order to theſe Ends, I ſhall always be ready to ask the Advice of My Council, and of Both Houſes in Parliament, and deſirous to Countenance and Employ all thoſe who ſhall heartily Concur and Join with Me in Supporting and Maintaining the preſent Eſtabliſhment and Conſtitution, againſt all Enemies and Oppoſers whatſoever.

Her Majeſty gave a farther Teſtimony of Her Grateful Reſpect to the Memory of King William, by this Letter to the States-General.

High and Mighty Lords, Our very good Friends, Allies and Confederates,

And pays a grateful Reſpect to His Memory.

"IT is not without a ſenſible Grief, that We "find Our ſelves obliged to Notifie to you, the "afflicting News of the Death of the moſt High "and moſt Mighty Prince, William the Third, "King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, "Our Deareſt Brother of Glorious Memory. "On Monday laſt He was attack'd with a Fever, "which increaſed ſo much the Days following, "that notwithſtanding all poſſible Remedies, "He died on Sunday about Eight a Clock in the "Morning. 'Tis certainly a very great Loſs to "all Europe, and particularly to your State, the "Intereſt of which He always maintain'd with "ſo much Valour, Prudence, Zeal and Con"duct. And ſince it hath pleaſed God, that We "ſhould ſucceed Him upon the Throne of theſe "Kingdoms, We ſhall likewiſe ſucceed Him in "His Inclinations to entertain a conſtant Uni"on and Friendſhip with your Lordſhips, and "to maintain all the Alliances which have been "made with your State, by Our ſaid Moſt Dear "Brother, and Our other Predeceſſors; and alſo "to concur with you in all ſuch Meaſures as "ſhall be neceſſary to preſerve the Common "Liberty of Europe, and to reduce the Power of "France within due Bounds. This is what We "would pray you to reſt aſſured of, and that "We ſhall always look upon the Intereſt of "England, and that of your State, to be inſepa"rable, as being united by ſuch Ties that can"not be broke, without the greateſt Prejudice "to both Nations. So We conclude, praying God, "High and Mighty Lords, Our very good Friends, "Allies and Confederates, to take you into his Holy "and Worthy Protection. 1701.

Given at Our Court at St. James's the Tenth Day of March, 1701. And of our Reign the Firſt.

Your very good Friend,
ANNE R.
And underneath,
Ja. Vernon.

His Memory Vilified by the French.

The firſt Reflections that were publickly made on the deceaſed King, came from the French Court, who had moſt Reaſon to be angry with Him. The Sieur de Bane, whom the French King had lately inveſted with the Title of Reſident in Holland, preſented a Memorial to the States; wherein he was to inſinuate, That by the Death of King William, "they were now to recover "their Time of Liberty, and be no longer un"der Violence and Conſtraint: For now their "Republick was Reſtored to it ſelf, and their own "Spirit was to Govern, and their own Intereſts "alone to be conſulted." The States in their Anſwer paid this profound Veneration to the Memory of their late Friend and Supporter.

Vindicated by the States of Holland.

"Their High and Mighty Lordſhips are very "much ſurprized to ſee, that this whole Memo"rial ſeems founded upon this, That they are "now more at Liberty to take ſuch Reſolutions "as they think Expedient, than formerly. "Doubtleſs this has reference to the Death of "His Majeſty, the late King of Great Britain, "of Immortal Memory: But herein the ſaid "Sieur Reſident has extreamly deceived himſelf, "for want of underſtanding the Conſtitution of "their Government. That he ought to know, "that their High and Mighty Lordſhips have "heretofore had as much Liberty as at preſent, "to Debate, and to take all ſuch Reſolutions as "they judged neceſſary and uſeful for the Good "and Preſervation of their State. It is true, "they cannot enough deplore their Misfortune, "to ſee themſelves deprived of the Direction "and Conduct of a Prince, whoſe Wiſdom, "Moderation, and Valour, will be famed as long "as the World endures. A Prince, whoſe He"roick Actions, and whoſe Merits from this "Republick will never be forgot: And in a "word, whoſe Death is lamented in this Coun"try by all Perſons whatſoever, from the Mean"eſt to the Higheſt. That the Councils of His "ſaid Majeſty having never had any other Aim, "both in Deed and in Word, than the Preſer"vation of their Liberty and Religion; and "their High and Mighty Lordſhips being en"tirely convinced of this Truth, as having found "the Benefit thereof, they are reſolved to fol"low the ſame Principles, and not to depart "from the Alliances contracted during the Life "of His ſaid Majeſty, but to perſiſt in the Mea"ſures

1701. "sures taken pursuant to those Alliances; and "in short, to make use at all times of the Means "God has put into their Hands, for Maintain- "ing the Liberty of Europe.

Slanders and Idle Stories. The little Tools of France were likewise working in England, to depreciate the Memory of the late King, by Libels, and Verses, and Healths, so very rude and impudent, that they shew'd nothing but sorry Wit and implacable Malice. But the deepest Fetch of Slander, was a confident Story invented by them, That the King had form'd a Plot to Exclude Her present Majesty from Her Succession to the Crown, and that at His Decease there were Papers found in His Closet to that purpose. This Sham was so industriously obtruded upon the People, that the House of Lords thought themselves concern'd to make Enquiry into this Matter, and to Vindicate the Honour of their late Royal Sovereign; which they did in this Noble Resolution, May 5th. 1702.

Refuted by the Lords. "Whereas their Lordships have been Inform- "ed, that there has been a Report spread a- "broad, that among the late King's Papers "some Paper or Papers have been found, tend- "ing to the Prejudice of Her present Majesty, "or Her Succession to the Crown: And where- "as the Lord President, the Lord Steward, the "Lord Chamberlain, the Earl of Marlborough, "and the Earl of Albemarle, who were the Per- "sons appointed by Her Majesty to inspect the "said Papers, have, at the Desire of the House "severally declared, That amongst the late "King's Papers, they did not see or find any "Paper or Papers in the least tending to the "prejudice of Her Majesty, or Her Succession "to the Crown, or to Her prejudice in any re- "spect whatsoever, or which might give any "Ground or Colour for such Report: It is "thereupon Resolved by the Lords Spiritual and "Temporal in Parliament Assembled, That the "said Report is Groundless, False, Villanous, "and Scandalous, to the Dishonour of the late "King's Memory, and highly tending to the "Disservice of Her present Majesty.

"It is Ordered by the Lords Spiritual and "Temporal in Parliament Assembled, that the "Matter of Fact aforesaid, and the Resolution "of this House thereupon, be laid before Her "Majesty by his Grace the Duke of Bolton, the "Earl-Marshal, the Earl of Radnor, the Earl of "Stamford, the Earl of Scarborough, and the "Lord Ferrers: And that they do humbly Desire "Her Majesty from this House, that Her Maje- "sty will give Order to Mr. Attorney-General, "to Prosecute with the utmost Severity of Law, "the Authors or Publishers of the above-men- "tioned, or such like Scandalous Reports."

In pursuance of this Resolution and Proceeding, the Duke of Bolton acquainted the House, that he and the other Lords had attended Her Majesty, and had presented their Lordships Resolution to Her. In Answer whereunto Her Majesty was pleased to say:

I am very Ready to do any thing of this Kind: I will give Directions to Mr. Attorney-General, effectually to Prosecute the Authors and Publishers of such false Reports.

Libelous Pamphlet. While their Lordships were doing this Justice to the Merits of King William, a Complaint was made to them of an Insolent Passage in the Preface of a Printed Book, entituled, The History of the last Parliament begun at Westminster the 10th. Day of February, in the 12th. Year of King William, A. D. 1700. The Passage was read to the House, as followeth: "And perhaps "there was a third Thing in prospect, of deeper "Reach than all these; which was, that should "it have pleased God for our Sins to have 1701. "snatch'd from us the King on the sudden, by "Chance of War, or other Fatal Accident, du- "ring the Tumult of Arms abroad, and the "Civil Disorders they had raised amongst us at "home, and a numerous, corrupt, licentious "Party throughout the Nation, from which the "House of Commons was sometimes not free; "they might entertain Hopes from the Advan- "tage of being at the Helm, and the Assistance "of their Rabble, to have put in Practice their "own Schemes, and to have given us a new "Model of Government of their own Projecti- "on; and so to have procured to themselves a "lasting Impunity, and to have mounted their "own Beast, the Rabble, and driven the sober "part of the Nation like Cattle before them.

"That this is no Conjecture, will readily ap- "pear to any considering Persons, from the "Treatment her Royal Highness the Princess of "Denmark, the Heiress Apparent to the Crown, "met with all along from them and all their "Party. They were not contented to shew her "a constant Neglect and Slight themselves, but "their whole Party were instructed not only to "treat her with Disrespect, but Spight: They "were busie to traduce her with False and Scan- "dalous Aspersions; and so far they carried the "Affront, as to make her at one Time almost "the common Subject of the Tittle-Tattle of "almost every Coffee-House and Drawing- "Room; which they promoted with as much "Zeal, Application and Venom, as if a Bill of "Exclusion had then been on the Anvil, and "these were the Introductory Ceremonies."

The Passage being thus read, it was thereupon Ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Assembled, That Francis Cuggan, Robert Gibson, and Thomas Hodgson, for whom the said Book was mentioned to be Printed, should, and were thereby required to Attend that House on the Saturday following at Eleven a Clock. But their Lordships in the mean time being inform'd, That Dr. Drake own'd himself to be the Author of the Book, and that he desired he might be appointed to attend at the same time; thereupon it was Order'd, That he should attend that House on Saturday the same Hour; when after reading the Order made the 6th. at the Desire of Dr. Drake for his Attendance that Day, the House took into their Consideration the above-mention'd Paragraph. After the Reading whereof, Dr. Drake, was call'd in; and the Order being read to him, the Lord Keeper ask'd him, What he had to say concerning the said Book: And the Book and the said Paragraph being shew'd him, he own'd he writ the Book, and that Paragraph in particular; and he thought he had just Reason to write it, he having heard her Highness talk'd of disrespectfully in almost every Coffee-House. Then he withdrew, and after some Debate, was call'd in again; and the Lord Keeper told him, The House was not satisfied with what he had said, but thought he trifled; and required him to acquaint the House with the Grounds of his writing that Paragraph. He answer'd, He found it mention'd in divers Anonymous Pamphlets publish'd at that time, and hop'd it was no hurt to Answer those Pamphlets, and desired time to recollect what those Pamphlets were: And then withdrew.

After some time he was called in again, and asked the following Questions, viz.

If he could Charge any Person or Persons in the Kingdom, with the Matters asserted by him in that Paragraph?

To which he Answered, That he did not know any such Person.

1701. The Author Queſtioned.

Then he was asked, Whether he had heard any other Perſon ſay, That they could charge any Perſon whatſoever with the Matters contained in that Paragraph?

He ſaid he did not know of any ſuch Perſon.

Being further ask'd, If he had any other Grounds beſides the Pamphlets, and what theſe Pamphlets were?

He ſaid, He had no other Grounds beſides the Pamphlets; and named the ſeveral Pamphlets following, as his Reaſon for Writing the ſaid Paragraph, viz. The Two Legion Letters: The Black Liſt: The Jura Populi Anglicani; and Toland's Reaſons for inviting over the Princeſs of Hanover. And being asked, If in any one of theſe Pamphlets there was any thing ſaid about ſetting aſide the Preſent Queen; He anſwered, He did not remember there was.

Then, he being withdrawn, the ſaid Paragraph was taken into Conſideration, and it was propoſed to paſs a Cenſure thereupon. And after Debate, this Queſtion was put, That a Cenſure ſhould be then put upon the ſaid Paragraph. It was reſolved in the Affirmative.

And cenſured by the Lords.

Then this Queſtion was put, That in the Preface of the Book, entituled, The Hiſtory of the laſt Parliament, begun at Weſtminſter the 10*th Day of* February, in the Twelfth Year of the Reign of King William, Anno Domini, 1700. there were ſeveral Expreſſions which were groundleſs, Falſe and Scandalous; tending to create Jealouſies in Her Majeſty of Her People, and to cauſe great Miſunderſtandings, Fears and Diſputes amongſt the Queen's Subjects, and to diſturb the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom. It was Reſolved in the Affirmative, in theſe Words, "It is Reſolved and Declared by the "Lords Spiritual and Temporal, in Parliament "Aſſembled, That in the Preface of a Book, "entituled, The Hiſtory of the laſt Parliament, "begun at Weſtminſter the 10*th Day of* Febru- "ary, in the Twelfth Year of the Reign of King "William, Anno Domini, 1700. (Written by "Dr. Drake, as he owned at the Bar) there "are ſeveral Expreſſions, which are Groundleſs, "Falſe, and Scandalous, tending to create Jea- "louſies in Her Majeſty of Her People, and to "cauſe great Miſunderſtandings, Fears and "Diſputes amongſt the Queen's Subjects, and "to diſturb the Peace and Quiet of the King- "dom." After which they order'd Her Majeſty's Attorney General, forthwith effectually to Proſecute the ſaid Dr. Drake for having Writ the ſaid Paragraph.

State of Religion.

We left the Convocation Sitting, and the Archbiſhop and Biſhops aſſerting and maintaining the Ancient Rights and Uſages of the Metropolitan and his Suffragans, in ſuch Provincial Aſſemblies. The Inferior Clergy did not care to proſecute the Argument in Writing, but on Monday the 31*ſt.* of March, firſt in a Committee, and then in a Houſe, they Voted their own Right to Adjourn themſelves; and then the Prolocutor went up with a Meſſage to the Archbiſhop and Biſhops, That they had conſidered of their Lordſhips Reply to the Paper brought up by the Lower Houſe, which did not give them the Satisfaction they deſired; and therefore they pray'd a FREE CONFERENCE with their Lordſhips, upon the Subject Matter in Debate. Then the Prolocutor and the Members with him withdrew, and being ſoon after called in, the Archbiſhop ſpoke to them as follows, We received your verbal Meſſage, and took the ſame into Conſideration. And whereas we ſent you Two Queſtions in Writing, to which you Anſwered in Writing; and we gave a large and diſtinct Anſwer to the ſame in Writing, in which there were ſeveral Quotations referring to Matter of Fact; We therefore expect an Anſwer in Writing to the ſame, and we ſhall then take the Matter into further Conſideration, and deſire no time may be loſt. The Prolocutor replying, that their Anſwer would take up about Twenty Sheets, his Grace took occaſion to declare, that he did not confine them to Length or Breadth, but expected their Anſwer in Writing.

Proceedings in Convocation.

But in ſpite of theſe Admonitions and Canonical Commands, a Majority in the Lower Houſe were reſolved not to join Iſſue in the Merits of the Cauſe, by any Intercourſe in Writing, but to inſiſt on the Parliamentary Practice of a Free Conference, a Word that never appeared in the Acts of any former Convocation. And therefore they would ſend no other Written Paper, but of Reaſons for not Writing; which they preſented on Saturday the 5*th.* of April.

Reaſons of the Lower-Houſe.

To the moſt Reverend his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and to the Right Reverend the Biſhops his Suffragans, of the Upper Houſe of Convocation.

The Clergy of the Province of Canterbury, Aſſembled in the Lower Houſe of the ſaid Convocation, in Anſwer to the Papers ſent down by your Grace and your Lordſhips to the Lower Houſe by their Prolocutor, on Saturday the 22d. of March laſt paſt, touching Adjournments and Prorogations.

Moſt Humbly Repreſent,

"THat your Grace and your Lordſhips ha- "ving ſent down Two Queſtions to "this Houſe by our Prolocutor, which we did "apprehend to be of the higheſt Importance "to our Sitting and Acting according to the "undoubted Uſage of former Convocations, we "conceive it became us not to ſuffer too long, by "our own Neglect, either in the exerciſe of our "Juſt Rights, or in the Opinion of your Grace "and your Lordſhips, for want of a ſpeedy "Anſwer to thoſe Queſtions.

"In conſideration whereof, this Houſe having "agreed to the Report of the Committee, and "thereby made it their own Act, did conceive "that the Prolocutor being ſent up to attend "your Grace and your Lordſhips therewith, "might Verbo tenus ſupply the want of any "Written Form. And in order to our giving "your Grace and your Lordſhips the moſt ſpeedy "Satisfaction herein that might be, we thought "this Method more adviſeable, then to have "deferr'd our Anſwer longer for want of Form; "Wherein nevertheleſs we did neither then de- "ſign, nor do for the future intend, to be want- "ing to your Grace and your Lordſhips.

"And we take this occaſion moſt humbly to "profeſs, that it is far from our Intentions, in "any reſpect to derogate from thoſe Juſt and "Legal Rights, which belong to your Grace "as Preſident of the Convocation of this Pro- "vince; being as unwilling to contribute to any "Injurious Diminution thereof, as we are de- "ſirous to continue in the Poſſeſſion and Uſe "of ſuch other Rights, as we conceive do juſt- "ly belong to us, who conſtitute the Lower "Houſe of Convocation, and which we ap- "prehend to be neceſſary to the preſervation "of the Fundamental Conſtitution thereof.

"And as to the Subject-Matter of the afore- "ſaid Papers, and the Arguments therein ob- "jected againſt our Report, whereunto the ſaid "Papers do refer; we crave leave moſt humbly "to acquaint your Grace, and your Lordſhips, "that having fully debated, and ſeriouſly conſi- "dered the weight of the ſame amongſt our "ſelves, we conceive our ſelves upon the whole

"Matter

1701. "Matter obliged to declare, that we find not "ſufficient Reaſon to recede from our ſaid Re- "port, or any Part thereof; but have been in- "duc'd to conclude, That the Lower Houſe of "Convocation has Power to Adjourn it ſelf. "Which Concluſion being the Reſult of mature "Deliberation, and neceſſary (as we conceive) "to be maintained for ſupporting the Funda- "mental Conſtitution of our Engliſh Convoca- "tion; we know not how to juſtify our ſelves, "either to the Friends or Enemies of that Con- "ſtitution, ſhould we, under the Force of ſuch "Convictions, depart from the ſaid Report, and "not profeſs our ſelves upon this Occaſion, to "be ready with all Dutifulneſs and Submiſſion, "to give ſuch farther Proof of each Part there- "of, in the regular way of a Free Conference, "as may ſhew the Inſufficiency of thoſe Obje- "ctions, which have been made againſt it, and "put a ſpeedy end to the preſent Controverſy. "We do therefore now again make our humble "Application to your Grace, and your Lord- "ſhips, to appoint a Time for ſuch Free Con- "ference in order thereunto.

"In which humble Suit we are the more "preſſing, on the Account of the near Ap- "proach of the Feſtival of Eaſter, and that Re- "ceſs which either Houſe may think fit to make "during that Solemnity. And the Arguments "and Inſtances in your Lordſhips Paper are ſo "numerous, that a particular Diſcuſſion thereof "in Writing, would not conſiſt with the joint "and earneſt Deſire of Both Houſes, as we "humbly apprehend, to have a Controverſy of "this Nature ſpeedily determin'd, in order to "their proceeding upon ſuch other Buſineſs as "the World may juſtly expect from them.

Proceedings of the ABp. and Bps.

In the mean time, his Grace and the Biſhops were willing to give all poſſible Satisfaction to the Inferior Clergy, upon their Complaint of Mr. Toland's Book: And, to go by Precedent, the ſafeſt Guide, they carefully enquir'd what had been formerly done in ſuch Caſes; and found in the Convocation of 1689. theſe Steps of Proceeding.

"Firſt, That there had been brought up a Meſ- "ſage from the Lower Houſe, on December the "11*th*, 1689. in theſe Words:" We are commanded by the Houſe humbly to repreſent to your Lordſhips, that there are ſeveral Books of very dangerous Conſequence to the Chriſtian Religion, and in particular to the Church of England; viz. Notes upon Athanaſius's Creed, and Two Letters relating to the preſent Convocation, newly come abroad; and to deſire your Lordſhips Advice, in what way, and how far ſafely, and without incurring the Penalties of the Stat. of 25. Hen 8. the Convocation may proceed towards preventing the Publiſhing the like Scandalous Books for the future, and for the inflicting the Cenſures of the Church, according to the Canons, upon the Authors of them.

"Secondly, That the Prolocutor was ordered "to bring the Books he complain'd of.

"Thirdly, That Seſſ. 12. after the Preſident "and Biſhops had conſider'd the ſaid Books, they "ſent for the Prolocutor, and declar'd to him, "that thoſe Books were of pernicious Conſe- "quence; but they could not yet find what "Power they had to proceed in this Matter.

"Fourthly, That in the laſt Seſſions of that "Convocation, the Preſident acquainted the "Lower Houſe, That he and the Biſhops were ſen- "ſible of the Evil of thoſe Books; but having con- "ſulted the Learned in both the Laws, they under- "ſtood that the particular Courts had Power to pro- "ceed againſt the Authors of ſuch Books; but that "they (as a Convocation) did not think it proper to "meddle in it: Or to that effect.

After the Report of theſe former Proceedings in a like Caſe, there was a Committee of Biſhops appointed to Examine Toland's Book; who accordingly read it, and found therein ſeveral Poſitions, as they conceived, of moſt dangerous Conſequence; and one in particular, which they look'd on as the Foundation of all the reſt; of which the Lower Houſe had not taken notice: And therefore they made this Report. 1701. Committee of Biſhops to conſider of Mr. Toland's Book.

"Upon Peruſal of the Book that was brought "up from the Lower Houſe, entituled, Chriſti- "anity not Myſterious, by John Toland, (which "ſaid Book was of the Second Edition, Printed "in the Year 1696.) we find in the Second "Chapter thereof, which is entitled, Of the Au- "thority of Revelation, theſe following Words, "Page 38, 39.

— Revelation was not a neceſſitating Motive of Aſſent, but a Mean of Information. — We ſhould not confound the way we came to the knowledge of a thing, with the Grounds we have to believe it. — A Man may inform me concerning a thouſand Matters I never heard of before, and of which I ſhould not ſo much as think, if I were not told: Yet I believe nothing purely upon his Word, without Evidence in the things themſelves. Not the bare Authority of him that ſpeaks, but the clear Conception I form of what he ſays, is the ground of my Perſuaſion.

"Which Words manifeſtly importing a Deni- "al of the Authority of Divine Revelation, and "particularly tending to the Subverſion of the "Chriſtian Faith: And the ſame Deſign alſo "appearing in many other Places of the ſaid "Book; ſome of which are remark'd in the "Paper affix'd to it by the Lower Houſe of "Convocation: It is therefore by the Archbi- "ſhop, with Conſent of his Brethren, recom- "mended to the Biſhop in whoſe Dioceſe the "Author of that Book doth or ſhall reſide, to "call him to Account for that Book; and as he "ſhall ſee Cauſe, to proceed thereupon, accor- "ding to the Eccleſiaſtical Laws.

"And it is alſo to be conſidered, what may "further be done for the Prevention of the Pub- "liſhing of the like pernicious Books for the "future.

When this Report of a Committee of Biſhops was made to the Upper-Houſe, they were all unanimouſly of Opinion to proceed (as far as legally they could) againſt the Book and the Author. But conſidering the Reſult in Convocation, 1689. founded on the Opinion of Lawyers; they alſo agreed before they went further, to adviſe with Council Learned in the Law; and to that End drew up the Two following Queries. 1. Whether the Convocation giving an Opinion concerning a Book, that it is Heretical, Impious, and Immoral, is contrary to any Law? 2. Whether the Words in the affix'd Paper, (before-recited) are ſuch an Opinion as is contrary to any Law? When their Lordſhips had received the Judgment of ſome Eminent Lawyers hereupon, they then drew up this Anſwer of the Archbiſhop and Biſhops, to the Repreſentation of the Lower Houſe of Convocation, concerning Toland's, and other Books. "Up- "on our conſulting with Council Learned in "the Law, concerning Heretical, Impious, and "Immoral Books, and particularly concerning "a Book of Toland's ſent up to us from the "Lower Houſe; We do not find, how without "a Licenſe from the King, which we have not "yet received, we can have ſufficient Authori- "ty to Cenſure Judicially any ſuch Books: But "on the contrary, we are adviſed, That by ſo "doing, both Houſes of Convocation may in- "cur the Penalties of the Statute of 25. Hen- "ry VIII." Queſtions in Law.

1701. On the ſame Day, April the 8th. another Paper was delivered to the Prolocutor and Clergy, Entitled, The Anſwer of the Archbiſhop and his Brethren the Biſhops, to the Paper brought up by the Prolocutor from the Lower Houſe, upon Saturday April the 5th. 1701.

Anſwer of the Archbiſhop and Biſhops to a Paper of the Lower Houſe.

" The Archbiſhop, Preſident of the Convo-
" cation of this Province, and his Brethren the
" Biſhops do declare, that they hold themſelves
" obliged to Maintain and Preſerve the Ancient " Fundamental Conſtitution of the Chriſtian
" Church, the Government and Diſcipline of
" the Church of England, as now by Law Eſta-
" bliſhed, and all the Ancient Uſages of Con-
" vocation.

" And as they will always have a due Regard
" to the Juſt Rights of the Lower Houſe in all
" Points; ſo they neither ought nor can depart
" from thoſe Rights which are veſted in them
" by the Conſtitution of the Catholick Church
" in General, and of the Church of England
" in particular: Which they find by Immemorial
" Cuſtom and Practice have belong'd to the " Archbiſhop and Biſhops of this Province, and
" accordingly have been exerciſed by them in " the Upper Houſe.

" And therefore the Archbiſhop and Biſhops,
" having carefully ſearched the Regiſters, and
" followed the regular Methods and Precedents
" they found therein, cannot but take notice,
" that the Proceedings of the Lower Houſe,
" have been Irregular, and without Precedent
" in ſundry Particulars. Such as their appoint-
" ing Committees of the whole Houſe, which
" we do not find to have been ever done before:
" And their aſſuming a Power in that Houſe,
" to give Leave to their Members to be Ab-
" ſent, which of Right belongs to the Preſident
" only.

" But the Inſtances now chiefly to be con-
" ſidered, are thoſe in the laſt Paper brought up
" by the Prolocutor.

" Whereas the Archbiſhop and Biſhops had " given a full and diſtinct Anſwer to every par" ticular, contain'd in a ſhort Paper, brought
" up by the Prolocutor from the Lower Houſe,
" concerning Adjournments and Prorogations:
" They expected that either they would have
" acquieſced in that Anſwer, or ſhew'd a Rea-
" ſon why they would not, by returning at leaſt
" ſome kind of Reply to the Arguments and
" Authorities by which that Anſwer was ſup-
" ported and confirmed.

" The Lower Houſe did neither of theſe, but
" to our great Surprize ſent up a Paper, in " which they declare that they are come to Re-
" ſolutions and Concluſions; and then ſay, that
" they conceive thoſe Reſolutions are neceſſary
" to be maintain'd, and they cannot under the " force of theſe Convictions, depart from
" them; and all this without offering any Rea-
" ſon on their ſide, or Anſwering any of ours.

" This is a Method altogether new, and ſuch
" as can never make a fair End of any Contro-
" verſy.

" The way which they propoſe to put an " end to the Matter, is by a Free Conference;
" which it ſeems ſtrange that they ſhould ask,
" after their having declared, that they are
" come to Reſolutions and Concluſions, which
" they cannot conceive neceſſary to be main-
" tained by the Force of their Convictions.
" This Declaration of theirs was very irregular,
" if the Regular way is that of a Free Confe-
" rence, as they call it in the ſame Paper.

" But before they had called this the Regular
" way, they ought to have ſhewn ſome In-
" ſtances of it in Former Convocations; where
" in all the Regiſters there does not appear ſo 1701.
" much as one Inſtance of any Conference de-
" ſired by the Lower Houſe: They have indeed
" been call'd up Ad Colloquium upon occaſion.
" And ſome here preſent cannot but remember,
" that they were ſo called up in the Convoca-
" tion in the Year One Thouſand Six Hundred
" Eighty Nine, by the Biſhop of London, being
" then Preſident in the Vacancy of the See of " Canterbury. But the Conſequences of it were
" ſuch as do by no means encourage the doing
" of the like at this preſent time.

" But the greateſt Attempt of Innovating
" upon the Conſtitution of the Convocation,
" appears in the Concluſion of that Paper;
" wherein it is expreſſed, that either Houſe may
" make a Receſs during the approaching Feſti-
" val of Eaſter: Which Words imply that the " Lower Houſe if they think fit, may by
" their own Authority make ſuch a Receſs
" (as they word it) apart from the Upper
" Houſe, and without Order from the Preſi-
" dent. This is a Claim ſo altogether New,
" that it was never heard of before, and here it
" ſtands without any pretence of Law or Uſage
" to ſupport it. But beſides, this is ſuch a ma-
" niſeſt Violation of the Preſident's Authority,
" as cannot be comply'd with, nor ſuffered,
" without deſtroying the Fundamental Conſti-
" tution of an Engliſh Convocation.

When theſe Two Anſwers of the Archbiſhop and Biſhops had been read by the Publick Notary to the Prolocutor and Lower Clergy call'd up to the Jeruſalem-Chamber, and Copies of both delivered to them; Then the Archbiſhop ſpoke in this manner.

Speech of his Grace the Preſident.

Mr. Prolocutor, and you the reſt of the Clergy,

" I have obſerved on ſeveral occaſions a new
" method of Proceeding in the Lower Houſe,
" with a deep Senſe of the ill Effects it may " have, if it were ſuffered to go on. We have
" born long with it: But ſince you have de-
" clared to us, that you have fix'd on Reſolu-
" tions, we think, contrary to that Authority
" that by Law and Cuſtom, as well as by our
" Character, is veſted in us; we muſt now
" ſpeak more plainly to you.

" We have begun no new Practice in this
" Convocation; but we muſt tell you, we have " found you attempting many Innovations. We " do earneſtly deſire you to conſider theſe
" Things more maturely; and not to force us
" to Proceedings, that will be very uneaſy to
" our ſelves, as well as to you.

" We have many Enemies on all Hands, and
" they wait for nothing more than to ſee the " Union and Order of this Church, which is
" both its Beauty and its Strength, broken by
" thoſe who ought to preſerve it.

" For the maintaining the Epiſcopal Autho" rity is ſo neceſſary to the Preſervation of the " Church, that the reſt of the Clergy are no
" leſs concerned in it, then the Biſhops them-
" ſelves.

" I have thought fit, with the reſt of my " Brethren, to Prorogue the Convocation for
" ſome time. It is a Seaſon of Devotion, and
" I pray God it may have a good Effect on all
" our Minds.

" We, on our part, are willing to forget
" all that is paſt, and to go on with you, at
" our next Meeting, as well as at all times,
" with all Tenderneſs and Paternal Affection,
" in all ſuch Things as ſhall conduce to the " good of this Church. Remember the Sen-
" tence that our Bleſſed Saviour has pronounced
" againſt them by whom Offences come: And

" conſider

1701. "consider seriously with your Selves, what an "Offence it will give, if you should break the "Subordination of Presbyters to their Bishops, "which has been observed not only in the Pri- "mitive Church, but in all the Convocations "of this Province, down to the present Time. "Above all things remember the great Account "we must one Day give to the chief Pastor and "Bishop of our Souls.

Convocation Prorogued. This Speech being ended, the Archbishop continued and prorogued the Convocation to Thursday, May 8th. But the Prolocutor with several of the Lower House, returned to Hen. VIIth's Chappel, (tho' divers Members refused to join with them, as well knowing the whole Convocation was legally Prorogued, and all things were to continue in the same State till the next Synodical Day) and sate there as a House for some time, and then Adjourn'd themselves to the next Day. An Affectation of Independence that was unknown to former Convocations, and never before attempted by any Presbyters in any Episcopal Church.

The Clergy keep intermediate Sessions.

For this Irregularity, a calm Reproof was given on the next Synodical Day, 8. May, in these Words.

Speech of the President. "Mr. Prolocutor, We are satisfied, that what- "soever has been done in the Lower House, as "a House, from the time that the whole Con- "vocation was Prorogued in this Place upon "the Eighth of April, to this present Eighth of "May, is not only Null, as being without Au- "thority, but of very dangerous Consequence "to the Constitution of our Church, and to the "Sacred Synod of this Province, and particu- "larly to the Lower Clergy, whom that House "represents. We have all possible Tenderness "for them, and shall ever join in any Methods "that shall appear just and proper for Maintain- "ing their true Rights and Liberties, and for de- "fending them from all Difficulties and Dan- "gers.

"And therefore we cannot receive from you, "either by word of Mouth, or in Writing, any "thing done by the said House, as a House, in "the Interval aforesaid.

"We hope you will duly consider these "Things, and may God so direct you, that you "may never engage in any Proceeding, that "may be prejudicial to our Holy Mother the "Church of England.

Proceedings of the Lower Clergy. This being done, the Prolocutor holding a Paper in his Hands, spoke to this effect; I am commanded by the Lower House to bring up this Paper, and I do present it as the Act of the House this Day: And then he laid upon the Table a very long Paper, as an Answer of the Lower House to two Papers read to them in Jerusalem-Chamber, upon Tuesday, April 8. 1701. and then deliver'd to the Prolocutor. Wherein they tell their Lordships, there was no Occasion to consult Lawyers in the Case of Toland's Book; and had there been occasion for a License, his Grace might easily have obtain'd it from His Majesty, or elsewhere; and therefore they cannot but repeat their humble Suit, that their Lordships would not finally decline giving that Assistance that had been already desir'd by the Lower House: Lest otherwise, what was intended for the Service of Religion, should be turn'd to its Disadvantage, and a very bad Use made of their Lordships omitting to express any Mark of Dislike to so ill a Book.

Then they proceed to justifie their own Proceedings against the Objections of their Lordships, which (they say) had charg'd them with many Irregularities; and conclude with recriminating in a Complaint of some Grievances they suffer'd from the Upper-House.

This Paper being left on the Table, was not thought fit to be Read; yet a Reply was prepared by a Committee of the Bishops to this Effect. "That with regard to the Proceedings about "Toland's Book, they thought it not only safest "for them, but withal most for the Interest of "the Church and Religion, that in this Matter "as well as in others of like Importance, they "should govern themselves by the Precedents of "former Convocations, and maturely consider "how far their Authority reach'd, before they "made use of it: For to attempt to extend their "Power beyond the Limits which the Laws of "the Land, and the Practice of Convocations "have set, would be very unsafe and imprudent, "considering the Penalties and dangerous Con- "sequences to which such an Attempt might "expose them and the whole Clergy. Not- "withstanding, the Archbishop and Bishops be- "ing unanimously Resolved to do all that was "in their Power against Toland's Book, and the "wicked and dangerous Doctrines therein con- "tained, had appointed a Committee to Exa- "mine it, who found several Positions of most "dangerous Consequence; and one in particu- "lar, which they look'd upon as the Foundati- "on of all the rest, of which the Lower House "had taken no Notice. As to a Royal License, "such have been always granted, ex mero motu; "not upon any Petition of the Clergy for it, "His Majesty being the propereſt Judge when "to grant it, and when not; tho' considering "the Treatment the License His present Maje- "sty and the late Blessed Queen granted to that "Convocation, 1689. met with, it could not "be thought Advisable to desire another, till a "better Spirit had appear'd in those of the Low- "er House, than either then did, or now doth. "—But as the Archbishop and Bishops have se- "veral times endeavour'd to procure the passing "of a Law to regulate the Press, and thereby "to prevent the publishing such impious Books, "tho' hitherto without the desir'd Success; so "they will never be wanting in the like Endea- "vours for the future. In the mean time, the "particular Bishop in whose Diocese Toland, or "any such Author lives, is indeed (as the Law "now stands) the proper Person to proceed a- "gainst him. And he hath sufficient Power to "do so; and now knowing the sense of all his "Brethren in this Matter, it is not to be doubt- "ed, but that he will make use of it as becomes "him. But if he who hath such Power does "not make use of it, he alone ought to bear the "Blame of it, and not the Upper House of "Convocation, who for ought yet appears, have "no such Power. — Then as to the Irregularities "charg'd upon the Lower House, their Lord- "ships take notice, that in their Paper, the "Lower Clergy do solemnly profess, That they "do not in the least desire that his Grace or their "Lordships should depart from any of their Just "Rights; and the Archbishop and Bishops can- "not but wish, their Actions were agreeable to "this Profession: But those have been quite "contrary, and carried up to higher Degrees of "Disrespect, and Invasion of the Metropo- "litan and Episcopal Rights, (even such Rights "as are supported by the Law of the Land, and "the King's Writ, than ever was attempted by "any Lower House of Convocation before this "time, or perhaps by any Body of Presbyters, "where Episcopacy was settled and acknowledg'd "of Divine and Apostolical Institution; unless "it were by such Presbyters, as design'd to de- "stroy that Institution, which the Archbishop "and Bishops are fully persuaded the Body of "the Lower House do not, though the Actions

"——— And their Lordſhips give the particular "Inſtances of their exorbitant Claims and Pra- "ctices, In ſeparate Adjournments; in appoint- "ing Committees of the whole Houſe; in giv- "ing Leave, as a Houſe, to their Members to "be Abſent; in not Anſwering the Archbiſhop "and Biſhops in Writing when ſo requir'd; in "demanding a Free Conference; in pretending a "Power of making a diſtinct Receſs, and ſome "other Practices; which together with ſome "Reports rais'd upon 'em, have given the great- "eſt Blow to this Church that hath been given "it, ſince the Presbyterian Aſſembly that ſat at "Weſtminſter in the late times of Confuſion. "——— God grant theſe Reports and the pre- "ſent Conduct of divers in the Lower Houſe "may not bring on the like again.

Committee of Both Houſes appointed by the Preſident.

Amidſt theſe unhappy Diſputes, the Archbiſhop and Biſhops hoped it might be one Method to compoſe them, if a Committee of Both Houſes do inſpect the Books and Acts of the preſent Convocation; and therefore on the ſame 8th of May, a Committee of Five Biſhops was appointed to meet another like Committee of the Lower Houſe (not exceeding Ten) to inſpect all the Acts of each Houſe in this preſent Sacred Synod or Convocation, and to report their Judgments thereupon. But in a new and unprecedented way of Contempt, the Lower Houſe anſwered, That they did not think fit to appoint ſuch a Committee: And when the Schedule of Prorogation was (as uſual) brought down to the Lower Houſe, to be intimated to them by the Prolocutor, he refuſed to intimate the Archbiſhop's Schedule, and Adjourn'd the Houſe to the next day; whereas the Archbiſhop's Prorogation was to Friday 16. May. So when the ſaid Synodical Day came, thoſe Members who had acted in conformity to the regular Precedents, and with due Submiſſion to the Archbiſhop and Biſhops, knew not how to appear any longer in the Lower Houſe, till this Form of Addreſs was preſented in their Name to the Preſident, by the Honourable and Reverend George Verney, D. D. one of the Proctors for the Clergy of the Dioceſe of Lincoln.

Refuſed by the Lower Houſe.

Addreſs of ſome Members.

May it pleaſe your Grace,

"I am deſir'd and impower'd by ſeveral Mem- "bers of the Lower Houſe of Convocation, "humbly to preſent an Addreſs to your Grace, "that you would be pleas'd not to interpret "their Abſence this day from their Attendance "in Hen. VII's Chappel, as any the leaſt diſreſpect "of your Grace's Prorogation of the late Con- "vocation, to which we ſhall, as we are by "Law and Conſcience bound, always pay due "Obedience, and which we do apprehend was "to this Day. And the Reaſon upon which we "preſume to abſent our ſelves, is, becauſe your "Grace's laſt Prorogation was not intimated to "the Lower Houſe of Convocation by the Pro- "locutor: Whereupon we humbly conceive that "ſhould we meet this Day, and concur in any "Convocational Act, by Virtue of any other "Prorogation than what iſſues from your Grace, "we ſhould involve our ſelves in a Practice "which we utterly diſavow, and which we ap- "prehend would be of dangerous Conſequence "to the Church of England, and the Rights of "the Convocation of your Grace's Province of "Canterbury. And I further humbly beſeech "your Grace to permit ſuch of our Members of "the Lower Houſe of Convocation as ſhall de- "ſire it, leave to ſubſcribe their Names to this "Addreſs; to which in all Humility and Sincerity I do Subſcribe my own Name this 16th day "of May, 1701. 1701.

Proceedings of the Lower Houſe.

The Lower Houſe had employ'd themſelves in drawing up a Repreſentation of their Senſe upon the Biſhop of Sarum's Expoſition of the XXXIX Articles of the Church of England, which they brought up to the Lords on May the 30th. when the Archbiſhop read to them a Paper, drawn up by conſent of the Biſhops, and approved by them, as followeth: If you have any thing to offer, we cannot receive it, till the late Irregularity of refuſing to meet the Committee of Biſhops, to inſpect the Books of this Convocation, be ſet Right. A Copy of this Paper at the Prolocutor's Deſire was given to him, and he and his Attendants making a ſhort Step to the Lower Houſe, came back and waited in the Chamber adjoining to Jeruſalem Chamber. Then Humphry Lord Biſhop of Bangor, by direction of the Archbiſhop, and with conſent of the Biſhops, went out to ask the Prolocutor this following Queſtion, Whether the Meſſage he had now to bring in was to ſet the Irregularity complain'd of right? His Lordſhip returning into the Houſe, did acquaint his Grace and the reſt of the Biſhops, that the Prolocutor told him once, That it was ſomething in order to ſet that Irregularity right; then as recollecting ſaid, It was concerning that Irregularity. Upon which the Prolocutor and his Attendants were called in, and his Grace ſpoke thus, If you have any thing to offer in order to the ſetting right the Irregularity we have complained of, we are ready to receive it. The Prolocutor ſaid, It was ſomething concerning it, and ſo fell to reading a Paper in theſe Words, The Paper that the Lower Houſe order'd the Prolocutor to preſent to your Grace and your Lordſhips, was their Humble Repreſentation concerning a Book, entituled, An Expoſition of the XXXIX Articles of the Church of England, and hath no Relation to the ſuppoſed Irregularity your Grace and your Lordſhips think fit to complain of; of that we are ready to give your Lordſhips ſatisfaction, when thereunto called. And in the mean time moſt humbly repeat our Requeſt, that your Grace and your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to receive the ſaid Paper. The Archbiſhop and Biſhops were ſurprized at the Prolocutor's way of introducing ſuch a Paper; and the Biſhop of Bangor who had been very cautious in bringing in the Meſſage from the Prolocutor's Mouth, found it neceſſary to make a Complaint againſt the Prolocutor, in this Writing Subſcribed by his own Hand. I asked Dr. Hooper, whether the Meſſage he had now to bring in was to ſet the Irregularity complained of right? he told me once, it was ſomething in order to ſet that Irregularity right; and then recollecting, ſaid, It was concerning that Irregularity; but that he was to deliver his Meſſage to his Grace, and muſt not drop it at the Door. When he was called in, it appeared that his Meſſage was not to ſet the Irregularity right, but concerning another Matter, which I have reaſon to complain of, that Dr. Hooper has prevaricated in this Matter.

That other Matter was a Paper offered by the Prolocutor, thus entitled, To the moſt Reverend Father in God Thomas Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and to the Right Reverend the Biſhops his Suffragans. The Humble Repreſentation of the Lower Houſe of Convocation.

"Whereas

Repreſentation of the Lower Houſe againſt the Biſhop of Sarum's Expoſition, &c.

"Whereas a Book hath been lately Publiſhed, entituled, An Expoſition of the XXXIX Articles of the Church of England, by GILBERT Lord Biſhop of SARUM, which the Author declares to have paſſed the Peruſal of both the Archbiſhops, and ſeveral Biſhops and other Learned Divines, and ſuggeſts their Approbation of it: And whereas we think it our Duty, as much as in us lies, to ſecure the Doctrines contained in thoſe Articles, from any Attempts that may be made againſt them: We moſt humbly offer to your Grace and your Lordſhips the Senſe of this Houſe, which is as follows.

"I. That the ſaid Book tends to introduce ſuch a Latitude and Diverſity of Opinions, as the Articles were fram'd to avoid.

"II. That there are many Paſſages in the Expoſition of ſeveral Articles, which appear to us to be contrary to the true meaning of them, and to other receiv'd Doctrines of our Church.

"III. That there are ſome Things in the ſaid Book, which ſeem to us to be of dangerous Conſequence to the Church of England as by Law eſtabliſhed, and to derogate from the Honour of its Reformation.

"All which Particulars we humbly lay before your Lordſhips, praying your Opinion herein.

After a ſhort time of Withdrawing, the Prolocutor and thoſe with him were again call'd in; and his Grace told them to this effect. "That "he and his Brethren could not depart from "their Reſolution, Not to receive any thing "from the Lower Houſe, till the late Irregularity complain'd of were ſet right. That he "and his Brethren would be always ready to "ſhew their Affection and their Zeal for the "Good of the Church: and they would have "been glad to have ſhewn it more particularly "in the Caſe of Toland, but that there had "been ſeveral Obſtructions and Stumbling-Blocks "laid in the way."

Proteſtation of ſome Members.

Then appear'd the Dean of St. Paul's, and ſeveral other Members of the Lower Houſe, and exhibited a Complaint in Writing, Subſcribed with their own Hands in the following Form.

To his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Reverend Biſhops his Suffragans.
May the 30*th.* 1701.

"We whoſe Names are under-written do "humbly beg leave to repreſent to your Grace, "That whereas we did move in the Lower Houſe "of Convocation, that we might enter our "Proteſtation againſt all Intermediate Seſſions "of the Lower Houſe, betwixt your Grace's "ordinary Prorogations: The Queſtion being "put upon the ſaid Motion, it paſſed againſt "us in the Negative. And a farther Motion "being made, and the Queſtion being put, "whether the ſaid Vote ſhould be Regiſtred, it "likewiſe paſſed againſt us, that it ſhould not "be Regiſter'd as yet:

"Whereupon we humbly beg Leave, that we "may be admitted to enter our Proteſtations "againſt all ſuch Intermediate Seſſions.

Thomas Little, Proctor for the Church of Norwich.

1701.

In the next Seſſion, June the 6*th.* the Archbiſhop ſpoke thus to the Prolocutor, "I muſt "inform you, that till the Irregularity already "complain'd of be ſet right, I cannot accord- "ing to the Order of this Houſe receive any "thing from you. But it appearing from the "Paper you Read upon the 30*th* Day of May "laſt, that you had ſomething to offer relating "to the Lord Biſhop of Sarum's Expoſition of "the XXXIX Articles, which the ſaid Lord "Biſhop of Sarum has earneſtly requeſted may "be brought up to this Houſe; Therefore I "and my Brethren, without prejudice to our "former Order, and at the repeated Requeſt "of the Lord Biſhop of Sarum, are now willing "to receive the ſaid Paper."

Archbiſhop's Speech.

"To which the Prolocutor Anſwered, That the Paper, which he had now to offer was concerning the Irregularity, and that he had not brought up any Paper relating to the Biſhop of Sarum. Whereupon his Grace order'd him to fetch up that Paper, while he left the other, which at command of the Archbiſhop was read by the Regiſter, and was as follows.

Repreſentation of the Lower Houſe in defence of their Proceedings.

To the moſt Reverend his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Right Reverend the Biſhops his Suffragans, in the Upper Houſe of Convocation.

The Clergy of the Lower Houſe of the ſaid Convocation, in Anſwer to the Declaration made by your Lordſhips on the 30th. paſt, moſt humbly repreſent,

"That we were ſurprized to find, when we "came up that Day with Buſineſs to your Lord- "ſhips, that your Lordſhips had conceived a "Diſpleaſure againſt us for declining to meet "the Committee of Biſhops, appointed by your "Lordſhips on May the 8*th.* to inſpect the Acts "of both Houſes of this preſent Convocation "to that Time; and that your Lordſhips had "judged this an Irregularity, and thereupon "formed a Reſolution to receive nothing offer'd "by us, till it was ſet right.

"We could have wiſhed that your Lord- "ſhips had taken the Opportunity of your "Seſſion next enſuing the 8*th.* and held on "May the 16*th*, to have acquainted us with that "your Diſpleaſure, and that your Lordſhips "had been then pleaſed to have demanded "the Reaſons for our ſo acting, before you "had proceeded to any Determination againſt "us.

"Had your Lordſhips thought it convenient "to have taken that Method, we ſhould have "offer'd the following Reaſons, which we now "do in our Juſtification.

"That we of the Lower Houſe, being a di- "ſtinct Houſe, with a Power of Diſſenting "from the Propoſals of the Upper, conceive "our ſelves entirely at Liberty to admit or de- "cline the Appointment of Committees from "time to time as we ſhall ſee fit. And particu- "larly in this Caſe, we conceive that the only "regular way, your Lordſhips knowing the 1701. "Tranſactions of our Houſe, is by our voluntary laying them before you; and if your Lordſhips demand the View of our Journals, as of "Right, we are thereby the more obliged to inſiſt upon this our Liberty.

"That your Lordſhips having mentioned no "particular Acts deſir'd to be inſpected, nor aſſign'd any particular Reaſon for ſuch Inſpection, we could ſee no ground for ſuch a Committee, nor give any Inſtructions for the Management of the Matter to be conſider'd by it. "We might alſo have added, that it was not unreaſonable in us to expect, that your Lordſhips "ſhould put into our poſſeſſion the Journals of "the Lower Houſe of Convocation, of the "Years 1586.1588,1640,1661, &c. which have "been requeſted by us, and which of Right we "conceive do belong unto us, before your Lordſhips would think fit to require the Inſpection "of our preſent Proceedings.

"That notwithſtanding this, the Reſpect and "Duty we owe your Lordſhips had prevailed "with us to have comply'd with your Lordſhips "Propoſal, had it not been introduc'd by what "was very ſurprizing, and did much diſcourage "us from agreeing to any ſuch Inſpection; "namely, your Lordſhips declaring it to be "your Opinion, That whatſoever we had done, "as an Houſe, in any intermediate Seſſion, between the 8*th.* of April and the ſaid 8*th* of "May, was of dangerous Conſequence, not only to our Selves, but to the Clergy of this "Province, whom we repreſent.

"Theſe are ſome of the Reaſons which under thoſe Circumſtances and at that time "mov'd us to decline the Appointment of any "ſuch Committee. And theſe Reaſons, we "preſume, had your Lordſhips given us Occaſion to preſent them, had been ſufficient to "have clear'd us in your Opinion from any "Irregularity, and to have prevented you from "proceeding immediately to any Sentence "againſt us, though your Lordſhips had conceived you had ſuch a Power.

"But we cannot forbear to repreſent to your "Lordſhips, that had we been duly found Guilty "of any Irregularity in this Matter, yet your "Lordſhips Sentence cutting off all Intercourſe "and Correſpondence between the Two Houſes, "is not only over-ſevere, being paſſed upon ſo "ſmall an Occaſion, but deſtroys for the preſent the "whole Deſign, and the very Being of a Convocation.

We therefore hope that your Lordſhips will be induced by theſe Reaſons, to lay aſide this your Reſolution, and to reſtore the Regular and Cuſtomary Communication between the two Houſes.

After the Reading this Paper, it was referr'd to a Committee of Biſhops to examine it, and Report their Judgments of it; who found it to contain a higher Contempt and repeated Indignities put upon his Grace and his Suffragans: So their Lordſhips drew up the following Anſwer.

The Archbiſhop and Biſhops in Anſwer to a Paper left by the Prolocutor in the Upper Houſe, on Friday June 6th.

Anſwer of the Archbiſhop and Biſhops.

"The Clergy of the Lower Houſe ought rather to have acknowledg'd the Patience and "Tenderneſs of the Preſident and Biſhops towards them, than to ſay as they do: They "were ſurprized to find that their Lordſhips "ſhould at laſt take notice of the great Irregularity, which they of the Lower Houſe were "guilty of, in refuſing to appoint a Committee 1701. "to meet with a Number of Biſhops for the inſpecting the Books of both Houſes; as the "Preſident, with the Concurrence of his Suffragans, have requir'd them to do.

"The Preſident and Biſhops did not Cenſure "this Irregularity at the next Meeting, in hopes "that they of the Lower Houſe would have "conſider'd, and thought better of their Duty "in that Matter, and ſubmitted to the performance of it; and not have attempted (as they "did) to thruſt in other Buſineſs upon the Biſhops, and ſo to fruſtrate that very neceſſary "Order and Appointment for the inſpecting of "the Books.

"And tho' the Preſident and Biſhops, when "they made this Appointment, were ſufficiently "ſatisfied, that what they did therein was agreeable to the Practice of former Convocations; yet, when they found that Matter was "Diſputed in the Lower Houſe, they would not "proceed to do any thing thereupon, till they "had firſt look'd out Precedents for the Satisfaction of thoſe that differ'd from them.

"For this End, they took Time to Examine "the Regiſters and Proceedings of former Convocations, with regard to the appointing "Committees of both Houſes; there they found "that it was the common Method in former "Convocations, for the Preſident, with the "Concurrence of the Biſhops, to appoint ſuch "Committees, and to require the Clergy of the "Lower Houſe to ſend a certain Number of "their Body to attend them; and that the "Lower Houſe had never before refus'd to "comply with ſuch an Appointment, ſitting "the Convocation.

"Upon full Evidence of this, the Preſident "and Biſhops could not but judge, that they of "the Lower Houſe, by their preſent Refuſal, "had departed from the Order and Uſage of "Convocations, diſobey'd the Eſtabliſh'd Authority of the Preſident and Biſhops, and "thereby broke the regular Subordination of "the Clergy to their Metropolitan and Biſhops, "and the Intercourſe between the Two Houſes "of Convocation.

"This Refuſal of theirs, the Preſident and "Biſhops might juſtly have call'd Diſobedience "and Contempt, and might alſo have proceeded againſt them for it by Canonical Admonitions and Cenſures. But they call'd it by the "ſofteſt Name they could, An Irregularity; and "to give them of the Lower Houſe time to "rectify it, they have hitherto forborn all ſuch "Proceedings againſt them, as the Nature of "their Offence did deſerve, and the Conſequences ſeem'd to require.

"Only this the Preſident and Biſhops have "done; they have given them of the Lower "Houſe to underſtand, That until they return "to their Duty, and the regular Methods obſerv'd by all Predeceſſors, they cannot proceed on Buſineſs with them, nor receive any "Thing from them. But, that whenever they "of the Lower Houſe ſhall rectify theſe Irregularities, and reſtore thereby that Subordination and Intercourſe which they have diſturb'd, "the Preſident and Biſhops ſhall then moſt readily receive, and duly conſider whatever they "have to offer to them.

"This the Preſident and Biſhops thought to "be the gentleſt Method they could uſe, and "withal the likelieſt way to bring them of the "Lower Houſe to conſider and rectify the Irregularity they were guilty of; which was all "their Lordſhips deſired and intended.

"They

1701. "They of the Lower House do indeed seem "to think they were guilty of no Irregularity at "all, and offer some Reasons for their own "Justification: But those Reasons are founded "upon plain Mistakes, both of Right and Fact.

"First, They seem to assume to themselves, "to be such an Independent Body, as can Sit "and Act by themselves, without any Depen- "dance upon, or Conjunction with the Upper "House: But this is certainly a very great "Mistake.

"For the whole Convocation is but one "Body: They meet together first in one Place "before the Archbishop as President, sitting pro "Tribunali, as it is always express'd; and tho' "afterward the Lower Clergy have (by the Ap- "pointment of the President) a particular Place "assign'd them to Treat and Debate in apart; "yet, whenever the President pleases, they are "oblig'd to return to the Upper House, where "they first assembled; and both Houses are al- "ways Continued and Prorogued by one In- "strument or Act.

"The Subject of their Debates is often ap- "pointed by the President: Matters of Form, "and Methods of Proceeding are directed by "him, according to the Precedents of former "Convocations. The President acting as the "Head of that one Body, appoints Committees "of both Houses, as he did in the present Case: "And as such Appointments were always obey'd "by former Convocations, so the Lower House "ought at this time, so far at least to have com- "ply'd with the Order made by the President, "as to attend the Bishops in the Committee ap- "pointed by him; tho' they might not think "themselves thereby oblig'd to concur in the "Resolutions of such Committee, but might "have agreed or disagreed, as they saw Occa- "sion.

"The President and Bishops, if they had de- "sir'd a sight of the Act-Book of the Lower- "House, might have requir'd it of Right, as "they find their Predecessors have done; but "their Intention was to have the Books of both "Houses inspected together by a joint Commit- "tee of both Houses; not in order to prejudice "the Lower Clergy in any thing, or to bring "any Censure upon them; but in order to have "both Books Examin'd, and all the Proceedings "and Entries therein regulated in an amicable "way, to prevent all Mistakes, and to take a- "way all Occasion of Disputes and Controver- "sies between the Upper and the Lower House: "And thereby not only to prevent the evil Con- "sequences which any irregular Proceedings or "Entries upon either of the Books might bring "upon the Church and Clergy hereafter, but "also to bring all Things to a regular Method, "and such fair Intercourse, as ought to be be- "tween the Bishops and Clergy of this Pro- "vince; that so they might have proceeded to- "gether in such Matters as would have been for "the Honour and Interest of Religion, and the "Security of the Church of England, as now "by Law Established.

"2. As to the Complaint in this and the o- "ther Papers, for want of their former Jour- "nals, as if they had a Right for the keeping "of them, (if they knew where) the President "and Bishops Answer, That this Complaint is "very Unreasonable and Unjust.

"For altho' all the Registers and Act-Books "of Convocation, whether of the Upper or "Lower House, do of undoubted Right belong "to the Archbishop, and are to be kept by his "Officer in such Place as he shall appoint; to "which Place the Members of the Upper and "Lower House may have, and always had a "free Access, when, and as oft as they please: "This Complaint is so much the more Unjust, "because they cannot but know that the Arch- "bishop hath been so favourable, as to send all "the Act-Books mention'd in this Complaint, "and also the Modern Register-Books of the "Upper-House, to a Committee of the Lower "House, to be freely used by them as often as "they have desir'd it; and has given them no- "tice, that all the ancient Registers were in the "Library at Lambeth, where they or any of "them might have free Access to them; and "they had Access to them, and the Use of them "accordingly. 1701.

"They of the Lower House cannot be igno- "rant that the Archbishop's Register is of com- "mon Right the Register of the Convocation "of this Province; and altho' he as such is to "attend the President and Bishops in the Upper "House, yet the Clergy of the Lower House "pay Fees to him, not only on their first ap- "pearance, but at every Prorogation by the "King's Writ: And the Actuary, who attends "the Lower House, is but the Register's Ser- "vant, and acts as such; and the Register may "employ one to Day, and another to Morrow, "as appears in the Journal of the Lower House, "1588.

"3. The President and Bishops had just Rea- "son to hope, That if that Committee had met, "not only the Entries in the Books would have "been rectify'd, but that the Bishops appointed "by them, would have been able to have satis- "fy'd those of the Lower House, that their Ad- "journing themselves by their own Authority, "and Sitting and Acting as a House when the "Upper-House did not Sit, and indeed, con- "trary to the Prorogation made by the Presi- "dent in the Upper-House, is not only Illegal, "but of dangerous Consequence.

"For the President and Bishops do upon cer- "tain Grounds judge, That all the Proceedings "upon such intermediate Days Transacted by "the Lower Clergy, acting as a House of Con- "vocation, are Irregular, Null, and Void, as "being done in an Assembly of Presbyters, not "warranted by Law, and acting not only inde- "pendently of their Metropolitan and Bishops, "but in opposition to the Authority which the "Constitution of the Church and Laws of the "Land have Vested in them.

"The President and Bishops having given this "clear and distinct Answer to the Reasons of- "fer'd by them of the Lower House in their "own Justification, cannot but hope that they "will consider better of the Irregularity they "are guilty of, and remove the Obstructions, "which by introducing several dangerous Inno- "vations they have laid in the way of all Busi- "ness in this Convocation, and conform them- "selves to the ancient and regular Methods of "Proceedings; that so both Houses may go on "Unanimously and Vigorously in the Prosecu- "tion of such Things as may tend to the Glory "of God, and the Good of this Church.

Farther Proceedings in Convocation.

To return to the Proceedings on this 6th. of June. The Prolocutor at the Motion of his Grace, brought up the Paper of Complaint against the Lord Bishop of Sarum; which being read over and consider'd by the Archbishop and Bishops, his Grace soon after spoke to the Prolocutor to this Effect. "Your Paper of Complaint against "my Lord of Sarum's Book does contain only "Generals; and therefore we must require you "to bring up the Specialties or Particulars of "your Charge against that Book." The Proloc- cutor

1701. cutor and his Company going back to the Lower House, his Grace thought they were preparing such a Particular Charge against the Bishop's Exposition; and therefore after some time of Expecting, the Archbishop sent the proper Messenger, Mr. Tillot, to the Lower House, to enquire of the Prolocutor, Whether they had any thing in Readiness to present to the Archbishop and Bishops, as to any particular Articles against the Lord Bishop of Sarum's Book? And soon after, the Messenger return'd with this abrupt Answer in Writing: This House desires Mr. Tillot to return their Lordships their humble Thanks for their Message, and to tell them, That this House is preparing Business, but are not yet ready with it. Upon which, the Archbishop with Consent of his Brethren, Prorogued the Convocation to June 13*th.*

Declaration of a Committee of Bishops.

In the mean time, a Committee of Bishops had come to this Declaration of their Judgment, in reference to the extraordinary Steps taken by the Lower House.

"First, In Relation to the Complaint and "Censure of the Bishop of Sarum's Exposition of "the XXXIX Articles, made by the Lower "House, and presented to the Archbishop and "Bishops on May 30th, 1701;

I. It is our Opinion, That the Lower House "of Convocation has no manner of Power ju- "dicially to Censure any Book.

"II. That the Lower House of Convocation "ought not to have entred upon the Examinati- "on of a Book of any Bishop of this Church, "without first acquainting the President and "Bishops with it.

"III. That the Lower House of Convoca- "tion's Censuring the Book of the Bishop of "Sarum in general Terms, without mentioning "the particular Passages on which the Censure "is grounded, is Defamatory and Scandalous.

"IV. That the Bishop of Sarum, by his Ex- "cellent History of the Reformation, approved by "both Houses of Parliament, and other Wri- "tings, hath done great Service to the Church "of England, and justly deserves the Thanks of "this House.

"V. That tho' private Persons may Expound "the Articles of the Church, yet it cannot be "proper for the Convocation at this Time to "approve, and much less to condemn such pri- "vate Expositions.

Secondly, In relation to the Prolocutor's Complaint against the Bishop of Bangor, and his Behaviour on that and the like Occasions in the Upper House;

"I. We are of Opinion, That the Bishop of "Bangor made a true and just Report in the "Upper House, of the Answer made by the "Prolocutor, to a Question propos'd unto him "on the 30*th.* of May, at the Door of this "House.

"II. We are further confirm'd in this Opini- "on, because the Prolocutor gave the same "Answer in Effect to his Grace, after he had "been call'd in to the House.

"III. We are of Opinion, That the Paper "read by the Prolocutor after he was call'd in, "was not concerning the Irregularity which "this House Complain'd of, but principally to "introduce a Complaint against the Bishop of "Sarum, which had no relation at all to that "Irregularity.

"IV. It plainly appears, by comparing the "Paper which the Prolocutor Read after he "was called in, with his Answer to the Que- "stion proposed by him, as well by his Grace 1701. "as by the Bishop of Bangor, that the said Pro- "locutor's Answer was such as by no means "ought to have been given by him to his Grace, "or to any Member of that House.

Thirdly, In relation to Dr. Verney, and other Members of the Lower House, who had dis- sented from the Majority, and had protested against their Irregular Proceedings; their Lord- ships in a Committee were of Opinion;

"I. That Dr. Verney, and others of the Low- "er House, who comply'd with the Prorога- "tions made by the President in the Upper "House, and declined to Act on the interme- "diate Days, have behaved themselves as of "Right and Duty they ought to do.

"II. That they have thereby maintain'd the "Just Rights of Convocation, and the Legal "Authority of the President and Bishops, and "have Acted as became true Sons of the Church "of England.

"III. That they deserve the Protection of the "Upper House for their dutiful and worthy Be- "haviour.

"IV. That the Prolocutor, and some others "of the Lower House, have violated the Me- "thods of Proceedings in Convocation, and "attempted to introduce divers Innovations and "Irregularities, destructive of the Metropolitan "and Episcopal Authority of the Archbishop "and Bishops of this Province, and thereby "endangered the Constitution of this Church, "and given great Advantages to the Enemies "thereof.

"V. That by not submitting to the Proro- "gations made by the President, with Concur- "rence of his Suffragans, and pretending to "an Authority to Adjourn themselves, and Sit- "ting and Acting as a House, after such Pro- "rogation by the President, and on Days when "the Upper House did not Sit, the Prolocutor "and those joining with him in such Practices, "are guilty of manifest Disobedience and Con- "tempt.

"VI. That by refusing to nominate a Com- "mittee of their House, to meet with a Com- "mittee of the Bishops as the President had "appointed, they are likewise guilty of a great "Contempt and Disobedience.

In the next Session, June the 20*th.* when the Archbishops and Bishops had ended their Pray- ers, the Prolocutor appear'd, with the greatest part of the Lower House attending him, hold- ing in his Hands Two several Papers, and offer- ing to deliver both of them: To whom the Pre- sident spoke to this effect, That he could receive no Paper from him, but that containing the Parti- cularities of the General Charge against the Bishop of Sarum's Exposition of the XXXIX Articles, which at the Request of the said Bishop, he was now ready to receive: To which the Prolocutor replied, "That he had Two Papers in his Hand, ready "to present to his Grace, and the rest of the "Bishops then present, if his Grace would "please to receive them: But without Direction "of the Lower House, he could not present "the One without the other. That therefore "he would return, and take the Opinion of the "House thereupon." But he never came back with that Opinion, till the Convocation by Royal Writ directed to the Archbishop, was Prorogued to August the 7*th.* thence to Septem- ber the 18*th.* and so on, till the Parliament being Dissolved, the Convocation of each Province by Writs directed to the respective Archbishops were accordingly Dissolved.

Convoca- tion Dis- solved.

1701. New Convocation.

A new Convocation of the Province of Canterbury being Summon'd to meet in concurrence with the New Parliament, was open'd in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, London, with Solemn Prayers, and an Excellent Latin Sermon, Preached by Dr. William Sherlock, Dean of that Church, on Epiſt. Jude, v. 3. In the Choice of a Prolocutor, the Competition was between the Learned Dr. Beveridge, Archdeacon of Colcheſter, and Dr. Woodward Dean of Sarum, a Civilian grown Popular by oppoſing his Dioceſan, to whom he ow'd his Preferments. He was by a Majority Elected, and Confirm'd by the Archbiſhop. The Firſt Synodical Act was an Addreſs to the King, preſented by the Archbiſhop, at the Head of the Biſhops and Clergy, to His Majeſty at Kenſington, on January the 22*d*.

Addreſs of both Houſes.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

" We humbly beg Leave to lay before your " Majeſty, now we are Aſſembled in Convo- " cation, the deep Reſentment that every One " of us had, at our Firſt hearing of the great " Indignity which the French King offered to " your Majeſty and your People, in declaring " the pretended Prince of Wales to be King of " your Majeſty's Realms and Dominions.

" We do hereupon take Occaſion to renew " our ſincere Proteſtations, of a firm and un- " ſhaken Allegiance to your Majeſty, humbly " aſſuring your Majeſty; That we will do our " utmoſt Endeavours, by Gods Aſſiſtance, in " our reſpective Places and Stations, to Defend " your Sacred Perſon, and to Maintain your " Majeſty's Rightful Title to the Imperial " Crown of theſe Realms, and the Succeſſion " thereof in the Proteſtant Line, as now by " Law Eſtabliſhed, againſt the ſaid pretended " Prince, and all other Your Majeſty's open and " ſecret Enemies.

" We will always, according to our eſpecial " Duty, make it our earneſt Prayer to God, " That he will long continue your Majeſty's " Happy Reign over us, that you may perfect " all thoſe great Works, in which he hath " hitherto wonderfully conducted you with ſo " much Glory and Succeſs, for the Peace and " Welfare of theſe Kingdoms, and the Support " of your Allies, the Safety and Tranquility of " Europe, and the Preſerving the Proteſtant Re- " ligion, both here in this Church of England, " by Law Eſtabliſh'd, and in all other Proteſtant " Churches.

His Majeſty ſeem'd to be very well pleaſed with this Venerable Appearance, and made this Gracious Anſwer.

King's Anſwer.

My Lords and the Reſt of the Clergy,

I cannot but be very much pleaſed with theſe Expreſſions of your Affection to me, and your Concern for the Honour of the Nation, for Maintaining the Succeſſion to the Crown in the Proteſtant Line; and for the Preſervation of the Proteſtant Churches. And I am glad of this Opportunity to give you freſh Aſſurances of my firm Reſolution, in an eſpecial manner, to Protect and Support the Church of England, as by Law Eſtabliſh'd.

On Wedneſday January the 28*th*. an unhappy Occaſion began of widening the Difference between thoſe Members who believed the Archbiſhop of this Province had the Right and conſtant Practice of Continuing and Proroguing the whole Convocation, and thoſe others who thought the Lower Houſe might have a Power to Adjourn it ſelf. This difference of Opinion led into ſome Diſputes in every Seſſions; which yet were manag'd conſiſtently with Peace and Order: For whatever Notions of Independency were advanc'd by a few particular Members, the Houſe in general had hitherto ſo ordered their Entries in the Journal, that All unanimouſly met upon the Synodical Days and Hours, appointed by the Archbiſhop in his Schedules of Prorogation. But on this Day a Member unhappily mov'd to change the Form of Entry in the Minutes, and to aſſume the Phraſe of Dominus Prolocutor Continuavit & Prorogavit quoad hanc Domum, which was accordingly entred inſtead of the uſual Form, Prolocutor intimavit hanc Convocationem eſſe continuatam, &c. 1701. Unhappy Diſputes.

In the next Seſſion, Tueſday, February the 3*d*. this new Phraſe in the Entry of the Minutes was excepted againſt by ſeveral Members; but there was a Majority to Reſolve, that the Words in the Entry ſhall ſtand as they are; and that This Matter ſhall not be now further Debated. When the Schedule of Prorogation came down, it was laid aſide upon the Table, while the Houſe was proceeding to other Buſineſs. Upon which a Member moved, that " He had obſerved ſome " Meſſage from above had been deliver'd to the " Prolocutor; and he thought it the Right of " this Houſe to have it Communicated to 'em, " before they entred upon New Buſineſs." But this was oppoſed by the Majority, and they went on to appoint a Committee of Grievances, &c. After which the Prolocutor adjourn'd as by Authority of the Houſe; while the Members on the other ſide declared, " That this Houſe " had no pretence of Right to Adjourn it ſelf, " when the Schedule interpoſes to Prorogue the " whole Convocation; and that therefore they " did verbally proteſt againſt ſuch an Irregular " way of Adjourning." And before the next Meeting, they put their verbal Proteſtation into Writing to this effect.

Proteſtation of ſeveral Members.

" That whereas in the Lower Houſe, the laſt " Seſſion, February the 3*d*. the Prolocutor refuſed " to Read the Schedule of Prorogation ſent " down by the Archbiſhop, when it was called " for by ſeveral Members; the Majority of the " Houſe at the ſame time interpoſing to hinder " it: And that whereas after notice given by " the Prolocutor, of the Schedule's being re- " ceived, the Majority of the Houſe made an " Order to proceed upon New Buſineſs, and " at the end of that would not ſuffer them- " ſelves to be Prorogued by the Schedule, but " Adjourned by their own Act, upon a Que- " ſtion propoſed to the Houſe, which was ver- " bally declared againſt by ſeveral Members " then preſent: Therefore the Parties whoſe " Names were Subſcribed, believing it to be " the Right of the Archbiſhop, to Continue " and Prorogue the whole Convocation of Pre- " lates and Clergy by Schedule; and to ſend " down ſuch other Meſſages to be communica- " ted to the Lower Houſe, as his Grace ſhall " think fit; and believing it alſo to be the Right " of every Member of the Lower Houſe, to " have the Archbiſhop's Meſſages Intimated, " and his juſt Orders obſerved, as they con- " ceive it to be the Duty of the Prolocutor to " Intimate and Obſerve them: They do hereby " proteſt againſt the forementiond Acts, as " contrary to theſe Rights.

On Monday, February the 9*th*. the Dean of Peterborough in a very proper Speech moved, that the foreſaid Proteſtation might be admitted, and entred in Writing, as a ſtanding Evidence of their aſſerting the Juſt Rights and Authority

1701. Authority of their Metropolitan and Preſident, to Prorogue the whole Convocation or Synod, the Lower as well as the Upper Houſe, by Schedule; and of their diſowning any inherent Right or Power, this Houſe is ſaid to have in it ſelf to Prorogue, or as the new Word lately taken up is, to Adjourn it ſelf.

This Motion being warmly oppoſed by the Majority, drew out the Houſe into a long Debate, till for Peace ſake, Dr. Beveridge put this Queſtion in Writing. Whether upon ſuppoſition that the Houſe may ſit upon Synodical Buſineſs, after the coming down of the Schedule, till they think their Buſineſs over; the Houſe will agree, that the Schedule ſhall be then Executed, and the Houſe Prorogued to the Day and Hour there ſpecified, by vertue of the ſaid Schedule, and in obedience to the Authority whereby the Whole Convocation is Prorogued. This Queſtion was dropt by the Majority, and to evade the Anſwering of it, it was at laſt Agreed,

Committee Appointed.

"That a Committee ſhould be appointed to "conſider of ſuch an Expedient about the Pro- "rogation of this Houſe, as may tend to the "compoſing all Diſputes in this Matter." Which Committee ſhould conſiſt of the Number of Sixteen, Eight on each ſide of the Controverſy.

This Committee met on Tueſday, February the 10*th.* and by degrees fell into theſe Three Heads of Agreement.

"I. Agreed, That in Order to an Accommo- "dation, no Forms of Prorogation ſhall be "uſed by the Prolocutor hereafter, that were "not uſed by the Prolocutor before the laſt "Convocation.

"II. That the Forms of Prorogation uſed "by the Prolocutor in the Convocation of "1586. and 1588. ſhall hereafter be uſed by the "Prolocutor, in the order they lye in the Books, "beginning with the Firſt, till they are all gone "through.

"III. That theſe Forms ſhall be pronounc'd "by the Prolocutor, when the Houſe agrees "that their Buſineſs is over.

It ſoon appear'd, that the Majority would interpret the Peace to be a Victory; and therefore within few Hours after the Committee was up, ſome forward Perſons were boaſting of the Advantages gain'd on the ſide of the Lower Houſe; and that the Archbiſhop's Friends had given up his Cauſe, and had now excluded the Schedule from any concern in the Adjournment. This Story was ſo induſtriouſly ſpread, that the Members of the Committee (who knew they had receded from no Principles of Truth and Right) found themſelves inſulted by ſome and almoſt ſuſpected by others. They deſpiſed the Rumour, and choſe rather to have been cenſur'd for going in too far, than for ſtanding too much off. But the whiſpers had however this effect upon ſome very conſiderable Members, who had not been preſent at the Committee, that they reſolved in the next Seſſion to take ſome opportunity to renounce that invidious Senſe which ſome People had thus put upon the Third Article of Agreement. And after mature Deliberation, the Reſult was to ſubſcribe a Declaratory Form, to be offered to the Houſe in their next meeting, to this Effect. 1701.

That whereas by Report made from a late Committee, they found the Third particular to be in theſe Words, That theſe Forms (meaning the Forms of Prorogation uſed in the Convocations of 1586. and 1588.) ſhall be pronounc'd by the Prolocutor, when the Houſe agrees that the Buſineſs of the Houſe is over: "They declare that "the meaning is underſtood by them, with an "Exception to any Caſe, when the Preſident "ſhall ſee Cauſe to ſend an Order with the "Schedule, ſignifying the expreſs time of in- "timating the Prorogation upon that Day: "otherwiſe if it were pretended to mean, that "the Authority of the Archbiſhop, or any "Order ſent from the Upper Houſe, was there- "by excluded or diminiſhed; they then So- "lemnly proteſt againſt any ſuch Meaning or "pretended Meaning.

This Paper was Subſcribed by ſeveral of the moſt conſiderable Members, and was brought by one of them to be offered to the Houſe on Thurſday, February the 12*th.* The other Eight Members who had been of the Committee, hearing daily of many falſe Conſtructions put upon the Agreement they had made with their Brethren, met together and unanimouſly Reſolved to make a plain Declaration of their own Senſe in thoſe Three Particulars, which they did to this effect.

Declaration of ſome Members.

"That ſome Miſrepreſentations having been "made concerning the Three Articles, agreed "to in a Committee of the Lower Houſe of "Convocation, February the 10*th.* 1701. they "take this occaſion to declare,

"That they came with a ſincere Deſire of "Peace; and when they came, finding that "the Diſpute of the Right on either ſide was "not like to end in Peace, but rather to con- "tinue the Diviſion; they therefore endeavour'd "to find out an Expedient for the preſent Pra- "ctice, that ſhould not determine the Merits of "the Queſtion between 'em.

"That, in order to this, they thought proper "to go by the Methods of the Antient Convo- "cations, in which theſe Controverſies had "not been moved, which was the Ground of "the Firſt Propoſition.

"That they could not eaſily pitch upon any "ſingle Form of Prorogation, which was not "thought to Favour the Pretenſions of one Side "or the other, though they propoſed to have "that Form that ſhould appear to be moſt "uſually upon the Books. That therefore, both "ſides agreeing that the Books of 1586. and "1588. were the moſt Authentick Acts remain- "ing of the Lower Houſe; they agreed to "take all the Forms in Order, as they lay "in thoſe Books, according to the Second Pro- "poſition.

"As to the Third Propoſition, they declare, That "though it be their Opinion that the whole "Convocation of Prelates and Clergy is Pro- "rogued by the Authority of the Archbiſhop, "according to the Tenor of a Schedule Sign'd "by him to that End; yet preſuming that the "Archbiſhop did not expect the immediate "Intimating of his Continuation, unleſs he "ſent particular Order to that purpoſe; "they therefore agree to that Third Propo- "ſition.

"And

1701. "And as an Argument, that this was their "Senſe in that Agreement, they refuſed an "Alteration that was offered upon the Third "Article, viz. That the Form ſhould not be pro- "nounced by the Prolocutor, till the Houſe agree that "their Buſineſs was over.

"This they affirm to have refus'd for this Rea- "ſon (which was then expreſs'd) becauſe tho' "they might generally preſume upon the Arch- "biſhop's Conſent for their ſitting to diſpatch all "proper Buſineſs; yet they could not agree to "any thing, that ſhould preclude the Archbi- "ſhop's Right to Prorogue 'em immediately if "he found it expedient.

"That they think it alſo proper to add, That "they uſed the words Pronounced by the Prolocutor, "in order to prevent the putting any Queſtion "to the Houſe about Adjourning themſelves. And "that the Prorogation might be always to the "time and place appointed by the Schedule.

On Thurſday, February 12. the Prolocutor being indiſpos'd, did aſſign the Dean of Chriſt-Church as his Deputy to act for him. The Members who diſavow'd the common Proceedings of the Majority, were content to accept of a Deputy ſo appointed by the Prolocutor, provided that Application was duly made to the Preſident to Approve and Confirm him. To this, the Majority ſeem'd to agree, and one of the Leading Members ſaid, That there was no deſign of making a common Referendary between the Two Houſes without conſulting his Grace. But it being reſolved, that no ſuch proper Application ſhould be made, His Grace ſent for the Clergy to Jeruſalem-Chamber, and ſpoke thus; My Brethren of the Clergy, there has happened an Incident of great Moment, which I and my Brethren muſt take time to conſider of between this and Saturday next; to which I have thought fit to Prorogue the Convocation. I order you Mr. Tyllot to read the Schedule.

Death of the Prolocutor. On Friday, February 13. Dr. Woodward the Prolocutor died in his Lodgings at Weſtminſter, in very unhappy Circumſtances. On the next day, Saturday February 14. his Grace on this occaſion thus addreſt himſelf to the Inferior Clergy, Brethren of the Clergy, I hear the Prolocutor is dead, and we are very much ſurprized at the News of it. We muſt conſider what is proper to be done on this occaſion. The Dean and Chapter of Weſtminſter (as my Lord of Rocheſter tells us) will make uſe of this place on Monday and Tueſday next: Wedneſday is a Day of Solemn Devotion, being Aſhwedneſday, therefore I have ordered the Prorogation to be till Thurſday. Mr. Tyllot, do you read the Schedule.

We muſt obſerve, that juſt before the laſt Sickneſs of the Prolocutor, he had endeavour'd to recommend himſelf to a great Party by complaining of his beſt Friend, his own Biſhop: The grounds of the Complaint was only this, His Lordſhip held his Triennial Viſitations conſtantly in Perſon, and the Parochial Clergy, as in duty bound, paid their Attendance, in a regular and reſpectful Manner. But the Dean of Sarum, as Rector of Peuſy, declin'd his Appearance at the time and place of Viſitation, without making any reaſonable Excuſe; but rather aggravating his Abſence by ſuch Signs of Contempt, as made it evidently an Ill Example, and oblig'd his Lordſhip to order a Citation as in a uſual Method, before any Privilege of Convocation did obtain or was pretended: When the time of Privilege did afterward Commence, his Lordſhip ordered his Chancellor to put a Stet upon the Cauſe, and there was no farther Proceeding in it. This light Matter was to be improv'd into a Grievance, and a Remonſtrance upon it. So on February 9th. this Form of Complaint was preſented to the Archbiſhop and Biſhops. 1701.

Complaint of Breach of Privilege. "Whereas it is the ancient undoubted Right "of every Perſon Summon'd to the Convocation "of this Province by his Majeſty's Writ, and "your Grace's Mandate thereupon, to be Privi- "leged from all Suits, except for Breach of the "Peace, during the time of its Aſſembling. "And whereas it appears to us, That the Reve- "rend Dr. Robert Woodward, Dean of Sarum, a "known Member of this Houſe, and alſo Pro- "locutor of it, is at this time (or has lately "been) Proſecuted, by the Order of the Right "Reverend Gilbert Lord Biſhop of Sarum, in a "certain Cauſe of pretended Contempt and "Diſobedience; and that George Frome lately "the Proctor of the ſaid Dean in this Cauſe, "was on Tueſday the 27*th*, or Wedneſday the 28*th* "of January laſt, Admoniſh'd in the ſaid Lord "Biſhop's Conſiſtory to appear and anſwer in it "on the Tueſday following; which days are "within the time of the ſitting of this preſent "Convocation: We the Clergy of the Lower "Houſe of Convocation being aggrieved in this "Fact, not only by the unlawful Moleſtation "of a Member of our Houſe, but by the Injury "offer'd to whole Body of the Convocation, in "the Perſon of the Referendary between the Two "Houſes of it, do humbly beſeech your Grace, "and your Lordſhips, ſo effectually to deal with "the Right Reverend the Lord Biſhop of Sarum, "that the ſaid Prolocutor may be freed from this "unlawful Viſitation; and that the Rights of the "particular Members of Convocation, and the "Honour of the whole Body, ſo pucklickly "violated by ſo eminent a Member of it, may "not ſuffer by the ill Example, but may have "ſome proper Reparation made; ſuch as your "Lordſhips in your Wiſdom and Juſtice ſhall "think fit.

Anſwer of the Archbiſhop and Biſhops. This Complaint however ſingular, was not rejected by his Grace and the Biſhops; they received it, and conſidered it, and return'd this Anſwer to it.

"The Archbiſhop, as Preſident of the Con- "vocation, together with his Brethren and Suf- "fragans, will always take care to maintain the "juſt Rights of the Lower Houſe, and parti- "cularly their Privilege of Exemption from "Suits.

"And therefore having upon occaſion of this "Addreſs enquired into the Matter of Complaint "againſt the Lord Biſhop of Sarum contained "therein, they have received this Account of "the Matter of Fact, from the ſaid Biſhop of "Sarum: That the Proceedings againſt Dr. "Woodward, as Rector of Peuſy, (now the Refe- "rendary of the Lower Houſe) were begun "at a time when there was no Privilege: And "that upon the opening of this preſent Convo- "cation, his Lordſhip did order his Chancellor "to put a Stet upon the Cauſe; by whom he is "aſſured, That notwithſtanding no Privilege "was pleaded, nor ſo much as any Motion made "to ſuſpend further Proceedings, he did never- "theleſs put a Stet upon it. Nor was there any "Citation or Proceſs decreed againſt the ſaid Do- "ctor, ſince the opening of this Convocation. This "being the State of the Caſe;

"The Archbiſhop and his Brethren, cannot "ſee what ground there was for Complaint; and "think you had done well to have been better "aſſured, that the Matter was ſuch as it was re- "preſented to you; before you had charged it "with the hard Terms of an unlawful Moleſta- "on, and Vexation, and demanded Reparation ap-

1701. "on it. Whereas by this Misrepresentation of "the Bishop's Proceedings in this Case, it "plainly appears to whom Reparation ought to "be made.

There was indeed so much of Partiality and Prejudice in the beginning and prosecuting of this Complaint, that had the Author of it liv'd, many good Christians did hope he would have repented of it. In the mean time, this unhappy Subject may conclude with what is modestly said by the Writer of the Present State of this Convocation, Correcting the Mistakes and Slanders of the pretended Faithful Accounts. 4to. p. 40.

"It would be too large a Story to give you "the Rise and Prosecution of this warm Com- "plaint, and the several Debates upon it in the "Lower House. I am the more tender in the "Matter, because the plainest Relation of it "would affect the Veracity of a Person now "Deceased, who has thereby a Title to have "many parts of this Cause to be kept in Si- "lence.

After the Prolucutor's Death, there being no Business depending, and nothing in Debate but the Clergy's Pretensions of Exemption from the Synodical Authority and Rights of the Archbishop and Bishops; his Grace, with Advice of his Brethren, on Thursday, Febr. 19th. dismiss'd the Clergy with this tender Speech.

Brethren of the Clergy,

The Speech of the President. "When you brought up your last Address, "complaining of a Breach of Privilege by the "Bishop of Salisbury, we readily received it, "and no one of us was more ready to do it, "than the Bishop himself. We then promised "you should have an Answer to it on the next "Day of our Meeting. The Answer was ac- "cordingly prepared, being founded upon the "Acts of the Bishop's Court at Salisbury, and "the Account given by the Judge of that "Court; which Answer you may see enter'd in "our Journal.

"The late Prolocutor's Illness, and an Incident "that happen'd upon it, were the Cause that "this Answer was not communicated that Day. "We hope, when you have read that Answer, "you will not suffer your selves for the future "to be surpriz'd into Complaints of this Na- "ture, but will stay till you are fully assur'd "that they are well grounded both in Fact and "Right; I say Right, as well as Fact. For your "Assertion, That we are privileg'd from all "Suits, except for Breach of the Peace, was not "well consider'd; since there are Matters of a "higher Nature, wherein Privilege cannot be "pleaded. I might add, That if I mistake not "the Sense of the late Act, it suffers the Cause "to go on, provided that the Person remains "unmolested. But of this enough, especially "considering that the Person particularly con- "cerned, is lately Dead.

"By his Death the Prolocutor's Chair becom- "ing void, you may justly expect I should say "something concerning the filling of it. That "is a Matter, which as the State of our Affairs "at present stands, needs much Deliberation: "I have had many Thoughts upon that Sub- "ject, and I will freely communicate such of "them as I judge to be proper at this time.

"The Choice of a Prolocutor or Referendary, "is equally the Right and Concern of the "whole Lower House. Many of the Members "(several of which desired earnestly to be dis- "miss'd) are now absent in the Country, and "divers of them at a great distance from Lon- "don. They are (I believe) gone down, as for "other Reasons, so chiefly that they may attend "their respective Cures in this Solemn Time "of Lent, and bestow a considerable part of it "in Catechising, and preparing Persons for the "Blessed Sacrament at Easter.

1701. "It will not, I think, be fair to exclude them "from a share in a New Election: And to send "for them up, when they are so well employ'd, "meerly for the Choice of a Prolocutor, without "other necessary Business here, will be a Hardship to "them, and a Prejudice to their Cures. No "Synodical Business is yet, by Royal Authority, "laid before the Convocation. If there were, "yet till the Formulary be better settled, the Bu- "siness would, at every turn, be interrupted "by Debates about Methods of Proceeding.

"During a Recess, good Progress may, I "hope, be made in that matter. Many Mate- "rials are brought together in order to the "preparing of a Draught for composing a Mo- "dus tenendi Convocationem. I have communica- "ted one Authentick Book, which came lately to "my hands, and am in hopes of recovering an- "other, together with several Papers which "may be useful to this purpose. And I doubt "not but the Members of both Houses will contri- "bute their Endeavours towards the same good "Work.

"For the aboveSaid Reasons, as also because "a War seems to be breaking out, which will "in some Measure divert Men's Thoughts from "Business of this Nature, and there are like- "wise appearances of a speedy winding up of "Publick Affairs, I purpose further to deliberate "about appointing the Choice of a Prolocutor, "and at present to proceed to a Prorogation: But "I shall do it by such Intervals, during this Ses- "sions of Parliament, as may upon any emergent "Occasions, leave room for the Choice of a Pro- "locutor, and the Sitting of the Convocation. "And for those who look upon Me or any of "my Suffragans, as designing to bring Convoca- "tions and the Prolocutors thereof into Disuse, or "to put any unreasonable Restraints upon the Lower "House, they are greatly mistaken; and I hope "a little time will shew them their Error, and "put an end to all such groundless Suspicions, "as well as allay the Heats which they have "occasion'd. Such Heats have given great "Scandal and Offence, even to those who un- "derstand not the nature of the Controversy, "but are much concern'd, that there should be "any Differences among Men, who are by Pro- "fession the Ministers of the Gospel of Peace. "And I am sorry to find, that in a Paper which "came to my hands last Night, mark'd Num- "ber 1. (shewing a design of the continuance "of it, in case the Convocation should also "continue to sit) a strange Method is laid for "giving Publick Intelligence from time to time, "of any Differences that might hereafter arise. "The Title of it is, A Faithful Account of some "Transactions in the Three last Sessions of the present "Convocation. But, as I am told this Morning, "it will speedily be shewn in several Particu- "lars, how far it is from Answering that Title, "especially in the Relation of what pass'd in a "late Committee. When the Explications then "directly insisted on shall be more publickly un- "derstood, the Partiality of the Writer of this "Paper will be no less publick.

"I beseech you, Brethren, to look forward to "the things that make for Peace, and whereby we "may edify one another, and the Established "Church, of which, by the singular Goodness "of God, we are Members: That so those "Differences which have continued too long al- "ready, may be speedily and happily compos'd. "To which end, I heartily commend my self 1701. " and you, to the God of Peace and Unity, through " Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.

Proceedings of the Lower Clergy.

A great part of the Clergy were entirely ſatisfied with theſe Reaſons; and thought it a ſeaſonable Juncture to have the Liberty of returning to their Churches and Families; and there to expect a Call upon ſuch emergent Occaſion, as ſhould require the Choice of a Prolocutor, and the Sitting of the Convocation. But what is much to be pity'd, other Some took up the pretence of greater Diſcontent, and would meet in Henry VII's Chappel Two Days after, and would Reſolve themſelves into a ſort of Aſſembly, and choſe a Moderator or Chair-Man to that purpoſe. And when the Day came, to which the Archbiſhop had prorogued the Convocation, they came up as a Houſe, without a Prolocutor, to the Chamber adjoining to the Jeruſalem Chamber, and there meeting the Biſhop of Lincoln, who as his Grace's Commiſſary had now Prorogued the Convocation to a further Day, they deſired his Lordſhip to carry a Meſſage to his Grace, of their deſire to proceed to the Choice of a Prolocutor. His Lordſhip with great Kindneſs told them, that he was unwilling to carry any Meſſage by Word of Mouth, for fear he might Miſtake in the delivery of it: But if they pleaſed to Dictate to him, he would take their Senſe in Writing, and ſo lay it before his Grace: Upon which they began to expreſs themſelves to this Effect, That it was the unanimous Deſire of the Lower Houſe of Convocation, &c. Upon which another Member of different Opinion, who had that Morning waited on his Lordſhip, and was his ordinary Chaplain, did Modeſtly interpoſe, and ſay, " That he hop'd no ſuch Meſſage " would be worded in the Name of the whole " Lower Houſe; For as they were not a Houſe, " and did not act in that Capacity without a " Prolocutor; ſo many of the Members (of " which himſelf was one) had not aſſented to " any ſuch Meſſage; and therefore he preſum'd " it would be more true and proper, to let the " Meſſage run in the Name of Several Members " of the Lower Houſe;" And the Biſhop in his Writing down their Senſe, did ſo accordingly expreſs it. But this raiſed a new Clamour, and thoſe who aſſumed the Name of a Houſe (eſpecially Dr. F--ch) fell ſeverely on the Member who propoſed the alteration of their Phraſe, as a Betrayer of their Rights and Liberties; though no One had taken more Pains to underſtand, or had better Reaſolutions to aſſert, all manner of Rights and Powers, that were agreeable to the Practice of former Convocations, and to the eſtabliſhed Conſtitution of this Church and State. 1701.

Queſtion, Whether the Convocation was diſſolved with the King's Death

Within a Day or Two after, the King's Death, which ſhould have put an end to theſe Diſputes, did raiſe another Queſtion, Whether the Convocation did expire with Him? His Grace and the Biſhops were rightly ſenſible, that the Convocation being aſſembled by the Archbiſhop's Mandate in obedience to the King's Writ, could no longer ſubſiſt, than while that Royal Writ remain'd in Force and Virtue: And therefore the Writ of Summons abating by the King's Death, the Convocation was virtually diſſolved. But on the other hand, that part of the Lower Houſe who had entred upon new Claims, were taught to call themſelves a Parliamentary Body, and at leaſt to Attend upon the Parliament, by virtue of the Præmunientes Clauſe, which they had lately got executed in ſeveral Dioceſes. And therefore there having been a late Act to continue this Parliament after the Demiſe of the King, theſe Members would imagine that the Convocation was ſuch a Part of the Parliament as could not be ſeparated from it. And therefore if they were no longer a Provincial Synod, they were however a part of the National Clergy, ſummon'd by the Præmunientes Clauſe, to meet in Parliament. And indeed had their Parliamentary Notions been true, this had been a juſt Inference from them. But when they came to conſult with Men Learned in the Laws, they ſoon found, that the Act for continuing the Parliament, did by no means include the Convocation; which being called by a different Writ, had a different Conſtitution, and muſt needs determine with the King's Death. When they were under this Diſappointment, they ſollicited ſome Friends in the Houſe of Lords, to bring in an extraordinary Clauſe, to revive the dead Convocation, and to declare it to be ſtill in Being, notwithſtanding that it was otherwiſe by the King's Death actually Diſſolved. This Clauſe of giving Reſurrection, was thought ſo extraordinary, that the greater number of Peers could not be reconciled to it, and the Attorney-General declaring it was againſt the Queen's Eccleſiaſtical Supremacy, it was at laſt dropt. And happy had it been if all other Diſputes of this nature could have dropt with it.
